"Superseniority would not only have wrecked the seniority principle which unions have built up after years of struggle to protect workers most equitably in their job rights, but would have disrupted industry by displacing older and skilled employes for young and untrained workers.

"The CIO has insisted that the Selective Service Act be applied as written and that an employe be credited upon his return to his old job with accumulated seniority equal to time spent in the armed forces.

"In fact the CIO has sought seniority credit equal to time spent in the service of their country for veterans not covered by the law—those who had no jobs before they went to war."

Copies of the decision may be obtained from Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

FORD WORKERS GET $10 MILLION NOW

Ratification of the contract with the Ford Motor Co. by Ford locals of the CIO Auto Workers by referendum vote this week brings into effect the retroactive 18c an hour wage increase back to Jan. 5. Roughly figuring 100,000 employes getting $7.20 a week additional for 20 weeks and allowing about a third off for shutdowns and layoffs in that period the total retroactive checks will be around $10,000,000.

"One thing I could never stand about the Army was those darned barrack room inspections!"

Spokesmen for the British Trades Union Congress and CIO spoke of common problems facing world labor during the meeting of the Anglo-American Trade Union Committee in Washington last wek. Seated: Sir Walter Citrine of the TUC; Anne Loughlin of the British garment union, and CIO Pres. Murray. Standing: Ernest Bell, TUC; W. P. Allen, British railway engineers; Michael Ross of CIO Intl. Affairs Dept.; F. Wolstencroft of British woodworkers; CIO Sec.-Treas. Carey, and T. Fletcher, TUC research staff.

LABOR'S WORLD

LATIN American labor, speaking through its central federation, last week demanded an end to persecution of workers in Brazil. Reports from Rio De Janeiro described police attacks on union longshoremen, railroad workers and bank employes, with the army helping the cops.

When railroad employes on the British-owned Leopoldina lines struck after seven months of futile bargaining for $15-a-month increases, Labor Minister Negrao Lima ordered his operatives to beat and arrest the men. The president of another workers' organization—bank employes—has been arrested.

The Workers Unity Movement (MUT), representing the unions, charged the government with persecuting labor to cover up its own failure to act effectively against inflation and other major economic issues.

Allied Labor News reports from Rome that the Italian General Confederation of Labor (CGIL) has demanded government action to prevent the U. S. Trans-World Airlines from getting a monopoly over Italian air transport. Under a plan that has been worked out in Rome, present Italian air firms would be dissolved; TWA and the Italian government would operate the lines on a monopoly basis.

Italian labor complains that the scheme is "contrary to national interests."

Joint action against Spain's Franco regime has been pledged by the Franco-British Trade Union Committee, in which the labor movements of the two countries are represented.

The committee reached agreement on another problem over which their respective governments have not yet seen eye to eye: the still-potent industrial machinery of the German Ruhr. The British and French unionists urged international control over Ruhr industry to prevent future use by German warmongers, and recommended that the French get a first priority on coal from the Ruhr mines.

CIO, BRITISH STUDY WORK STANDARDS

THE Anglo-American Trade Union Committee, comprised of representatives of the CIO and the British Trades Union Congress, has completed a "fruitful discussion" of problems facing the labor movements of Great Britain and the U. S., it was announced this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the TUC.

Formal meetings of the committee were held at CIO headquarters in Washington. The British delegation returned to England late last week.

Murray and Citrine issued the following statement at the termination of the conference:

"The Anglo-American Trade Union Committee has enjoyed a fruitful discussion of the major problems affecting the labor movements of Great Britain and the U. S. As representatives of the British Trades Union Congress and the CIO, we have surveyed the problems concerning the development of industrial democracy in our two countries and exchanged past experiences in developing strong union organizations.

"These talks have embraced such varied points as collective bargaining, minimum wages, the 40-hour week, health and safety standards, and various aspects of the problem of workers' security in the postwar world. We feel that we have benefitted greatly by this opportunity to exchange ideas and attitudes, and believe that continued forms of these international discussions can prove tremendously helpful in developing international friendship.

"It is anticipated that this committee will meet again in England later in 1946."

The TUC delegation consisted of Citrine; W. P. Allen of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen; F. Wolstencroft of the Amalgamated Society of Woodworkers; Ernest Bell, secretary of the TUC international department; Anne Loughlin of the Natl. Union of Tailors and Garment Workers; and Ted Fletcher of the TUC Research Department.

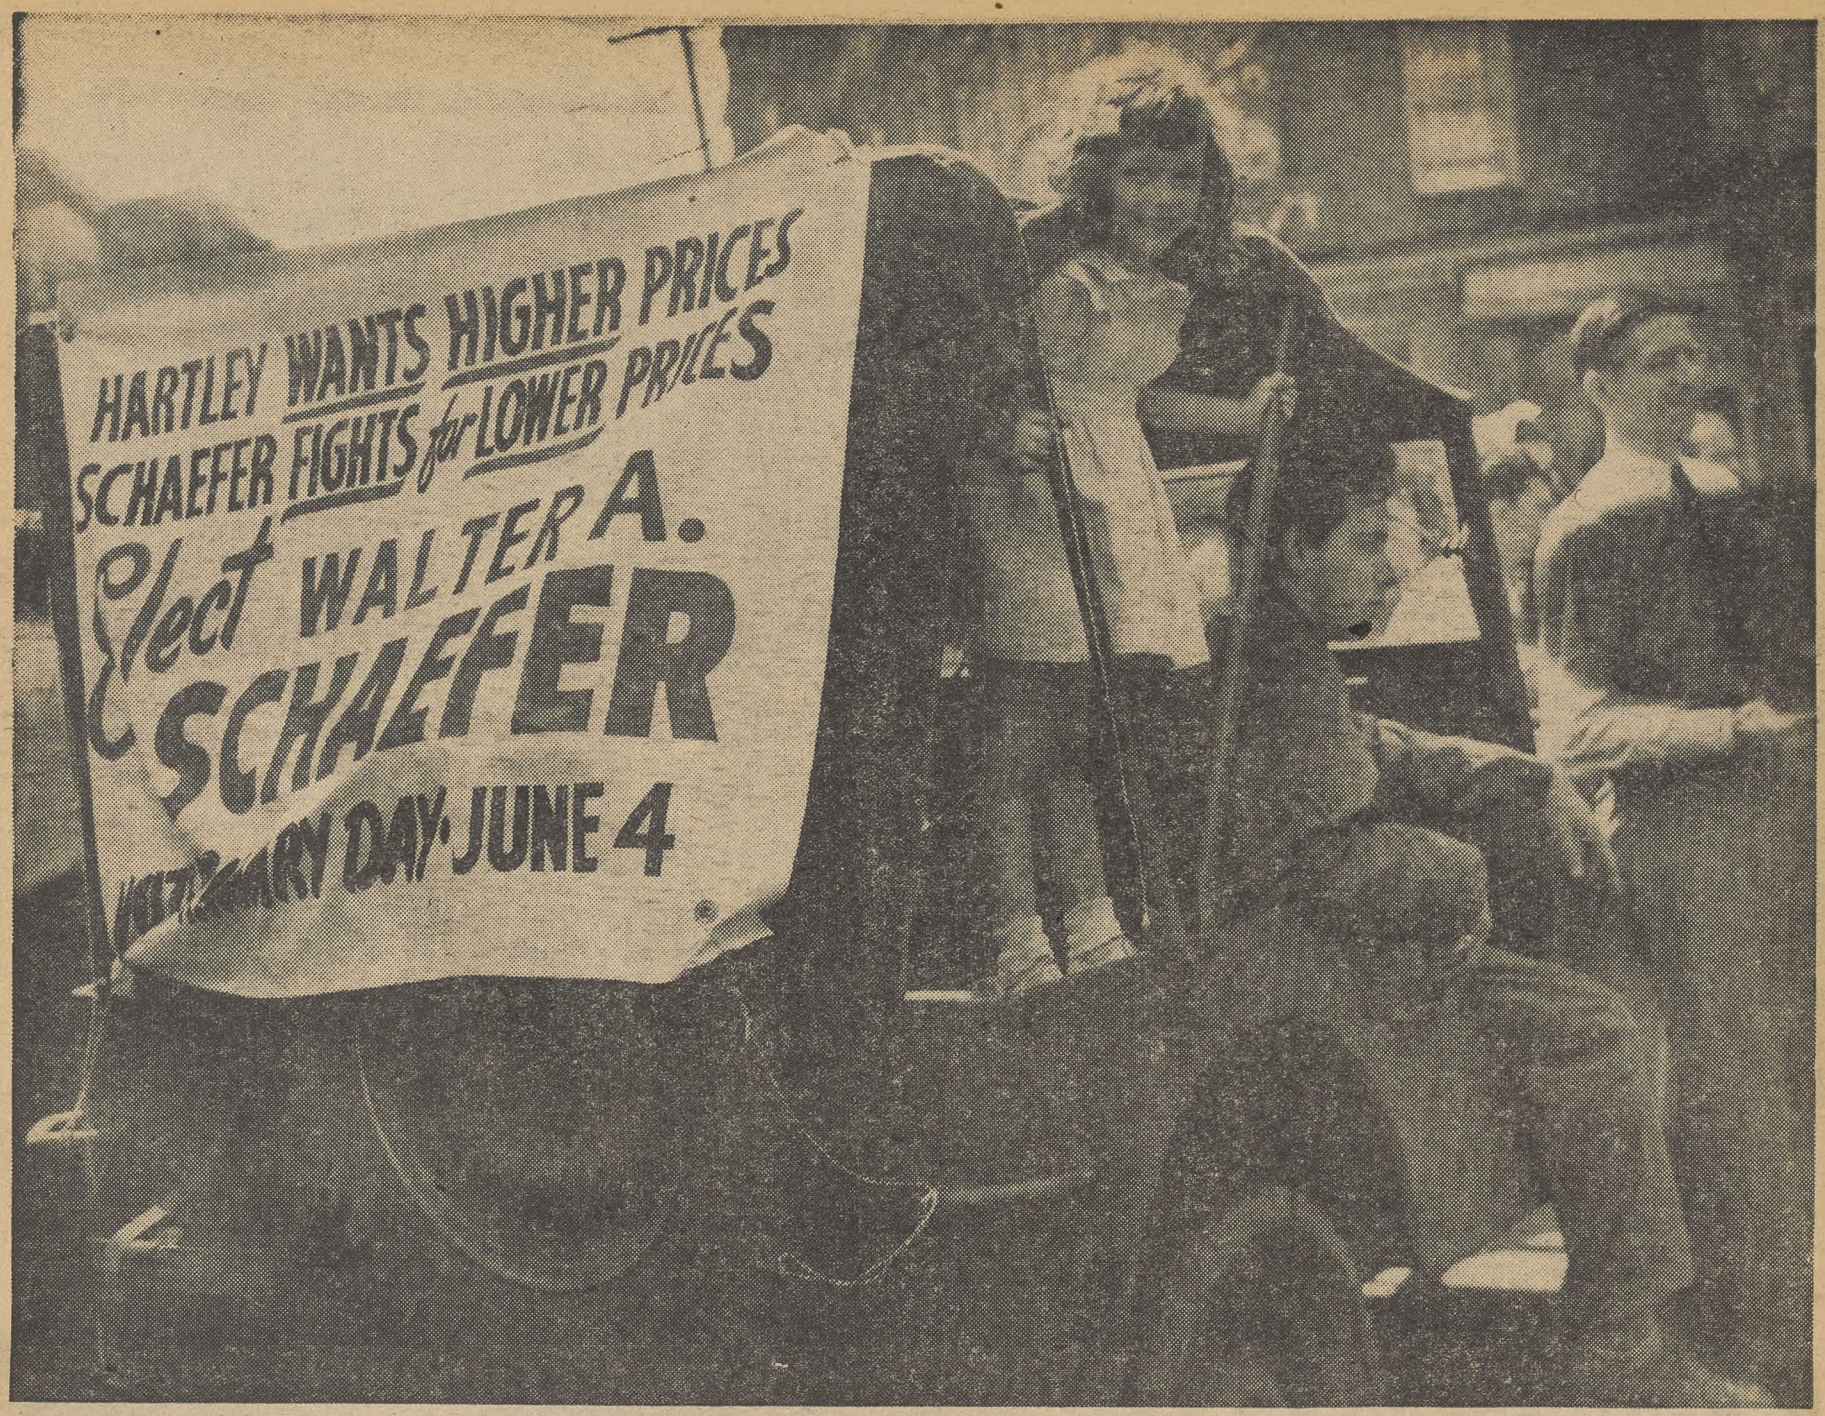
The CIO was represented by President Murray, Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Vice-Pres. Allen S. Haygood, Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union, and Michael Ross, director of the CIO international affairs department. Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, another CIO member of the committee, was prevented by illness from attending the sessions.

CIO SENDS THREE TO MOSCOW MEET

CIO will be represented at the World Federation of Trade Unions executive council meeting next month by a three-man team.

Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, UAW Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas and Michael Ross, director of the CIO international affairs department, will fly to Moscow, site of the June 16-18 confab.

The WFTU has a full agenda planned for the meeting. To be discussed are the problem of the German trade unions, a report of the labor situation in Greece, relations with the United Nations Economic & Security Council and a considerable number of admintrative proposals in connection with the development of the WFTU international machinery.



1 It's the people vs. the Corporations, and the issue is OPA, in the 10th Congressional district of New Jersey. On the streets of Newark, the people are rallying for the June 4 primary that pits anti-OPA Republican Fred A. Hartley, 19 years a Congressman, against challenger Walter A. Schaefer. Schaefer is for OPA, for a 65c an hour minimum wage bill, for a fair employment practices law, against legislation like the Case bill. Among his younger backers is Carolyn Diane Fink, daughter of veteran Carl Fink.

2 The Greater Newark CIO Council is leading the fight against Hartley. "Why is it that Hartley has been elected nine times?" asks Political Action chairman Jim Moore. "He has two faces. If there's a funeral, he sends a remembrance. If there's a wedding, he sends a greeting. He plays shuffleboard with the boys. What does he do when he goes to Washington? He shows who's back of him by leading the fight to raise the price of milk from 16c to 32c a quart, to see that the price of a suit of clothes jumps from $30 to $75." Moore, left, discusses campaign tactics with Sam Varano, left, and Emil Nardachone, local officials of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

One of his listeners, Frank Cicola, said: "It's time we changed. We don't want inflation and another depression. I don't want to ever see another depression like the one in '29. I used to walk from plant to plant—e fellows would wave me away before I even got to the door."

'WE'RE not professional politicians. We're workers from the shops, and we've come here to talk to you as laboring men and members of the mmunity on the defeat of Hartley and the election of Walter Shaefer." his is CIO-PAC at work. The speaker is Nick Cilli, PAC chairman of the h ward of Newark. He is addressing a street corner gathering. Another eaker begins, "Friends, relatives, and members of the community." He is ck Martino, PAC chairman of the first ward in Newark and a Westinghouse orker of Local 426, UE. This is his neighborhood and there are probably some his relatives in the crowd.

These election rallies, the motorcades, leaflet distributions, and home canssing are waking up the New Jersey communities to guard their best interests the coming primaries and elections. The union men work hard. Five speeches five street corners on your free Saturday afternoon is work. But they underand the seriousness of the campaign.

Congressman Fred A. Hartley must be defeated. Hartley's record in ashington is all bad. His voting has been against OPA and has been antioor (for the Case bill) all along. Further, as Jim Moore, PAC chairman in arge of this campaign, pointed out to the Newark street corner audience, le's not just voting for this anti-labor legislation. Congressman Fred Hartley leading this fight."

A highly industrialized portion of New Jersey is involved in this campaign. ion members from the region in steel, auto, electric, gas, rubber, packinguse, clothing, textiles and other industries are being drawn into PAC tivity. Center for the drive is the PAC office in Newark at 17 William St.

There are 110,000 registered voters in the territory, including part of wark and East Newark, Bloomfield, Glen Ridge, Belleville, Kearney, Harrin and Nutley.

4 Politics is people. You have to take the issues to them in their neighborhoods. UE-CIO member Frank Scarpelli hands out leaflets and tells voters about Hartley's record—America First supporter up to Pearl Harbor, fierce opponent of strong price control, voter against subsidies to help provide housing for veterans.

WOODWORKERS GAINS TOTAL 20c

A 5c per hour increase won this week by 40,000 lumber workers on the Pacific coast brings to a total of 20c per hour the gains won by the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America since V-J Day.

The settlement affects employes of over 500 companies in the Douglas fir region. An increase of 15c per hour was won last fall, effective November 1. The present 5c offer is effective as of April 1, when ratified by the principals.

The Wage Stabilization Board has to act upon the increase.

Negotiations are continuing in the Western Pine areas and it is hoped an early settlement will be arrived at without a work stoppage.

Although the IWA-CIO top committee was armed with a strike vote in both negotiations, it became unnecessary to use strike action.

The recent negotiations were opened by nearly 100 companies cancelling contracts, and other companies asking revision of as many as 33 contract points.

A joint request was made for Dept. of Labor assistance. Ronald Houghton and Joe Vincent, acting in behalf of the Dept., brought about the proposed settlement between the committees which is to be referred to the IWA membership and the employers. The IWA committee has recommended acceptance of the proposal.

The IWA committee agreed to forego a sick leave demand in view of the national lumber shortage and the great need for material to build homes for returning veterans and lumber for wooden boxes in which to move precious food crops.

"The IWA has continually pointed out ways that our government can assist in getting better over-all lumber production, utilize wood waste, and, at the same time, build up our crop of trees for the future," said Pres. James E. Fadling at the conclusion of negotiations.

"The IWA, therefore, urges again that a sound program be devised to assist full production of lumber and logs, giving the workers a good wage at steady employment. Lumber workers will produce at good wages, but are also firm in their position that if prices and profits soar, they must and will demand better wages and conditions."

Late this week the IWA reported that Klamath Basin, Oregon, and California pine operators have agreed to the same wage increase as the fir associations.

Five out of seven Pacific Coast lumber associations have accepted terms, IWA officials said, with the major holdout in white pine, employing about 8,000.

SEES BIGGEST STRIKE'S END

By ESTHER HANDLER

HOPE for an early settlement of the biggest current CIO strike tying up production of vitally needed farm equipment and resulting from stubborn refusal of violently anti-union companies to bargain in good faith, was seen this week. Secretary of Labor Louis B. Schwellenbach announced to the press that the government intends to take over the Allis-Chalmers and J. I. Case plants by the end of the week if these companies refuse to resume "genuine bargaining."

J. I. Case plants, located at Racine, Wis., and Rockford, Ill., employing 5,000 workers, organized by the CIO Auto Workers, have been strikebound for six months. Allis-Chalmers strike involving seven plants—some out as long as 2½ months—and nearly 30,000 workers, climaxed two years of unsuccessful bargaining.

Robert Buse, president of Local 248, UAW-CIO, West Allis, largest of the Allis-Chalmers locals, declared last week that this step by the government places the responsibility for the holdup of farm equipment production during a national food crisis "squarely where it belongs: with the management of the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co.

Speaking for the Allis-Chalmers Workers Council, the organization through which the seven unions—organized by the Electrical, Radio & Machine, Farm Equipment Workers and UAW—function cooperatively, Buse declared that the unions are ready to negotiate with the company as soon as it sends its top officials into negotiations. The chief obstacle in the way of securing contracts at each of the plants is the company's insistence upon being represented by "fourth string" officials, the local union president said.

PACKING UNION TO PLAN PACTS

HAVING emerged from this year's 10-day strike stronger than ever before, the CIO Packinghouse Workers will meet in Montreal, June 3 for their third constitutional convention.

Prominent among the affairs to be considered by some 400 delegates will be plans for new contracts for the Big Five packers—Swift, Armour, Wilson, Cudahy and Morrell—whose master contracts expire this August. It is expected that the delegates, speaking for some 200,000 packinghouse workers, will ask for a guaranteed annual wage to be included in the new contracts.

The union is proud of the annual wage plan negotiated by the CIO employes of the Hormel plant in Austin, Minnesota. In operation since 1935, the Hormel plant is an illustration as to how a guaranteed yearly wage benefits the workers as well as the community in which they live. The assured income of the Hormel workers is reflected in the growing prosperity of Austin, where the Hormel plant is a dominant company, and in the improved industrial relations and high productivity of the packing workers.

The convention will elect international officers and directors for the 10 districts of the union which cover the entire United States and Canada. Because the ODT banned last year's convention, this is the first election to be held since June, 1944.

A convention high-light will be the report by Pres. Lewis J. Clark of UPWA on his recent trip to the South American countries and of the formation of the Pan-American Committee of Meat Workers.

New York City social service workers, members of the CIO Office and Professional Workers, diagnose their complaint against the Community Service Society, which has refused to recognize the union. The pickets did not interrupt the agency services as they picketed on their own time.

AMERICANISM

A NATIONAL MONTHLY PUBLICATION

VOL. 7. NO. 4. CATTANOOGA 1, TENNESSEE. APRIL, 1946 5 CENTS PER COPY.

Twelve reasons for not joining the CIO cited in the April issue of the Militant Truth, southern anti-union sheet, whose masthead is pictured here, boil down to two—that by organizing six million workers for better wages and working conditions and by making them active politically, the CIO has sinned against God and the Constitution.

U. S. MOVES TO SMASH KLAN

WHILE employers racked their brains for ways to halt the CIO's southern organizing campaign, public protest from southerners precipitated action this week against the Ku Klux Klan by both Federal and Georgia authorities.

The U. S. government filed a tax lien in the State courts against the organization for $685,305 allegedly unpaid income taxes dating back to 1921.

With California earlier showing the way by revoking the Klan's charter, Georgia's Gov. Ellis Arnall ordered similar action, after clergmen verbally flayed the secret organization from the pulpits of more than score of churches in Atlanta, the hooded hoodlums headquarters.

Presumably referring to the backing the Klan is reportedly giving to Eugene Talmadge in his campaign for Governor of the State, Arnall declared that the Klan was violating its charter by engaging in political activity.

Another alleged violation of the Klan charter as a nonprofit fraternal organization was cited by Arnall. The KKK was charged by Georgia's governor with promotion of "prejudice, hatred and intolerance through the concerted action of its members."

But employers were marshalling an arsenal of devices to fight the organization of their employes. Southern textile interests were reported by Federated Press to be planning a tax of 10c on each cotton spindle to raise a war chest for "public relations"—a large part of which is expected to find its way into the Klan's coffers.

A variety of other means were used. At Gaffney, S. C., where the CIO Textile Workers have been on strike 13 months against the Gaffney Mfg. Co., city officials arrested parents, picketing with their children, after passing a special ordinance.

Methods used at Smithfield, Va., were a gathering of 300 backed by Remmie L. Arnold, president of the Southern States Industrial Council—the principal speaker—as well as rumors of lynching to intimidate Negro CIO members.

Lloyd Vaughan, CIO representative, was booed when he attempted to speak at the meeting. Although the CIO lost an NLRB election at a small meat packing plant the next day, organizational plans are going forward in Smithfield and throughout Virginia with employes joining at Arnold's own pen factory in Petersburg, and an NLRB election is in the offing.

CIO WINS DETROIT CITY WORKERS

After a strenuous campaign by both sides the CIO United Public Workers last week won a 2 to 1 victory over the AFL in a representation election among Dept. of Public Works employes of the city of Detroit.

The vote was CIO 2,513; AFL 1,343; no union 249. It was conducted by the city election commission along NLRB lines and was the first of its kind in any American city, according to V. Pres. Mort Furay of the UPW. While the city conducted the election Mayor Jeffries, campaigning for the Republican nomination for governor of Michigan, says no contract will be signed. But some sort of working agreement is confidently expected by the UPW.

MEETING KEYED TO DIXIE DRIVE

"ORGANIZE the South!" is the slogan appearing on the badges issued to the delegates attending the fourth constitutional convention of the CIO United Furniture Workers.

The furniture convention, the first held in three years due to war transportation restrictions, will open on June 3 in the Statler Hotel, Detroit.

Pres. Morris Muster of UFWA announced that credentials already in the international office indicate the largest convention ever held by the union. A large delegation from Southern local unions is assured and delegates will represent locals from such important furniture centers as Thomasville and High Point, N.C.; Memphis, Tenn.; and Martinsville and Roanoke, Va.

Prominent speakers who have accepted invitations to address the convention include CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas, of the CIO Auto Workers; CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Charles G. Bolte, American Veterans Committee, chairman.

A substantial number of local unions will be represented by delegates who saw service in the Army, Navy, Marines and the Seabees. A two-day meeting of the union's General Executive Board opened June 1 and the incoming GEB will meet the two days following the convention.

BANK BECOMES UNION'S HOME

DELEGATES representing more than 12,000 red caps, dining car employes, Pullman laundry workers and airline service employes, will meet in Chicago, June 4 to 7, for the fifth biennial convention of the CIO United Transport Service Employes.

A feature of the convention will be the formal dedication of the Union's new home at 3452 South State St. The building was formerly the Binga State Bank. Speakers for the occasion will be CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; Bishop Bernard J. Shiel; Bess Myerson (Miss America of 1945); Congressman William L. Dawson and the Rev. Joseph Moore.

Others scheduled to address the delegates during the convention are: Pres. Walter Reuther, of the CIO Auto Workers, John W. Gibson, assistant Secretary of Labor and Rose Pesotta, author of "Bread and Roses." Also on the program are D. S. I. Hayakawa of the Illinois Institute of Technology, Dr. Frank Horne, U. S. Housing Agency, Henry Lee Moon of CIO Political Action Committee, General Counsel Leon M. Despres of UTSEA and Hope R. Stevens, New York Regional Council, UTSEA.

Pres. Willard S. Townsend of the UTSEA declared that the convention will study and adopt methods of increasing the union's activity in the many communities where local organizations exist.

"We are of the opinion" he declared, "that intelligent unionism today must assume greater community responsibility. Unions today must consider and should give real consideration to community services, co-operative and credit union programs, hospitalization insurance, veterans' services and family, cultural, recreational and social activities."

18½c AIRCRAFT RAISE

A wage increase of 18½c an hour has been won by the CIO Auto Workers for 1,900 employes of Taylorcraft Aviation Corp. at Alliance, O.

Twelve cents of the raise is payable as of May 6. Three cents will be paid August 1, and the final 3½ cents will go into effect on November 1. All factory and office employes will share in the increase.

AFL MAKES ATOM BONER

THE CIO Atomic Workers Organizing Committee leveled its first big blast against the AFL this week and Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic workers moved in to widen the breach.

Jumping on a statement made by George L. Googe, AFL Southern organizing chief, that the AFL would not eek initiation fees from atomic workers, the CIO charged that the AFL already had collected initiation fees ranging from $3.50 to $250.

"Many atomic workers have stormed the AFL offices . . . and demanded that their money be refunded," CIO representatives said.

Initiation fees and high dues have been collected by about 25 different AFL unions at Oak Ridge "under the promise that some day the AFL hoped to get contracts," the CIO charged.

CIO initiation fees are $1 for non-veterans and veterans pay no fees. Membership dues in the CIO union do not start until bargaining rights are established between the union and managers of the atomic energy plants.

WAREHOUSE LOCAL MAPS N. Y. DRIVE

A large-scale organizing drive in New York's wholesale and warehouse industry was voted unanimously by 350 delegates at a two-day Convention of the Wholesale and Warehouse Workers Union, Local 65, May 25 and 26, in Brooklyn.

The delegates voted an appropriation of $250,000 to finance the drive, which is aimed at doubling the local's present membership of close to 15,000 in the New York area within a year after it gets under way this fall.

At the same time, the delegates approved a wage program for the industry calling for minimum wage provisions in all contracts of no less than $1 per hour for warehouse work, 85 cents per hour for office work and light assembly work.

Summing up the discussions on the organizing drive and the wage program, Local 65 Pres. Arthur Osman brought waves of cheers and applause when he told the delegates: "We must raise our sights, demand wage increases in keeping with today's skyrocketing living costs, and make up our minds to fight for them. If our employers do not resist our wage demands, it's an indication that we're not asking something worthwhile. Anything worth while must be fought for!"

ANTI-CIO RAG BARED

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK

THERE'S a journalistic hack making himself a good living in Chattanooga, Tenn., by linking fantastic smears of organized labor to a tortured and twisted denial of decent, fundamental Christian doctrine in a tabloid paper that mysteriously appears wherever the AFL or CIO starts an organization campaign in the south.

The hack signs himself Sherman A. Patterson, and calls his paper the Militant Truth, complete with an illustration of the Holy Bible backed up with the Cross, and an American flag on the masthead.

Militant Truth calls itself a monthly "interpreting current events from a fundamental Christian and constitutional American viewpoint."

All efforts to contact Patterson in person failed during two days here, but his office in the downtown James Bldg. was open with a young girl clerk in charge.

While waiting for her to assemble some back copies in an office stacked high with the current issue, I noted Patterson's bookcase filled with most of the anti-New Deal, anti-labor books of recent years. It also featured volumes of Elizabeth May Dilling, the domestic fascist who charged Mrs. Roosevelt is a red, and "Roosevelt's Black Record" by the same writer.

Although Militant Truth pours most of its venom on the CIO, it appeared mysteriously at Knoxville when the AFL Ladies Garment Workers was organizing the Standard Knitting mills. Addresses on the current number in its office were going to workers in Griffin and Athens, Ga.

Patterson's listed objectives are "to present the Gospel Message, true to the Bible," and to "uphold the free, representative, constitutional form of government."

Appearing as religious writer is a Dr. Dan W. Wilbert, Washington, D. C., who, strangely enough, is not listed in the Washingon directory as either an individual or a clergyman.

Who are Militant Truth's other writers? The January, February and March issues list the following authors, all suitably featured for southern readers:

Sen. W. Lee O'Daniel (D., Tex.), who has fought every effort of labor to improve the lot of the common man; Howard Rushmore, labor-baiting writer for Hearst's New York Journal American; Samuel B. Pettengill, ex-Congressman from Indiana, now stooging for Frank Gannett's anti-labor, anti-New Deal "Committee for Constitutional Government," and David Sentner, Washington writer for Hearst papers.

Well over a half page is devoted in the February issue of the paper to B. Herly attacking Pres. Sidney Hillman and the CIO Clothing Workers, and another big feature is concerned with the reasons why workers should not ask for higher wages.

Militant Truth is against OPA, against higher wages, against organized labor; against the New Deal. Its columns prove it is for sweatshop employers, for organized greed and high profits.

TELLS ROLE OF LABOR CO-OPS

Labor is urged to support collective buying through consumer cooperatives as it has supported collective bargaining through unions, in a pamphlet "Labor and Co-ops" by James Myers, published by the Cooperative League of the USA. Myers, a friend of labor for many years, is industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches and a member of the Cooperative League's Committee on Organized Labor and Consumer Cooperation.

As very little has been written in this country about labor-sponsored co-ops, this 48-page pamphlet should be of value to union members interested in co-operative activity. It gives basic principles and present trends of true cooperatives; briefly reviews the extent of the labor co-op movement in England and other foreign countries where it has grown to much greater proportions than in the U. S.; lists by states those consumer cooperatives and buying clubs which were built in whole or in part by wage earners, and suggests organization of a credit union as one of the simplest and best ways to start a cooperative group.

The pamphlet may be obtained from the Cooperative League, 167 West 12th St., New York 11, N. Y., at 15c a copy.

"Omigosh! I forgot to register!"

By a 230-106 vote, the House of Representatives passed the Case anti-labor bill for a second time on May 28. The form of the Case bill was identical to that passed earlier in the week by the Senate.

The Congressmen who voted for the Case bill voted against labor; the 106 who voted against the bill voted for labor's democratic rights. In this tabulation, votes for the bill are marked "W"; those against the bill, "R." NV signifies Not Voting.

The following Congressmen were paired for the bill (W): Ploeser (R. Mo.); Eaton (R. N. J.); Schwabe (R. Mo.); Gwinn (R. N. Y.); Arends (R. Ill.); Auchincloss (R. N. J.); Hartley (R. N. J.); Bennett (R. Mo.); Robertson (R. N. D.); Hebert (D. La.); and Vinson (D. Ga).

SENATE VOTE ON CASE BILL

ON MAY 25, the Senate voted 49-29 to pass the Case anti-labor Bill (HR 4908). This bill, approved earlier in the year by the House of Representatives, repeals in effect the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act and hobbles labor unions with numerous restrictions.

It is a vicious bill. It was studied for weeks in the Senate Labor Committee, which removed most of the bad features. But in a series of seven amendments, a combination of Republican and polltax Senators again loaded the bill with anti-labor devices.

Remember this vote in November. And remember that this was no bill passed in excitement and hysteria—but one which had been long studied and long debated. The men who voted for the Case bill aginst labor knew exactly what they were doing.

Men who voted AGAINST the Case Bill are listed as R; men who voted for it are listed as W; those not voting are listed as NV.

Good Reading

BOOK GIVES SCORE ON RADIO

GOOD READING for trade unionists who want to know what they can do to help break monopoly control over the air waves is "Radio's Second Chance" * by Charles A. Siepmann, formerly employed as a ocnsultant for the Federal Communications Commission.

The book examines an industry that—perhaps as much as the movies and the newspapers—shapes the destiny of thought in America.

"A democracy," says Siepmann in a preface, "thrives only if all its citizens are alert to the strains and dangers to which it is continuously subjected.

"The radio industry cannot do its job in a democratic society unless the citizens are aware of what it is doing, are alert to what it is not doing, informed enough to be intelligently critical, clearsighted enough to know responsible performance when they see it, and to demand it when they do not see it."

From this preface Siepmann develops his thesis that monopoly interests have nearly clinched control of the radio and that the people must do something about it. FM (frequency modulation) broadcasting offers one answer, he says, with low-cost operation making it a natural for operation by people's broadcasting firms.

In a call for action, he writes:

"We have referred to the listener as the sleeping partner in radio. It is time for us not only to wake up but to awake to the modern world, avail ourselves of the techniques which today secure for social groups a voice in the conduct of affairs.

"It is not enough to be informed, alert and conscious of what we're after. To get what we want we have to organize."

SOCIAL WORKERS BRIEFED ON CIO

Representatives of a number of CIO unions took an active part in the program of the Natl. Conference of Social Work held last week in Buffalo. A score or more CIO officials spoke at the conference, telling the social service workers what the CIO has meant to America's industrial workers.

John Brophy, director of CIO Councils, in his speech on industrial forces and social progress said that the statistics recording these gains are very impressive.

"You, as social workers, see in your communities the reflection of union gains," he said. "You see the rise in levels of family living, in nutrition, health and security.

The Natl. CIO Community Services Committee sponsored two special sessions at the conferences and representatives of the CIO-CSC and other CIO groups discussed the social program of the CIO at these and other sessions. CSC speakers included Secretary Ted F. Silvey, who gave the CIO's viewpoint on the reorganization of National health and welfare service, and Program Director Robert A. Levin, who spoke at the session on Charity versus Service.

Other CIO speakers included Pres. Lewis Merrill of the Office & Professional Workers; Exec. Sec. Bernard Segal, UOPWA Social Service Employes Union; Solomon Barkin, Textile Workers' research director; James King and Eleanor Dowling, State, County & Municipal Workers, and others.

Church & Labor Pioneer

VIRGINIA CIO PRESIDENT APPOINTED LABOR CHAPLAIN

THE Rev. Charles C. Webber, president of the Virginia State CIO Council and pioneer in the cause of promoting better understanding between church and labor groups, has been appointed "chaplain to organized labor" by Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam.

Mr. Webber, who is a national representative of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and director of the CIO Political Action Committee in Virginia, was given his new appointment as labor chaplain at the N. Y. East Methodist Conference held May 16 in Brooklyn.

A graduate of the University of Michigan and the Boston University School of Theology, Mr. Webber did graduate work at Union Theological Seminary, at Harvard, and has a master's degree from Columbia University. He began his work with the labor movement during his first pastorate in Denver in 1920, where he was president of the Denver Labor College.

In 1922 he left Denver to become superintendent of the Pittsburgh Coke Mission, having charge of 25 churches and Sunday schools. Later he served for three years as pastor of the Church of All Nations in N. Y. City, and for nine years was on the faculty of Union Theological Seminary, as assistant director of field work and instructor in the department of church and community.

Virginia CIO President Appointed "Chaplain to Labor"

In 1935 Mr. Webber went to Richmond, Va., during the Amalgamated's campaign to organize the Friedman-Marx Clothing Co. In 1943, on leave of absence from the church, he helped organize a plant in Martinsville, and in 1935 he was appointed a national representative of the ACWA.

At the Virginia CIO Council convention in April this year Mr. Webber was elected president and director of the CIO-PAC.

LABOR HITS TORY BILLS

Unions everywhere in the country took immediate action against the hysterical anti-labor proposals. Among them were the CIO Packinghouse Workers, whose executive board is meeting in Quebec in a pre-convention session; the United Rubber Workers, which approved the trainmen's proposal for joint political action; 1,200 shop stewards in New York who spoke for 600,000 members in calling the President's proposal "unwarranted and uncalled for;" 15 non-operating rail brotherhoods affiliated with the AFL, which said passage of the bill is "unthinkable;" the Intl. Typographical Union, which sent emergency notices to all its locals.

Pres. Joseph Curran of the Maritime Union and Pres. Michael Quill of the transport workers urged immediate action to defeat the bill. In Chicago a thousand officers of the city's biggest CIO unions laid plans for a joint mass meeting with AFL and brotherhood locals. The Maryland-D. C. CIO Council called upon Maryland's two Senators to vote against the pending anti-labor legislation. Paul Schnur, secretary of the San Francisco CIO, charged that recent developments have "placed the government of the the U. S. at the disposal of monopolists and industrialists."

The Machinists union, independent, declared it would seek the defeat of any Congressman who voted for the Truman strike-breaking program. The Ohio CIO charged that the Senate is "going completely mad in its lust to destroy labor unions."

The Natl. Religion & Labor Foundation in New Haven described the proposals as "the gravest threat in our history to the fundamental liberties we cherish." The Case Bill must be defeated since its passage "would greatly weaken organized labor," a statement from the American Veterans Committee declared.

The Natl. Negro Congress pointed to gaps between the President's avowal of friendship for labor and his recent proposals.

Within a few days, big delegations from several eastern industrial states reached Washington bringing similar demands. From New York some 350 men and women from CIO unions in the country's largest city came to the capital and conferred at length with the Empire State's two Senators—Mead and Wagner—both of whom are long standing friends of labor. A smaller but no less effective delegation came from Philadelphia. An auto caravan of CIO-ers from Cleveland left the Ohio city for Washington early in the week.

Denunciation of the bills also came from the AFL and from the Railway Brotherhoods. Pres. A. F. Whitney of the Railway Trainmen spoke to several thousand people at an outdoor mass meeting staged by the N. Y. City CIO

Summer's ahead! You and your children can do all sorts of things together. A work table set up outdoors will furnish your children and the children in the neighborhood with endless fun. TRUMAN BILL HITS HOUSEHOLD FUNDS

By ELIZABETH SASULY

Washington Representative, CIO Food & Tobacco Workers

WOMEN's stake in the anti-union laws now being pushed in Congress by President Truman is a double one—they are concerned both as workers and as housewives.

As workers, women are concerned with any law affecting their rights as union members. They know that anti-union legislation threatens their wages and standards as it affects those of all workers.

As housewives, women know that the family take-home pay is threatened by the Truman bill and the Case bill just as a direct wage cut would affect it.

As citizens, women know that any law that cuts into the rights of working people to organize and bargain collectively threatens the rights of all people, whether they belong to organized labor or not.

My union, the FTA-CIO, has a large percentage of women among its members, larger probably in proportion than most other unions. We have always found that our members are among the most militant, the most interested in everything that affects their welfare and the ability of their union to help them.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, FTA Pres. Don Henderson and other CIO officials and their leaders have denounced the Truman bill, and its GOP counterpart, the Case bill, threatening the existence of unions and democracy.

Fascism is always preceded by suppression of unions. It was done that way in Japan, Italy and Germany. Along with that process, women in fascist countries found themselves forced out of industry, into the lowest paid and most menial jobs, back into a condition of social inferiority.

If unions are suppressed in this contry, as the Truman-Case bills would do, women workers and housewives will suffer alike. That is why women, through their unions, their auxiliaries and other progressive organizations are fighting the union-busting plans now in Congress.

The answer to the Truman plan to destroy unions, as CIO leaders have pointed out, must be intensified organizaion and united political action by working people and their allies, the housewives, farmers and others.

As in the 1944 election, women will play a key role in the elections of 1946 and 1948. The job of every working woman, of every housewife, is to see that the largest possible number of women are mobilized to play a progressive role in these elections.

CIO-PAC and CIO unions must work harder than ever to see that women, whether they belong to unions or not, are brought out to register and vote—on the issues and for candidates pledged to carry out a progressive program.

If women are not mobilized in this task, then the current crop of anti-labor laws will be only a beginning. At the end of the present Truman road lies fascism. At the end of fascism lies World War III.

Working class men and women alike must unite to keep our free nation off this road to destruction.

OPEN SHOP THREAT

An openshop amendment to the Nebraska constitution will be on the Nebraska ballot in November. The proposed amendment would "prohibit denial of employment to any person for membership or non-membership in, or resignation or expulsion from a labor organization."

Security -- A No. 1 Problem

Last week, while Congressional conservatives were screaming at American labor and seeking to whittle down the workers' rights, two CIO officials talked about two problems on the mind of every wage earner's family: health and security. Congress, wondering why labor strikes, would do well to study their words.

Before the Senate Labor Committee, Sec-Treas. George Addes of the UAW-CIO presented some bluntly-worded testimony on the need for a national health insurance program, as outlined in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill (S. 1606).

Why do the auto workers want the bill passed? Because, as Addes explained, "their own experience has led them to the realization that an unfair and unnecessary financial barrier has been erected between their families, and the proper medical and hospital care which they feel should be available to them."

The UAW has tried to cope with at least a portion of the problem through its own Health Institute. The Institute has discovered that a large proportion of the workers had failed to take necessary treatment because of "inability to undertake the expense which they feared would be involved."

Nor are voluntary plans very satisfactory. The Blue Cross plan, which in Michigan is more than 50% supported by UAW members, is comparatively high-priced and limited in its service.

"The cheapest, and the only effective solution within the framework of our economic system is in the establishment of a national insurance plan," Addes commented.

Another phase of the same problem of providing security for the millions was analyzed at the House Ways & Means Committee by Van A. Bittner, CIO Social Security Committee chairman, in a statement presented by Robert Lamb, legislative representative of the steel union.

Discussing unemployment compensation, the union officials called for passage of another Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill—this one to integrate all our security programs and services.

Present unemployment compensation programs are defective because they vary widely from state to state, payments are low, and large numbers of people are not protected, the House committee was told. Passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill would correct this situation by providing nationwide standards of eligibility for compensation payments, waiting period, duration of benefits, amounts of benefits and disqualifications.

Passage of an improved national security bill would benefit not only workers in periods of distress, but would give the country a more stable economy. That's why CIO supports it; and it's a good reason why Congress ought to do something about this bill—and soon!

Halt the Plot To Kill Labor!

fits which labor has gained in the last 13 years. Through the threat of injunctions, criminal penalties and the draft into military service, this legislation savagely attacks labor and imposes the equivalent of involuntary servitude. These measures constitute a beachhead for those sinister forces in American life which seek to use the military power as a means of crushing labor. Unless promptly rebuffed by lovers of liberty these forces will thrust all democratic rights into permanent quarantine.

I urge you as a representative of a democratic people to reject President Truman's anti-labor and anti-democratic proposal. I urge you also to reconsider the Case bill and to reject it. These measures violate fundamental democratic and constitutional guarantees and threaten the foundations of freedom.

I do not believe that the Senate of the U. S. will permit passion and hysterical partisanship to destroy our freedom. I do not believe that the Senate of the U. S. will permit itself to be stampeded into sanctioning coercion of human beings into working against their will and to subjecting them to the penalties of court martial for their refusal to work.

The Senate cannot and must not permit the fruits of years of struggle to be snatched away and destroyed through hasty and ill-considered action. We cannot, after a bloody war to extend the frontiers of freedom, announce to the world that America has cynically chosen the path of repression.

Basic principles of democracy and freedom, require that President Truman's proposed measure be referred to a Senate Committee for deliberate and calm hearings to afford an opportunity for the presentation of full testimony.

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

Anti-labor hysteria took the place of logic on Capitol Hill last week, and without the skillful leadership and logic of Senators Pepper (D. Fla.) and Murray (D. Mont.) the "work-or-fight" bill might have become law.

As a result of the President's message to the joint session of House and Senate, the calendar was devoted almost entirely to anti-labor legislation. However, other important bills are awaiting their turn; and while fighting to protect its basic rights, labor shouldn't forget these other vital measures:

PRICE CONTROL: Senate Banking Committee shows every indication of bowing to the inflation bloc. The Committee has prepared a number of amendments just as bad as those approved by the House; if they pass, all hope for effective price control will go out the window.

The present law expires June 30—so there's not much time left to impress the Senate of the need for passing an honest, workable, strong price control act for the coming year.

MINIMUM WAGE: The 65c Minimum Wage Bill, already passed by the Senate with the Pace inflation rider attached to it, is due for action by the House Labor Committee in the near future. Write your Congressman today demanding passage of the bill without the Pace rider and with wider coverage to include seamen, retail workers, food processing plant employes.

BRITISH LOAN: The bill to grant the British a three and three-quarter dollar credit is still in the House Banking Committee. Last week Sec. of Commerce Henry Wallace warned Congressmen that the loan would help protect the currencies of the entire world, and predicted that if it is defeated "currency warfare of the most dangerous type" threatens the United Nations.

Wallace also advocated loans to other nations to avert "dividing the world against itself." CIO is supporting the loan as an aid to world recovery; drop your Congressman a line to tell him you favor granting the loan.

HOUSING: The Patman bill for veterans' housing has been passed by Congress and signed by the President; but the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill, which would set up a long-run slum clearance program, is still stuck in the Senate. Its passage is a vital necessity if America is to be half-decently housed during the next decade. If you have housing problems—and who hasn't these days?—write your Senator demanding passage of this bill as soon as possible.

POLL TAX: Southern Senators are fighting frantically to keep H. R. 7 off the floor and to prevent a vote. If they succeed, a group of reactionaries from seven southern states are going to continue dominating the nation's Congress.

ALABAMA, N. MEXICO VOTES WON BY PAC

PAC won in Alabama and New Mexico and lost in California in last week's primary election voting.

In Alabama, 37-year-old James E. (Big Jim) Folsom, who had strong PAC support, romped home an easy victor in a runoff Democratic primary for the governorship. Folsom has adopted a liberal platform and has campaigned for repeal of the state poll tax. However, Rep. Luther Patrick, who had strong labor support in his Birmingham district, lost out to Laurie Battle, a war veteran with no political record.

New Mexico's PAC, composed entirely of locals of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, rang up a .750 batting average in the state's four major election contests. Sen. Dennis Chavez won renomination in a tilt with Gov. John Dempsey, who had big financial support. Chavez has been a leading champion for FEPC and other legislation against discrimination.

Other PAC-supported candidates who swept to victory were Mrs. Georgia Lusk, a school teacher, who won nomination for Congress, and T. S. Mabry, running for governor. Joe Martinez, running with labor backing for Congress, lost out to incumbent Rep. Fernandez.

In California, Gov. Earl Warren (R) captured both Republican and Democrat nominations to practically assure himself election in November. Warren showed surprising strength in defeating Robert Kenny, PAC-endorsed attorney-general who was seeking the governor's seat. Kenny, who is president of the National Lawyers Guild, is a nationally prominent liberal.

Will Rogers, Jr., son of the famous humorist, captured the Democratic Senatorial nomination from Rep. Ellis Patterson, who had PAC endorsement. Rogers, however, built a splendid record as a Congressman before he entered the Army in 1943, and he had been "recommended" but not "endorsed" during the primary campaign. It is almost certain that he will have PAC endorsement in the election fight with incumbent Sen. Knowland (R).

California's liberal Democratic Congressmen, running with PAC endorsement, appeared to have little difficulty in gaining renomination.

In New Jersey, PAC helped turn out 12,000 votes for Walter Schaefer in his effort to gain the Republican Congressional nomination in the state's 10th district from Rep. Fred Hartley. Hartley, a leader of the reactionary coalition against OPA, won, but only after a hot campaign in his usually quiet and conservative district.

JIM CROW BAN BY HIGH COURT

The U. S. Supreme Court struck two blows for progress this week.

By a 6-1 decision it outlawed Jim Crow segregation of passengers on interstate buses. Justice Harold W. Burton was the minority.

The appeal before the court was brought by Irene Morgan, who was fined $10 by a Virginia court for refusing to change seats on a bus enroute from Norfolk to Baltimore.

The other decision, unanimous, struck at a bill of attainder law passed by Congress which banned from U. S. employment three men who had been baited by the former Dies Committee—Robert Morss Lovett, William E. Dodd, Jr. and Goodwin B. Watson.

The court described the law which singled them out for dismissal as one "which inflicts punishment without a judicial trial."

The court awarded them $2,158 in back pay, for which they had sued.

BAY STATE PASSES FEPC LAW

A fair employment practices law has been passed in Massachusetts. It forbids discrimination in employment, upgrading or dismissal because of race, color, religious creed, national origin or ancestry.

The law sets up a three-man commission charged with eliminating discrimination by conciliation, persuasion and education. If conciliation fails, the commission may hold hearings, and it has the power of subpena and may issue "cease and desist" orders.

Its actions are reviewable by the courts, which may impose penalties of up to a year in jail, or $500 fine, or both.

For Case Bill Veto

'WARMED-OVER STEW' WON'T STOP STRIKES

Here are the highlights of a five-page letter sent to president Truman by CIO President Murray urging a veto of the Case anti-labor bill (HR 4908). Murray attached to this letter a detailed analysis of the bill prepared by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel. Both the letter and the analysis prove conclusively that this "warmed-over anti-labor stew" would not bring industrial peace; it would merely serve to handcuff American labor and destroy much of its bargaining power with corporations.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT:

I write you at this critical moment in the Nation's history with respect to H. R. 4908, entitled "An Act To Provide additional facilities for the mediation of labor disputes, and for other purposes." I respectfully request you to veto this piece of legislation which has just been hastily passed by both Houses of Congress.

This Act is not merely ill-considered and injurious to labor; it presents exceedingly grave dangers to the public welfare. Far from removing the causes of labor disputes, it will in fact encourage and increase labor disputes.

The encouragement of trade unionism and the promotion of collective bargaining as an avenue to industrial peace have been the Federal policy for barely ten years. The benefits of the National Labor Relations Act did not begin to accrue to workers until 1937 when the Act was declared constitutional.

From the very date of the passage of the National Labor Relations Act until the present, the labor movement in America has been the subject of an unremitting campaign of sniping and attack on the part of powerful American Industrialists.

From the days of the infamous Liberty League to the present there has never been a session of Congress which did not produce its quota of anti-labor bills. H.R. 4908 is but the most recent of a long line of proposals advanced by an anti-labor group in Congress for the sole purpose of weakening labor and undermining its bargaining strength.

Those who have sponsored and actively promoted this legislation constitute the same vindicative goal-conscious minority which has been engaged in a campaign for the past ten years to repress labor and to destroy its rights.

There is an unbroken chain from the efforts of the Liberty League to kill the National Labor Relations Act at its very birth to H.R. 4908. After ten years of witch-hunt, smear and misrepresentation, after ten years of a campaign without let-up to lay at labor's door every conceivable charge, the labor-baiters have produced H.R. 4908. After ten years, during which every type of parliamentary trick and maneuver was used to slip through Congress a bill which would shackle labor, H.R. 4908 has emerged. . . .

This incessant barrage of labor. Some of the bills display tinues to have certain plain characteristics. It is, first and foremost, exclusively anti-labor. Some of the bills display a pretense at even-handedness by purporting to regulate employers too. When stripped of their symmetrical ornamentation, they all stand revealed as directed exclusively toward the rights of workers and their trade unions. . . .

When the country is faced with a major problem, be it war production, veterans' reemployment, food shortages or what have you, the sponsors of these bills are ready with new bills which mechanically repeat the same chant of hate, "Regulate labor, curb labor, destroy labor." When no problem exists, they invent one and blame labor for its existence.

The stock in trade of these men is hatred. During the war they sought to exploit wartime emotions to shackle labor; today they are hopeful of final victory during the trying period of readjustment to a peacetime economy.

Mr. President, the ill-assorted conglomeration of provisions which constitutes H. R. 4908 is a menace to sound labor relations. I repeat, not one of these proposals will promote industrial peace. Not one of them will reduce strikes or shorten their duration. All of these proposals are merely servings from a warmed-over anti-labor stew which has been kept brewing for the past 10 years.

Mr. President, it is vitally important to bear in mind what the true facts are with respect to Federal labor legislation in this country.

Today in the United States there are many powerful employers who still regard the National Labor Relations Act as a temporary embarrassment, who still fight the organization of their workers and use their economic strength to destroy the efforts of the workers to organize. There are areas in the United States, and they are not inconsiderable either, in which labor organizers are beaten and maimed.

Mr. President, today is not the day and this is not the hour to permit labor to be sacrificed to the petty vengeance of a few. Today, the very moment when labor is supposed to have reaped the full advantage of the NLRB there are more unfair labor practice charges being filed by labor organizations with the NLRB than at any time since March 1938. . . .

Even the wretched and inadequate levels of the existing Fair Labor Standards Act are widely ignored. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, of some 42,613 establishments inspected for violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act more than three-fourths were found by the Wage and Hour Division to be in violation.

Is it not clear, Mr. President, that the urgent need of the hour is the vigorous enforcement of the Federal labor policy? Is it not likewise clear that the answer to the problem of industrial strife is not the weakening of labor or the undermining of its rights but the removal of the causes of industrial strife, the enactment of Congress of your 21-point program, a program which has fallen prey to the same anti-labor junta which seeks the emasculation of labor organizations through H. R. 4908?

Mr. President, the campaign against labor in this country has three historic peaks, each coinciding with a period of great national tension. The first occurred in 1937 when trade unionism first became a force in the mass production industry.

At that time labor, aided by a wise and far seeing administration, successfuly defeated the conspiracy of powerful industrialists to shackle the labor movement. The labor movement entered the war a free labor movement. Its contributions to victory as a free labor movement are still the marvel of the world.

The second drive against labor took place during the war itself. The sole product of that attack was the shameful Smith-Connally Act.

Today we are confronted by still a third attempt of organized anti-unionism and its congressional spokesmen to utilize the tensions and readjustments of the post-war period for their own sinister ends. This third historic attack on labor, Mr. President, must be smashed because a free labor movement is a vital part of a free America.

I therefore respectfully request you, Mr. President, to veto H. R. 4908.

DEMAND CASE BILL VETO

A mounting demand that President Truman veto the vicious Case anti-labor bill spread through the nation's labor and liberal ranks last week while the man in the White House announced he was studying the measure.

With Presidential action necessary by June 12, the sentiment for rejection of the bill grew as the nation receded from the wave of hysterical reaction whipped up by the press during the railroad strike late last month.

The organized effort to persuade the President that labor and the nation would suffer by acceptance of the repressive Case bill was led by CIO President Murray, who sent a lengthy, closely-reasoned letter to the White House early in the week. The letter (highlights of its text appear on page 2) traced the continuing campaign of reaction to snipe at organized labor ever since the Wagner Act was enacted in 1935.

Accompanying Murray's letter was a searching analysis of the bill prepared by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, which showed that the Case proposals would not end strikes, but would unfairly penalize labor unions in dealing with profit-swollen big corporations.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, a group of pro-labor Congressmen predicted that they would marshal at least 135 signatures on a petition asking Truman to veto the bill. So large a group would probably be sufficient to prevent the House anti-labor bloc from securing the two-thirds vote necessary to override the veto.

The entire issue, however, was woven into a tangled skein of politics involving not only labor but the future of the Democratic party in the 1946 elections. The situation found Truman, who in the past has been critical of the Case bill, still supporting his own "emergency" strike-breaking bill. Republicans in the Senate who joined with pro-labor Congressmen to tear out the "work-or-fight" clause of the Truman proposal, are openly advocating Presidential approval of the equally severe Case bill.

Some Washington observers foresee a parliamentary maneuver, in the event Truman vetoes the Case bill, through which that measure will be tacked on to the Truman bill as an amendment. In such a case, the President might be presented with the necessity of considering a veto of a bill which he himself had proposed.

Many Democratic party officials are already regretting the hasty course of action taken by the President during the railroad strike, since it may affect the support given by workers to many Democratic candidates in the autumn elections.

In his letter to the President, Murray charged that the present campaign against labor is merely the latest, and most widely publicized, in a series conducted during the past decade—"an unremitting campaign of sniping and attack on the part of powerful American industrialists."

The CIO President added that the "evidence leads me to believe that we are on the brink of a vast anti-labor crusade of which HR 4908 (the Case Bill) is but a forerunner. He warned that "today is not the day and this is not the hour to permit labor to be sacrificed to the petty vengeance of a few."

Representatives of CIO, AFL and the railroad brotherhoods voiced similar arguments at an informal hearing conducted by a group of 16 pro-labor Congressmen on both the Case and Truman bills.

Throughout the country, meanwhile, labor was vocal and insistent in demanding a veto. In Cleveland the United Automobile Workers, whose executive board was in conference, demanded a veto.

Chicago's CIO and AFL got together for the first time in 10 years to plan a course of joint action against the anti-labor proposals. Some 50 top representatives of the Windy City's unions discussed their plans, and they bitterly criticized Sen. Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) for bowing to the temporary anti-union hysteria.

From Pittsburgh the CIO Electricial, Radio & Machine Workers sent a 25-man delega-

WHAT TO DO

The Case Bill and the Truman Bill threaten your rights and the freedom of your union.

Prices are rising, security is diminishing. Your union must be free to fight for the people's rights.

Here's what you can do:

1. Wire Pres. Truman to veto the Case and Truman bills.

2. Wire your Congressmen and Senators to uphold the President if he vetoes the bills.

3. Wire your Congressmen and Senators to reconsider and defeat the Truman bill.

Kill Truman Bill, All Labor Urges

IN Washington and the nation, a labor movement united in defense of its basic rights this week demanded defeat of the sweeping Truman bill to kill strikes and throw striking workers into the army.

Spokesmen for CIO, AFL, Railway Brotherhoods and independent unions saw eye to eye on the necessity of defeating the suddenly-concocted legislation cooked up at the White House during the railroad strike and tossed before a Congress seething over a newspaper campaign to "hit labor."

The House of Representatives, at least partially recuperated from its case of wild hysteria after the President's speech on May 25, last week cast a wary eye on the Senate's version of the Truman anti-labor bill.

An amended, but still dangerous version of the bill emerged from the Senate with a 61-20 vote on May 31. The House, which had cast only 13 votes against the measure when it was proposed by the President a fortnight ago, had come to realize the political dynamite and threat to basic American liberties contained in the "hasty, ill-considered" course of action outlined by the Chief Executive.

Before the House lay two major alternatives: consideration of the Senate version of the bill, or a decision to send the measure to a joint Senate-House conference committee where differences in the two forms of the proposal may be ironed out.

The Senate's approval of the Truman bill came at the end of a 13½-hour session on May 31. Two days earlier the Senate stripped the work-or-fight clause, through which workers could be drafted into the Army under any terms or conditions set by the President, as well as the proposal that company profits be turned into the U. S. Treasury during the course of military operation of a seized plant. This was the one feature of the bill to which many reactionaries, willing to go to any length to cripple labor, were opposed.

In a second "liberalizing" amendment, the Senate removed the section of the President's bill calling for any worker who insists on his strike rights to lose all seniority.

Despite these two actions, however, the bill remained a vicious weapon by which the President could seize struck plants, order workers back to work, resort freely to injunctions against unions and their members, and strip them of valued rights under the Wagner Act if they continued to fight for their just demands.

At an informal hearing conducted by members of the House, spokesmen for the CIO, AFL, Railway Brotherhoods and other unions voiced sharp opposition to the bill.

Presenting a statement prepared by President Murray, Robert K. Lamb of the United Steelworkers told the group that the powers asked by President Truman are "unprecedented in war and inexcusable in peace."

How seriously the Truman bill can throttle workers' struggles against wealthy corporations was strongly underlined in the Murray statement.

"After seizure (of a plant), the President is empowered to place a gag on the rights of free speech and press of the working men and women involved," Murray noted. "Government seizure may be used as a pretext to prevent peaceable meetings, radio appeals, newspaper advertisements, or any other form of constitutionally protected activity to air the grievances of the employes . . .

Hooray, Says Franco!

APPROVAL of President Truman's strike-breaking legislation was expressed this week by the Madrid radio. According to Allied Labor News, here's what propagandists for Spain's dictator, Franco, said:

"Mr. Truman, aided by the House of Representatives, has just rendered to the pure doctrine of public liberties the most beautiful and fruitful service."

The Franco propaganda mill described American labor leaders as "professional agitators" and gloated that Mr. Truman had "showed them how to treat liberty and how to serve it."

The broadcast added that on May 14, Dictator Franco had addressed the Spanish Cortes (the phoney, fascist parliament) in which he declaimed that the modern state cannot afford to tolerate strikes. "The United States, with Mr. Truman at its head, has applied to the railroad strike that pure doctrine which the calumnied Spanish state professes," Franco declared.

Murray on Air

CIO Pres. Philip Murray will answer attacks on CIO and CIO's Political Action Committee in a radio broadcast at 10:45 p. m. Eastern Daylight Saving time Friday, June 14, over NBC stations.

The attacks were made by Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican Natl. Committee, in a recent NBC broadcast. PAC demanded equal time to reply.

UNITED WE STAND

It often takes a common enemy to unite people. America achieved its greatest national unity in fighting the menace of fascist aggression. All sections of labor united for win-the-war purposes.

Now a domestic menace threatens American liberties. All working people, regardless of union affiliation, are threatened with the loss of rights which affect their ability to win decent wages and conditions through collective bargaining.

The Truman and Case bills, passed by both Houses of Congress, struck labor like a bolt of lightning. CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhood and other union spokesmen reacted as one man, denouncing these outrageous assaults on labor's rights and calling for the sharpest fight against them.

Throughout the country, the rank and file reacted similarly. In many localities, unionists of all affiliations began to get together for a common fight against the common menace.

Joining with labor are many progressive groups of all kinds. For this is not only labor's fight, it is also a people's fight to preserve basic liberties and a free labor movement, the bulwark of our democracy.

The unity of all labor and all progressives can still prevent final enactment of this anti-labor legislation. But it must not stop there. It must be carried forward to secure enactment of urgently needed social legislation, on which there is common labor and progressive agreement, and for the election of public representatives who will not betray the common people.

FORGOTTEN HEROES

Unmeasured and lying abuse is being heaped on American maritime workers—the heroes of yesterday, who suffered more casualties proportionately than any branch of the armed forces, whose unblemished patriotism and unmatched war record won the highest national praise, and whose CIO unions did not have a single work stoppage during the war.

These same men are now being falsely accused of holding up the nation, of threatening famine relief, of being ordered to strike by union bosses for ulterior political motives.

What are the facts?

The CIO maritime workers are demanding only the most reasonable improvements in working conditions. Paid wages of from 53c to 73c an hour, and most of them less than 60c, compelled to work 56 and 63 hours a week without overtime, they are demanding a shorter work-week, wage increases of from 22c to 27c an hour, and overtime after 40 hours.

The unions have engaged in seven months of fruitless negotiations with arrogant ship operators who have refused concessions. Only as a last resort did they vote to strike.

There were no "orders from union bosses" in these most democratic of unions. The workers themselves expressed their will by overwhelming majorities in union-wide referendums by secret ballot.

As to "holding up relief," the unions have stated specifically and repeatedly that relief ships and troopships will be loaded and sailed regardless of any strike action.

The CIO maritime workers do not want to strike. They have no ulterior motives. They are negotiating in good faith on their economic demands, willing to accept any reasonable settlement.

Labor and the public owe much to the maritime workers. They should back them to the limit in their moderate demands. They should demand the powers of government be used to aid them, not to deprive them of their legitimate bargaining power with profit-drunk operators.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

THERE has been some cooling-off of late among the apoplectic gentry who howled with such savage glee at the idea of jailing, fining, outlawing and conscripting American workers for forced labor.

When Truman proposed such measures for governmental strike-breaking, the Republicans applauded loudest, but nearly all the House swallowed them whole.

Big business, press and radio commentators and politicians acted as if the millennium had come—a millennium for millionaires, with the yoke of servitude clamped on labor's neck and endless profits guaranteed by denial of the right to strike.

But then came "the morning after the night before." Intoxication over the "get tough with labor" policy gave way to a hangover. The celebrants decided to read, and even think about, the measures they'd been celebrating.

Suddenly the horrible thought dawned on the big-business boys that dictatorial government powers to break strikes and discipline labor in seized industries might involve some interference with their own prerogatives—might be a step toward a "controlled economy."

They also detected a joker in the Truman bill about net profits (after all expenses and "just compensation") going to the government. This would never do!

★ ★ ★

The tory Republicans, who had so loudly applauded Truman, soon saw a golden opportunity to combine party politics with their customary service to big business.

Since Truman had stuck out his neck so far, they decided to take a slash at it, saying he had gone too far, had asked for too dictatorial powers.

By modifying his proposals, while of course eliminating the one little threat to profits, they even dreamed of attracting some disgruntled labor voters.

At the same time, they believed they could best do their union-busting by forcing through the Case bill before the hysteria subsided.

The Democrats also cooled off a bit. They began to wonder if the Republicans hadn't been too happy over the actions of a Democratic President, and what all this would mean come elections.

It had been wonderful jumping all over labor. But what would happen when they needed labor support for re-election?

So a new strategy was quickly developed by big business and its political, editorial and radio stooges. Their slogan was now that Truman had proposed both too much and not enough.

They looked his gift horse in the mouth and pulled out one or two of its more decayed teeth, making sure to render it harmless to holy profits, but leaving it with enough bite to cut off labor's head.

Adding passage of the Case bill, they now had two powerful anti-union weapons, for alternative or combined use.

★ ★ ★

The more pro-labor members of Congress, meanwhile recovered from the first shock.

In the Senate they fought the Truman bill, helping eliminate conscription of labor and destruction of seniority rights, and voting against the still vicious measure which was finally passed.

In the House, where only 13 had voted against the full Truman bill, the wrath of labor and more sober after-thoughts began to have their effect.

Congressmen elected with labor support started making excuses for voting for the Truman bill and wondering how to set themselves right with the people they had betrayed. A sizeable number signed a petition for veto of the Case bill.

Labor has twice been knocked down by Congress, but it is not out. It still has a fighting chance to defeat both the Case bill and the modified Truman bill, if it can quickly rally all liberty-loving Americans to express their resentment to the President and Congress.

But, most important, labor has been taught the sharpest possible lesson on the need for united and vigorous political activity. Its enemies and betrayers have united all sections of labor in common resistance.

If this unity can be carried through the coming elections, great gains may be made for democratic progress and the election of a Congress more responsive to the popular will.

MARITIME SHOWDOWN CONFRONTS TRUMAN

By FRED d'AVILA

BIGGEST question of the week is: will 200,000 maritime workers, mostly CIO, be forced into a showdown fight June 15 with President Truman's strike-breaking policies?

Truman has threatened to use the U. S. Army, Navy and Coast Guard as strike-breakers if there is a walkout over wage and hour demands.

The committee for Maritime Unity, organized by the Unions, has on its side the powerful solidarity of the working class of the world—already ranging from two AFL maritime unions in the U. S. that have pledged not to cross CMU picket lines, to the new Zealand Waterfront Workers who pledged support through Pres. H. Barnes.

Main point at issue is hours, with the CMU sharply whitting down its demands while employers have made only minor concessions. The CMU—representing one independent and six CIO maritime unions—originally asked a 40-hour week for seamen, made five offers of conciliation which the ship operators rejected, and then finally proposed a 44-hour week at sea without overtime.

The strike picture was complicated this week by action of two AFL seamen's unions that called work stoppages which tied up ships on both coasts, without actually being on strike. Should CMU unions be forced to strike June 15, by a breakdown of negotiations conducted through the Dept. of Labor, rank and file support from striking AFL workers would be of major aid in completing a shipping tieup.

Maritime unions in other countries, too, will probably back the strike. They have been informed of CMU requests for world support by Louis Saillant, secretary general of the World Federation of Trade Unions, which represents 70 million organized workers in 65 countries.

Additional backing has come from the CIO Auto Workers, whose executive board, meeting in Cleveland, labeled Truman "No. 1 Strike-breaker of America." The board said that Truman's threat to use armed force to break the strike "deprives organized labor of its right to negotiate on equal terms with employers and encourages shipowners to reject the just demands of the maritime workers."

The organizations pledging aid this week were the Natl. Negro Congress, the N. Y. City and Washington, D. C., branches of the American Veterans Committee which asked the government to end the strike by encouraging direct negotiations for settlement, and the Seafarers Intl. Union and Masters, Mates & Pilots Union, both AFL, which pledged not to cross CMU picket lines.

Meanwhile, Truman's threat to use the armed forces to break the potential strike drew sharp criticism from the CMU, headed by Harry Bridges and Joseph Curran, respectively presidents of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union and the CIO Natl. Maritime Union.

"By guaranteeing the American ship operators that he will break any maritime strike and will break any maritime union daring to strike, he has encouraged the American ship operators to refuse any reasonable setlements," the CMU said of the President.

"President Truman has turned his back on his and the Democratic Party's pledge to the American seamen to support their struggle for a reduction of their work week from 56 to 63 hours per week to 40 hours.

"The torpedo that President Truman sent into the union-shipowner conference will eventually have effects he never anticipated. It will eventually explode to the detriment of his entire administration, his party and any future Presidential ambitions he might entertain at this time."

Meanwhile, in Congress Sen. Aiken (R., Vt.) and Rep. Wigglesworth (R., Mass.) asked a Congressional investigation of the U. S. Maritime Commission and the War Shipping Administration, charging that shipowners had looted the U. S. Treasury of several billion dollars.

Aiken pointed to a report of the Comptroller General indicating "gross negligence, wastefulness, collusion and inefficiency in handling the affairs" of the two agencies, and Wigglesworth said that the agencies had "a total of $8,007,163,990 of funds improperly accounted for."

In N. Y. City the NMU announced that 96% of its membership had voted for a strike June 15 if necessary. Three other of the CMU unions—the ILWU, Marine Cooks & Stewards and the independent Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers—have also voted to strike, with results of a poll of the American Communications Assn. due June 10.

The Inland Boatmen's Union and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. will support the other unions.

The unions are asking, for the great majority of seamen, increases of from 22 to 35c an hour. Present basic wages range from 53c to 73c an hour, with only a small number receiving over 60c.

Demands common to all seafaring unions include a 44-hour week, eight-hour day at sea and in port, overtime payments ranging from $1..25 to $1.75 an hour, and retroactivity to Oct. 1.

For the longshoremen, the CMU is asking 35c an hour increase in base pay of $1.15 an hour, with corresponding increase in the overtime rate; Saturday as an overtime day; elimination of a 10c an hour carloading differential, and retroactivity to Oct. 1.

Seeking to avert scheduled June 15 stoppage, Committee for Maritime Unity heads were meeting this week in Washington with Dept. of Labor and ship operators. Co-chairmen are, left, Presidents Joseph Curran and Harry Bridges, of the NMU and ILWU respectively.

SENATE GROUP VOTES FOR HIGHER PRICES

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

BOWING deeply with all the dignity of a movieland butler, the Senate Banking Committee last week welcomed inflation to America with an invitation to make itself right at home.

After two months' consideration of the price control extension bill, the Committee approved a series of amendments designed to make OPA as effective as a parasol in an artic blizzard. The Committee's amendments, in many respects worse than those passed by the House in April, are due for Senate consideration within the next fortnight.

Angered by the Committee majority's actions, Sen. Robert Wagner (D. N. Y.), veteran Senate liberal, announced he would write a minority report attacking the amendments. It is the first time in recent Congressional history that the chairman of a Senate Committee has been forced to write a minority report. The majority version will probably bear the signature of Sen. Robert Taft (R. O.), an outspoken foe of price control.

Chester Bowles, director of economic stabilization, described the Committee's bill as even worse than the House measure, which he had earlier characterized as setting the scene for a joyride to inflation."

In New York, OPA chief Paul Porter, who was addressing 10,000 consumers at a "Save OPA" rally, warned that the scuttling of price controls would bring an "inevitable aftermath of depression, unemployment, business failures and farm foreclosures." Effective price control, he said, is the only way to avert the "inflation and collapse which have accompanied every other war in our history."

Here are the high-points of the hatchet job performed by the Banking Committee:

1. Elimination of the maximum average price plan, which forced manufacturers to produce low-cost clothing.

2. Trimming of food subsidies to less than a billion dollars—approximately half the figure sought by OPA.

3. Removal of ceilings on meats, poultry and dairy products by June 30 of this year.

4. Establishment of an independent board to determine when to remove ceilings from products.

5. Prohibition against cutting pre-war discounts or dealer mark-ups on goods whose production was cut 75% or more by government order during the war. As a result, prices of autos, refrigerators, washing machines and other such appliances are expected to jump a half billion dollars in a year.

6. Permission for textile manufacturers to insure getting their 1939-40 profits, plus increased costs.

Practically the only feature of the House bill not approved by the Senate Committee was the guarantee of a profit on every item manufactured. That provision was apparently too shocking even for the free enterprise crew on the Senate committee.

Unless the Senate receives a mighty deluge of mail and telegrams in the next week or two, it is likely that the Committee version of the bill will be approved. Under those circumstances, inflation will be with the American people—and workers' living standards will take a nose dive.

The President's compliments, sir....

ANOTHER '29 CRASH SEEN

THE depressions of 1921 and 1929 are ready to revisit America unless stern steps are taken to hold back prices and to permit the people's income to raise, Pres. Walter Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers warned the nation last week.

Speaking on an ABC network, he declared that "the protest of the people to save OPA that thundered on Washington a month ago must be dwarfed by a new wave of protest that will shake Washington."

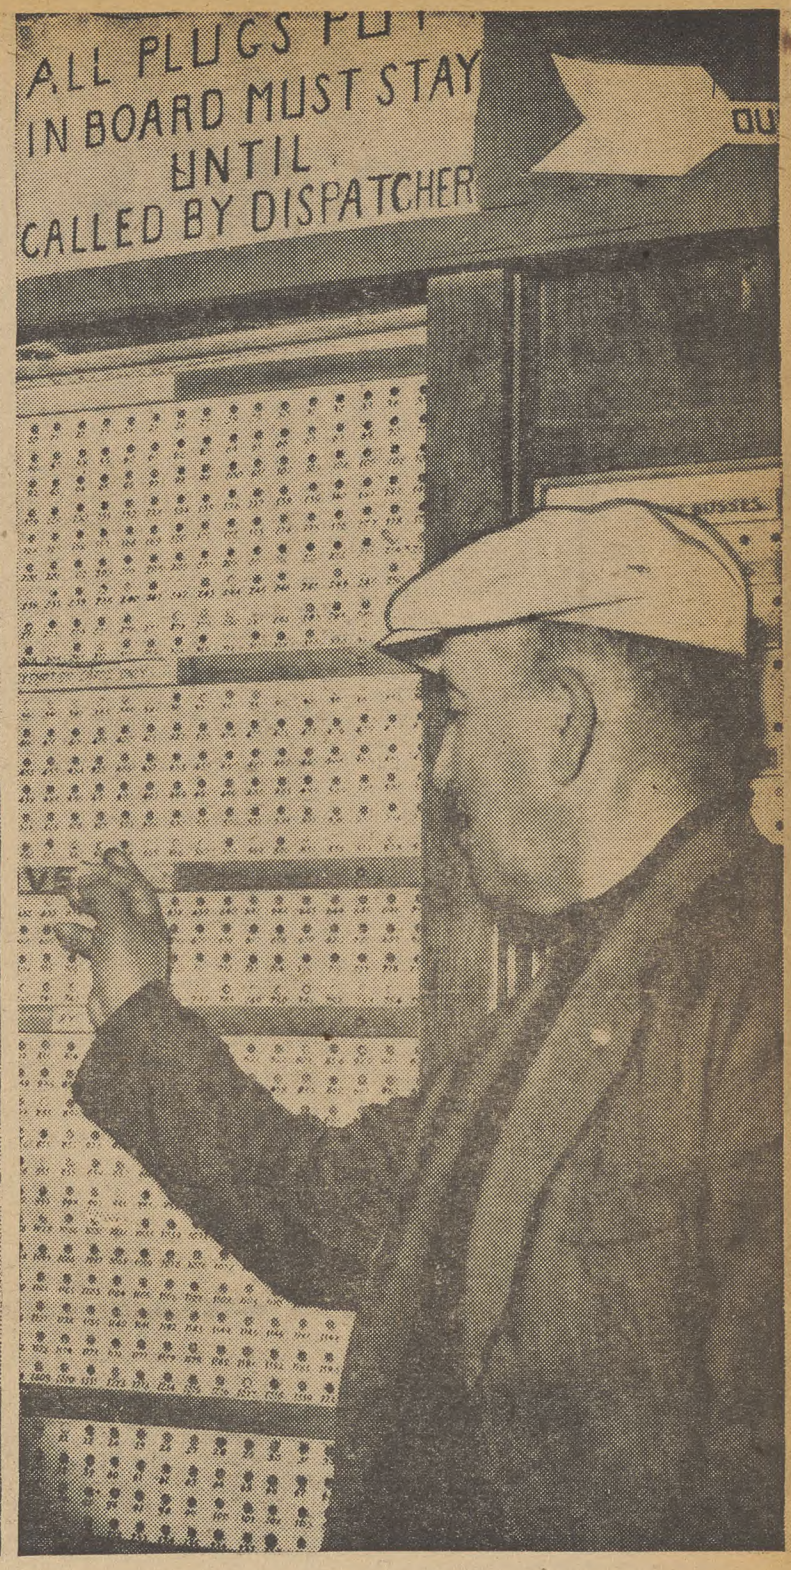
He noted that General Motors and other automobile firms have received "not one price increase, but three" since last November.

"Our union is protesting these high auto prices and will go into court if we can't get OPA to reduce the prices," the UAW president said. "We know that the auto companies will make enormous profits and do not need higher prices to pay our wage increase.

"The auto companies are doing all right by themselves. For example, General Motors figured a tax saving for the corporation of 52 million dollars in the first quarter of 1946."

He warned that the next depression "may hit us so hard we won't get up again." In 1929, he recalled, "we lost our jobs, our homes and our farms. The next time we may lose our freedom."

1 Oldtimer on the San Francisco waterfront and a member of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union is J. Pete Acquilina, scheduled to go on strike June 15 with 200,000 other maritime workers if shipowners refuse to meet their wage and hour demands. A seaman when he was 14, Pete remembers whn sailors worked 12 hours a day, longshoremen were paid 55c an hour.



2 Pete plugs in at the ILWU hiring hall board to make sure that he gets his turn in the rotary hiring system. He remembers the "shape-up" when longshoremen had to buy jobs and "piece off" foremen to hold them.

3 Pete works on the Embarcadero (San Francisco's waterfront) with gang No. 44. His type of work is rated most dangerous of any outside manufacturing—even logging has fewer accidents. He thinks maritime unity is "one of the finest things to come along."

MARITIME UNITY—C

Stories by Sara Lee Dill and Fred d'Avila ● Pho

J. PETE AQUILINA has been "packing a hook" as a longshoreman off and on since the days when the waterfront wage was 55c an hour and seamen worked the 12-hour day. He thinks maritime unity is "one of the finest things to come along and the only way to build. . . ."

When Pete was 14, in 1905, his parents put him aboard a deep water ship out of San Francisco and he's been working on the sea and the San Francisco waterfront ever since. He can remember when they rationed grub and water aboard ship and worked 12 hours a day at $1 a day on a steamer.

He remembers coming back from a year-long trip aboard a tanker in 1921 to find "union dues stopped" and the old Sailors Union of the Pacific disintegrated.

During the 1934 general strike in San Francisco that won the longshoremen the hiring hall and union recognition, Pete was a member of the Intl. Longshoremen's Assn.

"The strike came so quickly we had no time for organization," he said. "I was on strike 105 days. Our wives made sandwiches and cooked for the strikers. The union had no funds and many of the families were in a bad way. We were lucky because we happened to have some insurance we could cash in."

During the war, Pete worked as a "walking boss" at the army transport docks. His son, 22, who now works alongside him as a longshoreman, served in the Merchant Marine. He has a daughter, 18.

Under a contract between the shipowners and the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, Pete now makes a basic $1.15 an hour—$1.45 when he works as a "walking boss."

But, he says, "We need more money. The cost of living is up so high and hours are getting shorter too. I want my children to always be sure of a roof. . . ."

And this time, if the strike comes, Pete emphasized, "We won't go back to work till all the unions get their demands."

4 Youngtimer on ships out of Baltimore is 29-year-old Leo Zurowski, utility man and member of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union since 1940. He spent 95% of his time shipping out during the war, was torpedoed once. Eighteen days in a lifeboat didn't scare him, although his legs and arms were "like raw beef" from the blazing sun off the African coast. One man was killed, another went crazy.

5 This may be the last ship Leo boards for some time if shipowners force a strike June 15. Leo makes $132.50 basic pay a month, needs more to support his mother, stepfather who has heart trouble, and two sisters.

"UNIONS are a good thing. They always fight for you as much as they can. If we have to go on strike, we'll stick it out. It's worth it—all the way."

Leo Zurowski started shipping out in 1940. He joined the CIO Natl. Maritime Union. He's been reading the NMU Pilot and The CIO NEWS. He knows the score.

Leo lives at 1509 Lancaster St., Baltimore, Md., with his stepfather, mother and two sisters. His stepfather is a World War I veteran. He has heart trouble, can't work. His sisters had jobs "at about $30 a week" during the war. They are looking for others.

Leo's home has a living room, kitchen, two bedrooms, and an attic where Leo sleeps when he's in port. It is a typical row house with other dwellings jammed against its sides. It has neither bath nor inside toilet.

The rooms are so small that, as someone said, "you can't cuss out a cat without getting fur in your mouth."

The rent is $30 a month. The landlord wants to raise it to $40.

"All the prices are going up," Leo said. "We just need more money than the $90 a month pension my stepfather gets and what I make. Everyone ashore's getting raises—now's the time for us to get them too."

Leo feels that the seamen did their part in helping to win the war and are entitled to consideration in peace. He has read about the profits of the shipowners—on war runs to the Red Sea American Hawaiian ships valued at $450,000 made $3,500,000 profit on 10 runs, or eight times the value of the ships; Isthmian ships valued at $1,500,000 made $2,500,000 on seven trips; Luckenbach ships valued at $1,400,000 made $9,000,000 on 12 trips; Matson ships valued at $238,000 made $1,000,000 on four trips; Waterman ships valued at $950,000 made $3,700,000 on 15 trips. And he feels that it isn't out of line to ask for 22c more an hour for himself.

6 Leo gives $90 a month to his family. During the war, with bonus and overtime, he managed to save a little, but all of it went to pay for burial of his sister, Gladys. Now he owes money. Here he serves to AB's John Goedig, left, and Garo Otiro.

"In the present bill, as sent to this House by the Senate, the President is being offered the power by proclamation to suspend the 13th Amendment, and to invoke the powers of the government—by criminal proceedings, by injunction and by deprivation of employment—to drive American workers to their machines against their will.

Said Lewis Hines, representing the AFL: "This is the worst type of vengeful and hysterical legislation . . . it will take unions back to the labor spy days."

Martin Miller, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen official, talked of the President's action in the rail strike: "He may be a friend of labor, but we can't stand many friends like that."

Harvey Brown, head of the Machinists, charged that the Truman bill "fails to take into consideration that there are two sides in every dispute," and that with its passage the U. S. "will become the negotiator for every industry in the country."

The vote on the bill in its amended form cut through usual party and bloc lines in the Senate. Against the bill were a few Republicans, one Southern polltaxer and the group of liberal Democrats who have fought valiantly against all anti-labor restrictive bills.

CASE BILL

tion to Washington to demand action against both Case and Truman bills. At Indianapolis the executive board of the CIO Hosiery Workers called for veto of the "malicious" Case bill and accused Pres. Truman of "debasing" the U. S. army proposing to make it a "concentration camp for breakers of unconstitutional laws."

At Amherst, Mass., 175 college professors of economics headed by Prof. Colston E. Warne wired the President that the Case bill was passed "in an atmosphere which was not conducive to sound judgment" and demanded its veto.

The National Lawyers Guild, in a message to the White House, charged that the Case bill "fits in nicely with long-range reactionary plans" to destroy workers' rights, remove labor unions as a threat to "unchecked monopoly profits" and to gain "unrestricted economic and political control of the government by big business."

That was the theme, in wires and letters and resolutions, from big unions and small, from lawyers and small businessmen and professional people, from workers and housewives, in every section of the country. By June 12 the people will know if the President has heeded their demands.

AIDS FTA IN FIGHT

A harbinger of the success of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers Union in its fight for better wages and conditions for the workers in the Northern California canneries is a decision of a Natl. Labor Relations Board trial examiner on charges by the FTA against the big Hume cannery at Turlock.

The decision is expected to cause the NLRB to order the cannery to stop encouraging membership in the AFL Teamsters Union which has been making back-door agreements with the canneries.

KNIFING PAY CLAIMS

WHILE attention was focused on smash-labor bills, the House this week passed the Andrews bill (HR 6035), which would make illegal any claims by non-veterans for back wages suffered through the application of Selective Service's super-seniority ruling.

The act was hastily jammed through the House Military Affairs Committee several weeks ago while the Supreme Court was deciding to outlaw super-seniority, which would have given a veteran his old job back even though he displaced a non-veteran with greater seniority.

Backed by Management Planning, Inc., reportedly the spokesman for West Coast industrial interests, the Andrews Bill would also have protected employers again wage claims, if super-seniority had been upheld, by providing that employers could not be required to recompense veterans refused re-employment.

The CIO through its Veterans Committee fought the Andrews Bill, and is now directing its attention to the Senate Military Affairs Committee which is considering S 2140, the Andrews Bill's companion measure.

Sen. Thomas (D. Utah), committee chairman, this week wrote Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee that he does not intend to support the bill, but letters and wires should be sent to him and other members of the committee, which is scheduled to consider the measure June 11. Other committee members are:

Sens. Johnson (D. Colo.), Hill (D. Ala.), Downey (D. Calif.), Kilgore (D. W. Va.), Murray (D. Mont.), O'Mahoney (D. Wyo.), Wagner (D. N. Y.), Stewart (D. Tenn.), Maybank (D. S. Car.), Briggs (D. Mo.), Austin (R. Vt.), Bridges (R. N. H.), Gurney (R. S. Dak.), Revercomb (R. W. Va.), Wilson (R. Iowa), Smith (R. N. J.), and Hart (R. Conn.).

Meanwhile, the CIO Veterans Committee urges that prompt advantage should be taken of the Supreme Court ruling by filing grievances for all employes laid off, demoted or discharged without regard to seniority, and by demanding restoration of such workers to their rightful positions with payment of back wages. The committee further advises that all unsettled cases should be arbitrated.

SENATE GIVES GIS BREAK

THE armed forces' pay schedule in the Senate draft bill is generally in line with the recommendation of the CIO Veterans Committee made four months ago and would give GI Joe a better break.

The schedule would give enlisted personnel increases ranging from 50% for buck privates to 2% for master sergeants, with comparable increases for non-commissioned members of like rank in the Navy.

When War Sec. Patterson and Navy Sec. Forrestal proposed to Congress in March that all members of the armed forces, including generals, be given a 20% increase, Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the CIO veterans Committee, protested on the grounds that commissioned officers who needed it least would be getting far more than privates who needed it most.

The pay schedule, along with the rest of the draft measure, now goes to a conference committee to iron out differences between it and the House bill.

To help win a better break for GI Joe, CIO affiliates and members should write and wire the following Senate conferees that they favor the Senate pay schedule: Sens. Thomas (D., Utah), Johnson (D., Colo.), Hill (D., Ala.), Downey (D., Calif.), Austin (R., Vt.), Bridges (R., N. H.) and Gurney (R., S. Dak.).

GRIPE BOARD STEPS RIGHT WAY

WHILE emphasizing the need for discipline in the Army, the report of the Army gripe board headed by Lt. Gen. Doolittle made recommendations which should prove a big step toward democratizing the Army consistently advocated by the CIO Veterans Committee.

Already approved by War Sec. Patterson in a speech, the board's report declared that "the present system does not permit full recognition of the dignity of man."

The report advocated elimination of the terms "officers" and "enlisted men," with abolition of rules and customs that prevent association of soldiers of "similar likes and tastes."

Other recommendations included abolition of saluting when off duty and off Army posts, except in occupied territories; requirement of prior military training—preferably one year in the enlisted ranks—for appointment of commissioned officers, although certain exceptions were recommended; advancement based on merit; equitable distribution of food and quarters; issuance of the same uniforms for all military personnel, and terminal leave pay for enlisted personnel as now prevails for officers.

ASK U. N. PROBE U. S. ANTI-NEGRO BIAS

An appeal to the United Nations to bring "relief from oppression" to the 13 million Negro citizens of the U. S. was made this week by the Natl. Negro Congress, in convention at Detroit.

The appeal, voted by 1,000 delegates to the convention, was based on the charge that Negroes are condemned to "second class citizenship" and suffer oppression and discrimination "based upon the inhuman fascist theory of racism."

Among those addressing the convention were Sec.-Treas. George Addes of the CIO Auto Workers and Paul Robeson, famous singer.

LABOR'S WORLD

THE World Federation of Trade Unions last week protested against the "extremely limited" role" given to world labor by the United Nations Economic & Social Council.

Sidney Hillman, a WFTU vice-president, wrote Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar, UNESCO president, that recommendations submitted by the council for occasional consultation with the labor group were "quite unsatisfactory." He said they deprived the WFTU, which represents 60 million workers throughout the world, of "any substantial right of consultation."

Requested by the WFTU are the following rights: attendance at all public and executive sessions of the Economic & Social Council; presentation by WFTU of oral or written statements of labor's views; and the ability to present proposals for consideration and action.

Pres. Milton Murray of the CIO Newspaper Guild was elected a vice-president of the Intl. Federation of Journalists, which has just completed its first convention at Copenhagen, Denmark. The convention, representing 80,000 organized newspapermen, set up provisional headquarters in London.

In a final statement the journalists declared that "press freedom is never fully assured while newspaper, news agencies and broadcasting systems are solely in the hands of individuals or private monopolies with no responsibility to the people."

Head of the new federation is Archibald Kenyon of Great Britain. The vice-presidents, in addition to Murray, are Eugene Morel of France and A. Sverlof of the Soviet Union.

CIO affiliates are studying proposed regulations regarding the International Trade Departments to be set up by the World Federation of Trade Unions. The departments, bringing together all the unions in each major industry, will be subsidiary to the WFTU. They will have an important function in developing international cooperation and work standards.

Proposals for the establishment of the departments will be discussed at the WFTU executive meeting in Moscow June 16-18. Representing CIO at the confab will be Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas and Director Michael Ross of the CIO Intl. Affairs Dept.

The French General Confederation of Labor (CGT) has proposed a nationwide wage boost of 25% to help workers meet rising living costs in the past few months. Statistics show French prices up 60% to 70%. Food has gone up 63% in the year, with meat rising 40% and butter 50%.

At the same time the CGT proposed a national conference of unions and employers to negotiate new increases. The unions point ont that through their efforts to keep workers on the job, production has more than doubled during the past year, and that the pay boost is long overdue.

TWO STRUCK FIRMS DEFY U. S.

BY ESTHER HANDLER

THE J. I. Case Co. of Racine, Wis., and the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co. of Milwaukee challenged the government to take over their plants this week when they failed to comply with orders from Labor Sec. Schwellenbach to make a genuine effort to negotiate differences with their respective CIO unions.

I. R. Clausen, president of J. I. Case, met Schwellenbach's orders with the same stony silence with which he has greeted scores of other efforts to get him to talk with the CIO Auto Workers since the strike began six months ago at the Rockford, Ill., and Racine plants.

On the other hand, Walter Geist, Allis-Chambers Co., president, re-entered negotiations with considerable fanfare. But the talks were called off by resident conciliator, Major James P. Holmes, after two days of what he termed "fruitless" negotiations. The time was consumed mainly by the company to hurl invectives and wild charges at the union.

The various Allis-Chalmers plants have been organized by the Auto Workers, Electrical Radio & Machine Workers and the Farm Equipment Workers.

So outrageous was Clausen's arrogance that even the consevative Milwaukee Journal gave editorial support to the strikers, asserting this week: "Clausen, known even among a good many conservative businessmen as being out of step with the times, will not even make use of machinery for settling labor disputes devised in the administrations of Presidents Coolidge and Hoover. Instead, he seems to cling to a medieval concept of management which can be summarized pretty much as: Work on my terms or quit . . ."

HELSTEIN HEADS PACKING UNION

CLIMAXING four days of vigorous campaigning by his supporters, Ralph Helstein this week was elected president of the CIO Packinghouse Workers by acclamation at their third constitutional convention at Montreal, Can.

Helstein, the union's general counsel, succeeds Lewis J. Clark, who was also nominated for the presidency but who withdrew at the last minute in the interest of unity early in the morning of June 6 after a hectic all-night session.

Clark's decision not to run brought cheering delegates to their feet and he was subsequently elected secretary-treasurer by acclamation, succeeding Edward F. Roche, who was not a candidate for re-election.

Philip Weightman and Frank Ellis were unanimously re-elected vice-presidents.

Delegates representing 200,000 workers were also unanimous in passing a resolution indicating that the union would not support President Truman for re-election because his proposed anti-union legislation "strikes at the very heart of the democratic principles on which our government is founded and constitutes a betrayal of the people who supported his candidacy and who have continued to support him in the crucial days just past."

Speaking of the Truman Bill, Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization, declared:

"If they pass this kind of legislation they are apt to find out that many workers will not accept it, and if they attempt to enforce it, the jails will be jammed with workers resisting it. I am glad there are people in America that value the Bill of Rights.

"Any time they come again with such legislation I am confident the people will rise up and resist such procedure. In other countries they have tried this method of drafting workers to make soldiers out of them. It has failed and where free men and women are, it will always fail."

The convention also adopted the policy statement of its board which asserted that the union will not interfere with "the free and democratic rights of each member to follow such religion as he chooses, harbor such views as he chooses in his private life as a citizens."

UAW BLASTS TRUMAN BILL

THE CIO Auto Workers executive board meeting in Cleveland this week called on its local unions "to join in their communities with the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods' local groups to protest against the President's (anti-union) proposals and all other anti-labor legislation."

The board declared that the Presidents bill was "the climax of a series of surrenders by the Truman administration to the demands of the reactionary industrialists to make peacetime strikes illegal and impose a Fascist system of involuntary servitude upon American workers, including millions of veterans of the nation's victorious war against fascism.

"Had he applied the same vigor and the same emphasis to efforts to maintain price control, to keep the cost of living down and to aid in the settlement of industrial disputes instead of to break strikes, he would have carried out the Roosevelt policies and program."

The board served notice on the President that "American union members and other American citizens who believe in democracy will not tolerate abridgement of our constitutional rights, nor will they tolerate any further drift on the part of his administration into inflation and economic chaos."

HAWAIIAN WORKERS TAKE STRIKE VOTE

Hawaiian workers, determined to fight the wide differential between Hawaiian and West Coast wage rates, took a strike vote to implement their wage demands, Allied Labor News reported this week. The workers belong to the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Although living costs are higher in Hawaii than on the West Coast, wages remained lower there than in the mainland states.

CAREY WARNS OF RACE BIAS

By ERNEST CALLOWAY

CHARGING that mass unemployment and race prejudice is the greatest threat to world peace, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey this week told the delegates attending the Fifth biennial convention of the CIO United Transport Service Employes Union at Chicago that "no President can be elected in this country unless he is a liberal campaigning on a progressive platform."

"If I have criticism of labor," Carey declared, "it is to say that we have failed in our mission to make the one department of Government that should be responsive to our needs the type of institution to carry out our will.

"We have to rely on the Senate to make sure that the whole situation just doesn't break up in confusion . . . but the House of Representatives is closer to the people than any other department of government and it is doing the worst job possible."

MISS BESS MYERSON

Miss American For 1945 who took part in dedication of the national headquarters of the Transport Service Employes.

More than 125 telegrams urging the veto of the Case bill were sent to President Truman by every convention delegate in the name of his local union.

Opening its convention June 4 with a dedication ceremony of its new union home, the UTSEA-CIO held open house with more than 400 labor, civic, religious and community leaders in attendance.

Among those participating in the ceremony were Carey, Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, Miss Bess Myerson, Miss America for 1945; Rep. Dawson and Mayor Kelly. The new union home, costing approximately $40,000, was a former bank building and is now equipped to serve the community needs of CIO red caps, dining car employes, Pullman laundry workers, air line service employes and train porters. Facilities for a library, book shop, credit union, veterans service division, community services division, meeting rooms and a modern cocktail lounge are part of the transformation from staid Chicago banking to progressive unionism.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

Strikes of approximately 28,000 members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers continued this week at the plants and mines of the American Smelting & Refining Co., and the Phelps-Dodge and the Kennicott Copper companies, although principal nonferrous metal producers' negotiations were progressing.

A hopeful sign was that companies making copper and brass this week accepted OPA price increases conditioned on boosting wages 18½c an hour. Participating in the negotiations with the American Smelting and Refining in the presence of U. S. conciliators in Washington this week were Pres. Reid Robinson and Vice-President Ralph H. Rassmussen of the MMSW.

The 105-day strike of the MMSW against the American Brass Co. plants in Connecticut, Buffalo and Detroit ended May 19 with a general 18½c an hour wage increase, a half-million dollar settlement of compensatory bonuses and the best vacation plan in any major brass company.

The Delaware County (Pa.) Industrial Union Council during the week of June 2 will begin issuing "Liberal Press," a weekly tabloid newspaper established in 1937. The newspaper, which will be the official publication for the 30,000 CIO members in the county, was acquired from Stanley Milne, former editor and owner who has given up his interest in the paper because of ill health.

Bud Goodman, charter member of the Philadelphia Newspaper Guild, has been appointed editor. Goodman, who was formerly on the staffs of the Philadelphia Record, Philadelphia Inquirer, Associated Press and Buffalo Times, is a Marine Corps veteran, having served overseas with a Marine Bombing Squadron.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

DOES YOUR CHILD BEG FOR ICE CREAM?

On warm days a walk to the store to get some ice cream may be an adventure. If no one hurries there are usually lots of interesting things to see on the way. Ice cream should not be given within an hour and a half before meals. One scoop of good ice cream is rich in food value, but it is not a substitute for other foods. As a hot day dessert it is to be recommended.

WOMEN HAVE BIG STAKES IN UNIONS

By ESTHER PETERSON

Washington Representative CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers

EXTENSIVE studies by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, confirm what women in CIO unions have known for a long time—that unions have done a lot for women and therefore women have flocked to join the unions.

A new leaflet just released by the bureau, entitled "Women's Stake in Unions," shows that unions have made great progress in seeing that women are given the following advantages:

1. A voice in collective bargaining.

2. Better jobs with equal opportunities for promotion.

3. Higher wages with pay equal to that of men on the same jobs.

4. Shorter hours and vacations with pay.

5. Better working conditions including hot meals in the plant.

6. Seniority rights giving protection against unfair lay-offs.

7. Community recreation and child care centers.

Sometimes we women workers get so intense about our present demands, that we don't stop to look backward and realize how big our gains have been since we joined unions. Our gains have been large and significant. A century ago, few persons, even labor leaders, would have predicted that we would have so many rights or that they would be so well protected.

These advantages account for the large membership of women in unions. According to this pamphlet, during 1944 and 1945, 40%, or 280,000 women, were members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. Women also form 66% of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 60% of the United Wholesale and Department Store Employes, 40% of the Textile Workers Union, 30% of Auto Workers and 15% of the Steelworkers.

To retain and expand advantages received under the union's leadership, women have an obligation to participate in union programs to see that:

1. All members share alike in collective bargaining benefits.

2. All members attend meetings and share in union work.

3. Women won't undercut the union scale by working for lower rates.

4. Women learn to understand and further union ideals and activities.

5. Women's organizations understand union programs.

6. All union members work for more democracy in government by exercising their right to vote.

In addition, I want to urge every woman in a union or every woman who has a husband in the union to keep an eye on Congress. Congress makes the laws under which unions and union members must live. By such a simple act as lifting OPA controls, Congress can cut our wages by half or more. Keep those letters coming and show Congress that you are out to protect the gains of labor unions in Congress as well as on the picket line.

BABY DEATHS APPALLING

FROM Pearl Harbor to V-J Day, 281,000 Americans were killed in combat. High as that loss of life was, it was still less than the fatalities among babies. In that same period 430,000 infants died.

This startling figure, says the Children's Bureau, U. S. Labor Dept., points up the great need in this country today for better care of mothers and their babies. The care a mother gets before her baby's birth and at childbirth is, of course, a large factor in the baby's chance for life, along with the care he gets in his first and most difficult year.

The great disparity between the States in death rates of mothers and babies shows how many lives could be saved. In Connecticut, in 1943, for instance, 30 out of 1,000 babies failed to pull through their first year of life, but in New Mexico 92 out of 1,000 died.

Similarly, if every State did as well as Minnesota, which had the lowest maternal mortality rate, the lives of 3,000 mothers would have been saved.

Chance of survival is much greater for white babies and their mothers, than for Negro. The death rate for Negro mothers was 143% higher in 1943 than for white mothers. In the same year, the death rate for Negro babies during the first year of life was 64% higher than for white babies.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Taking Labor For A Ride

Anti-labor groups in the Senate pulled a "hidden ball" play last week.

To the appropriations bill for the Dept. of Agriculture, which gives that department its funds for the coming bill, they tacked on a rider forbidding payment of salaries to any employe "who is a member of an organization of government employes that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States."

This rider, which will become law if it is adopted by the House, was soundly attacked by Sen. Claude Pepper, the valiant Florida liberal.

"I regret very much to see the anti-labor antipathy directed to the employes of the U. S. Government," he said, "and now incorporated where of all places it should not be, in an appropriation bill, which is used as a vehicle for legislation of this character.

"If Congress wants to legislate on this subject, I think it should legislate directly. . . ."

The appropriations rider is the brain child of Sen. Ball (R. Minn.) and other foes of labor on the Senate floor.

It is directed against the CIO United Public Workers, which has vigorously condemned the rider as an act of discrimination.

"The rider," says the UPWA, "does not attempt to prohibit strikes against the government, but only to prohibit an expression of opinion by a union that the right to strike exists."

The rider is "an infringement of civil liberties" and will certainly be found unconstitutional, the UPWA adds. However, the union emphasized that it stands by its no-strike pledge and that it will conduct no strikes against the federal government in the future.

If it becomes necessary, the UPWA will amend its constitution to protect the union membership, although no change "in our policies or activities" will be necessary.

Nevertheless, a rider on an appropriations bill is no way to legislate a federal labor policy. The anti-labor Senators and Congressmen who have been most insistent that labor "cool off" should heed their own advice.

While the rider is aimed principally at UPWA, there are thousands of government employes holding membership in unions whose major jurisdiction is over private industry. These unions cannot abandon their precious right to strike in the interest of a small minority of their members; nor should the government employes be forced to drop their union cards in these organizations.

Clearly the rider is a stupid, vindictive instrument. Congress, to preserve its self-respect, should strike it from the books.

Inflation—Just Around the Corner

Through the Truman and Case Bills, Congress has been attempting to limit labor's right to protect its members and the living standards of the people.

Meanwhile, Congress is taking action calculated to force strikes. Congress, it appears, is deliberately illogical.

The action of the Senate Banking Committee's majority in appending a wide variety of crippling amendments to the OPA extension bill is clear proof that reactionaries have no desire to help improve the lot of the American people.

CIO President Murray, in a statement on price control, has pointed out that the members of CIO "know full well the dangers of run-away inflation."

"They have fought and are still fighting for adequate wage increases to compensate them for increased living costs," he points out. "They cannot afford to see those wage increases destroyed overnight by act of Congress.

"The Congress could devise no better way to throw labor-management relations into a state of utter chaos than to remove the last bulwark against soaring prices."

The CIO leader called upon the Senate to "repudiate" the mangled price control bill—the very name of which is now a "cruel hoax" because of the crippling amendments added in the House and the Senate Committee.

To almost every group in the population, the sieve-like price control proposals spell "immediate hardship and a lowering of living standards," Murray said. "To a few they spell big profits quickly.

"But to the country as a whole they spell national disaster."

If Congress is to halt its drive straight into the arms of inflation and hardship, the CIO and every organization of consumers and progressives must work and work fast to mobilize support for price control.

Congress heard this people's outcry after it had passed the amended price control bill. But the lobbyists of the corporations have been working efficiently.

So, once again, it's necessary to remind our legislators of their duty to the people.

Your wires, by the hundreds and thousands, must get to Senators and Congressmen—and fast!

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
HR 4908 Case Bill	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices.	Passed by House and Senate. Awaits action by President.	Wire your Senators and Congressmen to uphold President if he vetoes bill.
Truman anti-strike bill S. 2255 HR 6578	Provides basis for outlawing strikes, squashing unions, drafting strikers.	Senate passed somewhat milder version. House now considering action to reconcile two versions of bill.	Wire Senators and Congressmen to vote against bill; wire Pres. Truman to veto bill when it reaches White House.
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June, 1947.	Passed by House; Senate Banking Committee urges more crippling amendments.	Wire your Senators to pass bill without amendments. Strong action is needed to save OPA and price control.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Send wires to your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee to support this bill.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Andrews Bill HR 6035 S 2140	Bars workers fired under illegal superseniority ruling from getting lost pay.	Sneaked thru House on voice vote. Now pending in Senate.	Ask Senators to defeat bill.
British Loan S. J. Res. 138	Would extend $3,750,000,000 long-term credit to Great Britain.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee now holding hearings.	Write or wire your Congressman to vote for loan without amendments.

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

GYP THE WORKERS: Corporation lobbyists have nearly succeeded in a stream-lined maneuver to rid their bosses of a major financial responsibility. The House passed the Andrews bill by a unanimous voice vote; only fast action by the CIO Veterans Committee stopped the same thing in the Senate.

The Andrews bill is a corporation's dream. It would relieve employers of all financial responsibility for having acted illegally in applying "superseniority" to veterans.

Thousands of workers had been fired or bumped down the job scale when companies gave over-riding seniority to returning vets of World War II. This month the U. S. Supreme Court called that procedure unconstitutional.

With CIO unions handling hundreds of major grievance cases for the men ousted from their positions, the Andrews bill would permit these workers to collect no damages whatsoever for the money lost through the companies' unconstitutional action.

Write or wire your Senator to vote against the Andrews bill.

FILIBUSTER: For the third time, the House has adjourned on Wednesday rather than act on the Fair Employment Practices Commission. FEPC, set up on a temporary basis as a wartime measure, is about to die on June 30. The House adjourned after opponents of the FEPC failed to muster the necessary two-thirds vote to suspend consideration of the FEPC proposal. Write your Congressman and demand action for a permanent FEPC and an end to racial discrimination.

BRITISH LOAN: The 3¾ billion dollar loan to Great Britain, already approved by the Senate, is due for action in the House within the next few weeks. CIO is strongly committed to approval of the financial aid to our wartime ally.

This week John Edelman, representative of the CIO Textile Workers Union, argued before the House Ways & Means Committee that the loan will help the British Labor Government break down some of the commercial bonds of imperialism.

Britain's working people are hopeful of smashing imperialism; the loan will help them buy food, raw materials and machinery abroad, and will enable the Laborite regime to make drastic changes in the Empire without threatening the welfare of the home population.

"That is why many British Tories oppose the loan," Edelman declared, "and that is one of the basic reasons why American labor urges approval of the loan agreement."

BIGGEST MARITIME GAINS IN HISTORY WON BY CMU

BULLETIN—Shipowners' agreement late this week to 1946 maritime contract brought greatest gains in history of industry, said Committee for Maritime Unity leaders.

By FRED d'AVILA

THE most impressive gains for maritime workers since the 1934 and 1936-37 strike victories seemed certain as The CIO NEWS went to press, with even President Truman predicting satisfactory conclusion of negotiations and cancellation of the nationwide strike set for 12:01 a. m. June 15.

Six CIO unions and one independent, which set up the Committee for Maritime Unity, already had tentatively scored $17.50 a month wage increases and a reduction of the 56-63 hour work week to a 48-hour norm for all seagoing workers whose unions are directly involved in Washington contract discussions. Operators had offered only $12.50 a month.

Meanwhile, the CMU, headed by Presidents Harry Bridges and Joseph Curran of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's and Natl. Maritime Unions, was polishing up final contract provisions. Conferences, assisted by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, were being held under the auspices of the U. S. Dept. of Labor with War Shipping Administration officials and shipowners.

Seagoing unions in wage negotiations — NMU, American Communications Assn., Marine Cooks & Stewards, and the independent Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers —had already gained a $1 an hour rate for overtime, and were negotiating for higher rates for skilled personnel. All Sunday work is overtime. With the new hours schedule, this will add at least an estimated $16 a month to the $17.50 base pay increase.

Other gains included the 40-hour week in both domestic and foreign ports, reduced from 44 hours, and an eight-hour day for stewards on freight ships instead of nine hours.

Wage increases, with the exception of overtime payments, are retroactive to April 1, 1946.

The CMU, which represents 200,000 workers, is pressing for other gains. These issues will be negotiated. If no agreement is reached in 30 days, they will be taken to arbitration.

West Coast longshoremen had tentatively accepted a Federal fact finding recommendation for a 22c raise, to $1.37 an hour for a six-hour day, retroactive to Oct. 1, 1945.

Two other CIO unions that joined in forming the CMU—the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. and the Inland Boatmen's Union —were not affected by wage negotiations. The MEBA will share in the hours cuts at sea and in port, and in the Sunday overtime.

All seven unions, however, had pledged themselves to united strike action if necessary.

Important as the wage gains were, they were over-shadowed in a sense by the formation of the CMU, uniting the great majority of maritime workers from coast to coast in a front that shipowners and even the government found impregnable.

For the first time, also, the unions were able to bargain as a unit with all the major shipowners, and this unity was a strongly determining factor in forcing take-home raises needed to offset the cuts in war bonuses and to bring seamen's wages somewhat nearer the level enjoyed by shoreside workers.

The contract negotiations were conducted during an unprecedented campaign of slander and misrepresentation by employer newspapers and radio stations, with threats by President Truman to seize all shipping and operate it with the armed forces.

Despite the intimidation, the CMU held firm. With an unequalled war record of no strikes and with nearly 6,000 seamen having given their lives in the fight against fascism, the maritime unions stuck to their determination to strike if necessary to win their demands.

The government, which owns 2,400 of the 3,100 ships which entered into negotiations, finally took over discussions from the private operators, who were attempting to drive the maritime workers back to prewar conditions.

Issues that had been clouded by press and radio commentators were clarified in CMU newspaper ads and in a hearing held by the House Labor Committee, headed by Rep. Augustine Kelley (D. Pa.).

Bridges, testifying before the committee, pointed out that if the unions were forced to strike, both bona fide troop ships and vessels carrying relief cargoes to famine-stricken areas would be operated.

Baited about "striking against the government" in the event Truman seized the ships, Bridges said:

"When the government acts like the private operators, yes, we will strike. If the government takes over the shipping industry and runs it for profit, the men have got a right to strike and they will strike."

Bridges' stand was reinforced by Rep. Hook (D. Pa.), who said:

"If the government of the U. S. can't pay half-way decent wages, I say the men have a right to strike against it!"

Curran testified that seamen's average pay was about $200 a month with war bonuses, that it fell to about $100 a month with V-J Day, and that the War Labor Board had granted a $45 a month increase to make up in part for the cut.

The bonus, Curran said, was granted "to prevent any proper wage increase being given" during the war.

Before the current negotiations, seamen's base pay ranged from $132.50 to $197.50 a month in the steward's department, from $127.50 to $145 on deck, and from $132.50 to $252 in the engine room.

During negotiations, extensive strike preparations were made, culminating in a huge Madison Square Garden rally in N. Y. City a day before the deadline. Soup kitchens and housing were arranged for. Picket placards were printed. A million dollar strike fund was freed for action by the NMU.

Bittner Says:

SOUTHERN DRIVE IS FIGHT FOR JUSTICE

By ALLAN L. SWIM

THE fight for economic justice throughout America has just begun—and it will not end until men, women and children live as God intended for them to live.

"The campaign of the CIO to organize the South has just begun —and it will not end until every man and woman who works for industry in the region belongs to a union affiliated with the CIO."

That's what Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO Organizing Committee, said at Rome, Ga., last week as he "officially" launched the CIO's Southern membership drive.

"We do not know how long it will take us to organize the South but, regardless of the obstacles and the time it takes, we are going to do the job," Bittner said.

The campaign was well under way when Bittner spoke at Rome —his first public address in the South since becoming committee director.

Directors for the 12 states in the region had been named. About 180 organizers had been put into the field.

Bittner had issued instructions to all men in the field to "divorce" themselves from political action, educational work and other union activities so they could devote full time to organization work.

State directors had reported 11 NLRB elections won recently and that the new organizers were moving in high gear.

Bittner's top assistants in the campaign are George Baldanzi, executive vice-president, Textile Workers Union; Jack Kroll, vice-president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Tom J. Starling, regional director, Auto Workers; John Riffe, Phil Clowes and George Craig, international representatives, Steelworkers, and John Hawkins, international representative, Woodworkers.

Sherman Dalrymple, former president of the Rubber Workers, is secretary-treasurer of the committee. His assistant is Richard Bauer of the staff of national CIO headquarters.

Allan L. Swim, Newspaper Guildsman who resigned as assistant city editor of the Memphis Press-Scimitar and reporter for the Scripps-Howard Washington Bureau, is director of public relations.

The committee's state directors are William Smith, Charlotte, N. C.; Franz Daniels, Spartanburg, S. C.; Charles H. Gillman, Atlanta, Ga.; Paul R. Christopher, Knoxville, Tenn.; Fred C. Pieper, New Orleans, La.; Robert Oliver, Houston, Texas; Walter H. Harris, Little Rock, Ark.; E. B. Pugh, Richmond, Va.; William M. Billingsley, Louisville, Ky.; Robert W. Starnes, Mississippi (headquarters city not chosen yet), and Carey E. Haigler, Birmingham, Ala. Haigler will be director in Florida as well as Alabama.

"The campaign is a straight organizing drive without frills," Bittner said. "Our goal is to organize the unorganized and help them get higher wages, improved working conditions and job security through collective bargaining."

Maximum initiation fee for those who join during the drive is $1. War veterans pay no initiation fee. After collective bargaining rights have been established, the regular dues structure of the unions into which the new members go will prevail.

Meanwhile Bittner reported the following NLRB elections won recently in the South:

Hurricane Creek (Ark.) Reynolds Mine & Metal Co., 310 for CIO Steelworkers, 100 for AFL Aluminum Workers.

Jones Mills (Ark.), 243 for CIO Steelworkers, 198 for AFL.

Natchez Stove Co., Natchez, Miss., 64 for CIO Steelworkers, 8 for "no union."

R. F. Learned & Sons Co., Natchez, Miss., 49 for CIO Woodworkers and 8 for "no union."

J. M. Jones Lumber Co., Natchez, Miss., 91 for CIO Woodworkers, 71 for "no union."

Entwistle Mills (Plant No. 2), Rockingham, N. C., 84 for CIO Textile Workers, 48 for "no union."

Kahn Co., Inc., Asheville, N. C., 40 for CIO Fur & Leather Workers, 14 for "no union."

Bonita Ribbon Mills, Brewton, Ala., 58 for CIO Textile Workers, 42 for "no union."

Brewton Weaving Mills, Brewton, Ala., 13 for CIO Textile Workers, 10 for "no union."

WORLD-WIDE BACKING FOR MARINE WORKERS

WORLD-wide support for wage and hour demands of U. S. merchant seamen was of major aid in strengthening the determination of the workers to strike if necessary on June 15.

Thousands of wires from CIO national and local unions were augmented by pledges of six AFL maritime unions to respect Committee for Maritime Unity picket lines.

Support for CMU demands came from the independent Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, headed by A. E. Whitney, and from the independent Natl. Federation of Telephone Workers, headed by J. A. Beirne.

The workers' section of the Intl. Maritime Conference, meeting in Seattle, voted to support the seamen if they walked out.

And from Australian, French, Mexican and other Latin American countries came cables stating that maritime workers there would not handle "hot" cargo.

A cable from the French Seamen's Union, read at a N. Y. Madison Square Garden rally in support of the strike, said:

"All labor in France is very sympathetic to the American seamen in their struggle and they can be assured that no ships in French ports will be unloaded if they are manned by scab labor or the Army and Navy."

The World Federation of Trade Unions notified all members of the dispute, and will probably discuss proposed action at a meeting of the executive committee currently taking place in Moscow.

And in the U. S. Senate, Sen. Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) declared:

"The issues in the Maritime dispute seem to me to be crystal clear. They involve the faith, heart and character of the wage policies of the Federal Government, for the Federal Government is the owner of 80% of all ships which are directly affected in these negotiations. The issues are whether the Federal Government believes in practicing what it preaches—a 40-hour week and decent pay —or whether it does not.

CONGRESS STILL WRAPPING ANTI-LABOR PACKAGES

TRUMAN-CASE BILLS MIXTURE IS A THREAT

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

JOLTED in their efforts to shackle labor by the Presidential veto of the Case bill, foes of American unionism in the Senate and House are searching for new methods of carrying on their ten-year campaign for restrictions on organized workers.

The House Rules Committee, dominated by a group of reactionaries, is currently studying the legislative situation in the hope of finding a way to pass both the Truman anti-strike bill and the repudiated Case bill.

The Truman bill was passed by the House within a few minutes of the President's speech on May 25, and it contains everything asked by the Chief Executive, including the power to draft strikers in Government-seized plants and the deprival of seniority rights in cases where workers remain on strike.

As passed by the Senate, these last two features were sliced from the bill along with a proposal that profits from seized plants be deposited in the Federal Treasury. Leaders of the House conservative bloc, anxious to vote the strongest possible bill against the unions, are deliberating whether to accept the Senate version of the bill or send it to a joint conference committee of the two branches of Congress in order to secure a compromise.

Meanwhile, supporters of the anti-labor Case bill are hopeful that a way may be found to adopt that measure, or substantial portions of it, as an amendment to the Truman bill.

Washington newspapers quoted an unidentified "Congressional friend of the President" as predicting that Pres. Truman will veto his own anti-strike bill if Congress insists upon re-passing the Case bill as an amendment to his own strike-breaking proposals.

With the House due for a moratorium of several days because of the absence of many Congressmen visiting their home districts during primary election contests, action within the next week on the matter is doubtful.

In turning thumbs down on the Case Bill, Truman made it clear, however, that he still wants passage of his own anti-strike program. His veto message defended his earlier request for limiting labor's strike rights on grounds that it is merely a "temporary" program, and limited to "strikes against the government"—although, by giving the President the right to seize any struck plant, almost any walkout could be interpreted by the government as being directed against it.

The Case bill, on the other hand, is permanent, applies to every dispute between management and labor affecting interstate commerce, and "deals with a wide variety of subjects, some of which are wholly unrelated to the subject of settling or preventing strikes."

By implication the President indicated his belief that some legislation permanently affecting labor is necessary. While attacking the Case bill as a "collection of separate unrelated measures," he urged Congress not to approach the labor relations problem "on a piecemeal basis, as this bill does." The choice before Congress is not between the Case bill and no legislation at all but between it and a "more adequate and more inclusive solution of the problem," Truman said.

Throughout the veto message, Truman repeated his belief in the need for Congressional investigation of labor-management disputes and the development of well-rounded legislation. With Congress now dominated by anti-labor conservatives, however, the "painstaking and dispassionate study" requested by the President is almost certain to lead directly to new varieties of restrictions of labor's freedom of action.

Shortly after the President's May 25 address to the joint session of Congress, the House approved formation of a joint committee to study the subject. Proposed by Rep. Howard Smith (D., Va.), an outspoken member of the anti-labor bloc, the bill is now in the hands of the Senate Labor Committee. Members of that group have advocated that any such investigation should be in the hands of members of both the Senate and House Labor Committees.

If the Smith proposal were accepted, tradition would place the Virginia polltaxer in a leading position on the investigating committee. Under those circumstances, the "painstaking and dispassionate" probe might take on the color of an anti-union lynching bee.

The Presidential veto message found 135 supporting votes in the House, sufficient to bar the two-thirds necessary to over-ride the White House decision against the Case bill. Fifteen Republicans, one Progressive and one American Labor Party representative joined with 118 Democrats to uphold the veto.

In turning down the bill against which all labor has rallied, the President declared that the causes of unrest must be found and eliminated.

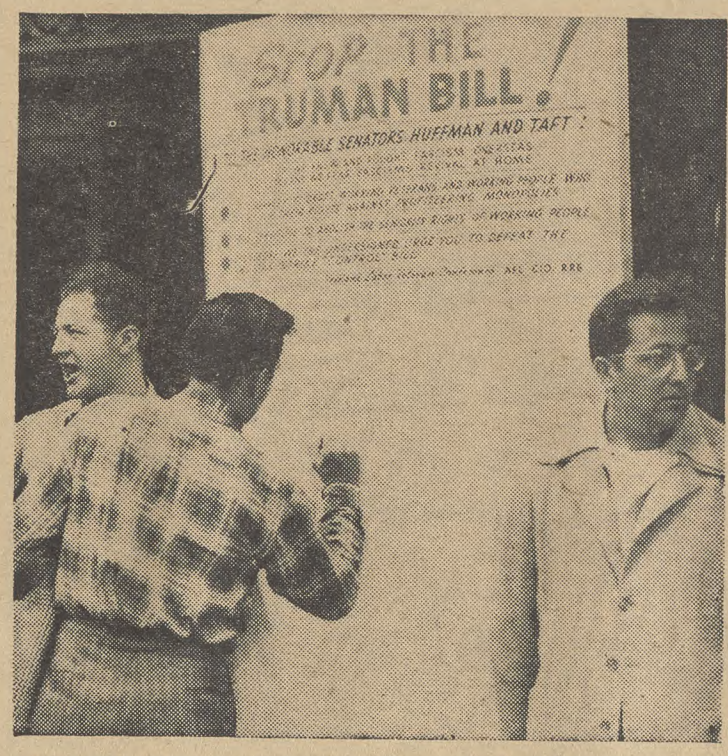
"Strikes against private employers cannot be ended by legislative decree," he said. "Men cannot be forced in a peacetime democracy to work for a private employer under compulsion. Therefore, strikes must be considered in the whole context of our modern industrial society. They must be considered in the light of inflationary pressures, of problems of full employment, of economic security."

The President added that "HR 4908 (the Case bill) strikes at symptoms and ignores underlying causes . . . not a single one of the recent major strikes would have been affected by this bill had it been law."

The President's veto message was delivered to Congress on June 11, one day short of the 10-day period provided for consideration of new legislation. The White House revealed that thousands of messages had been received during that period concerning labor bills.

A long letter from CIO Pres. Philip Murray voiced labor's objections to the bill as a vindictive, one-sided measure to punish American unions.

Murray had charged that the Case bill was "ill-considered and injurious to labor" and presented "exceedingly grave dangers to the public welfare."



Cleveland veterans from all sections of the labor movement joined this week to circulate petitions against anti-labor proposals of President Truman. (FP Picture).

Farm Rider Weakens NLRB

LONGTIME foes of the National Labor Relations Board managed to sneak in two rabbit-punches this week. One effort was successful. The other failed.

By a 77-53 vote, the House killed a proposal of Rep. Taber (R., N. Y.) that the Congress deny any funds to the NLRB for the year starting July 1.

But a short time later, the House voted 202-134 to prevent the Labor Board from acting in any case affecting "agricultural laborers" as defined in the Social Security Act.

The House action on agricultural labor was a victory for lobbyists of big food processing corporations, which have long been attempting to get out from under the provisions of the Wagner Act. A year ago they accomplished a similar squeeze play through passage of the Lea Rider to the War Labor Board appropriation.

The CIO Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers charged that a million industrial workers in food processing plants will be affected if the Senate agrees to the House amendment. A union statement pointed out that the Social Security Act's definition of agricultural laborers includes employes of "highly-industrialized mass-production packing sheds and processing plants located off the farm." Social Security Board officials have long objected to the definition, which was adopted as an amendment to the security act in 1939.

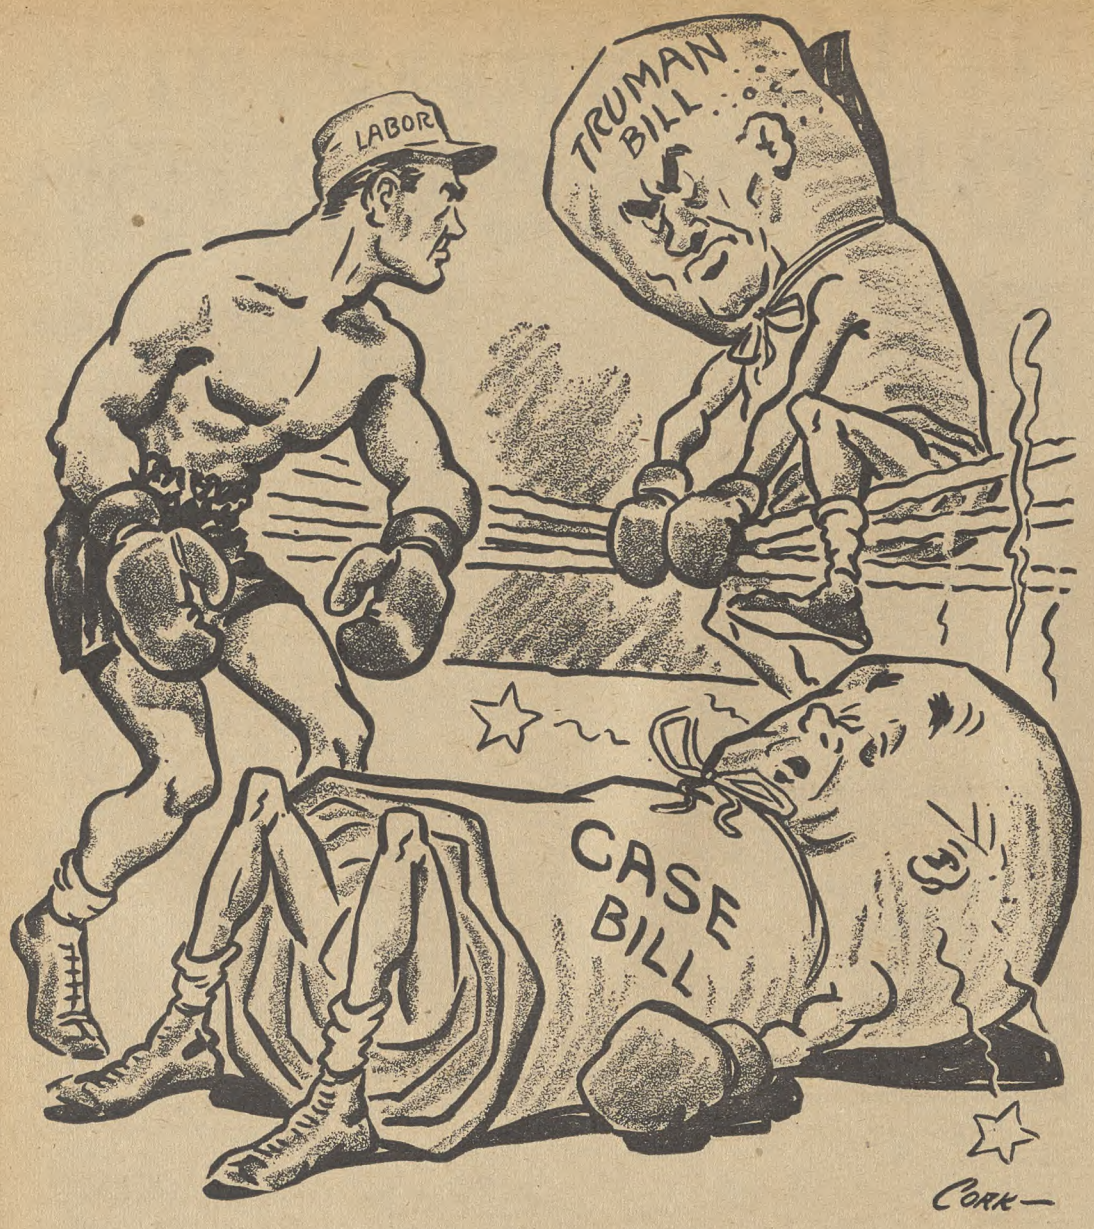
Congress, it is recalled, refused to exclude food workers from Wagner Act protection when that law was passed in 1935, and the courts have since ruled in numerous cases that food processing workers are engaged in industry and entitled to Wagner Act benefits.

Representatives of CIO unions will seek to convince the Senate that it should reject the rider when the appropriation bill for the Federal Security Agency and the NLRB reaches the Upper House.

THIS IS NO TIME TO RELAX!

The Case anti-labor bill has been vetoed — but your union is still in danger. President Truman's "emergency" anti-strike bill has been passed by the House and in slightly-amended form by the Senate. Foes of labor on Capitol Hill are working fast to pass this bill in its final form. They may try to attach the repudiated Case bill to the Truman bill as an amendment.

Your protests, your letters and wires to Congress and the White House helped defeat the Case bill. You must do the same thing to defeat the Truman bill. Write and wire your Representatives and Senators to vote against the Truman bill when it comes up for action again. Write or wire Pres. Truman to veto the anti-strike bill if it is passed by Congress. Send your messages today—there's no time to lose!



DOUBLE THREAT

The knocking out of the Case bill, through President Truman's veto upheld by the House, is a partial victory for the people.

This vindictive anti-union measure — a "warmed-over stew," Philip Murray called it, of every labor-baiting proposal of the past ten years—was designed to destroy the free labor movement for the benefit of profiteering reaction. It would have encouraged and increased industrial disputes.

The American people showed they were not willing to sacrifice their liberties in a moment of manufactured hysteria. Rallied by united labor, they became vocal enough to save the day.

But the victory is only partial, because the Case bill is but one part of a double-threat attack. In his veto message, Truman renewed his demand for his own anti-union emergency legislation.

The Truman bill still remains a potent threat. It was rushed through the House as soon as proposed. The Senate passed it shortly after, without the provisions limiting private profit-making under government operation, conscripting workers and destroying seniority rights. This Senate version now awaits House action.

The evil essence of the original bill is preserved in the modified Senate version. This would still grant the President unprecedented dictatorial powers to break strikes, by forcing employes to work against their will under any conditions he might dictate—by subjecting them to involuntary servitude.

The Truman bill would violate the workers' rights of free speech and press after government seizure. It would reach into the life and home of each individual worker to penalize him for refusing to work under conditions he may find intolerable.

Aside from the draft provision, removed by the Senate but not by the House, the Truman bill could deprive a worker of his status as an employee, deny him his legal rights under federal law and, by criminal proceeding, injunction and deprivation of employment, drive him to work like the slave labor of fascism.

Victory over the Case bill is cause for rejoicing but not for relaxation. All liberty-loving Americans must now concentrate on securing rejection of the Truman bill as well. Only so can we keep America free.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE House action in upholding the Case bill veto is a comforting reminder that we can expect to be loved much more in November than we were in May.

In May, the House passed Truman's involuntary servitude bill, to jail, fine, outlaw and draft American workers, by a vote of 306 to 13.

It followed this by adopting the Senate version of the Case bill, by 230 to 106.

Since then, we have moved several weeks nearer to elections, with the result that opposition to the Case bill increased to 135 votes for the veto; and the House is much more hesitant about the Truman bill than it was in May.

★ ★ ★

Politicians often feel a certain contempt for the ordinary voter, when he can't get at them. But the closer they come to elections, the greater grows their respect for his intelligence.

To judge from their past actions, most members of Congress must have been picturing the American voter as a harebrained, cantankerous, hysterical idiot.

For they have been voting to raise the prices he must pay, to rob him of his savings through inflation, and to deprive him of power to increase his wages or income.

They have also blocked measures for improving his conditions through social security, health, housing, minimum wage, fair employment and other welfare measures.

Having thus created the conditions for industrial disruption, these same politicians have imagined a demand from the voters for a thoughtless and vindictive attack on labor, which can only create further disruption besides destroying many basic American liberties.

But now that elections are drawing closer, many politicians are beginning to wonder whether the voters are really so dumb.

Labor is first to recognize that the country needs a period of steady and increasing production—so the pent-up demand for goods may be met, and the matching of supply with demand may start to bring prices down.

But to create this desirable condition, some degree of security is necessary for the workers and a reasonable balance between present wages and living costs.

This means wage increases to restore postwar cuts in take-home pay and to catch up with past increases in living costs, coupled with the strictest controls to prevent further price increases.

To create stable conditions, adequate full employment, housing, social security, minimum wage and other similar legislation is also necessary.

If government and industry had joined with labor in creating these prerequisites for a stable and expanding postwar economy, there would have been no large-scale strikes this year.

Instead, big business in its greed for exorbitant profits violently resisted the payment of adequate wages and demanded constantly higher prices; and Congress not only failed to enact the necessary social legislation but also set about massacring price control.

This left many workers no other resort than to strike for the maintenance of their living standards.

From all this, Congress has not yet learned the obvious lesson. Instead of removing the causes of industrial disruption, by re-establishing strict price controls, by depriving profiteers of their lock-out compensation in the form of tax kick-backs, and by passing urgently needed social legislation, Congress has moved in the opposite direction.

Bad as was the House's action against price control, the Senate has done even worse. It has voted for a monstrous inflationary measure to lift already rising prices by another 50% and to cut in half the value of savings.

To talk of repressive anti-labor legislation like the Truman and Case bills, under such circumstances, is simply to add fuel to the flames of industrial discontent.

But the American voters are not so dumb as some Congressmen seem to imagine. They will not find Hitler-like exhibitions of rug-chewing and anti-labor dictatorship any compensation for being robbed of their wages and savings through the massacre of price control.

Already public reaction has prevented enactment of the Case bill. If it is still further aroused by intelligent and vigorous political activity, it can also prevent enactment of the Truman bill and the final destruction of price control.

CONGRESS VOTES INFLATION

If a foreign enemy had seized control of Congress, he could hardly have devised a more diabolical and far-reaching scheme to disrupt the American economy and create general distress than has the present reactionary majority of both Houses.

The House created the widest popular alarm by voting to cripple OPA and raise prices right and left. It was hoped cooler heads in the Senate would repair the damage. Instead, the Senate has approved the House amendments and added even worse ones of its own.

The actions of Congress, unless reversed, will reduce the price control act to a meaningless title. They will result in huge increases in living costs, cutting the value of wages and savings in half. They will start a crazy inflationary race between wages and prices that will create the greatest industrial disruption.

By voting to destroy price control, Congress is opening the door to the worst inflation, from which the whole American people will suffer. The people must rise to this challenge, deluging the President and Congress with their protests and demands for the vetoing of inflationary legislation and the continuance of an effective price control act after June 30.

CIO HELPING TO GET EACH EX-GI $250

THE bill to provide terminal leave pay for enlisted personnel of the armed forces which this week was passed unanimously by the House and sent to the Senate is a victory for the CIO. Members of the House Military Affairs Committee have estimated that approximately 15 million former GIs, Gobs and Marines and their sisters in the service would receive an average of $250 under the legislation.

For several months the CIO Veterans Committee has sought terminal leave pay for enlisted personnel such as commissioned officers have been receiving—to right a glaring injustice.

Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee two and a half months ago wrote a strong letter to all House members urging them to sign a discharge petition for HR 4051, one of the bills to provide terminal leave for non-commissioned members of the armed forces, being considered by the House Military Affairs Committee.

"The discrimination between officers and enlisted men in the matter of terminal leave is one of the least justifiable practices of our military establishment," Bernstein's letter said.

"The caste system in service is onerous enough; but this last reminder of the privileges of rank, this Parthian shot is unworthy of a great democracy such as ours."

Bernstein received 75 favorable replies from House members, and a short time before the Easter recess the necessary 218 signatures have been placed on the discharge petition.

During their vacation the committee members also learned the voters' demands for HR 4051 and upon their return to Washington reported out another terminal leave bill, apparently in a move to save face.

This is the bill that the House passed by a vote of 379 to 0. The measure provides as a standard two and a half days of furlough time for each month in service, and sets a limit of 120 days for which payment must be made in cash.

Payments would be computed at the rate of base pay received at the time of discharge, plus allowances of not less than 70 cents a day. Former enlisted personnel would be paid immediately on their own certification that they are entitled to payments.

A bad feature of the measure is the prohibition of terminal leave payment in future emergencies to officers and enlisted personnel.

KEEPS HIS PLEDGE TO OKINAWA BUDDIES

Robert L. Cruden, recently returned to his job as editor of the United Rubber Worker, this week made good his promise to his buddies on Okinawa by writing a column in his paper and for Federated Press pleading for letters and for sending candy and good food to the servicemen still there.

He also urged that letters be written to Congressmen asking why the combat veterans can't be brought home and why "the Red Cross and USO don't do a good job in making life a little more cheerful for these GIs."

PLEDGE EUROPE FOOD—CWA

PRES. Faye Stephenson of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries this week called on members to sign the pledge of housewives that they will do their utmost to conserve foods, particularly wheat, cereals, fats and oils, to help feed Europe's hungry people.

At the same time Mrs. Stephenson said that as a member of the Famine Emergency Committee, she had attended a conference called by the Foods For Freedom Committee which urged President Truman to re-establish rationing to end starvation in Europe.

Mrs. Stephenson said that she does not believe that the voluntary means "will do the job," and called attention to the Gallup poll which reported a majority of people interviewed in favor of rationing and price ceilings, at least until the 1947 crops are in.

Mrs. Stevenson said: "It is food now, and food alone that can give meaning to Franklin Delano Roosevelt's 'our own objectives are clear, the establish- and securing freedom from want in the world.'

"We who are well fed find it hard to realize the heartache and suffering of a mother watching her helpless child slowly waste away and die because of the lack of just a little food. At this very moment there are mothers going through this agony!"

AVC HOLDS FIRST CONVENTION

FIFTEEN hundred delegates, representing the 60,000 World War II Vets in the American Veterans Committee, met in AVC's first national convention in Des Moines, Iowa, June 14, to elect national officers, approve a constitution, and chart the organization's future.

Speakers on the program included Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace, Former Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota, John J. Grogan, vice-president, CIO Shipbuilding Workers, a member of the CIO Veterans Committee.

Organized in 1943 on a "citizens first, veterans second" basis, AVC has fought vigorously for the Wyatt housing program, for a strong OPA, for civilian control of atomic energy, a permanent FEPC, the Murray Full Employment Bill, the minimum wage bill and the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill.

AVC flatly opposed the Case bill and the President's emergency labor legislation and endorsed a proposal for a joint congressional study of labor-management relationships.

A FIRST FOR CIO

First national veterans' organization to sign a union agreement, the American Veterans' Committee this week completed a contract with the Social Service Employes' Union, Local 19, CIO Office and Professional Workers, in a demonstration of veteran and labor unity commended by heads of both groups.

DUTCH HAVE HEALTH PLAN AND FREEDOM

By FRED ROSS

DR. Cornelis Banning, Holland's chief medical officer, who is touring the U. S. as a guest of the Rockefeller Foundation, seemed surprised this week when told of the fight that the American Medical Assn. and its reactionary spokesmen in Congress are making against the Wagner - Murray - Dingell health bill (S. 1606).

Here to study organization and administration of public health, Dr. Banning said that virtually all the physisians in Netherland are very happy with that nation's compulsory health plan, which has been in operation since 1940. It replaced community voluntary plans, which were abandoned as inadequate.

The Dutch chief medical officer — whose job corresponds to Surgeon General Thomas Parran's of the U. S. Public Health Service—is a mild, soft-spoken man.

Dr. Banning drew on his experience to answer the main arguments that have been advanced against the proposed U. S. compulsory health program which the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill would set up.

"The Dutch doctors like it because it assures them a fixed income of about $4,000 a year, the amount dependent on the number of patients," Dr. Banning said. "There is no bothering with bookkeeping. Every month the physician gets his check."

Contrary to popular opinion U. S. doctors are not always well paid. Sen. Wagner (D., N. Y.), one of the sponsors of the bill which is being considered by the Senate Education and Labor Committee, says that one-fourth of the nation's physicians had incomes under $1,200 a year.

The very heart of the AMA argument against the bill is that it would destroy "the sacred doctor-patient relationship."

To that argument, Dr. Banning's answer is that both the patient and the physician have freedom of choice in Holland, the doctor can refuse the patient, and the latter, once he has been accepted by the doctor of his own choice, may change his mind twice a year. It will cost him a slight penalty if he insists on altering his choice immediately.

Sen. Wagner has pointed out:

"Under the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill patients are guaranteed free choice of doctors, doctors are guaranteed the right to accept or reject patients, and hospitals are guaranteed freedom to manage their affairs. Specific provisions are included in the bill for hearings and appeals on any issue which may arise between the doctors hospitals and covered persons."

Holland's compulsory plan grew out of voluntary plans, currently beloved by the AMA but formerly attacked with much the same words as "socialism" which the organized physicians now use against the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill.

The Dutch health chief declared that the former voluntary plans were set up "because the doctors did not want to send patients of the Welfare Dept. for medical attention." The Dutch doctors did not want their poor patients to be the object of charity.

The very base of S. 2143, proposed by Sen. Taft (R., Ohio) would be a means test whereby "families and individuals having insufficient income to pay the whole cost" would receive medical relief from states also participating in the plan on a voluntary basis—they would have to match every dollar of Federal funds with two of their own.

Even this limited service would be less adequate than the Dutch voluntary plans (replaced now by the compulsory system), which provided the services not only of the family practitioners but also of specialists, and in some cases dentists and hospitalization. Taft's plan requires the states to provide only hospital and professional services for hospital cases —emergency medicine.

The Dutch were not satisfied with their voluntary health plans, and the physicians offered no opposition to the compulsory health program.

Dr Banning had another story to tell. He served as chief medical officer doing what he could to help his people during the Nazi occupation but only after he threatened to resign if he was interfered with by Seiss-Inquart, governor appointed by Hitler.

He stuck it out during the Nazi occupation, doing what he could to help his people, particularly during the period of the general railroad strike when the Germans cut the rations in the provinces of North and South Holland and Utrecht so drastically that 15,000 died of starvation.

The happiest moment of his life was when the tyrannical Seiss-Inquart ordered him to go with him without telling him where. It turned out that the Nazi governor was going to Allied headquarters to surrender. Dr. Banning was taken along to make arrangements for the feeding of his people and their health during the Germans' evacuation.

That is a thrilling story—but not as important to the health and happiness of the U. S. as his recital of how the Dutch learned through experience that compulsory health insurance is superior to voluntary health plans and to private medicine.

SEEK SEA PAY HIKE

WITH its goal the establishment of a world-wide minimum wage for merchant seamen and the improvement of working standards on the ships that ply the sea lanes of five oceans, the Intl. Labor Organization's Maritime Conference opened a three-week session in Seattle on June 6.

The minimum proposal of $64 a month—far below American standards but considerably higher than those paid on the ships of many nations—is the first of its type ever to come before an ILO international confab.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, who delivered an opening-day address to the 500 delegates from 32 countries, termed the base pay an "exciting proposal."

"We know that in our country's commerce, as well as in international commercial relations, cut-throat competition, whether it comes from the sweatshop or on the high seas, does no one any permanent good," Schwellenbach told the meeting, composed of government, industry and labor representatives from the maritime nations of the world.

As the conference opened in Seattle, American maritime unions were engaged in nationwide bargaining for a new contract and preparing for the eventuality of a strike to enforce their demands for better wages and working conditions. The workers' section of the conference adopted a resolution voicing support to the American seamen if they decided upon strike action, it was revealed by J H. Oldenbroek of the Netherlands.

An early point of debate in the workers' section of the conference was the application of representatives of fascist Argentina's state-controlled unions for admission to the meeting. The matter was referred to the credentials committee after stormy discussion on the floor.

20TH CENTURY PAUL REVERES, operators of a sound car to awaken the public to the dangers of losing OPA, stop at Hyde Park Boulevard in Chicago to urge passersby to wire and write to Congressmen demanding retention of price control. A block by block campaign was sponsored by a division of the Independent Voters of Illinois and the Hyde Park League of Women Voters.

SENATE PRICE BILL ADDS 50% TO COST OF LIVING!

A CONGRESS that had preferred to hear the requests of profit-seeking special interests rather than the warnings of millions of American consumers, last week gave its approval to a so-called price control bill that will add seven billion dollars to the nation's cost of living.

A doctored version of the bill to reconcile minor differences between the versions approved by majorities of the House and Senate will soon be headed for White House action. Leaders of consumers and labor organizations, appalled by Congress' blatant disregard for the people's welfare, declare they will ask Pres. Truman to veto the inflation bill and to demand of Congress a joint resolution extending OPA on an "as is" basis.

The Senate version of the price control bill, like the measure approved in the House two months earlier, provides sufficient room for a wagon-load of price increases and three inflationary horses to drive through the spacious gaps in the wall against rising living costs.

The bill passed by the Senate was worse than that recommended by the majority group on the Banking Committee. The committee's recommendations in turn were even more disastrous than the House bill, whose passage more than a month ago provoked widespread public protest.

The final vote on the OPA bill was 53-11, but the vote told little since many foes of the crippling amendments cast their ballots for the bill in the hope that effective price control might somehow be retrieved.

One of the few crippling amendments that met defeat was a proposal of Sen. Thomas (D., Okla.) to remove ceilings on virtually all farm and lumber products. That amendment was knocked out by a 51-21 vote. But the Taft amendment, forcing the ceiling on any item to cover the price during October, 1941, plus all subsequent increased costs, was passed 44-29. It will provide wide leeway for profitable price mark-ups all along the line.

How sharply the corporation lobbyists have succeeded in gutting the price control bill was emphasized in a minority report of the Senate Banking Committee. The report, signed by Chairman Robert Wagner (D. N.Y.) and Senators Downey (D. Cal.), Taylor (D. Ida.) and Mitchell (D. Wash.) warned that the inflationary spiral touched off by the Senate version of the bill will lift prices by 50% and cut deeply into the nation's 145 billion dollars of wartime savings.

Here is the committee minority's estimate of what the corporation-influenced OPA bill will mean to the American public:

PRODUCT	TOTAL PRICE RISE
Meat	$3.25 billion
Milk	$900 million
Butter, cheese etc.	$1.5 billion
Poultry	$160 million
Cotton	$60 million
Clothing	$1 billion
Automobiles	$500 million

Sen. Wagner, speaking on the bill during the brief Senate debate, said passage of the bill in its crippled form "would write the death sentence for effective price, wage and rent stabilization in the U. S."

The majority proposals, he added, "would inevitably destroy the hard-won industrial peace which now seems possible. Most of the major industry-wide contracts are behind us. . . . There is every prospect today that stable wage rates can be maintained if the cost of living remains reasonably stable. It seems almost incredible that the majority would invite the early reopening of the wage issue by making inevitable soaring living costs in the coming months."

"Decontrol will cause more dollars to change hands, but it is no magic which can turn scarcity into abundance," the minority report said, Arguing against the lifting of the lid on meat and dairy products, they warned that "we cannot have inflation in the grocery store and the butcher shop and still hope for stabilized prices in the dry goods store, the hardware store and the laundry in the same block."

As finally approved by the Senate, the OPA bill allows the removal of price ceilings on items "not important" to business costs and the cost of living, and provides an easy method for industries to have ceilings removed when supply and demand are in balance—a difficult condition to determine.

Controls were lifted completely from livestock, poultry, eggs, milk products and tobacco, with the Secretary of Agriculture—against his will—receiving the power to write other items off the OPA list if price control is believed to "hamper" production.

Subsidies were trimmed in half from OPA's original requests, with 1.1 billion dollars allotted by the government. As a result, subsidies will be withdrawn from many commodities, and the consumer will be forced to pay for rising prices.

An escape hatch through which clothing prices can move rapidly upwards was provided in the killing of the maximum average price plan, a device through which manufacturers were forced to produce low-cost clothing. Automobile dealers won their gravy in a provision for an average $85 profit rise on the sale of each low priced car.

Sen. Taft of Ohio, a leader of the anti-OPA faction, gained a 44-29 voted approving a "profit guarantee" for manufacturers on almost every item they produce.

To cap the climax, the Senate voted to protect violators of the law by limiting their possible fines to $50 per set of violations.

KEY VOTE

A key test of sentiment on the OPA bill developed on the proposal of Sen. Pepper of Florida to substitute the present act, which expires on June 30, for the amendment-ridden extension bill. Pepper's proposal was defeated 52-17.

Senators voting to retain the present act and escape the crippling amendments were: Chavez (D., N. M.), Downey (D., Calif.), Huffman (D., O.), Johnson (D., Colo.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.), Lucas (D., Ill.), McMahon (D., Conn.), Magnuson (D., Wash.), Mead (D., N. Y.), Morse (R., Ore.), Murray (D., Mont.), Myers (D., Pa.), O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), Pepper (D., Fla.), Taylor (D., Ida.), Thomas (D., Utah), and Wagner (D., N. Y.).

Not present at the ballot but listed as favoring substitution of the present act were Mitchell (D., Wash.), Guffey (D., Pa.), Green (D., R. I.), Hatch (D., N. M.), and Hill (D., Ala.).

'If OPA Is Made Impotent, Your Raise Won't Be Worth a Cent'

"MR. Congressman:
For your pay raise
AVC has only praise.
But if OPA is made impotent,
Your raise won't be worth a cent."

That message, printed on stage money and circulated through Washington last week by the American Veterans Committee, was one form of protest out of hundreds from labor, consumer and civic organizations against the inflationary amendments to the price control bill.

In Philadelphia, Pres. Donald Henderson of the CIO Food & Tobacco Union charged that abandonment of price control will "rob the workers of wage gains" made in recent months. He urged President Truman to veto the amended bill and force Congress to pass a joint resolution extending OPA for a year with full powers.

In N. Y. City, a Businessmen-for-OPA Committee wrote to Sen. Wagner that "over 40% of the businessmen answering our telegrams are for OPA without crippling amendments." The Committee charged that "the NAM does not speak for business." Statements from several score businessmen in a variety of industries back up the Committee's accusation that NAM, in pressing for elimination of price controls, is ignoring the sentiments of many of its own members.

Pres. Colston Warne of Consumers Union, appearing at an informal hearing in the Senate Office Building, declared: "The slaughter of price control has been systematically and effectively conducted by the NAM, aided by every selfish lobby in the Capital."

Others who appeared in defense of OPA were spokesmen for two dozen liberal organizations, among them the Natl. League of Women's Voters, the YWCA, the Natl. Urban League, the Natl. Council of Parents & Teachers, the Natl. Council of Catholic Women, the Natl. Council of Jewish Women, the Women's Trade Union League and Washington representatives of several CIO unions.

COMPLIMENTS OF CONGRESS!

This is the future—minus OPA. The crossed-out prices in the ad below (adapted from one appearing in last week's Washington Daily News) are what housewives pay now for food. The prices to the right are what housewives may well be paying in six months. (Government officials have estimated that prices will skyrocket 50% if price control is wrecked.)

In the words of Sen. Robert Wagner (D. N. Y.), the issue is clear: "Should the government make a fight to the finish against inflation in the next 12 months, or should it surrender unconditionally and entrust the nation now to the operation of untrammeled economic forces?" What can you do about it? Write or wire President Truman to veto the sabotaged OPA bill. Tell him—and your Representative and Senators—that you want the present price control act continued at least another year without weakening amendments. The time is short! Do it today!

1 Hard, dangerous work is the merchant sailor's lot. Securing gear in heavy seas on a rolling Liberty ship is no work for boys. In war, lifeboats frequently were hit by shells, were smashed by the concussion of torpedoes, or were unable to get away in raging seas. In bitter weather on the Murmansk run, many a torpedoed seaman froze to death. Some seamen spent as long as 83 days in life boats!

WHO ARE THE MERCHANT SEAMEN?

"EVERY man in this Allied command is quick to express his admiration for the loyalty, courage and fortitude of the officers and men of the merchant marine.

"We count upon their efficiency and their utter devotion to duty as we do our own; they have never failed us yet and in all the struggles yet to come we know that they will never be deterred by any danger, hardship or privation.

"When final victory is ours there is no organization that will share its credit more deservedly than the merchant marine."—General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Who are the merchant mariners?

They are the youngsters, in their teens or barely out of them, who braved the bombs and torpedoes and machine gun bullets and the bitter weather of the North Atlantic to win credit for the merchant service as "probably . . . the greatest single strategic factor in the defeat of the Axis powers."

They are the weather-beaten veterans, holders of picket cards for '34, '36 and '37 who sailed the plodding, poorly armed rust buckets in the days after Pearl Harbor—the men of whom the U. S. War Shipping Administration wrote:

"As was said of the small group of RAF flyers who fought off the German Luftwaffe, we owe much to few—for the professional merchant seamen kept the tankers and other vessels sailing despite daily torpedoings within sight of our own shores, at a time when the supply lines stretched dangerously thin."

Nearly 6,000 seamen gave their lives to "keep 'em sailing." Merchant mariners won 141 Distinguished Service medals, 362 Meritorious Service medals, and 5,099 Mariners' medals similar to the armed services' Purple Heart.

These are the men who belong to the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, the CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards, the CIO American Communications Assn., the CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. and the Independent Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers Assn. among others. These five unions, with the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union and the CIO Inland Boatmen, make up the newly formed Committee for Maritime Unity, negotiating with shipowners and the government for better wages, hours and working conditions.

What role did the unions play during the war? Let the War Shipping Administration answer:

"There was not one strike in the maritime industry during the war," writes the WSA. "With the exception of a few minor and isolated misunderstandings, there were no delays in the sailing of vessels as the result of a labor dispute . . .

"Our merchant marine met its two assignments: To knit the ocean-separated United Nations into a single wartime organization, and to place our armies and their equipment on hostile territory and maintain them there.

"In carrying out the latter assignment, we can say that our fighting forces were never knocked off an important beachhead, nor, thanks to the Merchant fleet, did we in any instance fail to develop our landing with a steadily increased flow of supplies that enabled our armies to meet their objectives."

THESE are the men. What of their employers?

While merchant seamen were sailing for average pay, including war bonuses, of $200 a month, the ship operators were getting fat ashore. Profits, dividends and total assets showed unprecedented gains. For 14 representative steamship companies:

- Total assets grew from about $237 million in 1938 to more than $460 million in 1944.
- Net worth increased from about $125 million to $285 million.
- Net profits after taxes rose from a little over $10 million in 1938 to $32 million for 1944. Total net profit for the 14 companies for the seven war boom years amounted to nearly $250 million.
- Dividends to stockholders increased from nearly $4 million in 1938 to over $14 million in 1944. Dividends paid by these companies in the seven years totaled around $75 million.

● In the greatest year of war profit-making, 1941, the companies showed net gains after taxes of more than seven times the 1938 figure.

The shipowners' hearts bleed for profits, but not for the men who make them possible. During the war, when ships were piling up enormous profits, two or more radio operators were carried by each vessel as protection for the crew—and cargo.

Now, with 1,000 Liberty ships laid up and seamen on the beach at a dime a dozen, the operators are not willing to spend an extra $1.10 an hour to hire another radio operator for freight ships. As a result, the lone operator has to be on call 24 hours, and if he takes sick or dies, there is no one aboard to send a distress signal should the ship get in trouble.

THE history of the shipowners has been one of buying men cheap and reaping tremendous profits. The history of the seamen was one of virtual slavery until they learned that success in winning their demands was exactly proportional to the amount of unity they could develop among themselves.

The bitter strikes of 1934, 1936 and 1937 that resulted in the formation of the militant maritime unions of today saw the seamen climbing slowly out of the sub-sub-standard wage class onto a level approximating that of shoreside workers.

In 1934 maritime workers, like millions in other industries, were suffering under wage cuts and worsend conditions forced on them by the bosses after the '29 crash. The 12-hour day had been replaced by the "eight-hour" day, but the food was still bad, the quarters were crowded, ventilation was practically non-existent, bed bugs and roaches competed for living space, and wages hit a low of $35 and $40 a month for able seamen. Overtime pay was unheard of.

Seamen were treated like cattle. Thirty to 60 men were jammed into the glory-holes on passenger ships. They had no showers; bathing was in a washbucket. One miserable little can of evaporated milk served a crew for a day. Vegetables were scarce. "Silverware" and even plates were made of tin.

Between ships, seamen often were months on the beach, waiting for a berth. When times got really tough, work-a-ways (men who worked for nothing) competed with regular seamen for jobs. Long lines of seamen formed outside company shipping offices. And in the waterfront bars, crimps sold jobs to the highest bidders.

The crimps worked both ways. They got paid by the companies and by the seamen. Often the seamen would pay more money for the jobs than they could earn—but at least they had a place to sleep and three meals a day, as lousy as they were.

In the long struggle to better conditions, employers fought against the unions with every weapon. They used the police and their own hired thugs. They paid labor spies to disrupt union meetings. They formed baseball bat squads to dispose of militant unionists. But they couldn't win.

TODAY, the unions that are affiliated with the Committee for Maritime Unity have their rotary hiring systems that insure each man his fair turn at shipping. They have their own halls. The employers call the unions for men, instead of the men begging in line for jobs at shipping offices run by the bosses.

There's much yet to be done, however. Unemployment insurance and social security and protection for merchant marine veterans disabled during the war are things that the maritime unions are plugging for.

But the floating factories that are also homes for thousands of CIO members are being renovated. And the biggest single gain for the program of cleaning house is the coast-to-coast unity established by the CMU. Its formation was a big step toward the eventual goal—"one big union for all maritime workers."

2 This tanker, loaded with high test gasoline, took a direct hit in the Pacific. Nearly 6,000 merchant were killed during the war. Up to early 1943, casualties were proportionally greater than in any other branch of the armed forces.

5,000 CIO MINERS WIN STRIKE

THE CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers this week signed an agreement with the American Smelting and Refining Co., which will end a three-and-a-half month strike. The pact was hailed by MMSW Pres. Reid Robinson as a "decent settlement" which should form the basis for ending other strikes in the non-ferrous mining industry.

Pay increases for 5000 workers range from 18½c to 30c an hour, the latter figure for common laborers at Patagonia, N. Mex., to end differentials with other operations in that area. An increase of 9¼c an hour will be retroactive to Oct. 1 at 14 plants where the employes had been working 48 hours a week, and in three operations where the work-week was 40 hours the entire 18½c an hour increase will be paid back to Sept. 1.

A feature of the agreement, which will end the strike after it is ratified by the locals, is that, in computing vacations, days on strikes will be considered days worked. In five plants where the white collar workers are members of the union they will receive a basic wage increase of $32 a month.

Eight thousand workers are still on strike at the Utah operation of the Kennecott Copper Co., out since Jan. 21, and at Phelps Dodge Co., establishments in El Paso, Tex., Arizona and Laurel Hill, Long Island, where the walkout began at the end of March.

Federal conciliators aided in the American Smelting and Refining settlement which was reached at Washington.

MICHIGAN RENAMES LEADERS

AUGUST Scholle and Barney Hopkins were re-elected president and secretary-treasurer of the Michigan CIO Council, one of the biggest State Councils, at its eighth annual convention at Detroit this week.

Scholle, who is Michigan CIO regional director, defeated Glen Sigman, Steelworker, by 429 votes, and Hopkins won over William G. Grant, Ford Local 600, Auto Workers, by more than 500 votes.

Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the Auto Workers told the 800 delegates representing approximately 800,000 members of CIO unions that "Congress, big business and the Administration are hell-bent on destroying all our gains of the last 15 years" and suggested that the CIO, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods call a conference to take joint action to keep prices at or below their present levels.

John Brophy, director of CIO-IUCs and chairman of the CIO Missouri Valley Authority Committee, pointed to the world-wide trend toward socialization and nationalization of basic industries, to TVA and the Ontario hydro-electric system.

He declared that "labor leaders, men like Philip Murray, have outlined methods whereby the people of America may progressively assert their rightful control over the basic decisions of our major industries."

The IUC director concluded, "There are three keys to world peace: economic collaboration, universal disarmament, and the protection and extension of democracy in political and economic institutions," and he urged that labor leaders press for these goals.

Asst. Labor Sec. John W. Gibson warned there would be a wave of strikes if a stringent price-control bill were not enacted.

UTSEA RENAMES ITS LEADERS

Willard S. Townsend and John L. Yancey were re-elected president and secretary-treasurer respectively of the CIO Transport Service Employes at the union's fifth biennial convention in Chicago last week. They were unopposed.

All vice-presidents were re-elected except C. F. Thompson who was replaced by E. C. Adams. Six new faces are on the executive board, George Weaver, director of the Natl. CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination; Ira Brazille, Charles Dickson, Sylvester Carrothers, R. S. Hamme and Alfred Harvey.

GOING PLACES IN THE SOUTH

PLANS to increase phenomenal membership gains in the South in cooperation with the CIO's southern organizing campaign were made last week by the CIO Furniture Workers at their fourth constitutional convention in Detroit last week.

Twenty-five delegates, mostly from North and South Carolina and Arkansas, represented approximately 9,000 members in the South. At the last UFWA convention less than a thousand members in the South were represented by three delegates.

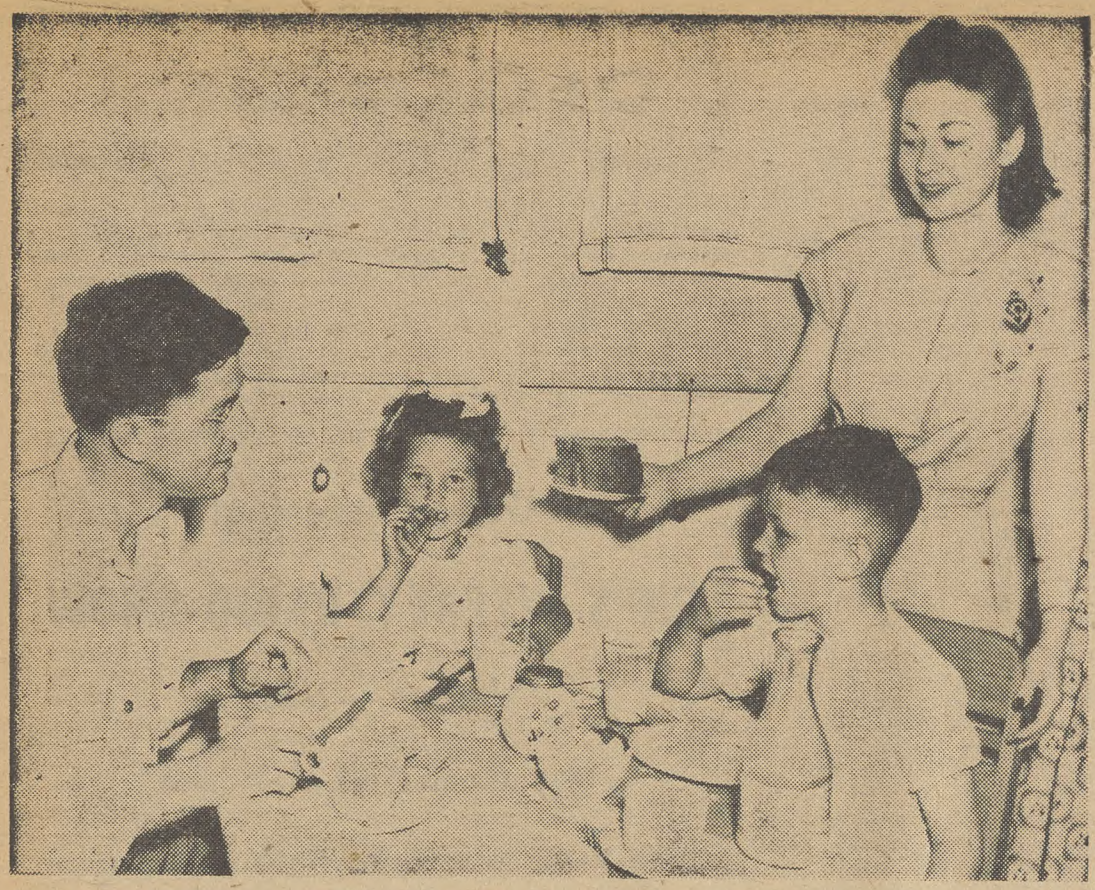
Southern delegates reported a great reservoir of good will toward the CIO and praised the leadership of Bernard Hiatt, Martinsville, Va., in charge of UFWA's organizational work in the South.

The constitution was changed to raise the monthly per capita payments to the national office from 40c to 50c to make available additional finances for the union's organizational campaign. Payment of $25,000 to the CIO's southern campaign was approved.

Morris Muster, who has led the union since its inception in 1937, was unanimously re-elected president. Re-elected were Sec.-Treas. Max Perlow, Director of Organization Ernest Marsh, Eastern Vice-Pres. Morris Pizer and Western Vice-Pres. Gus Brown. A newly elected vice-president is Nick Blattner for the Mid-West region. The position of southern vice-president will be filled later.

Convention speakers included CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Michigan CIO Director August Scholle, Charles G. Bolte, chairman of the American Veterans Committee, and Eugene Gota of the Spanish trade union movement.

Resolutions praised the leadership of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and called for Big Three unity, for breaking relations with Franco Spain, and for opposition to anti-Semitism and discrimination against other minority groups.



One of the first atomic workers to join the CIO Atomic Workers Organizing Committee, Ophus Evans and his wife, Juanita, and their children, Junior and Carol, gather around the kitchen table for an afternoon snack. Evans came to Oak Ridge 16 months ago, after his discharge from the Army. The family rents one of the permanent-type houses on the atomic energy project for $32 a month. Thousands of other Oak Ridge families live in trailers, huts and prefabricated houses.

The giant food stores attempt to match the size of the huge atomic energy plants in Oak Ridge. Mrs. Evans, however, attempts to match her budget. She's found food prices high and still rising. OPA price ceiling charts were unseen in this store, though prices are marked on each item. A can of salmon, for instance, is 47c.

ATOMIC WORKER

By MEL FISKE

"IF YOU raise a kick with the labor relations office about anything in the plant, more often than not you get fired."

That's the way it is at the Oak Ridge, Tennessee atom bomb factory. Its product is unusual. Its unorganized labor relations are mighty common.

Take the problems of Ophus Evans, 30-year-old chemical operator in the Union Carbide and Carbon plant, one of the three major production plants on the 59,000 acre government reservation, 18 miles from Knoxville, Tenn.

No Job Security

Evans is worried about his job. "There's no security whatsoever," he says. "Maybe tomorrow they'll give me my walking papers. I don't know."

If he does get his papers, Evans can't go to the company's labor relations office to determine why he was fired. Only employes can present a grievance to that office. Once fired, Evans is no longer an employe.

"If you raise a kick to the labor relations office about anything in the plant," Evans said, "more often than not you get fired."

In his department, a worker on the job for 14 months was fired while another worker, related to the area foreman in some way, was kept on the job even though he had two months' experience.

"Ability doesn't count for much out here," Evans explained. "Favoritism is the system in use."

In the two other production plants, the Monsanto Chemical Corp., and Tennessee Eastman Corp., the job termination practices are the same.

But while scores of men and women are being fired from each of the three plants daily, scores of new workers are being hired.

The firings follow a definite pattern. Men and women with the greatest amount of time in the plants, and usually the highest wage scale, are given pink termination slips. Low paid workers are moved up with no increase in pay, or new workers are hired at lower pay as replacements.

The pattern is plain and the purposes are plainer. It is to lower the wage rate to conform with the low wage schedule in the South.

During the war the companies were forced to pay high wages to attract workers to that isolated section of Tennessee. Now that the labor supply is greater than the number of jobs available in Tennessee, the companies feel that they have a great opportunity to knock their wage scale down.

Monotonous Work

Evans began working in Oak Ridge 16 months ago. After two and a half years in the Army—nine months with the 32nd Division in the jungles of New Britain and New Guinea—Evans found the work "monotonous."

He can't be explicit about his work. Army security regulations are followed strictly by all workers. But he describes it as "turning valves and checking gauges." He walks from gauge and valve to gauge and valve in a certain small area.

"After eight hours, it makes you tense and tight and tired even though it's not hard work."

He joined the CIO Atomic Workers Organizing Committee as soon as it began organizing in Oak Ridge. During the war, Secretary of War Patterson asked the CIO and AFL to refrain from organizing in the project for security reasons.

CIO—Two to One

The CIO kept its pledge, but about 16 AFL craft unions attempted to develop their organizations. The only way many workers could get a job on the project was by joining the AFL and paying high initiation fees.

As soon as the CIO announced its drive, the AFL dropped its initiation fees.

"Two out of every three workers on the project are for the CIO," Evans explained. Sixteen CIO organizers, and a regiment of volunteer CIO organizers are working day and night bringing in the application cards by the hundreds daily.

"That's because the CIO is the more vigorous union," Evans maintained. "It's the better all around organization. It does more for the working man than just make promises."

This is the first time Evans has joined a union. He came to the conclusion that all working men need unions when he saw that workers could not better their conditions as individuals.

Married 10 years ago in Metropolis, Illinois, their home town, Mr. and Mrs. Evans have a nine-year old son, Junior, and a six-year old daughter, Carol. Mrs. Evans, a pretty brunette, and her husband disagree about Oak Ridge.

Mrs. Evans likes living on the project though she says "it's lonely sometimes," Evans says it's "like being in the Army again."

The Army runs Oak Ridge. It directs the activities of the three major chemical companies charged with refining the raw materials used in harnessing atomic energy.

The Army, through a fourth company and other satellites, controls the housing, schools, library, newspaper, stores, recreational facilities, and bus lines.

Four years ago, when construction at Oak Ridge first started, the Army contracted with the Turner Construction Co. of N. Y. City for the operation and maintenance of all services needed by people on the project.

Turner Construction set up an operating division, the Roane-Anderson Co., named after the two counties in which the project lies. Roane-Anderson established subsidiaries to rent the houses, operate the stores, cafeterias, theatres and recreational facilities, or rented concessions to private businessmen.

Though food markets in each of the three villages in the now fifth largest city in the state rarely display OPA price ceiling charts, prices are reported slightly higher than in Knoxville.

The reservation has the same atmosphere found in Army camps. It's raw, sprawling and dusty. It's busy and bustling. It's new and awkward looking in the once quiet hills and farm land.

Thousands of workers built Oak Ridge in three years. Now the workers are settling down to build their lives and security.

DO YOU WORRY ABOUT YOUR CHILD'S TABLE MANNERS?

Table manners are something to think about, but pleasant meal times are more important. Let your child learn to help himself when he is ready to do so. Little fingers often are clumsy—let him mess and spill a bit without worrying about it. Gradually show him how to handle spoons and forks. If the family has good manners and table courtesy, with a little help your child will catch them too.

WOMEN NATURALLY OPA ROOTERS

By RUTH ROEMER
Of Washington Staff, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers

THE price control bill reported out by the Senate Committee, as Senator Wagner told the Senate, "would write the death sentence" for effective price and rent control. By passage of a price control bill on Friday riddled with crippling amendments the Senate has done just that.

Women understand better than anyone else the full impact of that death sentence. We are the ones, by and large, who handle the marketing, who manage the budget, and who know the day-to-day story of continual price rises on item after item, the sudden soar in price on an individual item, like citrus fruits, when ceilings are removed. We know the exasperating search for meat being withheld from the market, the hunt for reasonably priced clothing. We are the experts on price control.

Trade union women—those of us who work in shops or whose husbands do—are double experts, for we know both the impact of the removal of price controls on us as trade unionists and the impact on us as consumers. It is for us to explain to our neighbors and friends that the action of Congress in ending price controls on meat, poultry, and dairy products on June 30 of this year is the same as a pay cut.

As consumers, we must explain that the end of control on meat on June 30 will mean a 40-50% rise in meat prices; the end of control on milk will mean a 4c increase a quart. Our total food bill will rise by billions of dollars. The abolition of the maximum average price plan of OPA will mean the end of what little low-priced clothing there is on the market.

The rapid decontrol policy will mean the holding of goods for higher prices, inventory speculation, and a real seller's strike. The Taft amendment wipes out OPA's policy of cost absorption and passes all costs on to the consumer. And though the bill technically keeps rent control on the books, we all know that increases in prices of building materials will contribute to higher rents. Besides, rents to be "equitably" fixed under the price control act must be in line with prices of other items.

As Senator Wagner said, "We cannot have inflation on one side of a supermarket and stabilized prices on the other. Nor can we allow inflation in the grocery store and the butcher shop and still hope for stabilized prices in the dry goods store . . . Our economy is far too closely interrelated for us to hope to avoid the full consequences of these amendments."

But although both the Senate and House have voted for legalized inflation, the fight is by no means over. We must demand that the President veto this disastrous bill, that the price control act be extended for one year without amendment by concurrent resolution of the House and Senate, and that adequate funds be appropriated for enforcement.

This week should be SAVE OPA WEEK for every one of us. A flood of wires from every housewife, every worker, every local union, every auxiliary, every community organization to the President calling for a veto can still stave off the economic disaster that inflation means to all of us.

By a vote of 135-255, the House of Representatives on June 11 upheld President Truman's veto of the Case anti-labor bill. The veto was sustained when the opposition failed to muster the necessary two-thirds vote.

The Congressmen who voted to sustain the President's veto voted for labor; those who voted to over-ride the veto voted against labor. In this tabulation, votes to sustain the veto are registered as (R); votes to over-ride are (W); and not voting is indicated by (NV).

The following Congressmen, while not present, were paired to sustain the veto (R): Welch (R., Cal.); Roe (D., N. Y.); Norton (D., N. J.), and Curley (D., Mass). These Congressmen were paired to over-ride the veto (W): McGregor (R., O.); Grant (R., Ind.); Ellsworth (R., Ore.); Carlson (R., Kans.); Colmer (D., Miss.); McGehee (D., Miss.); Stigler (D., Okla.), and O'Hara (R., Minn.)

IT'S YOUR VOTE THAT DOES IT

IF YOU vote, you get what you want. If you don't vote you don't get anything. That's the theme of this month's Economic Outlook, bulletin of the CIO Dept. of Education & Research which will be issued June 17.

The bulletin points out that, "Too many Americans regard politics as a boxing match—a purely spectator sport. In the past, their non-participation has led to great victories for reactionary forces; machine politics control the results when the voters sleep.

"Vote your future," urges the Outlook.

"Thirty million voters went to the polls in 1938; 50 million in 1940; 28 million in 1942; 48 million in 1944. . . .

"In 1946 there is a potential vote of 58 million. How many Americans will go to the polls in November? The answer will decide whether we have a liberal or reactionary Congress for the next two crucial years."

In 1942, an off-election year, the Outlook claims that when the turnout dropped it "spelled disaster for the American people" and a victory for the "reactionary forces." The moral of this is that a "big vote is a good one. Mass registration and mass voting is the best guarantee of liberal progressive government."

Analyzing the effects of a high turnout of labor votes in 1944, the bulletin cites the fact that in 1944 the vote for President Roosevelt rose in the counties in which the following cities are located, each of which has a CIO Industrial Union Council: Akron, Atlanta, Baton Rouge, Berkeley, Carlsbad, Chicago, Dallas, East Chicago, Flint, Gary, Hartford, Johnstown, Las Vegas, Little Rock, Los Angeles, Miami, Minneapolis, New York, Oakland, Oklahoma City, Portland (Ore.), Pontiac, Richmond, St. Paul, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose, Seattle, Springfield (Mass.), and Tampa.

Discussing "polltax democracy," the Outlook says that the "disastrous consequence of low voting shows up clearly in several of the Congressional representatives from poll-tax states. Some of these poll-taxers have the worst voting records in Congress. They have fathered some of the most reactionary legislation. They are the most outspoken labor-baiters, race-haters and spreaders of discord."

The Outlook stresses that if the American people want to be truly represented in Congress, they must flock to the polls in November.

CIO-BACKED MAN WINS IN IDAHO

Backed solidly by CIO metal miners' votes, George E. Donart walked away with the Democratic nomination for Senate in Idaho's primaries last week.

Donart, an attorney, ran up an 8-7 lead over his opponent, Sen. Charles C. Gossett. Donart had the strong support of Sen. Glenn Taylor, progressive Idaho Democrat, who declared that Donart's nomination was "a victory for liberalism over reaction."

The November elections will find Donart opposed by Republican Rep. Henry C. Dworshak.

BOWL OVER J. CROW—WISC. CIO

THERE'S more than one way to skin a cat, and the Wisconsin State CIO has discovered another way to fight Jim Crow.

The state CIO there recently undertook to sponsor a state-wide bowling contest for its members. The response was swift and positive as more than 2,500 entries from men and women, Negro and white, poured into the state office.

At that time the Wisconsin state CIO was unaware that the American Bowling Congress, monopoly organization which controls all bowling tournaments in the country, contained a clause in its constitution asserting that membership was open only to "men of the white male sex."

ABC which at first had stated it would support the tournament, backed down and claimed it could give only "moral support." However, they permitted entry blanks which had in the interim been printed with their OK, to be used.

ABC unbent sufficiently to offer "high-score protection" to any of its members bowling in the tournament—orally, but not in writing.

CIO acted quickly. A formal protest was forwarded to the ABC. Local 838, UAW-CIO, passed a resolution at its regular meeting condemning the action of the American Bowling Congress and urging in part that a "vigorous campaign be started at once by the Milwaukee County CIO to smash Jim Crow in bowling."

The advisory committee of the state FEPC, on which a state CIO representative serves, passed an unanimous resolution "condemning the actions of the ABC." The state FEPC notified the Bowling Congress that its positions and actions were in "direct contravention to the purposes of the Fair Employment Act of Wisconsin and it requested a meeting with local representatives of the ABC to take action on the charge.

Labor Press Aid

Asst. Sec. of Labor John Gibson disclosed to the House Appropriations Committee this week that the Labor Department plans to expand its office of information to help cover the 450 labor papers in America.

CIO SCHOOL DAYS

EMPHASIS will be placed upon political action, current legislative problems, collective bargaining and union organization at the Second Annual CIO Ohio Summer School to be held at Antioch College, July 29 to August 3. The school is open to all CIO members in Ohio.

Outstanding leaders from CIO, farm, government and church groups will attend the school and participate as instructors in daily classes and also take part in afternoon forums. Present plans call for a minimum attendance of 100.

Federated Press reports that the Seattle (Wash.) Labor School is conducting a series of new members classes, courses in leadership and other special classes for members affiliated with the school.

The school, second full-time educational institution on the Pacific coast, founded for and by union members, and dedicated to advancing the cause of labor, is now in its second term. Its roster of sponsors includes eight CIO unions.

NAM SEEKS LIGHT

THE Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, out to get the lowdown on how to conduct a successful political campaign, is sending three representatives to the School of Political Action to be conducted late this month in Washington by the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee.

This desire of the NAM to be initiated into the technique of successful political organization was made public when C. B. Baldwin, executive vice-chairman of NCPAC and director of the school, issued a partial list of organizations whose representatives or members have already signed up.

Many of the prospective students belong to such varied groups as the Wesleyan College chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity, American Veterans Committee, League of Women Voters, American Federation of Labor and the Washington Federation of Churches.

The first of 39 scheduled classes will be presented on Wednesday evening, June 26, at the Hotel Willard, Washington, D. C., when Postmaster-General Hannegan and Senator Wayne L. Morse of Oregon will speak on "The Significance of the 1946 Elections."

POLITICAL HANDBOOK

If you're going to do any "politicking" this coming November, here's something to tuck into your hip pocket to keep your ideas warm. It's a HANDBOOK OF POLITICS by Lowell Mellett, veteran newspaperman, and for six years, one of President Roosevelt's assistants.

The book gives detailed charts on what your Representatives and Senators were up to in Congress and how they voted on important issues. It indicates how you can join your local political machine and make your weight felt. And most important of all it suggests that you get out and register because that's the only way you can vote.

When you decide to join a political action group, Mellett recommends that you "pick an organization that is out for blood even if you don't agree with some of its ideas."

1946 is a crucial election year for it all indicates whether America will move in a reactionary or progressive direction and Mellett's book is important because it tells you how to step out and make things move in the right direction.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Whittling The Wagner Act

For years anti-labor Congressmen have been trying to amend the Wagner Act—but public support for Labor's Magna Charta has always defeated their efforts.

Last week the House voted a substantial amendment to the Act without hearings, with little debate and little public knowledge of what was going on.

The amendment was tacked on to the Federal Security & Labor Appropriations Bill.

Offered by Rep. Elliott (D., Cal.), the amendment prohibits the Natl. Labor Relations Board from handling any case involving food packing or processing workers—some million in all. These people are employed by big corporations, and they are industrial workers just as much as employes of automobile or steel plants.

To slip his amendment through, Rep. Elliott used a tricky device; he referred to them as "agricultural workers" as defined by the Social Security Act. That definition, slipped through Congress in 1939, was obtained by big corporation lobbies.

The Federal Security & Labor appropriations bill is now in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Write and wire to your Senators and to the members of the Appropriations sub-committee handling the bill. Demand that the Elliott amendment to Title IV be withdrawn from the bill, and that the NLRB not be harassed in carrying out its legitimate functions.

Here are the members of the Appropriations sub-committee:

Break for Vets

A bill to give enlisted vets of World War II the same terminal pay benefits afforded to officers has been passed by a 379-0 vote in the House.

The bill, HR 4051, now awaits Senate action. Under its provisions, GI's and ex-GI's can get pay and allowances for all unused furlough time accumulated since 1939.

Drop a card to your Senator and ask his vote in favor of the enlisted men's terminal pay bill.

Only 13%

Why does Congress so often vote against the people's interests and desires?

Part of the reason, of course, is the presence of a large bloc of Senators and Representatives from the seven poll-tax states, who are elected year in and year out by a small minority of their constituents.

But that's not the whole story.

A major reason for bad votes is the fact that so few people ever bother to write their Congressmen with explanations of how they feel on important issues like OPA, minimum wages or security.

The Natl. Opinion Research Center in Denver, Colo., reports, for instance, that only one person in eight has ever written to his Congressman or Senator.

A poll conducted by the Center discovered that 13% have ever written postcards or letters to their representatives; the other 87% just keep mum while Congress mangles necessary legislation.

But Congress is very sensitive to mail from the people. A small increase in that 13% might make a big difference.

Try it today—send your Congressmen a card or letter on OPA or anti-labor bills or health legislation. Your letter will help.

Rap Rider

CIO has added its protests to those of the United Public Workers against efforts to force members of the union off the public payroll.

Through a series of amendments to appropriations bills, Sen. Ball (R. Minn.) and a group of his anti-union colleagues have succeeded in forcing workers to certify that they do not belong to unions "asserting" the right to strike against the federal government.

The UPWA is preparing to change its constitution to meet the new laws, although it had never claimed any interest in striking against Uncle Sam.

CIO objects, however, to labor legislation by the rider method. As Pres. Murray pointed out, discussion and study of important policy questions are avoided by foes of labor through this device.

The particular riders, he charged, are "ill-advised," and proposed only to stir up controversy and anti-labor hostilities."

Klan-Shy Rankin

The Wood-Rankin Committee, which preys on liberal and labor organizations, voted 5-1 not to investigate the Ku Klux Klan. . . . The Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax has reaffiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. . . . Housing experts are urging Congress to pass the Wagner-Ellender-Taft home-building bill before the summer recess.

Truman anti-strike bill S. 2255 HR 6578	Provides basis for outlawing strikes, squashing unions, drafting strikers.	Senate passed somewhat milder version. House now considering action to reconcile two versions of bill.	Wire Senators and Congressmen to vote against bill; wire Pres. Truman to veto bill when it reaches White House.
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June, 1947, with batch of weakening amendments.	Passed by Senate and House.	Wire President Truman to veto bill and ask Congress to approve extension of OPA "as is."
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Send wires to your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee. to support this bill.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; House Labor Committee recommended flat 65c minimum, no increase coverage.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Andrews Bill HR 6035 S 2140	Bars workers fired under illegal super-seniority ruling from getting lost pay.	Sneaked thru House on voice vote. Now pending in Senate.	Ask Senators to defeat bill.
Labor Appropriation Bill HR 6739	Title IV on NLRB bars Wagner Act to thousands of workers in food processing industry.	Scheduled for study by Senate Appropriations Committee. Senate will probably vote next week.	Wire members of Senate Appropriations Committee and your Senators to restore NLRB funds for food workers' cases.

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

THUNDERSTORMS: Everybody talks about the weather; last Wednesday Congress did something about it. For close to two hours Representatives discussed thunderstorms, solemnly declared they were against them, and voted to study the whole matter.

This meteorological debate was occasioned less by interest in the subject than by hope of averting debate on the FEPC. As Rep. Marcantonio (ALP, NY) pointed out, a weather bill would normally be passed by unanimous consent, without necessity for two hours' discussion.

The Labor Committee has been trying for weeks to bring the FEPC bill before the House on Calendar Wednesday, when committees can report out their bills without need of bucking the powerful and reactionary Rules Committee. So far, they have been unsuccessful.

Send a card to your Congressman today and demand that he act to permit discussion and vote on this badly-needed weapon against racial and religious discrimination.

MINIMUM WAGE: A stripped-down minimum wage bill, providing for a lifting of basic pay to 65c an hour, is stalled in the House Rules Committee. If the committee's previous record of obstruction is any barometer, it will take lots of public pressure to blast the bill out of the committee's files on to the House calendar.

The bill was approved by the Senate only after it had added the inflationary Pace rider—which would boost farm prices by two or three billion dollars.

The House Labor Committee's version of the bill stripped off the Pace rider. But at the same time it knocked off provisions for a rise in the minimum pay rate to 70 and 75 cents an hour within the next three years. The Committee also declined to expand coverage of the Wage-Hour act to include millions of retail, food processing, communications and maritime workers.

Nevertheless, even the "minimum" minimum wage bill will have difficulty in being passed unless the House Rules Committee takes action soon.

Write your Congressman today and demand his support for the 65c bill without the inflationary rider; and write to Chairman Sabath and other members of the Rules Committee to report out the bill in the next few days.

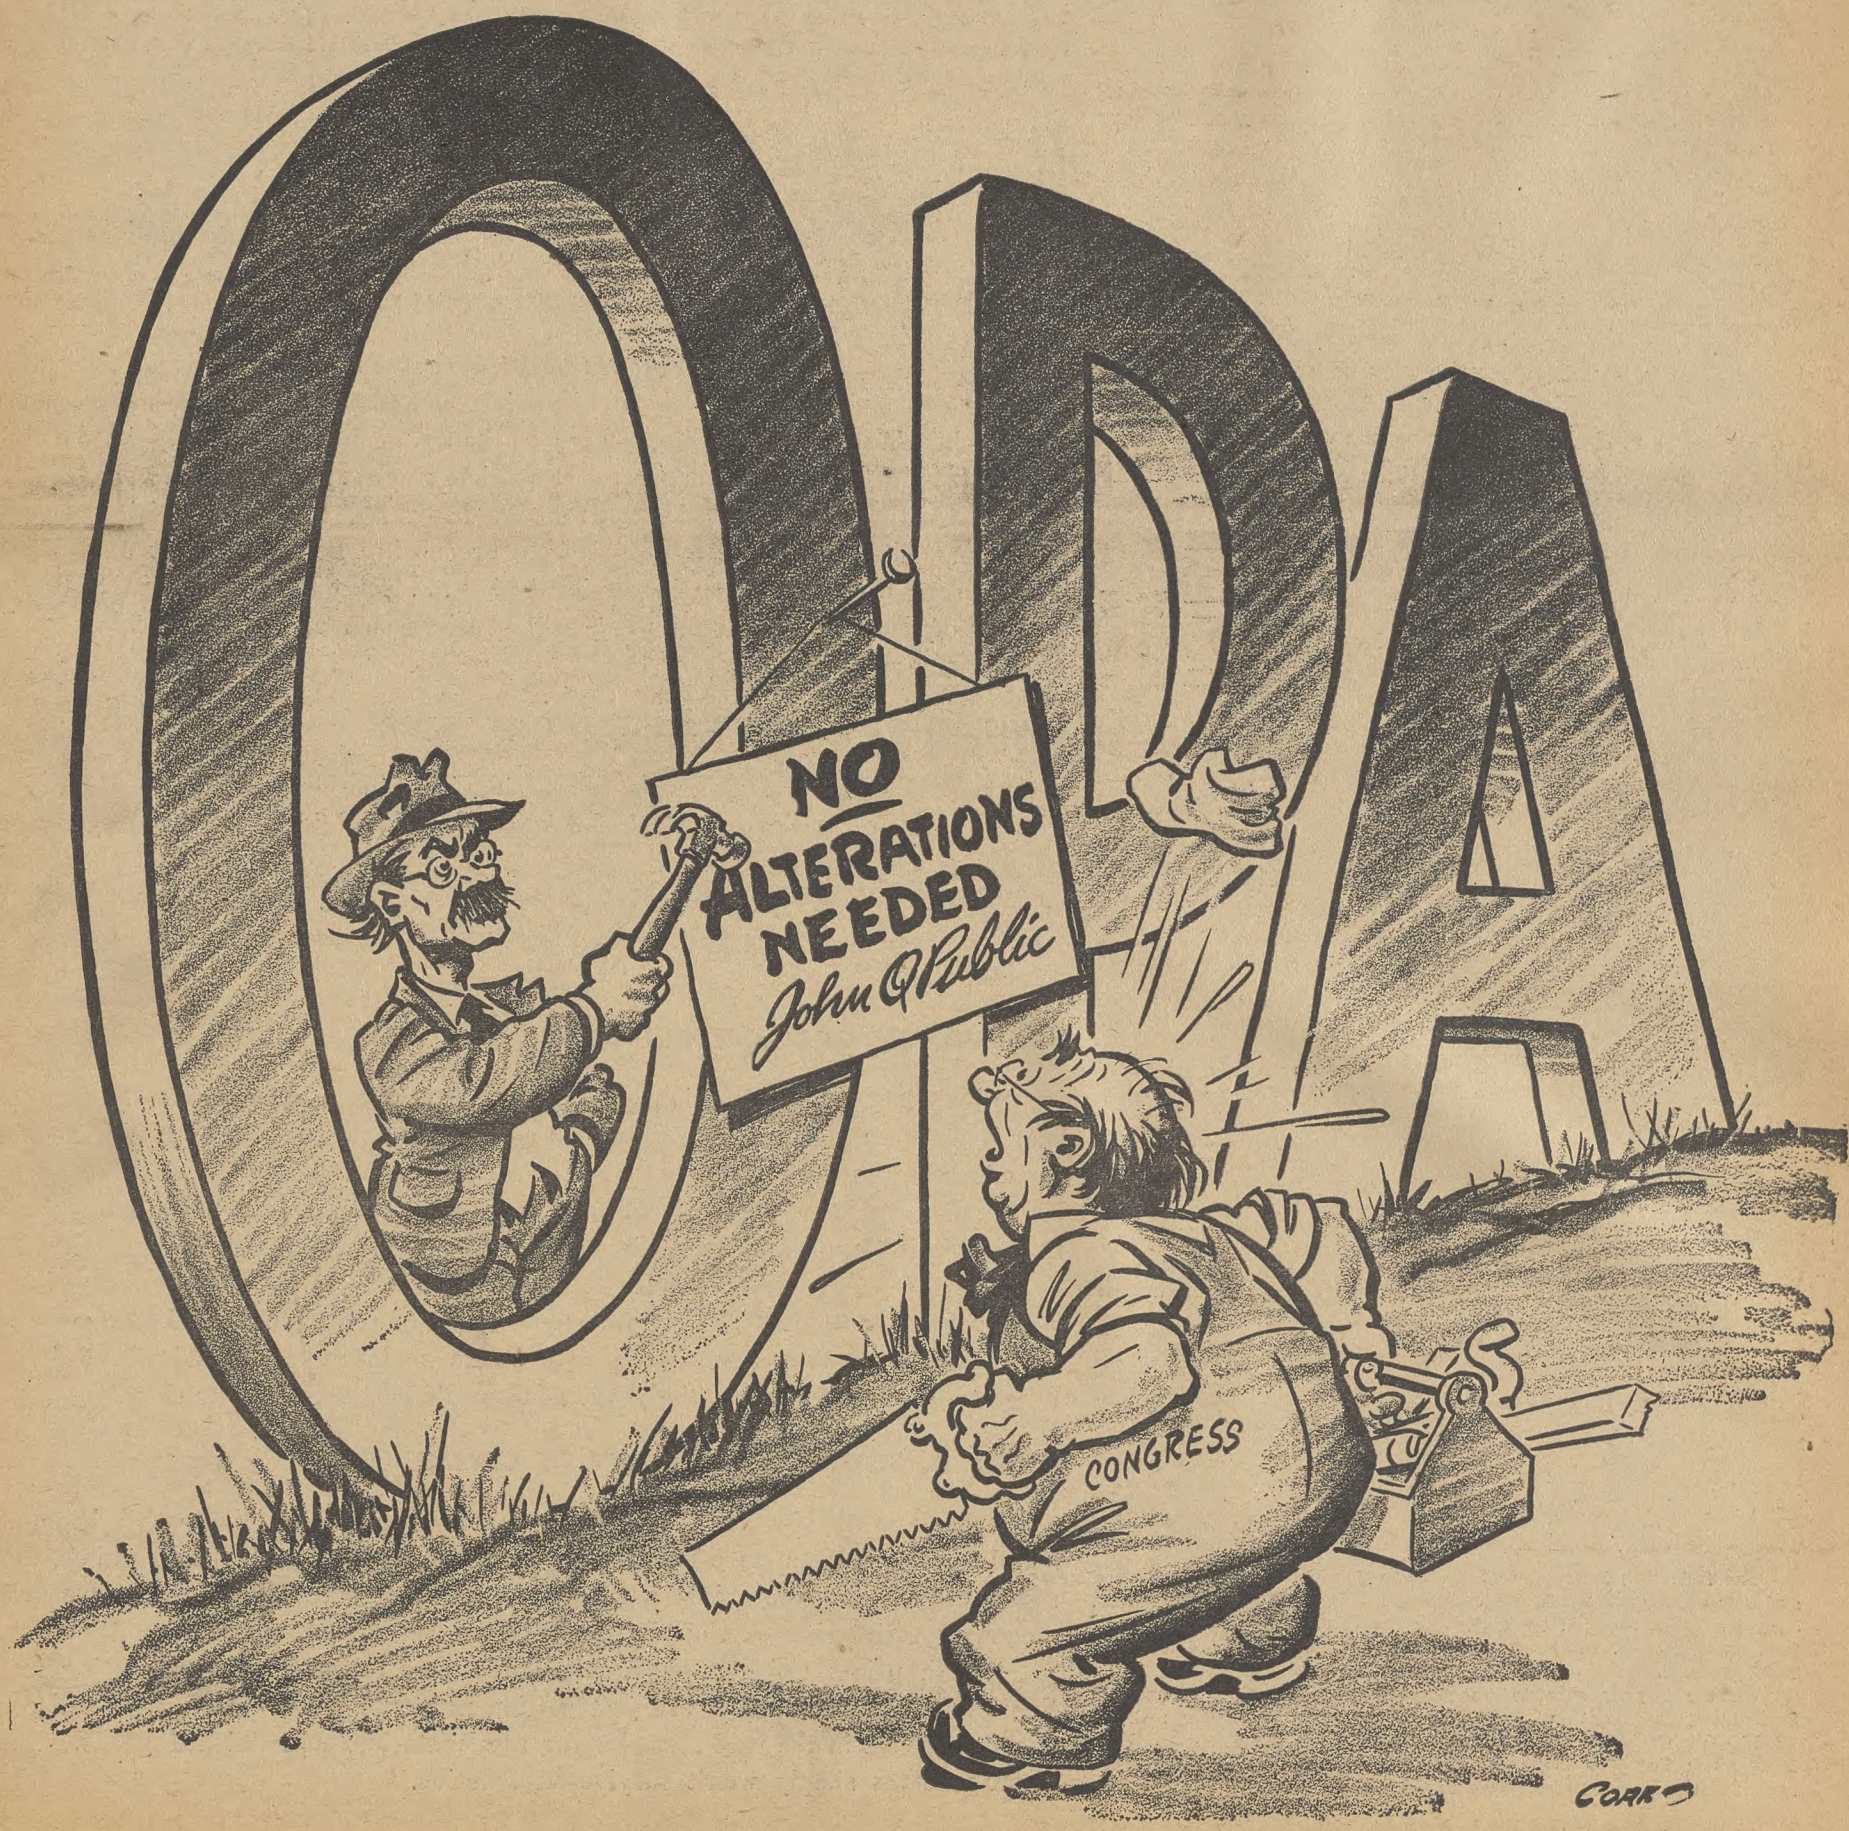
WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS



TO REMEMBER IN NOVEMBER

HERE are two more items for your "remember in November" file: the Senate voting record on two important price control issues.

The Taft amendment was adopted by a 44-29 vote. It provides for a type of "profit guarantee" on every item manufactured, by permitting ceilings no lower than the price in October 1941 plus the average increase in production costs since then. A vote for the amendment is a vote against effective price control (W); and a vote against the amendment is a vote to hold the line on prices (R).

The second vote was on Sen. Pepper's motion to extend until Feb. 1, 1947, the existing price control act, rather than to pass the new, badly-amended bill. The proposal was defeated, 52-17. A vote for the Pepper motion was a vote for effective price control (R); a vote against was a vote to cripple OPA (W).

On the Pepper substitution proposal, the following Democratic Senators were absent but registered as favoring the motion: Green (R. I.), Hatch (N. Mex.), Hill (Ala.), Mitchell (Wash.) and Guffey (Pa.). Democratic Senators Connally (Tex.) and McKellar (Tenn.) were absent but registered as opposed to the motion.

Even the totem poles want OPA! This Seattle demonstration for strong price control was sponsored by the Independent Citizens' Committee of Arts, Sciences & Professions in cooperation with labor, civic and veterans groups. (Federated Pictures).

The Experts Say

IF OPA IS MURDERED . . .

CHESTER BOWLES, ECONOMIC STABILIZATION DIRECTOR

"With a good price control bill, free of dangerous compromise and corner-cutting, we can maintain relatively stable prices and rents during the coming months. We can buckle down as a united nation to the tremendous task of stepping up civilian production to levels far above the peacetime record . . .

"But with a weakened price control bill, hampered by compromising amendments or without adequate appropriations or subsidy funds, the cost of living is bound to move upward at an increasing tempo . . . There is no question that tens of millions of people would suffer needlessly—businessmen as well as farmers, white collar workers and factory workers."

LEWIS SCHWELLENBACH, SECRETARY OF LABOR

"Renewal of the nation's safeguards against inflation will enable us to go forward to levels of production which will help assure real long-range prosperity for all groups.

"Without these safeguards, I fear that industry may move into a new cycle of wage demands and work stoppages, which will do irreparable harm to our reconversion efforts."

PAUL PORTER, OPA ADMINISTRATOR

"Let's look at the situation which would face a typical American family next year if the Congress were to take off all controls now, or if, as a result of weakening amendments, the whole structure of controls should collapse. Let us examine the budget of a family which is spending $2,500 a year and see what would happen to it if the inflation approached 40% in the next 12 months. . .

"At the year's end our typical family would have to spend at the rate of $250 more a year for food, $150 more for clothing, $250 more for rent, and $300 more for miscellaneous goods and services, if it were to maintain its standard of living. What had cost $2,500 when the year began would cost $3,450 at its close."

HENRY A. WALLACE, SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

"The larger businesses with their greater reserves can survive such a boom-and bust-longer, and even come through with a whole skin. But in the meantime, thousands of smaller enterprises are squeezed out. The net result is only to encourage monopoly with prices out of the reach of the American people. . . .

"With prices rising rapidly, millions of small businessmen—including many thousands of veterans who are just getting new enterprises under way—will come out second best in the wild scramble for raw materials and finished goods. Their small reserves simply won't survive an inflation."

6 MORE DAYS TO AVERT INFLATION!

THE present OPA price control hill expires June 30. The bills passed by the Senate and House lack adequate safeguards to prevent prices from rising.

Wire your Senators and Congressmen, and President Truman, to save effective price control. If they fail, your dollars will lose much of their value.

SEND YOUR WIRES TODAY!

AMENDMENTS—KISS OF DEATH FOR OPA

SIX days remain for Congress to save the country and its millions of people from the specter of inflation.

At midnight on June 30 the existing price control act expires. The bill to extend its life rested last week on the desks of a joint House-Senate conference committee attempting to reconcile the minor differences between the two versions of the bill adopted on Capitol Hill.

But the fact remains that the heavily amended bills, cluttered with more loopholes than a piece of swiss cheese, aren't price control measures at all. Almost any bill produced by the conference committee on the basis of the House and Senate versions will be a measure intended only to make possible higher profits in scores of industries.

Angered by the Senate majority's action approving a crippled version of price control, scores of organizations—Civic, consumers, labor, veterans and businessmen—demanded action to save OPA.

Telegrams and letters flooded Washington with protests and warnings that the present bill means inflation. Demands are being registered for Presidential veto of the proposed price control bill and substitution of the existing act for several months more.

The Senate turned down such a proposition by a sizable vote last week.

Even more intensive public protest will be needed to make Congress reverse its position from one favoring a few profit-seeking corporations to a stand in defense of the people's welfare.

As passed by the Senate, the bill blows the lid of price ceilings of dairy products, meats, gasoline and tobacco; sets up mechanisms for fast and irresponsible removal of ceilings on hundreds of other commodities; and provides for a cut of almost 50% in the $2 billion subsidy program requested by OPA. In addition, other amendments provide for across-the-board profit taking through trick formulas which, when translated into actual profits, allow corporations to raise prices almost as they wish.

Chester Bowles, Economic Stabilization Director, who had led the governmental fight against the wide-open extension bill, was asked at a mid-week press conference whether passage of the amended OPA bill is preferable to no price control at all.

Bowles commented that the question amounts to "do I like death by hanging or by having my throat cut?"

He charged that many of the amendments are "booby traps" whose explosions would produce an "unending stream of higher prices" all along the line.

From the White House, however, there was no indication as to what action the President will take when he receives the bill from Congress, presumably some time early this week.

Estimates of how much the weakened price control act will cost the nation have varied between 30% and 50% of the national income. OPA Administrator Paul Porter believes that a general lifting of price controls will lift living costs of a family on a $2,500 annual income to something over $3,400.

Lifting of controls, it has been pointed out, would affect veterans, whose benefit allowances would lose much of their purchasing power; workers, whose wages are fixed on a yearly basis by collective bargaining contracts; and beneficiaries of the Social Security Act, whose small payments now barely cover minimum living expenses.

90% OF PEOPLE NEED OPA

NINETY PER CENT of the American people will take it on the chin if Congress seriously cripples OPA and prices skyrocket.

This flat statement was confirmed this week by an official government report which knocked out the lie that American workers have built up huge bank accounts.

Forty per cent of the people have practically no savings, the report showed, while the top 10% of the people have "liquid assets" averaging $10,500. Those outside the top 10% class include 20% of the people who have assets averaging $2,350, 30% of them who have assets averaging $700, and the bottom 40% who have assets averaging only $40.

The report was made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Dept. of Agriculture and was issued by the U. S. Federal Reserve System. It was based on a survey of 3,000 carefully selected and weighted "spending units," consisting of all persons living in the same dwelling and belonging to the same family who pool their income to meet their major expenses.

The report said that the American people had $130 billion in currency, bank deposits and government securities at the end of 1945—excluding amounts held by trust funds. The report did not deal with currency holdings because of reluctance of those interviewed to disclose amounts. However, said the Federal Reserve System, "it appears that adequate results were obtained by the survey."

Startling figures were contained in the report on the spread between the very rich and the very poor:

- Those in the top 20% bracket had 45% of the money income, accounted for 82% of the saving, and held 77% of the liquid assets—savings deposits, demand deposits and U. S. government bonds.
- Of money income, those in the top 10% bracket had 29% and those in the bottom 50% bracket had only 22%.
- Of liquid assets, those in the top 10% had 60% and those in the bottom 50% had only 3%.

SAVE OPA—THE PEOPLE

REP. William A. Rowan (D. Ill.) received a letter last week from Carl B. Williams of Chicago: "This is the first time I have ever written to a Representative regarding any pending legislation. . . . I hope that you will continue to exercise your authority to see that the powers of the OPA are extended unhampered for at least another year."

Wrote B. S. Freeman, employe of a shoe factory: "I am writing on behalf of my immediate family of eight sisters and brothers, six of them married, and my parents, and my own family . . . Please listen to the people who will be snowed under by the resulting inflation if the OPA's effectiveness is reduced."

The president of the Butler Specialty Co. in Chicago said in his letter: "We are a typical small American manufacturer, and what defeats us, we believe, will defeat our national economy . . ." The proposed amendments to the Price Control Act will have the effect of creating runaway inflation and a serious dislocation of industry, and thereby put us out of business."

These are three of thousands of letters and telegrams from every state in the union that poured into Washington last week as an aroused people served notice on Congress that its tampering with price control was against the people's will.

In Washington, spokesmen for 20 national organizations, whose membership runs into the millions, charged that a profit-minded Congress is seeking to "execute price control under the guise of extending it."

Representatives of CIO unions in Washington planned a closely-coordinated campaign to see Senators and Congressmen and point out the folly of their action in heeding the pleas of corporation lobbyists, rather than of the people. Labor USA, the CIO's weekly radio program on the ABC network, devoted its 15 minutes to clarifying the issues.

Caravans from Chicago, N. Y., and other industrial cities in the east were converging on Washington. The Natl. Emergency Conference to Save Price Control made plans for a mass meeting at the base of the Washington Monument.

Similar meetings were being staged throughout the country, with great success.

In Louisville, Ky., for instance, Local 862 of the UAW-CIO sent more than 10,000 post cards to Congress as the result of a one-day drive. Petitions, group telegrams, letters and cards were dispatched from scores of cities and towns in which "Save OPA" demonstrations were held.

In N. Y., 100 businessmen, members of the New Council of American Business, sent a resolution to President Truman asserting that "it is the will and desire of the American people, including American businessmen, that price control be maintained."

HIT RESTAURANT PRICE BOOST

A sharply worded complaint that OPA is trying to appease its big business critics was voiced last week by the CIO Cost of Living Committee.

Jack Thornton, committee chairman, demanded immediate withdrawal of an OPA order lifting ceilings on restaurant food prices, and the resignation of officials concerned with the situation.

Charging that the order was issued "with almost unprecedented speed and secrecy," Thornton wrote to OPA Administrator Paul Porter that the agency's action would cut into the pocketbooks of millions of people who must eat some or all of their meals in restaurants.

UNDISPUTED CHAMPION!

The substantial wage increases and other improvements won by the CIO maritime unions in their recent negotiations add another great economic victory to the already imposing list of CIO successes this year.

Throughout the far-flung jurisdiction of the CIO, covering nearly every major and basic industry in all parts of the United States and Canada, millions of workers have benefited this year, to the tune of many hundreds of millions of dollars, from the largest wage increases ever won for the most people.

These increases have been won by the CIO through aggressive and intelligent leadership; through its modern industrial form of organization which mobilizes the workers' maximum bargaining power; and through the loyalty and militancy of members who have full confidence in the democratic and progressive character of CIO unionism.

The CIO victories have not only brought big wage increases and better working conditions to CIO members, they have also raised the standards of all American workers, both in non-CIO unions and among the unorganized.

The CIO took the lead in this great wage movement of American labor. It first raised the slogan of substantially higher wages. It organized the struggle and bore the brunt of it. It won the first big successes.

Non-CIO unions trailed in the wake of the CIO, cashing in on its victories and often falling far behind in their achievements.

The pre-eminent leadership of the CIO in labor's struggle for better conditions is winning increasing recognition from the workers outside its ranks. Official figures of the Natl. Labor Relations Board for 1945 plant elections show the CIO running far ahead of the AFL in the workers' preference.

CIO unions won 1,898, or 71%, of the 2,673 elections in which they participated, receiving 350,295 votes, as compared with 215,453 votes for AFL unions in 2,373 elections, of which the latter won 1,620 or 68.3%.

This was before the big 1946 victories of the CIO, which have put its reputation with the workers still further ahead of all competitors.

WHOSE SAVINGS?

Remember all the propaganda about the big savings of American workers from their "high" war wages?

Now comes the pay-off. A study by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics for the Federal Reserve Board shows there have been some big savings made all right, but not by the workers. They nearly all belong to a small minority of wealthy people.

Ten percent of American families, the top income group, own 60% of the country's savings in government bonds, bank deposits and other quickly cashable assets, according to this study.

On the other hand, 40% of American families, including most of the workers and working farmers, have come out of the war years with only 1% of the total of all such savings.

The families of this lower-income group have saved only $40 per family on an average, as compared with $10,500 per family in the top income group.

The moral of these facts is obvious. The mass purchasing power on which our postwar prosperity depends must come from higher wages, since any big backlog of savings in the hands of the many is a myth.

And cuts in the purchasing power of wages, through the destruction of price control, can only lead to economic disaster.

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE OLD-STYLE politicians used to promise everything to everyone—a chicken in every pot, two cars in each garage, more wages to the worker, better markets to the farmer, lower prices to the consumer, etc., etc.

But this year has produced a strange crop. Most of the members of Congress are proposing to steal milk from our children, meat from our tables, money from our pockets and the savings from our banks.

To all consumers they offer higher prices; to the worker, lower real wages; to the farmer, bigger prices for what he buys and a shrinking market for his produce; to the veteran, a cut in the value of his GI loan and a boost in the cost of the home he hopes for; to the businessman, less value for his reserves, higher costs and fewer customers.

This extraordinary feat of hurting everyone at the same time and helping no one—except a few speculators and profiteers—is performed by reducing the value of the dollar through lifting the lid on prices.

The amendments to the Price Control Act are designed to raise the prices of food, clothing and other commodities affecting immediately more than half the cost of living; and ultimately to raise prices on everything, by making the few remaining controls impossible to enforce.

What's the explanation for this strange brand of election-year politics?

It is not due to ignorance of the people's wishes. Every opinion poll has shown the popular demand for continued price control, and Congress has been deluged with protests.

All sections of labor are united for price control. So are consumers, farm, business, professional and hundreds of other organizations of all kinds. Never has the American housewife been so aroused and so politically active as over this issue.

The only explanation of this brazen flouting of the voters' demands is that the lobbies of well-heeled special interests have been more effective than the people's lobby; and that the price-raising politicians count on short memories and on blaming others for the results of their own actions.

The lobbies of the profiteers have had the advantage of controlling large campaign contributions and of each being single minded in its price demands.

When once a member of Congress has yielded to one particular lobby, he then has to do some log-rolling with other members supporting the demands of other lobbies.

With so many Congressmen saying, "I won't vote for your price increase unless you vote for mine," the result has been the voting of practically all price boosts.

The weirdest excuses are advanced for this betrayal of the public interest.

Some politicians claim they favor price control and have just voted for a little less rigidity and a little price relief here and there—in face of the fact that their amendments taken together will destroy the last vestiges of effective price control.

Others point to lack of rigidity in present price controls due to OPA's price-raising appeasement, and say prices are going up anyhow, so what use is OPA?

Yet others even claim to be doing the country a favor. The same politicians who voted for the Case bill and other straightjackets on labor and wages say, "Let's lift all controls over profits and prices and rely on the unrestricted law of supply and demand to solve our problems."

This Hooveristic philosophy of letting nature take its course (except for labor), will lead today, as in the Hoover depression, to immediate loss of purchasing power for most of the people and advantage only for a profiteering minority.

Nor will inflationary price increases bring a healthy increase in supply.. For cutting the value of wages and savings means declining demand, and rising prices lead to the withholding of goods from the market in the hope of still higher prices.

The price-raising politicians have voted to rob us of our wages and savings. But don't let them think they can rob us of our wits, or that we won't remember in November.

TRUMAN BILL IS NOBODY'S BABY

UNWEPT and unsung, the Truman anti-strike bill seems destined to death in the spacious pigeonholes of the powerful House Rules Committee.

The bill, which swept through the House during the short-lived hysteria of the national railroad strike late in May and which was subsequently passed by the Senate with some of its worst provisions removed, has become nobody's baby.

House Republicans have lost their entire enthusiasm for the measure. and have apparently abandoned their idea of tacking portions of the vetoed Case bill to the Truman legislation. Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn admitted to a press conference last week that a substantial number of legislators from both parties are anxious to forget all about the proposal.

Last week the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, which has been more fearful of the plant seizure provisions of the bill than of its anti-labor sections, voiced opposition to the bill. The House GOP bloc, which often takes its cue from big business, has adopted a hands-off policy.

Democrats from northern industrial centers, who have had ample opportunity to hear from their voters since the President's violent demands for drafting strikers into the army, are likewise anxious to see the bill drop from sight. Even Rep. Cox (D., Ga.), who can ordinarily be found fighting the anti-labor battle, has admitted that he is not "too" interested in the bill.

So long as the bill stays in the House Rules Committee, however, there is always danger of a blitz attack that might force it through the House. CIO legislative representatives in Washington, casting a wary eye at the situation, urged union members to keep the mail coming to their Congressmen in order to lessen the danger of sudden action.

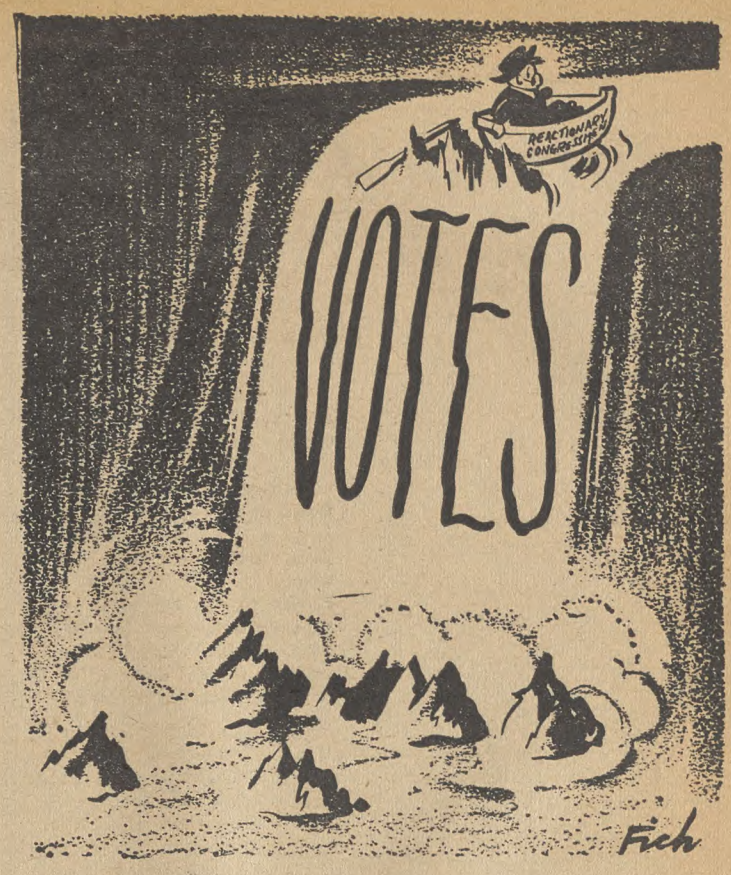
Seldom content to let labor legislation alone, Congressional conservatives moved in on the unions from a new flank, however. The Senate Judiciary Committee, after six months of inactivity on the Hobbs "anti-racketeering" bill, suddenly gave that measure its blessing and sent it to the rostrum for action.

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, wrote all members of the Senate last week to demand defeat of the Hobbs bill. Reminding the Senate that its Judiciary Committee had never held hearings on the measure, Cowan declared:

"The Hobbs bill is essentially not at all an anti-racketeering law. All that it does is delete the provisions which sought to protect against perversion of the anti-racketeering law into an anti-labor device."

The CIO official quoted from a 10-year old opinion of the Attorney General on an earlier version of the Hobbs bill—that the bill "might include within the prohibition the legitimate and bona fide activities of employers and employes"—and warned that the present version seeks to restore those evils.

Meanwhile a House Labor subcommittee, headed by liberal Rep. Augustine Kelley (D., Pa.), announced it would conduct hearings this week to determine whether labor legislation "is really needed." Representatives of the NAM, Chamber of Commerce, CIO and AFL have been invited to testify.



MAIN PRIMARY TESTS LOOM IN MIDWEST

By AL REITMAN

LABOR'S political action workers, busy ringing doorbells for labor-backed candidates in primary elections, shift their attention to the midwest where several important primaries—one of which may have a bearing on the '48 presidential race—is scheduled in the next few weeks.

The Minnesota election, set for July 8, holds the hope of ex-Gov. Harold Stassen, now parading before voters as the champion of liberalism within the Republican Party. Stassen's candidate, Gov. Thye is pitted against the reactionary incumbent Henrik Shipstead, one of the two senators who voted against the United Nations.

Stassen, who could not risk his own neck by facing Shipstead, took a bad beating in the Nebraska primaries last week where Gov. Griswold, publicly endorsed by the former Navy captain, lost by a two-to-one margin to Sen. Hugh Butler in the GOP primary.

Labor forces are steering clear of the GOP primary, permitting the two factions to argue among themselves. Main labor backing is going to Theodore Jorgenson, Democratic-Farm-Labor candidate for the Senate, and a congressional slate of D-F-L nominees.

The question of foreign policy looms as important in the Montana race on July 16 where Sen. Burton Wheeler, most vocal of the present-day America First clique, will be opposed in the Democratic primary by Leif Erickson, Montana Supreme Court Justice. Erickson is known as a leading spokesman for a Missouri Valley Authority and has been widely applauded by labor and progressive forces in the area.

In Washington, Cong. Hugh DeLacy heads the list of four progressive Democrats fighting to retain their seats. He is facing severe opposition from forces supporting Joseph D. Roberts, who introduced a state polltax law into the legislature, and Howard Costigan, who has failed to support OPA or publicly oppose the Case bill and other anti-labor measures recently presented to Congress.

DeLacy, whose record is probably the best of the small but fighting liberal bloc in Congress, recognized the importance of upholding the President's veto of the Case bill and remained in Washington to cast his vote instead of scampering home to campaign. DeLacy's re-election has developed into a crusade for the labor groups, and squads of door bell ringers canvassing votes have been working daily.

In the June 24 Maryland primary, local PAC units have endorsed Thomas J. D'Alesandro, progressive Congressman, for re-election. Rep. Streett Baldwin, bitter foe of labor, has chosen to run for the gubernatorial seat which is being vacated by Gov. Herbert O'Conor who is opposing Sen. George Radcliffe in the Democratic primary. No endorsement has been given in this race, although opposition to Baldwin in the Republican primary is mounting with progressive forces mobilizing their strength behind Alfred Lane, director of the state's unemployment compensation system.

Primary results in the past few weeks revealed no startling changes. One highlight was the victory of Martha Sharpe in Massachusetts' Democratic primary. She is running in the district represented by Rep. Joe Martin, Republican minority leader. Mrs. Sharpe defeated her opponent, Oscar Peterson by a 3-1 margin, and looms as a distinct threat to the GOP spokesman who never befriended labor.

RR Unions Form PAC

A statewide Railway Employes Political Action Committee was organized last week by the Texas Railroad Brotherhoods. It will cooperate with CIO-PAC and any other political action committees set up by bona fide unions in Texas.

HIT JURY WHITEWASH OF POLICE TERRORISTS

THE civil liberties of the Negro community in Columbia, Tennessee, were kicked around in high-handed fashion last week by a federal grand jury report in Nashville which purported to find no evidence of civil rights violations in the sacking of that community last February by Tennessee state troopers.

Walter White, executive-secretary of the Natl. Assn. for the advancement of Colored People, and George Weaver, executive secretary of the Natl. CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination and a representative of CIO President Murray on the executive committee of the Natl. Committee for Justice in Columbia, Tenn., joined in strong condemnation of the grand jury's actions.

They cited the hundreds of sworn statements by eye-witnesses and the photographic evidence of the killing of two Negroes in the Columbia jail which were completely overlooked in the grand jury report. The grand jury itself directed most of its fire at the NAACP and other civil liberties groups seeking justice for the Negro people of Columbia for attemping to "foster racial hatred and to array class against class."

The report had only praise for the Tennessee state troopers and highway patrolmen who had raided and machine-gunned the Negro section of Columbia after a dispute between a white shopkeeper and a Negro woman and her veteran son.

Both White and Weaver called upon President Truman to step into the situation to insure that the constitutional rights of Negroes in the South were protected.

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, and chairman of the CIO's Committee to Abolish Discrimination, urged CIO affiliates to give support to the financial appeal of the Natl. Committee for Justice in Columbia, Tenn.

Paul Revere got on his horse
And started things a-humming
He cried, "Wake up and register—
Election time is coming!"

MURRAY BACKS URBAN LEAGUE FUND DRIVE

CIO Pres. Philip Murray has joined 56 other national figures in sponsoring the Natl. Urban League's 1946 campaign to raise $231,000 for an expanded nationwide program of social and economic welfare services among Negro citizens.

Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the Urban League, who announced Murray's acceptance last week, declared that the League was "confident that organized labor, in recognition of our significant contribution to the development of sound racial policies in the labor movement will again respond generously to our appeal."

CIO PAPER WINS $1,500,000 SUIT

A $1,500,000 libel suit brought against the CIO Labor Herald in San Francisco by Miss Vivian Kellems, Connecticut industrialist, was tossed out of court last week by Federal Judge Louis E. Goodman. The paper had said some of her wartime activities savored of treason.

Miss Kellems, who had urged citizens not to pay taxes in wartime, complained that she could not sleep because of the "nasty" things said about her in the paper. Under cross-examination, however, she admitted that exposure of her correspondence with Count Karl Friedrick von Seidlitz, suspected Nazi agent in Argentina, had resulted in some insomnia previously.

At one point in the course of the brief trial, CIO attorney Richard Gladstein commented that before damage to a reputation could be proved, there must be evidence that the reputation existed.

Honor Congressmen

All branches of Delaware labor will join June 27 in honoring two Congressmen for their liberal voting records—Sen. James M. Tunnell and Rep. Philip A. Traynor, both Democrats. A testimonial dinner for them will be held in Wilmington.

ONTARIO ACCIDENT LAW IS PRAISED

A DRIVE to improve workmen's compensation legislation in a number of American States is one of the results expected from a seminar held May 29 through June 1 in Toronto, Canada, on the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act.

Twenty CIO leaders and experts on workmen's compensation laws from eight States and the District of Columbia attended the four-day sessions as guests of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board and the Provincial Government.

Organized by Ted F. Silvey, national CIO Reconversion Officer, and Marshall Dawson, U. S. Dept. of Labor Workmen's Compensation expert, the seminar was outstanding, due both to the hospitality of Board Chairman William Morrison and Vice Chairman Dr. D. J. Galbraith, and to the intensive and critical study of the 31-year-old Ontario Act.

The Ontario statute is considered to be the best in North America to fulfill the objectives of workmen's compensation legislation.

The success of the Ontario Act and its administration is due to a group of inter-related features:

1. It is a non-profit, exclusive fund, eliminating insurance companies.

2. There is no court appeal, with the consequent legalistic refusal of benefits.

3. The Board operates simply and promptly with practical freedom from business and political control.

4. Security of job tenure of the administrative personnel provides expert and sympathetic service to injured workmen.

Broad compulsory coverage of most employes in the province makes possible low premium rates for the individual employer; at the same time, more generous benefits are paid to workers. The administration does not have to waste its resources in the terrifically expensive hearings and court procedures which are always present when an insurance company or an employer tries to increase profits by depriving an injured worker of his medical and other expenses and his benefits.

A workman is entitled to two-thirds of his earnings based on a maximum of $2500 a year, with a minimum of $12.50 a week, or benefits equivalent to full earnings when such earnings are less than $12.50 a week. There is no limitation as to the number of weeks for which compensation is paid so long as the disability lasts, whether partial or total, and no maximum amount. Widows receive $45 a month up to death or remarriage, plus $10 a month for each child under 16 years.

The Ontario Board cuts red tape. Ninety per cent of its cases are settled by correspondence. By the eighth day after disablement due to industrial injury or disease, the workman, his doctor and his employer each send in a report to the Board. The first weekly check is usually on its way to the workman two days after these reports are received.

Less than 10 per cent of all cases require further investigation. Hearings at the Board's offices occur in perhaps less than 1% of all the claims. Chairman Morrison says, "We seek average speedy justice!"

As to medical care, the Board believes that the best is the most economical in the long run. It has its own staff of investigators and a permanent staff of 10 doctors who examine claimants and make periodic visits to different parts of the Province for the examination of workmen and the check-up of claims. Any difficult or complex case is referred quickly for treatment to the most outstanding medical specialist available.

A Physio and Occupational Therapy Clinic operates for the rehabilitation of patients, in charge of a medical director and trained staff which treats some 200 patients daily.

All X-rays taken in compensation cases throughout the Province are forwarded to Toronto and examined by a specialist so that where any surgical treatment is indicated it may be provided in the initial stages of the disability.

Medical aid is paid as long as it is necessary and without any weekly or maximum limit. For amputees, artificial arms and legs are provided, repaired and replaced without cost for life.

The Board is in complete control of its insurance fund. Even though there is no appeal to the courts, a claimant may reopen his case with the Board itself at any time. The Board is bound neither by legal precedent nor by its own decisions, but tries without formality to act according to the merits of each case.

Freedom from litigation saves the injured workman money and prevents delay in receiving compensation. Freedom from political control means that an employe of the Board is safe in his job as long as he does good work.

Finally, since its inception in 1915, the Act has been regularly and systematically improved. Amendments are invariably the results of recommendations by the Board, arrived at in consultation with all interested parties, including representatives of organized labor.

Publicity Asset

CIO MEMBERS PACK BIGGEST INFLUENCE

CIO's biggest public relations assets are its six million members and the impact they make on their communities, through personal contacts, community activities and the standing they and their unions achieve, Len DeCaux, CIO publicity chief, told the Natl. Assn. of Public Relations Counsel. The organization met this week in N. Y. City.

"Lies and slanders against the CIO fall of their own weight among people who know CIO members as neighbors, friends and fellow-citizens, and who have had first-hand experience with CIO union activities and the benefits they bring to each community," DeCaux said.

The meeting brought together more than 100 public relations representatives of major industries and corporations, impressed with the effectiveness of CIO public relations and anxious to learn how labor "tells its story."

DeCaux emphasized the special obstacles confronting labor, due to big-business control of press, radio, movies and other machinery for "manufacturing public opinion," and due to limited funds preventing competition with employers in expensive advertising campaigns.

"On the other hand," he said," "we have decided advantages in a large and enthusiastic membership and in a popular program designed to serve the best interests of all the common people."

CIO's public relations program, therefore, DeCaux declared, not only employs modern and professional techniques of press relations, radio, direct mailing, etc., within its limited budget, but also takes full advantage of media, like the labor press, pamphleteering and organizational cooperation with farm, church, Negro, veterans, professional and other groups, in which large membership and a popular program gives labor the edge.

"Another of our public relations advantages," DeCaux said, "is that, unlike most of our opposition, the CIO has no secrets from the public. We operate in a goldfish bowl, eager at all times to publicize all phases of CIO activities and purposes."

Noting CIO successes in winning veterans' sympathies, community support and generally better public relations than labor has ever achieved in the past, the business press has recently devoted much attention to CIO's public relations program, with high praise for its professional competence.

$154 AN HOUR PAID 3 TOP GM OFFICIALS!

THREE top General Motors executives, C. E. Wilson, president, and Ormond E. Hunt and Albert Bradley, executive vice-presidents, bagged a total income of $926,718 for the calendar year of 1944, according to a Treasury report issued last week listing blue-ribbon incomes.

The three GM officials averaged $154 per hour on a 40-hour-a-week basis.

General Motors also set the pace for corporate salaries by paying more than $200,000 each to ten of its executives and placing a total of 40 among the 593 who drew over $75,000.

(Ed. Note: After months of bickering and a long strike GM finally awarded its employes an 18½c an hour wage increase.)

Highest individual money honors for the year went to film director ("Going My Way") Leo McCarey, with $1,113,035. Trotting in second place for individual honors was Charles H. Strub, vice-president of the Los Angeles Turf Club with $466,537. Screen actress Carmen Miranda, with $201,458, was the highest paid woman.

Unreported as yet was L. B. Mayer, film executive, who has lead the $$$$ parade for the past seven years. In 1943 his pin-money added up to $908,069.

William Randolph Hearst and Sewell Avery drew $100,000 and $100,850, respectively.

OK GIBSON AS LABOR ASSISTANT

Appointment of John W. Gibson, former president of the Michigan CIO Council, as an Assistant Secretary of Labor has been confirmed by the Senate. Gibson, who had been serving as an aide to Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach, was one of three men named by the President as assistant secretaries.

Also confirmed as assistants were David Morse, former general counsel of the Labor Board, who is slated to handle international labor affairs for the department, and Philip Hannah, former official of the Ohio AFL.

Gibson is the first CIO official to fill the number two spot in the Labor Department.

Texas Civil Rights Group

Dedicated to "arousing and uniting" the people of Texas to protect the rights of labor and minority groups, a Texas Civil Rights Congress, affiliated with the newly formed national Civil Rights Congress, was born in Houston June 9 at a meeting of 141 delegates from 21 Texas cities.

The Lansing, Mich., CIO Council has bought a 30-acre site for a central CIO hall with facilities for union business, recreation and education. Construction must await access to building materials.

CMU TO BUILD STRIKE FUND OF $2 MILLION

FRESH from winning unprecedented gains for all American maritime workers and averting a nation wide shipping strike, the Committee for Maritime Duty this week initiated conferences in preparation for new contract negotiations with the shipping operators beginning Sept. 30.

Louis Goldblatt, secretary of the CMU, announced that the organization's Executive Committee voted unanimously to build a $1,000,000 strike fund. The seven component unions comprising 200,000 members will raise $5 per member for this fund. An additional $1,000,000 will also be raised.

To solidify and expand the strength it already has demonstrated, the CMU has decided to call joint conferences with the maritime unions of other nations. The World Federation of Trade Unions will be approached on this matter and conferences arranged as soon as possible for both Atlantic and Pacific areas.

In the just concluded negotiations, the participation of CIO Pres. Philip Murray in the closing days was a large factor in averting a strike and securing a settlement of the dispute, the CMU stated.

Most of the following concessions were listed in last week's CIO NEWS as tentatively approved at deadline time:

1. For seamen: 40-hour week in all ports; $17.50 monthly increase (retroactive to April 1); all work performed on Sunday at sea to be paid at the overtime rate; overtime rate $1 an hour. Other collateral issues to be negotiated in the next 30 days, and if no agreement is reached, these issues will be submitted to arbitration.

2. For radio operators: a wage increase of $17.50 and arbitration of an additional amount to preserve historic differentials; overtime rate for all work performed at sea on Sunday (48-hour week); arbitration of new overtime rate and additional radio operator on all cargo ships.

3. For engineers: provision for overtime for Sunday at sea, and a 40-hour week in port.

4. For longshoremen: increase of 22c an hour as recommended by fact finding board, retroactive to October 1, 1945.

To Strike Great Lakes

Refusal of seven Great Lakes ships operating firms to discuss union demands for a 40-hour week and wage adjustments has led to the filing of 30-day strike notices by the CIO Natl. Maritime Union. In filing the strike notices with the Labor Dept., the NMU said the shipowners had either refused to discuss the issues or had ignored requests for negotiations.

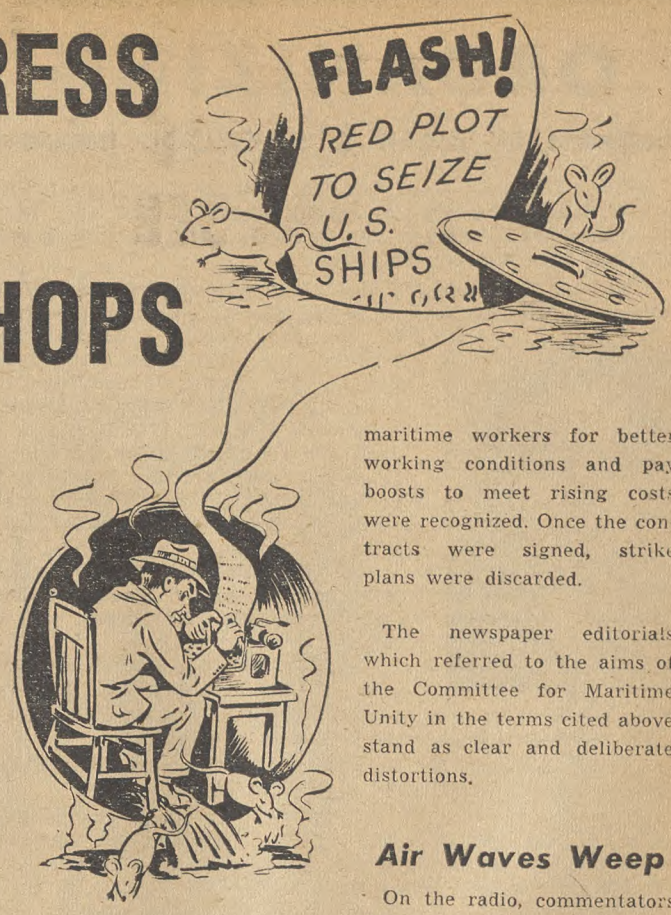
HAIL CIO NEWS TIMBER STORY

A two-page picture in The CIO NEWS, "Timber—Snafu for Housing," drew editorial praise this week in the CIO International Woodworker.

The piece was published May 27, and was written by Polly Gladish and Fred d'Avila.

"The article," said a Woodworker editorial, "offers a brief but comprehensive presentation of the IWA-CIO position in the present lumber situation and we congratulate the authors and The CIO NEWS for a job well done."

THE PRESS VS. PORK CHOPS



By MARTY SOLOW

OK. It's all over now. But there's still some shouting to be done. It's about the press and the radio and the job some sections of both did during the recent negotiations between the maritime unions, the shipowners and the government.

A section of America's press demonstrated once more in its editorial handling of the wage disputes between the Committee for Maritime Unity and the shipowners' associations that it could not be trusted to set down issues clearly and impartially.

Hearst Shrieks

From coast to coast the Hearst press labeled the requests of the maritime unions for a 40-hour week and a living wage "a direct conspiracy to advance communistic causes rather than to force economic benefits."

On the West Coast, the Hearst Los Angeles Examiner shrieked that the CIO itself was asking "Red Fascist Russia to conduct economic warfare against the U. S." The relationship between this and the seamen's wage demands was not clarified.

Hearst's East Coast N. Y. Daily Mirror cried out that the co-chairmen of the Committee for Maritime Unity, Harry Bridges and Joseph Curran, did not want "TO BARGAIN . . . TO REASON . . . TO IMPROVE THE LOT OF THE MEN THEY CLAIM TO REPRESENT . . . THEY JUST WANT TO STRIKE." The Mirror insisted that the demands of the CMU were "designed to be rejected, to foment a strike, to spread strife and confusion."

Ignores Facts

Ignored by the Mirror was the fact that the NMU had met with operators 36 times over a period of six months, yet had received no offer on wages or reduced hours. At the 37th meeting they were offered an increase of 5c an hour.

Ignored by the Mirror was Harry Bridges' statement that the CMU had been "receding from its original demands and was trying to reach a compromise but . . . the attitude of the shipowners had not changed a bit.

Evidently the recently concluded settlement in the maritime industry is to be interpreted as a fantastic plot to undo the editorial integrity of the Hearst papers.

Newspapers in the Scripps-Howard chain labeled the CMU requests "political" without explaining what kind of "politics" are involved when men are in need of a living wage.

The Philadelphia Inquirer combined hysteria with inaccuracy when it beat its editorial breast and screamed that the proposed strike was "a communist plot . . . a rare opportunity to tie American commerce into knots and at the same time starve the people of Europe by preventing the shipping of food from this country."

CMU Heads Pledge

This same theme was repeated in newspapers throughout the country despite the repeated pledge of CMU leaders that "relief ships with food for hungry peoples abroad will be loaded and sailed."

Newspapers quoted approvingly in their editorials a statement by Joseph Ryan, life-time president of the AFL Intl. Longshoremen's Assn., to the effect that the threatened strike was designed to "deliver our shipping industry to Russia." The mechanics of this transaction-to-be were never clearly explained.

This so-called "political strike" to "deliver our shipping industry to Russia" did not materialize when the legitimate economic claims of the maritime workers for better working conditions and pay boosts to meet rising costs were recognized. Once the contracts were signed, strike plans were discarded.

The newspaper editorials which referred to the aims of the Committee for Maritime Unity in the terms cited above stand as clear and deliberate distortions.

Air Waves Weep

On the radio, commentators Fulton Lewis, Jr. and H. V. Kaltenborn wept over the inability of ship-operators to pay a decent wage. Moaned Lewis, "The operators simply could not meet the demands and still keep the American merchant marine in operation." Wailed Kaltenborn, "The government will put our merchant marine out of business if it gives the unions what they ask."

Overlooked by Lewis and Kaltenborn, as well as other commentators who present a strictly big-business slant in their commentating, was the statement of Sen. George Aiken (R. Vt.) who referred to shipping profits during the war as the "greatest plundering of a nation" the world has ever seen.

In addition, Messers. Kaltenborn, Lewis & Co. overlooked the fact that American operators are assured by the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 that government subsidies will pay the difference between the cost of building and operating American and foreign ships in most cases.

The NMU's paper, The Pilot, claims that American operators profiteered during the war to the tune of $21 billion dollars. They could well afford to grant the seamen better conditions than 56-63 hour workweek and more than an average of 60 cents per hour pay.

Experts High & Dry

Kaltenborn, Lowell Thomas, Upton Close, etc., hinted, not too discreetly, that the proposed strike had "international" overtones. They spoke of its "political" aspect in terms that hinted of "subversion."

Settlement of the dispute has left these "experts" as high and dry as the editorial pundits who read dire plots into the simple demands of men for better working conditions and living wages.

Officers of the United Paperworkers of which the writer is chairman will meet in Cleveland June 26. On June 27 and 28 the Paperworkers will hold a staff conference.

SOUTH'S HITLERS DOOMED--CIO

"We fought a war to lick dictators. We are not going to put up with industrial dictators in Georgia nor in all of the South," Van A. Bittner, director of CIO's southern organizing campaign, told 300 delegates to a Georgia conference of the CIO Textile Workers at Atlanta last week-end.

Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers recounted how the CIO in 10 years has raised the average wage in the textile industry in the South from 36 to 78c an hour.

"We can learn something from the employers, their theory of 'divide and conquer.' We go back North and get a raise and then come back here and demand the same thing. We will work between the two to get a just raise for everyone in the industry," he said.

The conference approved resolutions criticizing the Ku Klux Klan, censuring President Truman for proposing drafting strikers and members of Congress who have voted to kill price control.

John G. Ramsey, who has set up about 75 Religious and Labor Fellowship Foundations throughout the country, has been assigned to the CIO's southern organizing committee. Ramsey is vice chairman of the Industrial Division of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, a director of the Religion and Labor Foundation, and was formerly on the staff of the CIO Steelworkers.

A tangible result of the benefits of organization is the agreement recently signed with Tubize Rayon Corp., Rome, Ga., with the Textile Workers, adding approximately $750,000 annually to the payroll. In addition, workers will receive $90,000 in back pay.

The Natl. Labor Relations Board is expected to announce soon whether results of an election held June 7 at three clothing plants at Andalusia, Ala., will be consolidated or tabulated individually. The CIO Clothing Workers have been on strike four months at the shops owned by John G. Sherf, former Andalusia mayor.

BREWERY WORKERS VOTE FOR CIO AFFILIATION

Ralph Helstein (l.), new president of the CIO Packinghouse Workers, is congratulated by Lewis J. Clark (r.), his predecessor, who was elected secretary-treasurer and by Vice-President Philip Weightman. Other vice-presidents are Frank Ellis and Fred W. Dowling.

THE United Brewery Workers, 85,000 strong, have voted in a referendum to affiliate with the CIO, it was announced at the union's headquarters in Cincinnati as the CIO NEWS was going to press. The vote was 22,933 for affiliation to 19,241 against.

One of the oldest unions in the United States, the Brewery Workers were founded 60 years ago, and were affiliated with the AFL until a half-dozen years ago.

They withdrew from the AFL following the failure of the AFL executive council to settle jurisdictional disputes between them and other affiliates.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization and vice-president, said he heartily welcomed the Brewery Workers and congratulate them "on joining the growing CIO family." A charter will be issued to the Brewery Workers as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed, Haywood said.

The CIO organizational director, his assistant, Delmond Garst, and various regional CIO directors have been conferring during several months with Brewery Workers officials with a view to arranging CIO affiliation.

The union's executive board last March ordered the referendum.

The Brewery Workers' top officials are Gen. Sec.-Treas. William Kromelbein, Gen. Cor. Sec. Karl F. Feller and Gen. Rec. Sec. Edward Hughlett. Pres. Joseph Obergfell died recently.

ANNUAL WAGE TO BE SOUGHT

THE CIO Packinghouse Workers' executive committee will meet the week of June 23 to determine the best way to obtain a minimum wage $1 an hour and other demands.

The union also will seek the guaranteed annual wage, which has worked so successfully under a UPWA contract with the Hormel Co. plant, Austin, Minn. Major companies under contract with the UPWA will be notified July 11 that the agreements will be opened.

UPWA's new president, Ralph Helstein, former general counsel, who helped negotiate the first contract signed with Hormel, will preside at the board meeting. Identified with the growth of the CIO, particularly in Minnesota and the Northwest, Helstein served as adviser for several CIO unions, including the Auto Workers, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and the CIO Workers.

Only 37 years old, UPWA's new head was employed by the Natl. Recovery Administration upon his graduation from the Univ. of Minnesota Law School in 1934, and later returned from Washington to the Twin Cities where he devoted most of his time to serving as counsel for various labor unions, including the Packinghouse Workers.

He became general counsel for the Minnesota CIO Council in 1939, retaining that position until 1941, when he was named UPWA's general counsel.

GUILD TO VOTE IN PAY ISSUE

THE paid-presidency issue which has been sizzling for several months in the CIO Newspaper Guild proved a dud this week when the Guild's 13th annual convention at Scranton, Pa., voted overwhelmingly for a compromise.

Some newspaper publishers were hoping that at last that there was question that would "wreck" the Guild. They were disappointed, however, when the delegates voted that the membership should decide not later than six months before the 1947 convention whether the duties of the paid executive vice-president should be divided between a paid president and a paid secretary-treasurer.

The convention devoted its energies to developing collective bargaining and organizing programs, after disposing of the presidency issue.

Guild Pres. Milton Murray castigated President Truman for his proposal to draft strikers and declared that "one of our prime objectives" should be "to see that in the locals of the ANG there is developing a feeling that one of the battlegrounds of labor is the ballot box."

CIO TOPS AFL IN 1945

APPROXIMATELY 135,000 more workers voted for the CIO than for the AFL in Natl. Labor Relations Board elections in 1945, the board said this week in its annual report.

Number of workers casting their ballots for CIO unions was 350,295 with the CIO winning 1,898 of the 2,673 elections in which they participated, or 70%.

The AFL entered 2,373 elections, won 1,620 of them, or 48.2%, and received a total of 215,453 votes. All these figures include card checks as well as elections.

In 3,883 elections and card checks, or 78.9% of the total, only one union sought certification.

CIO DRIVE HOT NEWS

By ALLAN L. SWIM

THE CIO's Southern organizing campaign is still Page 1 news in many of Dixie's newspapers although the drive has been under way more than six weeks.

Newspaper and magazine writers and photographers have been moving into and out of Atlanta in a steady stream since Committee headquarters were opened.

One of the country's most observing reporters said of the campaign:

"The American Federation of Labor has a three-point program for the South. Its program is designed to discredit the CIO, appeal to the employers and, lastly, to organize the workers.

"The CIO's program is designed to appeal to the workers and pay little attention to other groups. I have a hunch that the CIO's drive will be more popular with potential union members."

Van A. Bittner, campaign director, has instructed state directors and organizers of the CIO Organizing Committee to devote full time to signing up new members.

"The principal aim of the Committee is to make it possible for Southern workers to secure higher pay, better working conditions and job security through collective bargaining," Bittner said.

1 This is the story of an AFL mastermind and how he tried—and failed—to bust up a CIO Food & Tobacco Workers rally at the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., plant of the American Tobacco Co. His name is John Taylor, and he works for the AFL Tobacco Workers Union, which in turn, you know, works for the boss. Taylor (center) and an assistant (right) try to scare off FTA Organizer Bill Haber. Haber doesn't scare.

THE FRUSTRATION OF IT ALL!

2 The assistant mastermind tries out his stuff on two of the Wilkes-Barre girls, who don't seem to go for it. Taylor looks on (right) to see how his helper is making out. He seems to be a little discouraged about it all.

AVC DECLARES FAITH IN UNIONS

THE American Veterans Committee, claiming 60,000 World War II veterans in 526 chapters, approved a progressive and pro-labor platform at its first constitutional convention last weekend at Des Moines, Iowa.

Scorning semi-military titles for its officers in keeping with its slogan of "Citizens First and Veterans Second," the convention elected as national chairman Charles G. Bolte, who lost his leg in the battle of El Alamein.

Bolte served as national chairman during the two-year formative period of the AVC, prior to the convention. Gilbert Harrison, generally credited with starting the AVC, was elected vice-chairman.

Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee was elected to the 16-man national planning committee. Bernstein, who before the war was on the staff of the CIO Steelworkers, served two years with the Army Air Corps in the Pacific.

He was elected as an individual and not as a CIO representative. He also belongs to other veterans organizations. Policy of the CIO veterans committee is to cooperate with all bonafide veterans organizations and to let CIO members decide for themselves which group they should join.

The platform adopted by the convention said:

"We support the right of all organized labor to unionize any or all workers anywhere in these United States."

Other planks of the platform called for:

Creation of a league of veterans of all the United Nations, Big Three unity, UN control of atomic energy, cessation of atom bomb manufacture and destruction of existing bombs, a world armed force to keep peace.

Rationing to aid potential famine victims through the world, break of relations with Franco Spain and recognition of the Spanish government in exile, expulsion of Argentina from UNO.

Immediate entry into Palestine of 100,000 Jews, independence of Puerto Rico, if the people want it.

MEYER BERNSTEIN

Of the CIO Veterans Committee Elected to the AVC Planning Committee

A 75-cent minimum wage law and a guaranteed annual wage; opposition to compulsory arbitration and to the use of armed forces in labor disputes and to any procedures crippling the laws protecting labor against injunctions; retention of the present right to strike.

Recognition by labor leadership of its responsibility to the public.

Opposition to Jim Crow laws, anti-Nisei restrictions and other forms of racial discrimination.

Strong price and rent controls.

Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers received an ovation after his speech in which he declared that the fight for price control and for other important legislation was being lost "because of an unholy alliance between monopoly, big business and political reaction."

Blaming strikes on "the failure to correct the things out of which strikes grow," the UAW leader said the people should have "sufficient purchasing power to put back the abundance we can make in the factory and on the farm."

Ted F. Silvey, CIO reconversion officer, who attended the convention as an observer, stressed the importance of political action on the local level.

Commerce Sec. Wallace asserted that there would be sufficient homes if the people insist that their government issue the proper priorities to build homes.

Wallace also called for support for United Nations organization, commended the AVC for its slogan of "Citizens First and Veterans Second," advocated more river authorities like TVA and urged the veterans to take an increasing interest in politics.

Frederick Borden, an official of the National Citizens Political Action Committee, who withdrew as a candidate for vice-president, also was elected a planning committee member.

AWARD UPHELD

The Federal District Court for Southern New York this week issued a Natl. Labor Relations Board decision sustaining award of over a million dollars in back pay to 10,000 industrial insurance agents employed by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The court completely overruled the contention of Metropolitan that payment of retroactive pay would violate a New York State Insurance law and sustained the case put forward by the CIO Office and Professional Workers, which holds agreements covering Metropolitan agents in Greater New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan.

PM DISMISSALS

The Newspaper Guild of N. Y. this week lost its case against the dismissal of Pres. Milton Murray of the CIO Newspaper Guild and two other members of the Washington staff of the newspaper PM.

The dismissals were upheld by an arbitrator as made in good faith for economy reasons. He admitted, however, that great hardship had been imposed on the three staff members, "concededly competent," especially Murray who had moved his family from Detroit, and had bought a house in the Washington area.

Following the arbitrator's decision, five members of PM's Washington staff resigned.

FTA Threat Succeeds:

CANNERY WORKERS WIN RAISE

THE day after the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers filed notice with Federal officials that they wanted to take a strike vote at Camden, N. J., and Chicago plants of the Campbell's Soup Co., the firm agreed to live up to a contract giving a 15c an hour increase. The firm was using failure of the Wage Stabilization Board to act on the increase as a pretext for stalling.

Ten cents an hour increase is retroactive to March 24, and 5c and hour to Sept. 27, last year. With a 3c-an-hour increase won six months ago, the Campbell employes are receiving an average of $1.17 an hour, making them the highest paid cannery workers in the world, FTA officials pointed out.

On the West Coast, FTA representatives greeted with satisfaction the Natl. Labor Relations Board order to hold an election among the 65,000 north California cannery workers at the peak of employment this summer, which will probably be toward the end of August.

Also on the ballot will be the California State Council of Cannery Workers, AFL, the name chosen by the Teamster-affiliated group with whom cannery managements have been dealing exclusively since March 30 in defiance of an NLRB order.

A previous NLRB election held last October gave FTA the majority of counted votes and presumably of all votes cast. However, instead of certifying the FTA as a collective bargaining agent, the board set aside that election and ordered another one.

CIO RAIL UNION WINS RULE CHANGES

Two thousand workers in the Marine departments of six New York railroads this week won upward adjustments in overtime and holiday pay aside from the general 18½c hourly wage increase awarded the nation's railroad workers, Francis M. McMahon, eastern district director of the CIO United Railroad Workers announced.

McMahon said his was the only railroad union in the country to win rule changes and the higher wages. Among the provisions of the contract, which McMahon said was negotiated without a strike threat, are a guaranteed 6-day week and 8-hour day, seven paid holidays a year, time and one-half after eight hours, double and one-quarter time after eight hours on the seventh day or on holidays, a new grievance procedure, overtime compensation for extra men and payment by the companies to men learning how to operate new equipment. The union won 14 rule changes.

The agreement also provides for a regional adjustment board to handle disputes arising under the contract.

LABOR'S WORLD

A THREE-MAN delegation from the CIO Textile Workers Union will go to Copenhagen, Denmark, at the end of July for the organization meeting of the Intl. Textile Dept. of the World Federation of Trade Unions.

The meeting will adopt a constitution, elect officers and handle other matters incidental to establishing the department as a full-time functioning organization. TWUA delegates will be Sec.-Treas. William Pollack, Vice-Pres. Herbert Payne and Research Director Solomon Barkin, who will be a candidate for secretary of the new organization.

Just prior to the WFTU textile meeting, the Intl. Federation of Textile Workers, a section of the old Intl. Federation of Textile Workers,, will meet in Copenhagen and order its own dissolution in order that member unions may affiliate with the WFTU.

Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin American Federation of Labor, will place before the WFTU Executive Meeting at Moscow a proposal that world labor refuse to handle cargo to and from Franco Spain.

Toledano described the UN Security Council's refusal to break relations with Franco as a tragic reminder of the appeasement of Hitler before he unleashed World War II.

June 27 is the deadline for the biggest strike in the history of India unless the British-controlled government agrees to negotiate on the demands of 800,000 workers on the state-owned rail system.

Indian railway workers now consider themselves lucky to get $9 a month for a 54-hour workweek. The workers are demanding that the minimum be lifted to $18 a month, and are asking for a raise in the present $4-a-month war allowance which was introduced to combat the increased cost of living.

Judges on China's Supreme Court haven't formed a union, but they have gone out on strike, according to an Allied Labor News report. The walkout was based on demands for higher pay. Current salaries have had their value cut by inflation to the point that they no longer cover such necessities as food and clothes."

While the judges are pounding the bricks, neither their strike nor any other in China can be declared unconstitutional.

Great Britain and the U. S. must share the guilt of bringing fascism back to Greece, it was charged by William Shirer, noted news commentator at N. Y. testimonial dinner to two EAM leaders. The affair, sponsored by the American Relief for Greek Democracy, launched a million dollar drive to bring aid to the orphans and families of Greek resistance fighters.

Telegrams of support were received from Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Clothing Workers, Vice-Pres, R. J. Thomas of the Auto Workers, and numerous other union officials.

Shirer, whose radio reports of the rise of Hitler fascism brought him world fame, charged that Anglo-American policy has produced "a Greece in which many of the very men who collaborated with the Italians and Germans are once again on top, while the patriots rot in jail or hide out in the mountains."

SONGS FOR THE PEOPLE

Story by Felix Landau ● Photos by Sid Grossman and Marion Hille

THERE'S nothing like a good love song. But when you're marching on a picketline, fighting for higher wages, it's union hymns like "Roll the Union On" and "Solidarity Forever" that make you feel your power and keep you going.

A few weeks ago, three singers flew to Pittsburgh to sing for 8,000 UE strikers and to make up songs like "Westinghouse, West, I know you of old, You robbed my poor pockets of silver and gold . . ." and "If I wait for a square deal from old Mr. Price, I would live in the dumps with the bugs and the lice . . ." (Gwilym A. Price is Westinghouse president).

Other groups and individual singers entertained workers at rallies and on picketlines in New York, Schenectady and other cities.

These singers were members of People's Songs, Inc., a non-profit outfit organized a few months ago to turn out and spread around the country songs that say a little more than "croon-moon-June."

Object of People's Songs, 130 West 42nd St., N.Y.C., is to act as a clearing-house for labor tunes. It's the place to send ditties and it's the place to get numbers for performance or group-singing in your local. Monthly bulletins of new and old songs are issued to members.

Sparkplugs of People's Songs are two members of the original Almanac Singers, Lee Hays and Peter Seeger, who was with the Army on Saipan. Before the war, the Almanac Singers travelled around the country, writing and singing songs for workers.

People's Songs aims to have the whole country in harmony—singing labor's songs.

SWING OUT WITH UNION CALLS

For your next square dance, People's Songs recommends these calls*:

Circle to the left when you hear the caller
A union gal is bound to foller

Swing your shoulders, slide your feet
The Union means more bread and meat

Wages up and prices down
Makes the world go round and round

Couple up four and dance some more

Birdie in the cage and three around
The organizer's come to town

Birdie fly out, crow fly in Sign up a member, lead him in

Birdie fly high, the crow fly low
Sign him up and don't let him go

Break the ring and add two more
Six in the union are stronger than four

Red, white, yellow and brown
The United Nations go to town

Grab your partner, promenade
Everyone here is union made

Now everybody swing, demonstrate Swing again, agitate.

VET AMPUTEES TO ATTEND NCPAC SCHOOL

FIVE Purple Heart Winners, members of the War Amputees Car Committee, a group of veterans seeking especially built cars for amputees, have enrolled as scholarship students in the NCPAC's school for Political Action Technique. The four-day school opens in Washington on June 26 at the Hotel Willard.

Sgt. Frank Monico, chairman of the committee, who lost a leg in action while serving with the infantry in Europe, stated that a bill sponsored by his committee which would provide special equipment for amputees has been held up by the House Veterans' Affairs Committee for some time. As a result of this delay the veterans are particularly interested in the School's course on "Techniques for Dealing with Congress."

NCPAC has also announced that applications from over 30 states have poured in from people to pick up the know-how of political action.

Concluding event on the school's program will be a dinner at the Willard on June 29 where Senator Pepper and a group of outstanding liberal Congressmen will hold a political gabfest with PAT students from all over the country.

The Senator will act as spokesman for the congressional group while students will tell why they have come to attend the school and will also outline the job which must be done in their particular districts if America is to vote liberal in November.

Courses at the school, 39 in all, will cover every phase of political campaign activity. More than 80 prominent professional and political experts will comprise the faculty.

RALLY YOUTH FOR POLITICAL ACTION

Dr. Frank Kingdon, NCPAC chairman, has announced the formation of a Young Citizens Political Action Committee to rally the youth of America behind "progressive" political candidates.

"It is our aim" declared Dr. Kingdon, "to create a center of coordinated progressive political action for young people—an organization encouraging and making more effective the participation of American young citizens in politics."

SCHOOL COURSE ON UNION PAPERS

WHAT Makes A Union Paper Lively?

How Do You Write A News Story?

How to Make Up a Shop Paper.

A one week's course on all of these, plus hiking, volleyball, picnics and sunlight too, will be given at the Highlander Folk School in Monteagle, Tennessee, starting July 28.

Carl Haessler, managing editor of Federated Press, will be the instructor, and for those interested there will also be a special workshop class in How To Make A Leaflet.

WELLESLEY SCENERY CHANGES

The tinkling laughter and shapely legs of co-eds at Wellesley College in Massachusetts, will temporarily be replaced this summer when the Wellesley School of Community Affairs gives its third annual course in the field of industrial relationships from August 5 to 17.

Members of the staff of the Industrial Relations Section of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and key leaders in labor organizations are teaming up in planning the course and supplying competent instructors.

Emphasizing the workshop approach, the two-week course will focus attention on actual steps involved in establishing and maintaining effective working relationships between labor and management.

CIO leaders who will participate in the sessions include Joseph N. Scanlon of the Steelworkers, James Bamford and Antonio England of the Textile Workers, and George T. Guernsey, CIO assistant director of education.

CIO Team on Top

At the top in the Western Division of the Birmingham Amateur Baseball Federation, with a record of nine wins and one loss, is the CIO-sponsored Jefferson County ball club.

The team has an excellent chance of winning the pennant in its division and the opportunity then of entering the National Tournament of amateur baseball teams.

LAUGHTER FOR THE MILLIONS

"LEFTWING Humor" is radically different. It is humor with meaning. It is humor which carries a hope for social progress. It is humor which is aimed at the passivity and stupidity of those who believe simply that "this is the best of all possible worlds."

Contemporary Publishers have selected from a world-wide range of leftwing cartoons and stories and published a booklet of 96 pages which will help ease somewhat the current "inflation blues." (But we're not recommending it as a substitute for a strong OPA.)

The book contains the famous cartoons and drawings of Art Young, D. R. Fitzpatrick, Bill Gropper, Eric Godal and many others. There are stories about "The Upper Claws," "The Press," "Politicians," "Radio and Advertising."

We're tempted to quote at length but space limitations forbid that, so here's a brief sample to whet your appetite:

"It's a wise editor who knows his own mind and an even wiser one who knows his owner's mind."

"The only wound time won't heal: a pay cut."

"When our bombers struck a war plant in a Danish town, Goebbels issued a communique saying that only a cow had been hit. The Danish Underground Press published it with the added comment, 'And the cow burned for four days.'"

Mother-in-Law Troubles?

Somehow when you are suddenly supposed to accept your family-in-law with their "strange" ways, you (and almost everybody else) find it hard to take, but those parents-in-law are your child's grandparents. They love your children devotedly and if you will let them, they will probably greatly enrich your children's lives. In times to come your children will value you and all older people less if they do not value their grandparents. Give them and your children a break!

WARNS IDLE YOUTH INCREASING

FEWER employment opportunities are open to young workers today than a year ago, and the whole youth employment situation bears watching for it has many dangerous potentialities, the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Labor Dept. pointed out this week.

A large part of the answer as to how both educational and work opportunities are to be kept open to youth, Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, bureau chief, said, lies in full employment, for not only would it open suitable jobs to young workers ready for work, but "relatively high family income would make it possible for many to remain in school who otherwise have to cut short their education and training in the hope of a job, poor as it might be."

"There is no evidence as yet that we have made any appreciable headway in regaining ground lost during the war when high school enrollment dropped by a million," said Miss Lenroot.

"Boys and girls who left school then for jobs have not returned to high school classes. We are now confronted with the possibility of idleness among the Nation's youth, with thousands in the 14- to 17-year-old group neither in school, where most of them should be, nor regularly employed."

The bureau cites the following trends in the youth employment situation.

Young veterans generally have the preference for the better jobs, that is, jobs that have a future.

The high school diploma is regaining its prewar value as a job qualification. Employers once more can find high school graduates for many jobs.

Many employers of their own accord are raising age requirements. Personnel managers who took on 16- and 17-year-olds during the war now tend to prefer those 18 years old and over. They are "steadier." The trend is particularly noticeable as it affects jobs in manufacturing industries.

Part-time employment opportunities for in-school youth are shrinking. (Much of the decline in employment that has taken place so far, it is believed, is in this kind of work.) Employers now want full-time workers and can get them. Young people who are dependent upon vacation and part-time employment to meet part of their school expenses are often hard pressed, particularly so when the older workers in the family are being laid off or are temporarily unemployed in the switch-over.

One group of young job-seekers, the 17-year-old boys, have been having a particularly hard time of it, for many employers were unwilling to take them on a job that required any training since the likelihood was that they would be drafted before the training paid off.

These trends, the bureau states, are not as yet being offset by any special measures aimed at getting these young workers back in school or intelligently directed toward vocational opportunities. "On the contrary," says Miss Lenroot, "there is little awareness as yet of the changed situation or of its potentialities."

The Children's Bureau is urging schools, labor unions, industrial groups, parent-teacher associations, and all others interested in the welfare of the Nation's youth to take a look at this youth-employment situation before it builds up into major proportions with no alternative opportunities provided for young people.

VICTORY AIDS SEAMEN'S FAMILIES

By GERALDINE SHANDROS

Washington Representative, CIO American Communications Assn.

TO THE families of American merchant seamen, the victory of the maritime unions in winning uprecedented gains means some alleviation of the pressure upon the family income caused by the skyrocketing cost of living. Seamen's dependents will find it easier to purchase the necessities of life with the addition of about $45 to their monthly incomes.

Like most Americans, however, they realize that real income is dependent upon whether or not we have effective price control. If OPA is crippled, their purchasing power, even with the recently won wage increases, will be below that necessary to maintain a decent standard of living.

To those maligners of labor who shrieked "political strike" when the maritime workers were struggling to win their just demands the seamen and their families reply by pointing to the politics being played in the Capitol of the United States which is aimed directly at their pay envelopes.

Thus, while the maritime workers strive to improve their economic status, politicians seek to lower the real wage level of those workers.

The wives and children of merchant seamen rejoice in the wage increases recently won, but they are well aware of the necessity for preserving those wage increases through vigorous control of prices. They are determined to fight against disastrous inflation, just as they were determined to join the picket lines, do strike duty, and help in every way possible to win improved living conditions.

Loss of earnings, even for a temporary period, is a serious problem to low-income families, but the Women's Auxiliaries of the maritime unions demonstrated the preparedness of seamen's womenfolk throughout the nation to wholeheartedly support their men in strike action, if that became necessary to secure higher wages.

Establishment of a 48 hour-week norm at sea is another phase of the victory most heartily welcomed by the maritime workers and their families. For the first time in the history of the American merchant marine, seamen have begun to approach a decent work week.

Recognizing the importance of this first step, merchant seamen nevertheless look upon it as only the beginning. Their ultimate objective is to achieve parity with all other American workers and some day enjoy the benefits of the standard 40-hour work week.

The families of merchant seamen cannot enjoy the companionship of the husband or father for more than a fraction of each year because his work takes him away from home, not only for the normal 8 hours each day, but for many months at a time.

A goal, longingly looked forward to by the seamen and their families, is the establishment of wage rates aboard American vessels high enough to permit an annual income sufficient to enable the seamen to spend more time ashore with his wife and children.

Maritime workers have shown that they understand the value of union organization and they have had shown to them in the recent great victory of their unions the benefits to be gained by the close cooperation and unity of all maritime workers.

Their families are right with them in their efforts to strengthen and expand their unions and their unity so that they can go on to win the standard of living which they deserve.

Flicker Front

OF LIFE AND HOLLYWOOD

MOVIE moguls and magnates met recently over a dinner of chicken with-a-French-name and proceeded to make with lots of talk about the movies being an accurate picture of American life. For an hour or two they patted themselves on the back and then turned to counting the millions piling up in dividends.

In the midst of the country's greatest economic crisis with thousands on strike and workingmen being mulcted at every turn the Hollywood Barons prated their love for democracy and international goodwill. And with Louis B. Mayer knocking down his mere $17,462 a week at MGM, talk doesn't come so cheap.

As the golden phrases floated through the air, one might think Hollywood would get serious and turn out a picture or two that would show the world and America how the American people live, the virtues of our land and its faults. Something solid and thoughful, something a man could sink his teeth in and leave the theatre feeling proud in the democratic struggles of his country, and say to himself and his family, "that's America for me."

The fluffy leg shows, the sugary musicals and the cops-and-robbers chases have their legitimate place in the movie world to satisfy the whims of those who like them. But to boast to the world, that they represent America—Gary, Pittsburgh, New York, Beaumont, Mobile, San Francisco—is just as looney as some of the plots showing on the local screens. Someday I would like to see just plain Joe in his work clothes and with a 98c lunch pail step out of one of the "colossal, stupendous, terrific" $3,000,000 extravaganzas and say, "Hey bud, I work for a living—the CIO's my union."

Indicative of the situation is a recent survey of the hundred or so pictures released since the first of the year. Nearly 40 per cent were who-dunits, fast and furious with shooting and double-talk. Fifteen per cent were westerns with the same formula except that the villains wore ten gallon hats instead of Hombergs. Thirty per cent were musicals and comedies and the remaining 15 per cent were split up among dramas, costume shows and children's flickers. A European worker, seeing these "representative of America" pictures for the first time in six years, is in for a rude shock.

He may be pleasantly entertained as I was by pictures like "Two Sisters from Boston," but that's all, brother. Why doesn't Hollywood come clean and just announce that it is merely giving us sugar for the bread and butter that's being taken away?

The "Two Sisters" heads the month's offerings with an engaging satire on the 1900's. Kathryn Grayson and June Allyson lend a lilt to an involved plot with their superb caricatures of the manners and morals of staid Bostonians. Jimmy Durante, ably abetted by Ben Blue, pokes his schnozzola humor through the entire picture to provide the comic background.

A picture with Ginger Rogers, Basil Rathbone and Adolph Menjou just couldn't be bad—and try as it may, "Heartbeat" doesn't quite make it. It attempts to be light and charming in the French manner, but trips up too often on its own inhibitions. Ginger Rogers plays the role of a fugitive from a French reformatory, who continues her studies at an "art" school run by Rathbone—the entire course being devoted to the art of picking pockets.

On her first assignment, the nimble fingers of curvacious Ginger lead her into romance with a diplomat and intrigue with an Ambassador. The career of crime gives way to romance—and the end of an impudent and inviting plot. Jean Pierre Aumont brings charm and grace to his part as the diplomat and will cause a few heartbeats among the females.

Adapted from Philip Barry's play, "The Animal Kingdom," "One More Tomorrow" also joined the flicker parade of light comedies. The resemblance to the original work stops at the screen credit and the picture goes on with its own special brand of comedy, sparked by Jack Carson as the inebriate butler.

On the gory side of the month's showings, Alan Ladd is back, and while no one in particular "got him," he gets banged around plenty. In fact in "The Blue Dahlia," a couple of gorillas slug him hard enough to make you think he was a UE striker in Philadelphia. In a murder mystery that maintains an exciting trigger-tight atmosphere throughout, Ladd plays the role of an ex-Navy flier who tracks down the murderer of his unfaithful wife.

Ladd's second offering is "O.S.S.," Hollywood's first entry in the race to capture the glamour of the armed forces wartime super-secret sabotage and spy ring. Starting off with the assumption that if Ladd didn't win the war by himself, he was worth at least four divisions, the picture proceeds to be a pretty good action story.

Mystery fans who like to solve the murders before the last reel gives the show away will have a hey-day seeing "The Dark Corner." The picture telegraphs its punches just enough to serve up the clues but not the solution to the crime.

In the tradition of "Laura," this slick flicker casts Clifton Webb as an esthete who loves his art and women, but has as his wife a hard, callous wench who prefers a handsome young man to a seventeenth century oil. Somewhere along the line, a blackmailer gets bumped off and private detective Mark Stevens is framed for the good deed. With the aid of lovely Lucille Ball, Webb's secretary, Stevens collars the real killer.

PLAYING AROUND

Bad Bascomb — When Wallace Beery engages Margaret O'Brien in a contest of cuteness, someone is bound to lose—and age doesn't help Beery. But the kids will enjoy this rousing western which is the same as all its predecessors, down to the Federals coming to the rescue of the wagon train. Hi, ho, Silver.

Night in Paradise—An ancient tale set in lavish technicolor, beautiful costumes, beautiful scenery, etc. Turhan Bey and Merle Oberon are stuck with the lines and the story.

Badman's Territory — The producers of this western didn't miss a bullet when they threw together the James Boys, the Dalton Brothers, Belle Starr, Randolph Scott and a few hundred assorted Indians and cowboys. If you don't try to follow it too closely, you'll enjoy it for its action.

Little Giant—The pathetic tale of a farm boy determined to be a big city salesman provides Abbott and Costello with their first good story in a long time. Costello works hard to keep the laughs rolling—and he succeeds.

The Well-Groomed Bride—Ray Milland, a Navy lieutenant in search of a magnum of champagne with which to launch a new carrier, finds his bubble-water plus Olivia De Haviland after a hectic series of pseudo-comic episodes.

Decent Homes Or Poorhouse?

This actually happened.

George W. West, an official representative of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and president of a big Atlanta bank, was testifying before a Congressional Committee.

As Rep. Jennings Randolph (D., W. Va.), later told the story, West was asked, "What is going to happen to them from the standpoint of getting housed?" The question referred to the hundreds of thousands of people, mostly in the low income group, who need adequate homes.

West replied:

"I think poor people belong in the poorhouse."

Randolph, not believing his ears, declared:

"You do not mean that?"

West replied:

"If I did not, I would not be saying it."

★ ★ ★

Some Congressmen appear to agree with West.

Leaders of the House Banking Committee, for instance, appear to be on a sitdown strike against the Wagner-Ellender-Taft slum clearance and home construction bill.

That bill has been bottled up in the Banking & Currency Committee for months. The Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill is the crucial factor in the situation.

If it dies in committee, the Patman bill for veterans' housing, which was passed a few weeks ago, will be as futile as an auto without wheels. If it dies in committee, millions of workers in this country will indeed have the choice between continued slum-living or the poorhouse.

The W-E-T bill was passed in the Senate by a big margin. But in the House, the Republicans have ganged up with polltax Democrats to bury the bill. Rep. Spence (D., Ky.), along with Republicans Wolcott and Crawford, (R., Mich.), are trying to keep it in the grave.

The housing bill must be passed. Here's what you can do to help it along:

1. Wire Rep. Spence, chairman of the Banking Committee, to order hearings immediately.

2. Wire your Congressman to put the heat on the Committee.

3. Wire Pres. Truman to make the housing bill a "must" on the Administration's legislative program.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Pass the 65c Minimum Wage Bill

Time is running out in Congress. Within a few weeks both House and Senate will recess for the summer and for the coming political campaign.

With a big backlog of social legislation to handle, reactionary Congressmen are hopeful that they can duck the necessity of taking a definite stand on many issues. The 65c Minimum Wage Bill is one that may be scuttled in this process unless Congress hears from the people—and fast.

The need for a 65c minimum was stressed last week by Rep. Andrew Biemiller (D. Wis.), who is secretary of a House steering committee working to secure passage of the bill.

Talking on a national radio network, Biemiller warned of "serious danger" that the bill may be scuttled by dangerous amendments that "will so weaken the act as to make a decent burial preferable to an innocuous statute."

As the Wisconsin Congressman noted, rising cost of living is making "desperate" the plight of millions of Americans. "Could you be a customer contributing to the national wealth if you have insufficient purchasing power because of substandard wages?"

Workers know that if the minimum wage is raised, their own pay rates will be protected. If the minimum stays at 40c, it provides a very shaky foundation for wages in a period when living costs are on the rise.

The 65c bill is presently in the House Rules Committee. You can help bring action.

Wire Rep. Sabath (D. Ill.), chairman of the Rules Committee, and a friend of the bill, to help speed it through committee.

Wire your Congressman to vote for the 65c pay bill—without the Pace inflationary rider or any other crippling amendment.

Truman anti-strike bill S. 2255 HR 6578	Provides basis for outlawing strikes, squashing unions, drafting strikers.	Senate passed somewhat milder version. Bill now in House Rules Committee.	Wire Senators and Congressmen to vote against bill if it comes up again.
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June, 1947, with batch of weakening amendments.	Passed by Senate and House. Action by joint conference committee awaited.	Wire President Truman to veto bill and ask Congress to approve extension of OPA "as is."
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program necessary to give U. S. badly needed homes.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee stalls on holding hearings.	Send wires to your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee. to act fast on this bill.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; House Labor Committee recommended flat 65c minimum, no increase coverage.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Andrews Bill HR 6035 S 2140	Bars workers fired under illegal super-seniority ruling from getting lost pay.	Sneaked thru House on voice vote. Now pending in Senate.	Ask Senators to defeat bill.
Labor Appropriation Bill HR 6739	Title IV on NLRB bars Wagner Act to thousands of workers in food processing industry.	Scheduled for study by Senate Appropriations Committee. Senate will probably vote next week.	Wire members of Senate Appropriations Committee and your Senators to restore NLRB funds for food workers' cases.
Hobbs Bill HR 32	Under guise of anti-racketeering title, provides new anti-labor weapon.	Passed this week by Senate.	Wire Pres. Truman to veto.
McMahon Bill S 1717	Provides for civilian control of atomic energy; House Military Affairs Committee proposals open gates for military domination.	Passed by Senate; House due to vote soon.	Write Congressmen to reject Committee version, and vote for Senate bill and civilian control of atomic energy.

ATOMIC ENERGY: The brass hats are fighting hard to keep control of the atom.

The McMahon Bill (S. 1717), which has full CIO endorsement, provides for basic civilian control of atomic energy, while providing the military forces with adequate representation to make their needs and attitudes known.

The Senate passed the McMahon bill by a unanimous vote.

Last week the House Military Affairs Committee slipped through a batch of joker amendments, aimed solely at giving the military the controlling voice on atomic development.

Expert witnesses from dozens of organizations warned of the dangers in brass hat control of the greatest problem of our era. The Military Affairs Committee swept aside these warnings and the recommendations of the Senate's Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

FLASH—As The CIO NEWS went to press the Senate passed the Hobbs Bill (see box below). Wire Pres. Truman today to veto it!

This bill is of the greatest importance to every citizen of our country. Let your Congressman know where you stand; write him a letter today demanding passage of S. 1717, without amendments.

BRITISH LOAN: The British loan, already passed by the Senate, has been favorably recommended by a House Committee. It will be up for a vote in the next week or two. CIO is supporting the loan as a spur to world trade. Ask your Congressman to vote for the loan when it comes to the floor.

POLLTAX: Southern polltaxers are trying every trick in the book to keep this bill (H.R. 7) from coming up for vote. They are talking filibuster to scare the rest of the Senate.

Don't let them get away with it. Let your Senators know that we must pass the polltax bill this session.

WAGNER ACT AMENDMENT: The Senate Appropriations Committee hasn't yet made known its position on the move to cut food processing workers out of the benefits of the Wagner Act.

The House slipped through an amendment to the Federal Security and Labor Appropriations Act to bar the NLRB from handling any cases involving food processing workers—some hundreds of thousands of them.

If their trick works, next year it may be steel workers or automobile workers who will feel the axe.

Wire Sen. McKellar, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and your own two Senators, to defeat the amendment.

PEOPLE THREATEN BUYERS' STRIKE

More than 2000 representatives of consumer, church, civic and labor organizations came to the Nation's Capital this week for Save OPA Day. Here is part of the throng as they left a rally at Washington Monument.

OPA CHANGES SOAK NATION—MURRAY

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week called upon President Truman to veto the "amendments to the Price Control Act" and to ask the Congress for a concurrent resolution extending the OPA for a year in its present form. Murray's letter was sent on behalf of the CIO Steelworkers, whose executive board met this week in Asheville, N. C. The text of Murray's letter follows:

"On behalf of the United Steelworkers of America, I urge you to veto the amendments to the Price Control Act adopted by Congress, to request the Congress for a concurrent resolution extending OPA for a full year in its present form and to ask for the passage of an adequate appropriation bill for its administration and enforcement without any crippling riders.

"I do not wish to burden you with discussion of particular amendments. The proposed measure is not price control but rather a guarantee of inflation and soaring profits at the expense of the American people. This conclusion is supported by the public statement of Mr. Chester Bowles, Director of Economic Stabilization.

"Both Mr. Bowles and Mr. Paul Porter, the Administrator of the Office of Price Administration, have publicly declared that several of the provisions incorporated in the bill enacted by Congress would terminate any effective price or rent control, resulting in sharp and terrifying increases in the price of food, clothing and housing.

"To characterize any such measure as a continuation of price control is flagrant hypocrisy.

"The proposed bill amounts to repeal of price control and it would thereby mark the beginning of inflation which could have no stopping point short of collapse and economic chaos. Your signature to such a bill would place you in the unfair position of carrying the responsibility for such evil consequences. Your veto would place the blame where it properly belongs—on those members of Congress who voted to cripple price control. It would give them a last chance to redeem themselves in the eyes of the American people.

"I share to the full your concern for the maintenance of industrial peace in America. In that spirit I must point out that the proposed amendments would gravely jeopardize the hard-won industrial peace which the nation is just now achieving. Widespread wage settlements have been reached within the framework of the wage-price policy formulated by you in February of this year. The policy contemplated maintenance of an effective control over the cost of living of American workers.

"For many months a most dastardly and sinister campaign has been waged against the continuation of effective price control. Those rapacious elements in American industry who have spear-headed this attack deliberately sabotaged production of vital goods, arrogantly defied decisions of governmental bodies awarding wage increases — all in the endeavor to confuse the American public to achieve their vicious objective.

"But the American people have unmistakably been in complete support of continued effective price control. Two months ago, after the passage of the House bill, Congress was deluged with the greatest flood of mail in its history condemning the emasculation of the price control.

"In the interval members of Congress have allowed themselves to be stampeded by the pressure of certain greedy interests. We have seen the full page advertisements of profit-hungry lobbies and we know the tremendous expense to which they have gone to defeat the people's interests. They are forcing this nation into a tremendous gamble in which the stakes are not merely people's pocketbooks but people's lives.

"The crux of their argument is that the only way to attain full production is to allow prices to rise. The housewife hunting desperately for meat, the veteran in search of a home, the starving peoples of the world looking to America for food, are the victims of this despicable blackmail. Removal of price control has nothing to do with full production.

"During the recent war we achieved the greatest production in our history—more than double 1929 and two and one-half times that 1935-1939. We did it with and through price control. Nor did profits suffer. Gross profits rose from $5.3 billion annually in 1936-1939 to $22.7 billion in 1942-1945. Profit after taxes more than doubled keeping pace with production.

"Price control assured an orderly flow of material into production and stability in labor relations. It is no less essential now to insure the orderly transition to the full production—full employment economy pledged by your Administration.

"The danger signs of 1919 and 1929 are clear. In 1920-1921 prices rose wildly; in the same period there was a 24% increase in production but public ability and willingness to buy vanished. Manufacturers and distributors were left holding 17 billion in excess inventories, and collapse followed. In the late 1920's the prospect of unlimited consumer demand led to over-investment in capital goods, unheard of stock-market speculation and the worst depression in history.

The principal difference between 1919 and 1929 and now is that inflationary pressure on the part of producers, speculators and black-marketers is stronger now.

"From the economic point of view we are riding the whirlwind. Only sustained consumer demand can preserve a stable economy. The public cannot be exploited forever. Consumer savings have already been cut by reduced earnings and rising prices to half the peak rate for 1945 and personal savings are concentrated in the hands of relatively few. Half the nation's families, according to a recent government study, hold less than 4% of the $415 billion in savings.

"As the Minority Report of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency points out, a 50% rise in the price level which a year's spiral of inflation could easily bring would cut the value of these savings in half. Veterans on pensions and others on fixed incomes are especially vulnerable to further price rises.

"Members of the CIO, the organized workers of the basic industries of America, require stable prices as a condition of sustained and prosperous employment. They look to you for affirmative action to preserve American living standards which are now threatened as never before in our history.

"The protection of our nation and its people demand but one decision—the veto of the bill and a demand that Congress remain in session until it has enacted legislation continuing effective price control."

Before the OPA marchers began their day's activities at Washington, these singers pepped up the rally by stating the case for the OPA in song.

MURRAY URGES HOBBS BILL VETO

PRESIDENT Truman should veto the Hobbs "anti-racketeering bill as a menace to honest and legitimate union activity," CIO Pres. Murray told the White House last week.

The Hobbs measure, rushed through the Senate a week ago by a voice vote, appeared at the White House once before. That time it was dressed up as Section 7 of the Case Bill.

In his veto message on that anti-labor proposal, the President found Section 7 objectionable because it did not specifically endorse the right to "strike and picket peacefully, and to take other legitimate and peaceful concerted action."

Pres. Murray's letter pointed out that the Hobbs bill "is the same measure which you condemned in your veto message. No attempt has been made to meet the objections to it which you voiced and which impelled you to veto it."

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Sam Hobbs, an Alabama polltaxer, has been flitting about the Capitol for several years. It was passed by the House months ago and was later referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

That group sat on the bill for six months, during which it held no hearings. Two weeks ago the Judiciary Committee suddenly reported out the bill and it was passed by the Senate a few days later.

In his message to Pres. Truman, Murray declared:

"Of course, the CIO is opposed to racketeering, and supports legislation directed against racketeering."

But, he added, the Anti-Racketeering Act of 1934 is already on the statute books, and the Hobbs bill "adds absolutely nothing" to legal protection against racketeering.

On the contrary, Murray pointed out, it deletes from the 1934 act the only two sections providing for the protection of labor's legitimate rights. These two sections were added to the bill in 1934 at the express request of the Attorney-General.

"The two simple protective provisions thus inserted in the 1934 Act declare:

"(1) that the Act was not to apply to the 'payment of wages by a bona fide employer to a bona fide employe'; and

"(2) that no court was to construe the Act 'in such manner as to impair, diminish, or in any manner affect the rights of bona fide organizations in lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof.'

"It is these two provisions which the Hobbs bill would delete," Murray charged. "That alone would constitute the sole change which the Hobbs bill would make in the present Anti-Racketeering Act."

The CIO President recalled that in the veto of the Case Bill, Pres. Truman had asked for full study of proposed legislation concerning labor. The Hobbs bill received no such treatment.

Save the OPA marchers in the nation's capital picketed the White House chanting, "President Truman, what do you say? Help us save the OPA," while a delegation called on Press Secretary Charles Ross.

These four public and stage personalities joined about 2,000 OPA marchers in signing the consumer's pledge to buy only the basic necessities if OPA is emasculated. They are pictured at the rally where they spoke, left to right, Chairman Robert Nathan of the Washington Chapter, American Veterans Committee; Orson Welles, master of ceremonies; Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) and Sen. Taylor (D. Idaho.)

UAW Vice-Pres. Richard T. Leonard came from Detroit to join in Save OPA Day activities. He tells the rally at Washington Monument: "Members of the UAW don't intend to lower their living standards to fatten the treasuries of big business."

CONGRESS MAULS OPA, CONSUMERS TALK STRIKE

OVER-RIDING nationwide demands for effective price control, Congress last week passed an extension bill as phony as a lead nickel.

In the midst of parliamentary fireworks worthy of a better cause, the Senate gave its endorsement to the "compromise" bill worked out by the joint House-Senate conference committee and sent it along to the White House.

Angered by the prospect of rising prices, consumers, unions and other groups are calling for a buyers' strike.

Earlier in the week, CIO Pres. Philip Murray demanded that Pres. Truman veto the Congressional measure and exert full pressure to force passage of a concurrent resolution by House and Senate extending the present OPA law for another year.

"The proposed bill amounts to a repeal of price control, and it would thereby mark the beginning of inflation," Murray declared.

The CIO leader reminded the President of the strong and continuous demand for passage of a law with teeth to enforce it. But, he said, "certain greedy interests" and "profit-hungry lobbies" have forced the country "into a tremendous gamble in which the stakes are not merely people's pocketbooks but people's lives."

Members of the CIO, Murray declared, "require stable prices as a condition of sustained and prosperous employment. They look to you for affirmative action to preserve American standards which are now threatened as never before in our history."

Although the joint conference committee removed a few of the crippling amendments added to the bill in the course of its Congressional journey, it stood loyal to many of the "booby trap" provisions which will permit prices to soar. Worst of these is the amendment of Sen. Robert Taft (R. O.) which will permit wide-open marking up of consumer prices.

Even this weakened version of price control was too strong for a few Senators—Moore of New Jersey and O'Daniel of Texas—who look upon any extension of OPA as a form of "communism."

Meanwhile, many OPA officials expressed doubt that the new law could be administered in any manner calculated to protect the consumers.

Washington heard strong rumors that Chester Bowles, director of economic stabilization, would resign his post in protest against the bill, and would seek the Democratic nomination for governor or senator in his home state of Connecticut.

A movement for a buyers' strike —begun June 24 at a Save OPA rally attended by 2000 delegates of consumers, church, civic and labor groups at Washington—assumed greater and greater proportions as the nation's people became aware of their peril.

Consumers Revolt

The New York City Consumers Council has joined in the call for a "buyers' strike" as the strongest weapon against unbridled inflation.

"Congress, acting for big business, is preparing for a boom and bust period," declared Council Chairman Mildred Gutwillig. "Against this eventuality, consumers will use the buyers' strike as a weapon."

The two thousand at the meeting were led in signing the pledge to take part in the strike if OPA is killed by speakers at the meeting, among them actor Orson Welles, chairman; Sen. Glen H. Taylor (D. Idaho), Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D. Calif.), Vice-Pres. Richard T. Leonard of the CIO Auto Workers, and Robert Nathan, chairman of the Washington Chapter, American Veterans Committee.

CIO unions were assuming leadership in the fight throughout the nation to keep down prices.

Pres. Walter Reuther of the Auto Workers urged President Truman, in a leter, to veto the OPA extension bill, calling the measure a "price-raising act calculated to plunge our nation into inflation."

"If the bill becomes law," he wrote, "consumers face immediate and drastic increases in the prices of the most essential items in their budgets—food and clothing."

Pres. John Green of the Shipbuilding Workers proposed that the union's 75 locals lead their communities in organizing labor and other groups for a buyers' strike, and said that he would bring his proposals for a buyers' strike before the next meeting of the CIO executive board.

The executive board of the CIO Packinghouse Workers meeting in Chicago attacked the emasculated OPA Bill as reported out by the Senate-House conference and blasted the Truman administration because it gave only lip service to the maintenance of price control.

At the Washington rally Leonard warned of the possibilities of another Auto Workers' strike if prices soar.

In a speech frequently interrupted by applause Mrs. Douglas said:

"Only fools and Sen. Taft (R. Ohio) could believe we could convert from war to peace the day the shooting stopped. If we keep price control, prices will stay in line—wages will stay in line and we can look forward to industrial peace and vast production."

Along with delegates from Detroit, Peoria, St. Louis, New York and Chicago, were large numbers of members of CIO unions.

The demonstrators called on Senators and Representatives, OPA and Democratic Party officials, and Housing Expediter Wyatt.

Chanting "Mr. President, what do you say? Help us save the OPA," more than a thousand of the delegates including CIO members paraded in front of the White House while a committee of ten called on the President's Press Sec. Charles Ross.

Two gallery spectators, William Stachiw (1.) and Mike Novak, educational director and president respectively of Dodge Local 13, CIO Auto Workers, are holding the sign they unfurled from the gallery of the House chamber. They were escorted from the room by capitol police, whose captain Roy Brown, tells them they shouldn't have done it.

HOW BILL KILLS OPA

HERE'S the price control bill as it was finally adopted by Congress in such battered form that Pres. Murray of the CIO has called for its veto:

1. Extends OPA's life for another year.

2. Transfers all authority over prices of food and agricultural products to the Secretary of Agriculture, who has said he doesn't want the powers granted to him in the bill.

3. Gives the final authority for removing or restoring price ceilings to a new "de-control board" entirely independent of OPA. The board would be required to remove price controls on any item when it felt that supply equals demand — a situation open to many interpretations.

4. Cuts the government subsidy program down to a billion dollars, half the amount requested by OPA as necessary to keep consumer prices down, and requires that subsidies on all food products except sugar be ended by April 1.

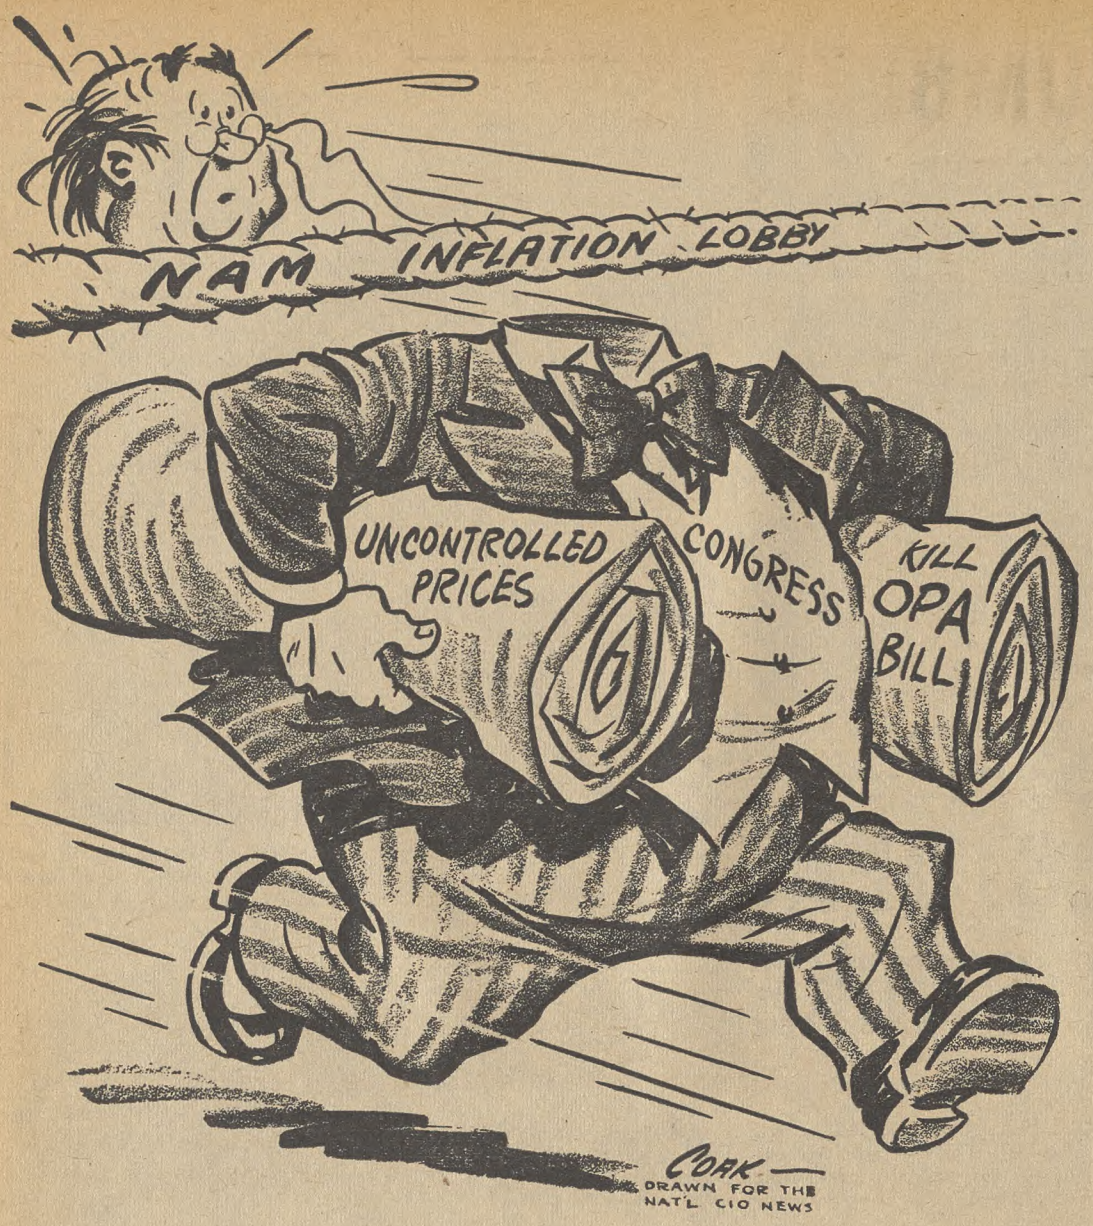
5. Prohibits any ceiling prices on raw cotton, and changes the formula for textile prices to make them higher.

6. Kills the maximum average price regulations, which have functioned to bring lower-priced clothing on to the market.

7. Requires that OPA raise price ceilings on every product to insure manufacturers and processors a price to take care of the October, 1941, price plus average increases in production costs since that time. Guarantees all distributors and retailers the same profit margins they enjoyed in January, 1946.

These last are the "booby trap" amendments against which Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles has complained so vigorously as destroying every vestige of honest price control. President Murray has characterized the bill as "flagrant hypocrisy."

OPA officials have predicted that passage of the bill will result in a sellers' strike while the government agency is forced into computations of millions of products, from "bobby pins to autos," to determine new ceilings under the price-jumping amendments.



HEY, MISTER, SOMETHING'S MISSING!

The absent-minded professor who forgets to put on his pants has nothing on Congress. At least he maintains some social decorum with the aid of underwear and retains a good, if forgetful, head on his shoulders.

But the inflation-bent majority of Congress, which insisted on destroying price control, is not only guilty of indecent exposure but has lost its head into the bargain.

As we go to press, Congress has adopted price-raising amendments to the Price Control Act which make the formal continuation of a gutted OPA little more than a tragic farce. Whether or not the President vetoes this outrageous bill, the Congress majority has sufficiently exposed its own betrayal of the public interest.

In yielding to the greedy pressure of speculators and profiteers, who hope to make a killing at the people's expense, these supposed public representatives have voted to cut the purchasing power of the workers' wages, to rob all Americans through higher prices and devalued savings, and to subject the whole country to the dangers of inflation.

We say that in doing this Congress has lost its head. For we cannot believe it is even politically smart, aside from anything else, for members of Congress in an election year to place more stock on campaign contributions from a few profiteers than on the voting power of the great majority whom they have chosen to wrong.

But this point still remains to be proved in the coming elections. It's up to the people to show they cannot be played for suckers by misrepresentatives who value the profits of a few more highly than the bread-and-butter interests of the many whose votes elect them. Let's look at the record and remember in November.

A GROSS DECEPTION

The anti-labor press and commentators can claim much of the discredit for passage of the Hobbs Bill by Congress, through a brazen campaign of public deception.

The trick has been to describe the Hobbs Bill as an anti-racketeering measure,to quote provisions against violence, extortion and coercion, and to ask, "What's wrong with that?"

The Hobbs Bill is not an "anti-racketeering bill" at all. There is already an Anti-Racketeering Act in full force. Its provisions are simply repeated in the Hobbs Bill, which is solely designed to remove from this act two provisions for the protection of labor's legitimate collective bargaining activities.

These provisions declare that the Act is not to apply to the "payment of wages by a bona fide employer to a bona fide employee;" and that courts are not to construe it "in such manner as to impair, diminish, or in any manner affect the rights of bona fide labor organizations in lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof."

What's wrong with these provisions that a special bill has to be enacted to remove them?

The actual purpose of the Hobbs Bill is to enable hostile courts, as they have often done in the past, to interpret words like "threat" of "force" or "violence" as applying to strikes, peaceful picketing and even name-calling.

The CIO favors the strongest measures against racketeering. It asked a veto of the Hobbs Bill, because it is not an anti-racketeering act but a bill to endanger labor's lawful rights.

BY LEN DE CAUX

WE, the American people, are being taken for a sleigh ride in July by a bunch of highjackers.

As we bump over the rocky road of inflation, to be relieved of our cash and dumped in the ditch of depression, let's at least try to lift the blindfold and peek at the hard facts.

Any movie-goer knows that dirty work's afoot when a couple of tough mugs, with hands in gun-bulged pockets, tell the hero some fresh air will do him good, so they want to take him for a nice ride.

But when a bunch of politicians tell us they're Santa Claus' reindeer come to take us for a ride to free enterprise and prosperity over the road of uncontrolled prices, not all of us are as skeptical as we might be.

The American advertising arts have taught us a lot of nice names for nasty things. The stench of stale sweat is called "B.O." Foul-smelling breath becomes "halitosis." And exploitation by profiteering monopolists is prettified into "free enterprise."

The ads in slick-paper magazines to the contrary notwithstanding, America is not really a land where all men are handsome and all women beautiful; where pants never lose their crease nor lips their yearning to be kissed; where housework gets performed by pushing a few buttons, and where folks loll endlessly on yachts or bathing beaches.

Nor, contrary to the editorial columns, is this a land where everyone could go into business for himself and make a lovely profit by buying cheap and selling dear, if free enterprise weren't crushed by price control, government interference and that mean old CIO.

If free enterprise lies bleeding, who done it? Even an amateur detective can now detect that it wasn't the much-suspected New Deal, the unions or price control, but the same monopolies that have been raising all the hue and cry.

For the Smaller War Plants Corp., in a report to the Senate Small Business Committee, has exposed the guilty party.

This report shows how the Morgan, Rockefeller, Mellon, Du Pont, and a few other interests control most of big industry; how, in nearly every field, a few large concerns monopolize nearly all the business; how 62% of factory workers are employed by big corporations representing only 2% of all manufacturing firms.

It also shows that free enterprise has taken one of its worst beatings from monopoly in the newspaper field.

Though newspaper circulation has doubled since 1909, the number of daily newspapers has declined by more than a thousand. By 1940, nearly 88% of American communities were left with only one daily newspaper or with all under single ownership; and a half-dozen multi-millionaire newspaper chains had come to control two-fifths of the entire daily circulation and one-half of the Sunday circulation.

This monopoly has also extended to radio, with 57.3% of all radio stations now owned or controlled by newspaper publishers.

So, if we take off the propaganda blindfold of the monopoly press, we can see that the monopolists have so throttled free enterprise that most Americans must now buy from, sell to, be employed by, and get their information from the monopolies.

Most small business opportunities are due to governmental checks on the monopolies, and most of labor's freedoms are due to union organization restricting their power to exploit.

The purpose of the campaign to destroy price control has not been to unfetter free enterprise, but to increase the profits of monopolists and Wall Street speculators by squeezing the workers, farmers, small businessmen and all the consuming and fixed-income public.

Even the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers did not speak for or consult its own members when it launched its anti-price control campaign. It spoke only for the monopolist clique which controls it.

So we, the people, are being taken for a ride by the monopolists, through the collusion of Congressmen who have betrayed us.

But we can at least be wiser as well as sadder from this experience, and organize industrially and politically to protect ourselves in the future and to curb the overweening arrogance and power of the monopolies.

COPPER KINGS HUMBLED

By MORRIS WRIGHT

THREE of the longest strikes of the year resulted in CIO victories when the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers during the past three weeks wrested important wage gains from three of the giant corporations of the non-ferrous metals industry — Kennecott Copper, American Smelting & Refining Co., and Phelps Dodge Corp.

Wage increases ranging from 18½ to 26 cents an hour won in these settlements climaxed a series of postwar wage struggles by MM&SW, in which similar gains have been won by workers of Anaconda Copper Mining Co., in the "Brass Valley" of Connecticut, and at American Zinc Co. and other metal producing properties of the nation.

Added to the estimated total of $5,500,000 in annual wage increases won will be the record-breaking retroactive wage payments amounting to over $1,450,000.

Of special significance in these major strike settlements is the almost complete elimination of discriminatory wage differentials, applied by the copper barons against the workers of the Southwest. At El Paso, Texas, Vanadium, N. M., and Patagonia, Ariz., raises as high as 7¼ cents, over and above the general 18½-cent increase, were won by the CIO affiliate.

"Victory of the MM&SW in these and other major strikes this year has smashed a conspiracy of employers in our industry to break our unions if possible, or failing this, to rob them of advances made in recent years," said MM&SW Pres. Reid Robinson.

"Unshakable solidarity of our workers in every strike, backed by the strength of the CIO in its strike victories in the steel, auto and electrical industries, broke the employers' conspiracy and resulted in substantial gains for many thousands of workers, notably in the boosting of discriminatory wage rates for Spanish-speaking workers in the Southwest.

"The greater strength achieved by our union in these struggles now will be thrown into the political arena, where reaction is moving heaven and earth to rob the people of their economic gains and to save the remnants of world fascism."

Victory in the union's nationwide 15-week strike against the American Smelting & Refining Co. came on June 11, with the strike of some 7000 workers ending in its fifteenth week. Eighteen AS&R properties were shut down during the strike, and sixteen of them resumed operations on June 17 under the terms of local settlements for which the way was cleared by an agreement reached in Washington, D. C., between the union and national representatives of the corporation management.

Within a week's time, the 5-month strike of 5,000 copper and lead workers in Utah ended in victory at two AS&R smelters, at the world's largest copper mine, property of Kennecott Copper Co., at Bingham, and at the lead mines and smelters of the U. S. Smelting, Refining & Mining Co. Here the gains were almost identical with those registered in the AS&R settlement.

The 18½-cent raise won in these two strikes was also incorporated into a tentative agreement won by the IUMM&SW at four mines and two refineries of Phelps Dodge Corp., where many of the union's 4,000 strikers have been on the picket-lines since February 3.

Completion of the agreement here, expected within a matter of days, is pending only the settlement of the question of the termination date of the new contract.

The obstinacy with which union demands were fought by the metal producers was revealed particularly in Utah, where representatives of Kennecott, AS&R and USSR&M admitted that they had put out a total of $18,700,000 between them during the course of the 20-week statewide strike.

FUR WORKERS SLAP BEVIN TALK ON JEWS

Charges that recent statements by British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin have been viciously anti-semitic and "aggravate the desperate plight" of 100,000 displaced Jews in Europe, were sounded in New York by the CIO Fur Workers Joint Board.

The board demanded that the British government withdraw its troops from Palestine immediately, and called for United Nations supervision of Palestine under a trusteeship of Britain, the U. S. and the Soviet Union as a step towards independence for the little Mediterranean country.

'HELP ITALY' FUND HITS $250,000

Some $250,000 has already been contributed by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers to establish cooperative clothing and shirt factories in Italy, the union has announced.

The sum, half of a $500,000 goal set by the union for its voluntary fund raising drive, will set up projects under joint American and Italian labor direction. Three or four plants, operating under the auspices of the Italian Federation of Labor, will be established throughout the country."

"We trust that the idea will be taken up by other unions and organizations, and will snowball into a tremendous movement for the purpose of setting up other plants," declared Vincento Alvano and Alex Cohen of the Shirt Workers board.

LABOR CANDIDATES WIN IN TWO STATES

THE primary election scene took on a brighter hue this week with labor-supported candidates racking up impressive victories in North Carolina and Maryland contests.

Such success south of the Mason-Dixon line was hailed by labor political observers as additional proof that progressive candidates cannot be written off in southern elections despite the baiting and smear tactics freely used by reactionary opposition.

In North Carolina's Fifth Congressional District, incumbent Rep. John Folger, one of the few southern progressives, won over Thurmond Chatam, rich blanket manufacturer, in a run-off election, by a 3,000 vote margin. Chatam, vice president of the National Assn. of Manufacturers who placed first by 150 votes in the initial contest, poured thousands of dollars into the campaign in an endeavor to beat Folger.

Winston-Salem, the deciding area in the district, went strong for Folger and it was generally agreed that the Food and Tobacco Workers and Textile Workers locals could be given considerable credit for the strong Folger turnout.

The FTA Local 27 did a thorough canvassing job, ringing doorbells for Folger, covering polling places on election day and getting voters to the polls with cars. A special 25-man PAC steering committee was set up to handle the organizational details and the labor precincts were reported as practically all voting. An encouraging sign was the large numbers of Negro voters who went to the polls to cast their votes.

Chatam, a bitter foe of OPA and the entire Roosevelt program, polled only 21,380 to Folger's 24,544 votes in a surprisingly heavy vote. Folger's spirited defense of price control and attacks against the NAM was believed to account for this large turnout in a run-off campaign.

The other primary highpoint came in Maryland where William Preston Lane, publisher and attorney, won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination over Millard Tawes, regular party choice who had the backing of U. S. Senator Tydings, and Rep. Streett Baldwin, vitriolic labor hater, who sacrificed his Congressional seat to make a bid for the governorship.

Lane was openly endorsed by a Joint Labor Committee of AFL, CIO-PAC and Railroad Brotherhoods, who campaigned vigorously for the Hagerstown publisher, indicating again that attacks against such labor support, as leveled by Baldwin and Tawes, were practically meaningless.

In the Democratic Senatorial race, Sen. George Radcliffe, who has aroused labor's anger time and time again, was beaten by Gov. Herbert O'Conor by an impressive margin. No endorsement was made by the CIO in this race.

Want proof that labor's political action has seared some southern politicians? Mayor of Winston-Salem during the recent primary campaign, told a FTA delegation that they were responsible for the registration of 15,000 Negroes. "With all these labor people voting, you can never tell what will come next," he said.

In Washington State:

LABOR'S CHAMPIONS TAKE THE STUMP

By WILL PARRY

MEN who will stand up for the fundamental rights of labor are none too many in these days of growing reactionary pressure—witness the vote on the Truman slave-labor bill on Black Saturday, May 25, in the House of Congress. Three hundred and six congressmen voted against the most fundamental interests of American labor on that day; only 13 voted for them. Three of these 13 were from the state of Washington.

And when the Truman bill reached the Senate, Washington's two senators were among those who fought most effectively to prevent its passage.

It was no accident that Reps. Hugh DeLacy, Charles Savage, John M. Coffee and Senators Hugh B. Mitchell and Warren Magnuson, all Democrats, stood where they did—on the side of democracy, labor and the people. It was also no accident that they represented the state of Washington. Labor in this logging, mining, shipbuilding and increasingly industrial country has had to fight for its progressive representation the hard way.

Labor in the Northwest has long been militant in the face of the most vicious kind of reactionary pressure. It has known massacres, lockouts, police brutality on the picket lines, the solid opposition of the commerical press and much of a deceived public. It has had the example of the Seattle general strike of 1919 to teach it unity.

But it is chiefly in recent years, and particularly since the birth and rapid growth of the CIO, that Washington state labor has become ballot-box conscious. It is a combination of the stirring tradition of labor militancy here, plus its realistic recognition of the importance of political action, that is reflected in the courageous pro-labor position three of its representatives, and its two senators, took in the face of an hysterical Congress determined to legislate free unions out of existence.

Labor here hasn't gotten this kind of first-rate representation easily. It's been a tough fight and a long one, and it's still going on. One of its chief obstacles has been a reactionary press. There is only one pro-labor daily in the state—the relatively insignificant Vancouver Sun.

It takes a lot of door-bell ringing, a lot of personal contact, a lot of clear-headed educational work in the union halls, to overcome the effectiveness of this unceasing program of vilification on the part of the press. And labor has had to develop its own press to get an honest hearing.

The state CIO News and the International Woodworkers are leading CIO newspapers; the AFL's views are presented in the Spokane Labor World, the Tacoma Labor Advocate and the Everett Labor Herald, among others. Thirty-five AFL and CIO unions own stock in The New World, an influential weekly covering union and political news with a pro-labor slant. The respected position of the labor press among its readers is one good reason for the way labor's representatives vote in the halls of Congress.

The primaries in Washington state fall on July 9. At that time Senator Hugh B. Mitchell and three of the state's four incumbent Democratic representatives —DeLacy, Savage and Coffee— will have nearly solid labor endorsement for re-election. The fourth incumbent Democrat—Henry Jackson—is unopposed in the primaries in the second district, an International Woodworkers of America stronghold. Due to Jackson's vote for the Truman bill, labor generally is making no endorsements there.

The two present Republican Congressmen, Hal Holmes of the fourth district and Walt Horan of the fifth, have bad records on legislation vital to labor. Hoping to send back to the House a solidly Democratic and thoroughly liberal delegation, AFL and CIO are mainly supporting the candidates of two Democrats in the primaries —Earl S. Coe in Holmes' district and R. Max Etter in Horan's.

Hugh Mitchell, the incumbent Senator up for re-election, is young, quiet and scholarly. He channels his energy mainly into the kind of thorough investigations which lay the groundwork for intelligent and hard-hitting action, rather than into conventional glad-handing politics.

A former newspaper, Mitchell got his start under Herb Peet, a fine old editor in the liberal tradition and a staunch supporter of the Roosevelt policies, who ran one of the state's few progressive papers in the sawmill town of Everett.

If Mitchell is re-elected it will be because he's an able senator, not because of any outstanding ability on his part as a campaigner in the conventional sense. Some political observers have criticized his lack of vigorous campaigning, fearing a repetition of the California election debacle—that is, a good candidate defeated because he had not brought people out of their apathy by a clear and decisive discussion of the issues.

No such fear are expressed in regard to Rep. Hugh DeLacy's candidacy. DeLacy's primary campaign is active, hard-hitting, and based on continued emphasis of the issues of labor's rights, price control, veterans' housing, and the importance of Big Three unity. So sound and clear is DeLacy's exposition of what he stands for that his leading Democratic opponent, Howard G. Costigan, has been reduced to a well-financed campaign of red-baiting and smear attacks.

Costigan, formerly associated with the state's progressive movement, has at this writing failed to secure a single labor endorsement. DeLacy, on the other hand, has an active labor committee working in his behalf, and wholesale endorsements from AFL, CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods and independent unions on a local, statewide, and national scale. The breadth of this support is partly to be explained by the fact that he was in shirtsleeves and wore a war-worker's tin hat when he filed for Congress two years ago. A member of Hope Lodge No. 79, International Association of Machinists (unaffiliated), and a former university teacher who organized and was international vice-president of the American Federation of Teachers, DeLacy not only knows the worker and his problems first hand, but has learned the basic rules of effective organization.

That's the key to his unprecedented success in his first term in the House. Labor has had other single voices as strong and staunch as that of DeLacy; it has never had a better organizer of the liberal bloc in Congress. Members of his union look upon him as their business agent in Washington, D. C. And so does most of labor in Washington state.

Another leader of national prominence from this state is Rep. John M. Coffee of the sixth district. From the time he was a high school debater as a boy in Tacoma, Coffee has been a serious student of domestic and world affairs.

He has become particularly well-known for his firm stand against Franco Spain, but his labor record was excellent even before it acquired the ultimate dignity in virtue of his vote against the Truman bill. A member of Congress for ten years, Coffee is now on the strategic appropriations committee. In view of only nominal opposition, his experience and his labor backing make his re-nomination a virtual certainty.

Less well known than Coffee and DeLacy, but already recognized as a fighter in the people's interest, Rep. Charles Savage of the third district is without opposition in the primaries. Business agent of his union, the CIO International Woodworkers, Savage is another example of a leader of growing stature and influence recruited directly from the ranks of labor. Those in the know predict that he will continue to develop with longer service in the House. With DeLacy, he was among the four who had the courage to speak as well as vote against the Truman bill in the midst of the hysteria of Black Saturday.

It is indicative of the progressive character of the Washington delegation that in fourteen major issues—the slave labor bill, the un-American committee, the poll tax, May-Arends anti-labor bill, confirmation of Wallace as Commerce Secretary, price control, Hobbs anti-labor bill, reciprocal trade recommit, vote to kill UNRRA, Bretton Woods, excess profits revision, Case bill, housing for veterans, and OPA crippling amendments—in these fourteen issues, only one bad vote was registered by any one of the four.

That one bad vote is the reason Jackson isn't getting labor backing in the primaries.

Quotations and official figures from Report of Smaller War Plants Corp. to Special Committee to Study Problems of American Small Business, U. S. Senate

By FRED d'AVILA

WORLD WAR II has made big corporations bigger and small corporations smaller. It is safe to say that the big corporations now own the country. In 1904 they controlled 30 basic products —from electrical equipment and farm machinery to gunpowder, rubber, tin cans and whiskey. The latest report shows that only 250 of the biggest corporations today hold two thirds of the nation's usable manufacturing facilities.

As the big manufacturing corporations thrived, the smaller ones hungered. Those with annual net incomes of $250,000 or under dropped from a 23.4% share of corporate income in 1918 to an 11.6% share in 1942.

Small firms (those with less than 500 employes) accounted for 52% of total manufacturing employment in 1939, but only for 38% of it in 1944. Corporations with 500 or more employes—only 2% of the number of firms—employed 62% of the workers in 1944.

War speeded the growth of business that was already big. Two thirds of all the prime war contracts granted from June 1940 through September 1944 went to 100 firms, and five of the firms skimmed off the top 20% value of the contracts! The quintet that hit the jackpot included: General Motors, Curtiss-Wright, Ford Motor, Consolidated Vultee Aircraft and Douglas Aircraft.

Who owns the big corporations? The government report says:

"The relatively few giant corporations of the country which have come to dominate our entire economy are, themselves, largely owned by only a few thousand stockholders, and are controlled by a mere handful of huge financial interests."

The report cites a Securities & Exchange Commission investigation which found that one half of all corporate stock is owned by only 75,000 persons, and that of this number 10,000 own one fourth of the total stock!

The report points out that eight groups of bankers control 106 of the 250 largest corporations.

Who Controls What

EIGHT INTEREST groups control 106 of the 250 larger corporations and nearly two thirds of their combined assets—not to mention the assets of many smaller corporations that fall under the eight groups' influence.

Largest of the interest groups, according to the government report, is Morgan-First National, of N. Y. City.

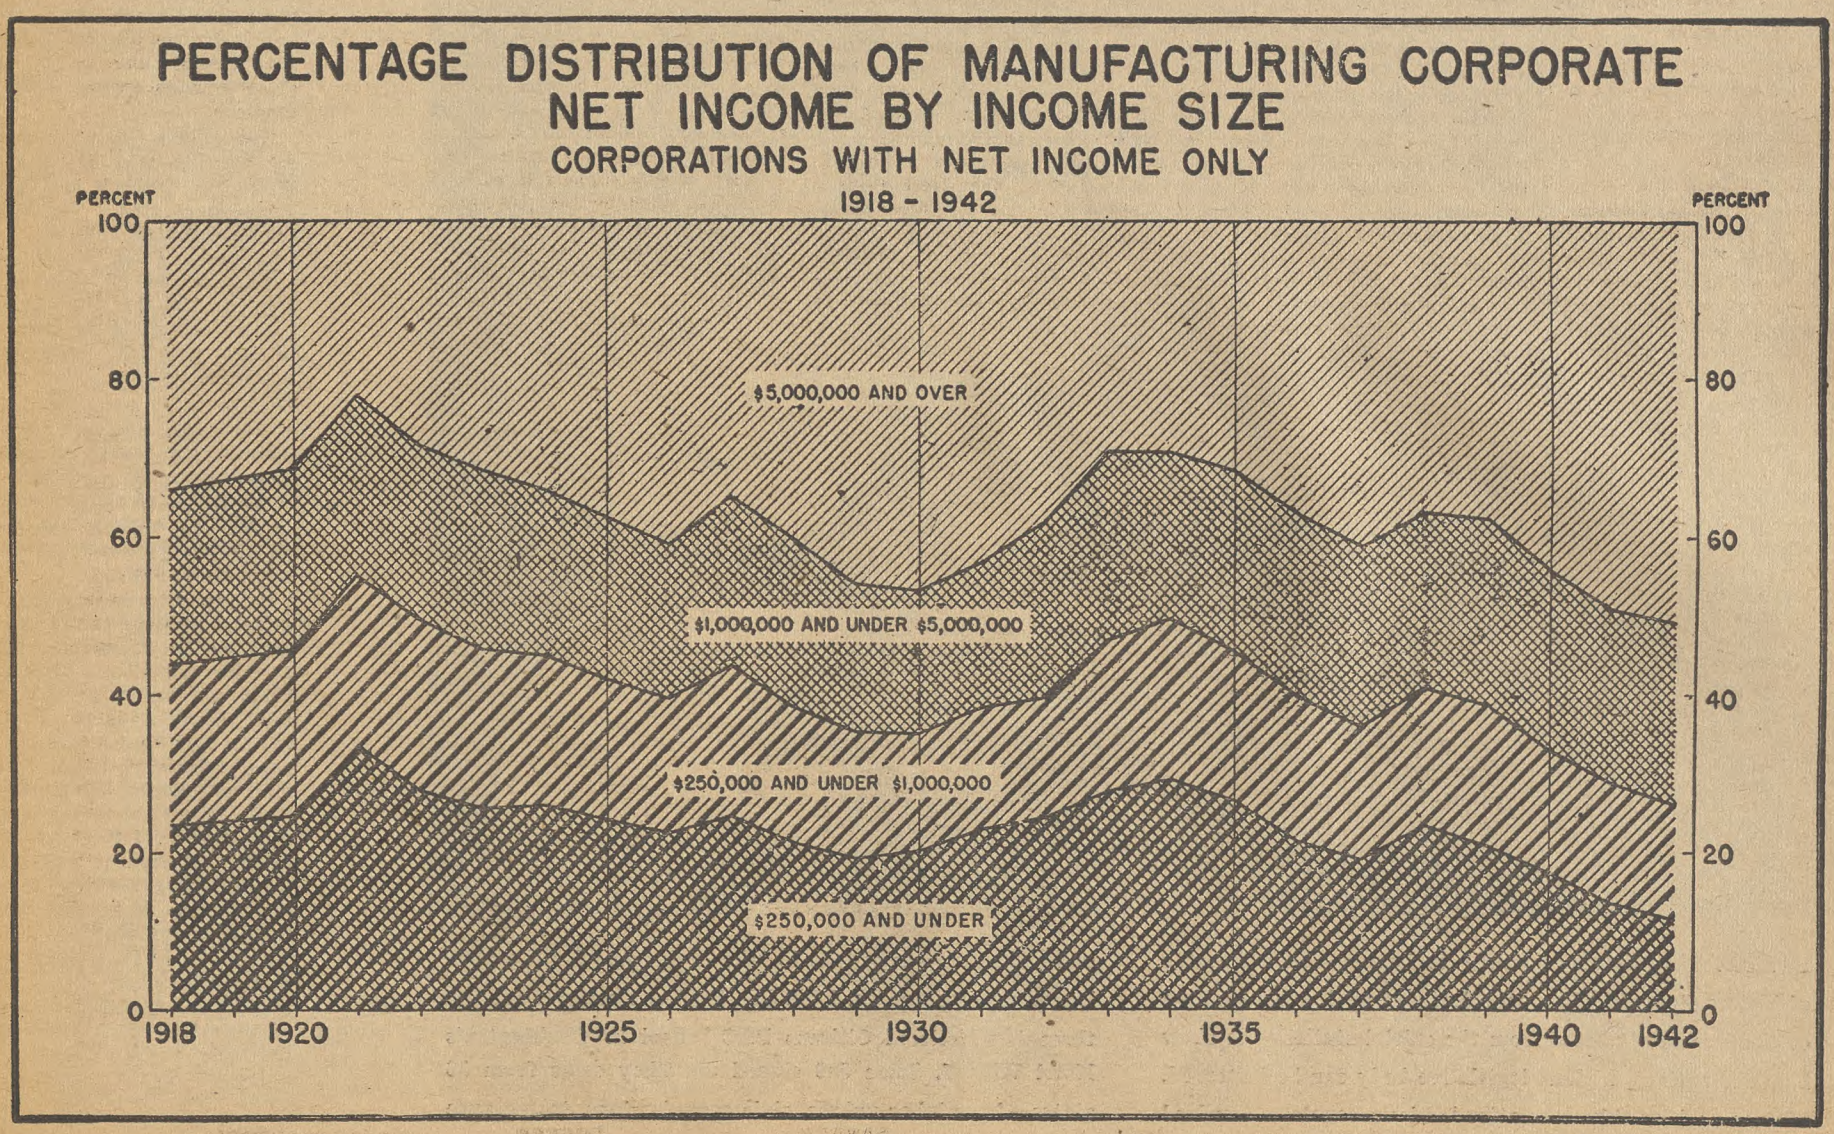
"The group includes 41 of the 250 large corporations, 10 of which had two or more directors in common with J. P. Morgan & Co. It is made up of 13 industrial corporations headed by the U. S. Steel Corp. and including corporations mining iron ore, copper and coal, extracting oil, making steel and brass, fabricating electrical equipment, railway equipment, and plumbing and heat apparatus, and supplying bakery products, mail-order services, and Pullman services; 12 utility corporations, including the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the Intl. Telephone & Telegraph Co., and power companies controlling, in 1935, 37% of the electric generating capacity of the country; 11 major railroads or railroad systems, controlling 26% of the first class railroad mileage of the country; and five financial institutions including the two for which the group has been named."

"The eight interest groups," the report continues, "are by no means independent of each other, coming together on boards of directors and in many other activities. Most of the giant corporations, furthermore, have influence and controls which extend to medium-sized and small companies and most of them are bound together, in one way or another, through trade associations, and such 'peak' associations as the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers . . ."

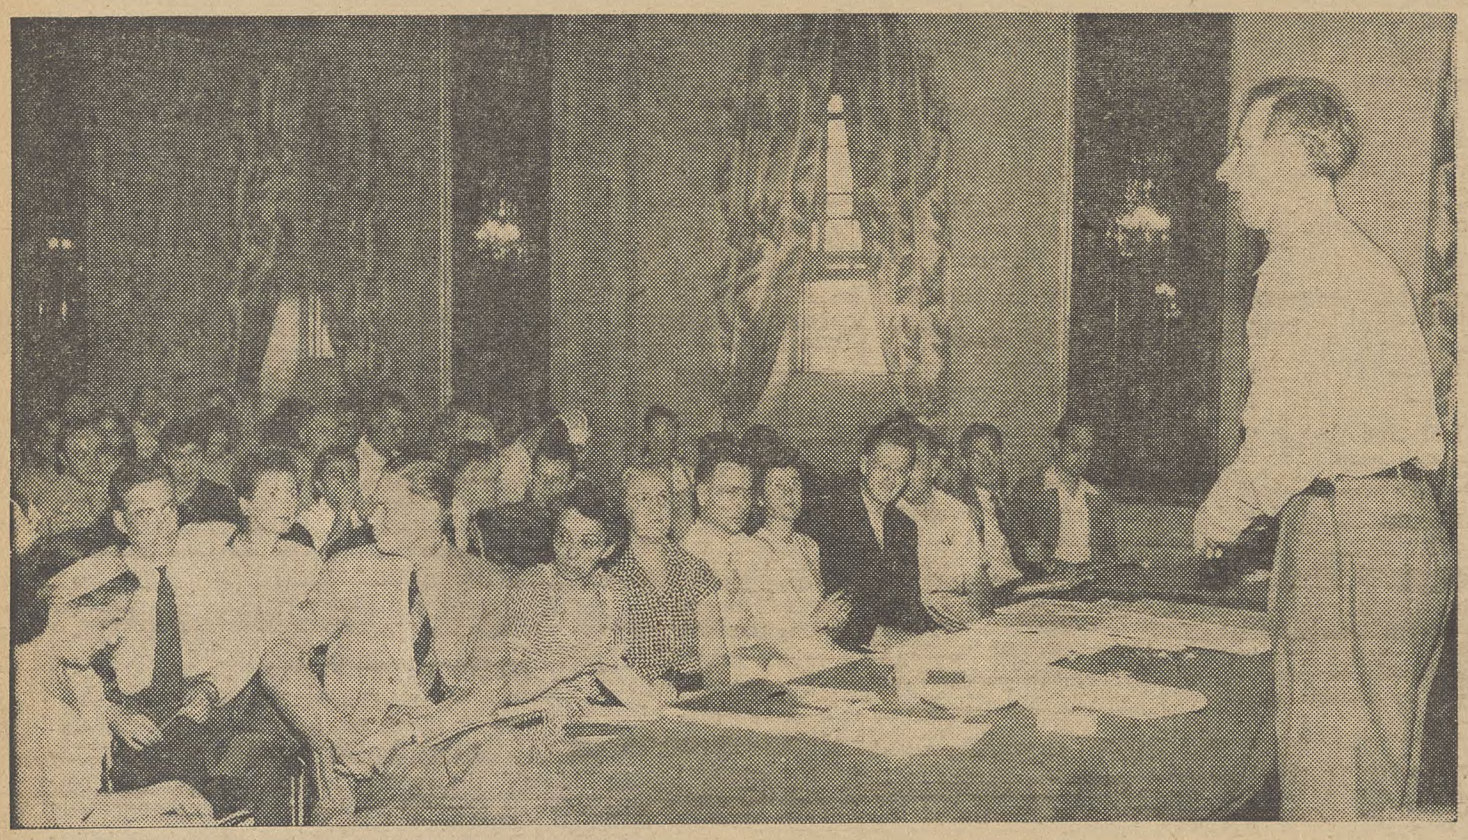
Even tighter control on the nation's economy was gained by this monopoly combine during the war, with every prospect of it being continued. If the 250 largest manufacturing corporations acquire war facilities financed by the federal government, they will control almost as much manufacturing equipment as was held before the war by the 75,000 corporations then in existence!

"Thirty-one of these largest manufacturing corporations are controlled by only five interest groups—Morgan-First National, Mellon, Rockefeller, du Pont and the Cleveland group," says the government report. "The facilities of these 31 corporations total $18.2 billion, or 30% of the nation's usable manufacturing facilities."

What about the future? "Economic concentration," says the government report, "will probably be higher in the postwar years than before the war as a result of: The production improvements and scientific research which big business gained during the war; the increase in liquid funds and general financial strength of big business; the ability of big business to keep its name and trademarks before the public eye during the war; and finally the fact that big business will probably acquire a greater share of the war-built facilities which it operated than will small business, regardless of whether economic conditions are prosperous or depressed."



'CRAM SESSION' IN PRACTICA AT CAPITAL SCHOOL



UPPER: They listened intently to Barney Conal, director of Voters Research, Inc., who lectured on the composition of Congress and quoted from the official statistics to show how our nation's highest legislative body can be improved. Classes such as this were attended by a couple of hundred students who took lots of notes, asked lots of questions, and picked up lots of info to take back home for the coming election campaign. LOWER: Students register for the three-day National Citizens PAC school in Washington's Hotel Willard. Some 500 signed up. They came from 36 states—from labor unions, civic organizations, temperance groups, even the Natl. Association of Manufacturers.

12-HOUR DAY! It was a crowded weekend—but there's lots to learn

WASHINGTON'S Hotel Willard "is just around the corner" from the White House, a hefty stone's throw from half a dozen government buildings, a mile from the Capitol of the United States.

For years the hotel had a reputation as a meeting place for political big-shots. Veterans of the political scene like to reminisce about the political deals that have taken place in its rooms, of agreements on legislation and elections.

Last week a new kind of political meeting took place at the Willard—a "School for Political Techniques" staged by the National Citizens Political Action Committee. From almost every state and from all walks of life, amateurs in the vital game of politics converged on the school to get a quick, fact-crammed course on how to help win elections.

The 500 students learned plenty. On hand to instruct them were 50 specialists in every phase of political activity —strategy, organization, handling of various groups, research, public relations.

Having trouble getting your political message before the people? Len De Caux, CIO Publicity Director and Allan Reitman, who holds the same job with CIO-PAC, spent a couple of hours telling how to get out a newspaper release, and how to do it most effectively. Joseph Gaer of PAC talked about pamphlets; Allan Saylor of the UAW-CIO, a former government radio official, discussed the radio as a means of carrying the people's message in the coming elections.

Attitudes of the various groups that make up our national population were described by a dozen of their leaders—Leo Krzycki of the American Slav Congress, Chat Patterson of the American Veterans Committee, Rev. Thomas Keehan of the Congregational Council for Social Action.

crowded schedule at the political action school in Washington last to learn if labor and the people are to have political "know-how."

For every phase of politics, experts were present to talk of methods and techniques.

The students were as interesting as the instructors. In attendance were lots of young folks, brimming over with enthusiasm and full of questions. There were gray haired men and women, too—less obviously excited but just as interested.

They came from every imaginable sort of organization—from Political Action Committees, from CIO and AFL unions, from the railway brotherhoods. There were college students from half a dozen universities. Members of the staffs of several Congressmen and Senators were registered—presumably they wanted to learn some more about politics—and ladies from the League of Women Voters.

Classes ran during the days. In the evenings all 500 students got together for mass meetings. Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon, a Republican, and Oscar Ewing of the Democratic National Committee talked over the "significance of the '46 elections" at one of the night sessions. The next evening Pare Lorenz, just out of the army, and Thomas Brandon—both of them experts on documentary films — discussed the movies as an important factor in getting people to vote right in November.

Graduation was scheduled at a banquet on Saturday night, with Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, Pres. A. F. Whitney of the Railway Trainmen and Chairman Frank Kingdon of the Natl. Citizens PAC as the chief speakers.

The three-day session in Washington is the fore-runner of similar schools to be conducted throughout the country.

Says C. B. Baldwin, executive vice-chairman of Natl. Citizens PAC:

"We envision this school session as a teachers college which will enable the students to return to their own communities and in furthering their 1946 campaign work to organize community schools of political action techniques.

"There is growing awareness of the need for political action by the average citizen, and it is our hope that Americans of all political beliefs, of varied backgrounds, and with the common purposes of perfecting our democratic processes, will learn the many technical aspects of political action.

"We look forward to the establishment of several community schools in the next few months, and to the extension of this educational program even after the 1946 elections."

At the Washington school representatives of many organizations learned practical things about politics. As that know-how spreads, American liberals and unions will become more and more effective in the political contests of next November.

SOMETHING DOING EVERY MINUTE! (At top) Sec. of Commerce Henry Wallace warns students "you've got to emphasize right down to the grass roots what's needed for peace." He talked at opening session. (Center) Two of the many girls attending the school take time out for the pause that refreshes, but classes went along despite the well-known Washington summer heat. (Lower) Classes opened up all sorts of bull sessions. Here's Clark Foreman, head of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, arguing out a couple of points with a student at Natl. Citizens PAC school.

LEADERSHIP OF THE CIO BREWERY WORKERS

MEET THE CIO BREWERY WORKERS

HEIST the steins and drink, brothers, for June 19, 1946! That was the day that two fighting pioneers for industrial unionism in the United States were united.

That was the day the referendum votes showed that the International Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers of America had decided to join the CIO.

Thus were wed the first industrial union to be chartered by the AFL and the first federated organization of labor unions to put the American workers on the high road of industrial unionism.

90,000 Members

The Brewery Workers enter the CIO with nearly 90,000 members, some 12,600 of which are either in the armed services or maintain temporary withdrawal cards at $2 a year.

It also becomes the oldest union in the CIO. Its history as a national organization begins in 1886, sixty years ago.

Then it was a craft union. Only the brewers, the top-skilled men, belonged. But its first major strike in 1886 in New York City ended disastrously. The craft plan was immediately scuttled and the Brewery Workers began organizing industrially.

The then-young AFL issued it a charter in 1887.

But in 1901 several craft unions of the AFL began to raise the demand that the Brewery Workers surrender bits, pieces and chunks of its membership.

For 42 years the union battled valiantly against the insistent claims of the crafts. But when the AFL executive council demanded that it surrender, the Brewery Workers left the federation and assumed an independent status.

That ended on June 19, 1946.

Now let's move the cameras in for a closeup. Let's have a look at the newest members of the CIO.

Half-Dozen Crafts

First, the brewers. They stand guard on the important process of preparing the beer.

They see that the malt is cleaned at the cleaning-reel and poured into the mills which crush it into a coarse meal.

They labor over the hot mash tubs where the malt is combined with water and gelatinized substances and the temperatures gradually raised until it hits a perspiring peak of from 167 to 173 degrees.

Then the brewers must attend the filtration of the malt, by now boiled into a substance known as wort. More intense boiling as the filtered wort is built up with hops.

Yeast Is 'Pitched'

Now come the brewers who "live" in the only temperate zone in the bowels of the brewery. They handle the hop-infused wort as it is strained and cooled. They add the yeast, "pitching" it into the starting tank or settling tub and then stand watch over the fermentation.

Finally there are the brewers who work in the polar regions where the "green" beer is allowed to age for one to three months or longer at the freezing point, in the finishing cellars where the beer is pumped up with carbon dioxide gas (carbonation).

Now come another group of brewery workers: the bottlers. They could be called the barrelers or the keggers for they tend to the preparing and the filling of the 31-gallon barrels and the kegs. But most of them "bottle," for more than 60 per cent of America's annual beer output now is sold in bottles or cans.

This branch of the brewing industry is today highly-mechanized with ingenious devices which fill 250 bottles a minute. The "experts" in this field can move bottles from the conveyors to the cases at the rate of eight bottles a move, four with each hand.

Finally the Brewery Workers embrace in their organization the drivers. Like the men who must swing the heavy barrels and kegs, the drivers require —and have—strong arms and shoulders. They fall into two groups, the draught-beer drivers who work on straight wages, and the beer-bottle drivers who work on a straight guaranteed wage plus a commission.

Bargain Together

In every major brewing center save one—Milwaukee—the brewers, the bottlers, the draught drivers and the bottle drivers have separate locals. But when the collective-bargaining time rolls around they bargain as one —and strike as one.

(Milwaukee is an accidental exception. Membership fell so low during the Volstead era, all the members were combined in one local. They stayed that way after probihition was lifted.)

The Volstead Era (1920-1933 A. D., i.e., Awfully Dry) nearly killed off the Brewery Workers union. Membership fell lower than the alcoholic content of near-beer. It was then that its leaders strove—and successfully —to preserve the organization by moving into related fields.

Hence, today, the Brewery Workers embrace 3000 soft drink workers, 1800 malting workers, 1400 yeast workers, 500 syrup-makers, and 500 engaged in producing alcohols, vinegar, and, yes brother, even malt for malted milk.

The union and the brewing industry established one of the first National Recovery Act (NRA) codes setting up a basic 40-hour work week. When the Supreme Court junked NRA, the shorter work-week was continued and has been maintained ever since.

Straight wages—no piece rates, except for bottle drivers—is the industry pattern. But, except for the yeast industry, there are no industry-wide contracts. Wages are based on local patterns, but these are influenced by rates won in other brewing centers. The yeast industry contract covers all save wages, which are worked out locally.

Three Top Officers

The Brewery Workers bring to the CIO one feature of union structure unique in the American labor movement. It has no single top officer. It is administered and controlled by a triumvirate, the general secretary-treasurer, the general recording secretary, and the general corresponding secretary. A 2-1 majority among the three top officers is sufficient to underwrite an action.

This system, as well as the names given the top officers, are derived from the practices and the nomenclature worked out in the early German labor movement. Since the original membership was composed largely of German workers who fled the repression of the Junkers, they brought with them their traditions and practices.

The three leaders of the Brewery Workers are William J. Kromelbein, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., general secretary-treasurer; Edward Hughlett, of Waukesha, Wisc., general recording secretary, and Karl Feller, of Dayton, general corresponding secretary.

They make their headquarters in a handsome two-story brick building on one of Cincinnati's hills. Here, too, is published the union's weekly tabloid, the Brewery Worker, under the editorship of Emil Beinicke.

The aims and objects of the new CIO union include "active participation in the political labor movement of the country, on independent labor lines."

And in their Declaration of principles, the Brewery Workers affirm:

There is no power on earth strong enough to thwart the will of such a majority (of working people—Ed.) conscious of itself. It will irresistably tend toward its goal. It has natural right upon its side. The earth and all its wealth belong to all . . . The results belong to the community at large. It is organized labor that will finally succeed in putting these principles into actual practice, and in introducing a condition of things in which each shall enjoy the full product of its toil."

This is the third renewal of the contract between Prudential and the UOPWA, which also holds agreements covering agents employed by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. and other smaller insurance companies.

TEXTILE WORKERS SMASH DISTRICT 50 RAID ATTEMPT

Pres. Milton Murray of the CIO Newspaper Guild and other ANG leaders lay a wreath on the monument of John Mitchell, former Mine Workers leader. The ceremony took place during the ANG convention at Scranton, Pa., June 17-21.

JOHN L. LEWIS' biggest bid for stolen strength within the nation's huge textile industry was dealt a smashing blow this week, when, in an NLRB election, the CIO Textile Workers administered a five-to-one defeat to the United Construction Workers, District 50, United Mine Workers in the seven plants of the American Viscose Co.

Of the 10,908 valid votes cast, 8,987 were for TWUA-CIO, 1,747 were for District 50, and 141 were for "no union." This, in spite of the fact that District 50 organizers have been working at American Viscose Mills for the last two years and boasted that Lewis spent a quarter of a million dollars on his raid.

TWUA-CIO has been collective bargaining agent for the 17,000 American Viscose workers for nine years. Viscose locals were among the first to be chartered by the CIO in the early days of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee in 1937.

Plants affected are at Lewistown, Marcus Hook, and Meadville, Pa.; Parkersburg and Nitro, W. Va., and Front Royal and Roanoke, Va. Wesley Cook, assistant director of TWUA's synthetic yarn division, assisted by John Babler and A. O. Boyles, conducted the campaign for TWUA.

District 50 minions suffered another setback when Local 66 of the Auto Workers at the Richmond Radiator Company in Uniontown, Pa., defeated an attempt by District 50 to raid their local by a 5 to 1 victory over the Lewis group.

GUILD MAPS ORGANIZING DRIVE

A $120,000 organizing program for the newspaper industry was adopted as the high point of the annual Newspaper Guild convention at Scranton, Pa., last week.

To push the drive it was recommended that the ANG hire an international director of organization and additional field organizers, with the international executive board instructed to explore the possibility of recruiting new organizers from the ranks of the guild on a one-year leave of absence basis.

The organizing drive, carried out partly through the district council plan, will be in full cooperation with the CIO southern drive and will put special stress on commercial departments. ANG Vice Pres. Ralph Novak of Detroit was named to lead the drive in six key midwestern cities.

At the same time the convention adopted a collective bargaining program aiming at a $100 weekly minimum for journeyman reporters and similar key jobs in all departments and a $50 minimum for any experienced worker in commercial or editorial departments. A 4-week annual vacation with pay, elimination of geographical differentials and a health and welfare fund paid by employers were included in the program.

The convention went on record for "full voluntary participation by guild locals" in the work of the CIO Political Action Committee, with the reservation that this "does not constitute blanket indorsemen of any candidate."

Public Support Shifts to Labor

You couldn't tell by the newspapers, but the Fortune magazine poll for June reveals that public opinion has shifted labor's side of the fence in the current labor-management disputes.

People were asked: Suppose you had been acting as a referee in labor-management disputes during the past three months, do you think your decision would probably have been more often in favor of labor's side or more often in favor of management's side?

NLRB RULE HELPS CIO

THE first round in the direct competition between the CIO and the AFL in their drives to increase union strength in the South went this week to the CIO Atomic Workers Organizing Committee at Oak Ridge, Tenn. The NLRB ordered the industrial type of bargaining unit, as opposed to the craft type, to be set up at the three operating companies — Tennessee Eastman, Carbide and Chemicals Corp.

The rules and regulations issued the elections among the 20,000 by the NLRB in preparation for workers of the Oak Ridge plants were announced by Daniel Leary, special agent for the NLRB who had investigated and reported upon the situation in Oak Ridge.

Leary said he believed that an early election in the Oak Ridge plants could be arranged with the consent of all parties.

The NLRB's decision in ordering the industrial type of bargaining union represents a distinct CIO victory, for CIO has demonstrated that bargaining through One Big Union on the industrial pattern is the only effective way to give workers adequate bargaining strength.

PHELPS-DODGE STRIKERS AGAINST 'GOOD OLD DAYS'

THE Phelps-Dodge plant at Elizabeth, N. J., which manufactures copper wire, was struck in January, 1946, after the company refused to accept a War Labor Board decision in a two-year-old case. The members of the union, the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, are still on the picket line.

The company has since ignored a mediation offer from the United States Department of Labor and has refused to bargain in good faith with the union.

The company denies higher wages, holidays with pay and other benefits to its workers which competing companies have already granted to their workers.

The company hired Tony Anastasia, held several years ago for $100,000 bail, for his connections with New York's infamous "Murder, Inc." to direct a group of thugs and scabs in an attempt to break the strike. The strike-breakers attacked a boatload of strikers in New York harbor, injuring two so severely that hospital treatment was required.

The company doesn't want any kind of union so it can go back to the "good old days" when it paid 15 cents an hour. That's the way Wylie Brown, president of the company in Elizabeth, N. J., feels about it.

But it's a different story with the strikers, who belong to UE Local 441.

They know what the score is. They know that victory for the union means good wages, job security and decent working conditions. They know that defeat means sub-standard working conditions and low wages.

That's why they ignore company leaflets which the mailman deposits at their doorsteps in a steady stream.

Bulletin

The union has filed suit against the Phelps-Dodge company and the city of Elizabeth on their violation of civil liberties in barring citizens (strikers at plant) from access to a public street adjacent to the plant. Company guards permit everyone but strikers to enter street.

That's why they laugh when the company shrieks that they are being "misled" by a "small selfish group of irresponsible outside agitators."

Nicholas Yapchanyk, who has been working at the plant since 1910 has an answer for company propaganda:

"A long time ago," he says, "I could work 72 hours without sleeping. Now I am getting old. I have to sleep a little bit." He knows what happens when a factory is run by one of industry's little Hitlers. Now he does picket duty 28 hours a week.

Trafe Staazak started making cable in Elizabeth, N. J., in 1910 and remembers getting $1.40 a day. He made 81 cents an hour before the strike and he's fighting now to protect his union and prevent a return to sub-standard wages.

Several weeks before the strike began Frank Denisowitch was accidentally entangled in a coil of wire, hoisted into a machine and killed instantly. There's a lot he could say—if he were here to speak.

All through the plant there are many whose glass eyes, missing fingers or scarred faces back up the town's view of Phelps-Dodge as a "slaughternouse." They've got something to say about the strike and they're 100% behind it.

The strike-breaking efforts of the company and its importation of thugs into Elizabeth resulted in the formation of a "Joint Committee to Settle the Phelps-Dodge Strike" in which the AFL, CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods and independent unions, representing over 40,000 workers, have gone down the line for Local 441 in its fight for an 18½-cent-an-hour general increase, six paid holidays and union security.

The committee met with the mayor of Elizabeth to protest the presence of strike-breakers in that city. The mayor agreed with the committee and called the company to effect their removal. Phelps-Dodge turned down his request.

During the last depression, men would line up for work outside of one of the Phelps-Dodge plants. From one of the supervisors, there would come the command, "Roll up your sleeves and flex your muscles." And up the line he'd go feeling each man's muscle to see if he were strong enough for the company's needs.

These men whose muscles, whose sweat, whose eyes and bones and blood have gone into the manufacture of copper wire for decades, know that whatever they get will have to be forced from the copper boss. They know that if they don't act, they'll get nothing.

That's why there's no talk of quitting.

Are Your Children Always Affectionate?

Healthy children aren't angels! Aggression, the desire to push the other fellow over and feelings of rivalry are natural. To love brothers and sisters one minute, and the next—when they somehow get in our way—to wish they'd never been born, is just human. It is very important, when the bad moments come, to remember that Jimmy's desire to "biff" his little brother is natural. It isn't that he doesn't love his brother—only, Jimmy being human, like the rest of us, is full of good and bad temper, of love and anger. We just have to keep trying to keep the loving side up.

ASK SUPPORT FOR SEAMEN'S BILL

A little band of determined women, headed by Mrs. Florence Schenkman of Brooklyn, descended on Congress this week to demand passage of the Jackson Bill (HR 1899) which gives seamen the right to draw unemployment compensation. The bill has been bottled up in committee for months.

Armed with petitions containing more than 4,000 signatures backing up their position, the women who do not represent any organization, saw Reps. Klein, Celler, Buckley and Keogh, all Democrats from New York and Senators Mead (D., N. Y.), Pepper (D., Fla), Radcliffe (D., Md.), and Magnuson, D., Wash.).

WFTU FOR FREE GERMAN UNIONS

The executive committee of the World Federation of Trade Unions, meeting in Moscow, has drafted a program for the strengthening of democratic unionism in conquered Germany, according to dispatches from Moscow. The WFTU will recommend to the Allied Control Council in Germany a plan for the "development of a free democratic trade union movement in all occupation zones."

The recommendations also called for the formation of industrial, rather than craft unions, urged union status in official denazification bodies, and urged the unions to carry on "systematic re-education of the German youth" in the spirit of democracy.

GOOD HOUSING = HEALTHY FAMILIES

By ANNA BERENSON

Washington Housing Representative, CIO United Auto Workers

FOR the first time in our history there is a chance that families of veterans and workers in the low and middle income groups may find it possible to realize a long cherished dream to own a home in a decent neighborhood. The Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill, (S 1592) if passed, would make this possible.

Although this bill is important to the whole nation, it is of particular interest to the housewives among our working population, upon whom the responsibility for rearing children and creating a healthful family atmosphere rests.

Every veteran and worker has a right to expect a real home for himself and his family. He should be able to find relaxation and happiness in his home. Space, a quiet restful street, a bright and cheerful house, some yard, play space for children, good light and ventilation in all the rooms, a kitchen with modern conveniences, room arrangements which provide privacy for various members of the family, closet and storage space—these are minimum requirements.

We in America, with our tremendous productive capacity, should be able to expect at least this, not to mention the many modern facilities which are available to us for the purpose of making housekeeping and child rearing a pleasure instead of a burden.

Why is it that our industrial buildings are the finest in the world while we are so backward in the production of housing? It is because the "slick" real estate "speculators" with their "jerry-built" houses and flats, completely standardized as to overcrowding and shoddy construction, have had an unequalled lush market for years due to the critical shortage of housing.

These speculative real estate groups have not made even a pretense of trying to build houses for families that live in the slums. Instead they have carried on a continuous campaign of opposition to public housing and slum clearance. These are the same people who clamor for restrictions against labor unions, want OPA ended, and who hurl charges of "regimentation" and "socialism," at every measure which attempts to give the people a better standard of living.

The groups which make up the real estate lobby include the monopoly-minded producers of critical materials which go into building, the money lenders and the small speculative group of home builders. Their only objective is to make an easy killing for themselves during the period of high prices and scarcity shelter. They have a fund of five million dollars which they are using to carry on the biggest pressure campaign in history to prevent passage of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill.

In spite of this tremendous opposition, it is absolutely essential that we begin to build houses to make it possible for our veterans, workers, housewives, and our children to live normal, healthy lives. It is urgent that we see to it that our slums, which breed disease and crime, are eliminated and housing built in neighborhoods that offer some real chance for decent living.

Will the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill help correct the evils of the slums and enable our veterans and our workers to own or rent decent homes in good neighborhoods? It most certainly will. For the first time we have a national housing program which has been called by many people the "Magna Carta" of housing.

The CIO Housing Dept. has had a great deal to do with the fact that in this bill it will be possible for the first time to bring the cost of new housing within the reach of the pocketbooks of families of organized labor. This bill will make it possible to clear slums, to build public housing for the lowest income group, to help families that can "pay their own way" own their individual homes at monthly payments which are reasonable.

And most important of all, the bill, if passed, will insure that future housing will conform to decent standards of livability. It will encourage the building of houses in planned communities where the land and homes are developed from the consumers' point of view rather than from the speculators'. Under this bill community facilities such as day care centers, health clinics, schools, play areas for children and commercial facilities can be financed and built and can easily become a part of every well-planned project.

This is exactly why the real estate lobby is fighting the passage of this bill with all its vigor. In spite of them, however, we have managed to get the bill passed in the Senate.

Hearings are starting on this bill in the House Banking and Currency Committee of which Brent Spence is chairman during the week of July 1. It is important that we in organized labor, especially we women who have so much to gain by the passage of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill let Spence and our Congressmen know that this bill must be speedily passed in the House and sent to the President to become law. We have only a few weeks left bfore Congress adjourns.

POLITICAL ACTION, MEXICAN STYLE

By FRAN ALLAN

BIGGEST hat in the Mexican political ring is a union sombrero, as more than two million organized workers climax a 12-month campaign on July 7 to elect labor's candidate, Miguel Aleman, to the presidency of the Mexican Republic.

Aleman is indeed labor's candidate, for his first endorsement for the presidency came from the CTM—Confederation of Mexican Workers—the giant among Mexican labor unions, organized on an industrial basis like the CIO.

CTM used its own program as the political yardstick for measuring the potential candidates, and Aleman stood tall against it. His program is the program of the CTM, and his six-year record as Secretary of the Interior under President Avila Camacho is the consistent story of a fighter for the peoples' progress.

The CTM support was quickly followed by endorsement from the National Farmers' Federation and from the National Federation of Popular Organizations — the three groups comprising the official government party of Mexico, the PRM. In January of 1946, the CTM candidate Aleman was acclaimed the candidate of PRM at its nominating convention.

Meanwhile, reaction south of the border found its official representative in Ezequiel Padilla, Mexican Foreign Secretary, who helped to maneuver a seat for fascist Argentina at the San Francisco Conference last year.

No sooner had Padilla announced that he would run in opposition to Aleman than the Mexican political scene became strongly reminiscent of the Roosevelt-Dewey battle in 1944.

Standing firmly on a platform of red herrings, Pedilla and his big-business backers loudly promised the Mexican workers to do everything the Comacho government had done, and everything the Aleman government would do, but of course to do it much better, and without "government interference."

The organized Mexican workers, carrying the ball for their own candidate, soon found that they were also carrying the ball for the working people of the United States. For the most ardent supporters of Padilla come from the ranks of our own anti-union industralists.

Padilla himself admitted it. In an interview in the newspaper "La Prensa," he said: "More than one big North American company has offered me money. I might say I have been offered millions. But I have steadfastly refused all such bids."

But just as the American people, guided by CIO-PAC, refused to let the monopolists dictate Dewey, so the Mexican unionists are refusing to let our monopolists put in Padilla.

On July 7, the Mexican trade unions will look back on a full nine months dedicated to the election of their own candidate, and of the congressional and local government support that will enable him to put their program into action.

SAME ISSUES

Mexican voters go to the polls July 7 to elect their president. South of the Rio Grande, as in the United States, the issues revolve about the basic problems of great wealth vs. the people. Fran Allan, just back from Mexico, gives CIO NEWS readers a first-hand account of how the people are doing.

As far back as October of 1945, more than 300,000 persons, most of them union members, marched in a five-hour stream past the candidate's reviewing stand in Mexico City. It was the biggest political demonstration in the country's history, and keynoted the vigorous determination with which Mexican trade unions are participating in the political life of their nation.

"Pro-Aleman" committees, set up in all CTM affiliates, are charged with the responsibility of mobilizing the membership in complete support of the national, state and local PRM candidates.

Millions of pieces of literature have been distributed to and by CTM members, and more millions of buttons, window stickers, and auto plates. Vivid posters in union offices and meeting halls proclaim the Aleman program of full employment, healthful dwellings, rural electrification, industrialization, growth of the trade unions.

Demonstrations and rallies for the PRM candidates take on all the colorful and tuneful gaiety of a fiesta, and it's usually a safe bet that the most elaborate floats and the biggest banners have come from the hands of a CTM "Pro-Aleman" committee.

The unions' own delegates help to nominate the candidates, and registration is eliminated by the Mexican procedure of delivering a voter's permit to each eligible citizen. (Union members or members of a unionist's family who are eligible but fail to receive permits consult the committee for aid in establishing their eligibility.) Thus the committees have been able to concentrate, throughout the campaign, on publicizing the issues and the Aleman answers.

In the face of almost unanimous opposition on the part of the Mexican press, and in spite of provocations and of red-baiting orgies by Padilla and his supporters, the committees have done their work well.

The proverbial needle would be harder to find than a CTM member or his neighbor who doesn't know all about Aleman, his program, his record, and the importance of electing him on July 7.

Mexican political experts are predicting an Aleman landslide —and already they are giving organized labor and the CTM in particular a major share of the credit.

Women can't vote in Mexico—yet. But that doesn't stop these pretty senoritas from working for the election of their candidate, Miguel Aleman. The girls are members of the CTM (Workers Confederation of Mexico), which has gone all-out for Aleman. BELOW: As far back as the eye can see, marches a CTM parade in Monterrey during a political demonstration. In the front ranks are workers from the Mexican movie industry. Political dopesters predict labor's staunch support will place Aleman in the Mexican "White House."

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Pass the 65c Wage Bill

Having voted for a raft of amendments to the OPA bill, some House reactionaries are trying to kid the public into believing they are against inflation.

Their way of doing it is to label the 65c minimum wage bill as inflationary, on the false theory that a 25c hourly wage boost for the worst paid people in the country will upset the economy.

While they talk that way, many of these same Congressmen are hopeful that no minimum pay bill will be passed without the Pace rider, which would pour several billion dollars into the hands of big farmers and food processing companies.

The minimum wage bill (S. 1349) was passed by the Senate some time ago with the Pace rider attached. Now the bill is buried in the House Rules Committee, whose polltax bloc has determined to keep it there.

Meanwhile, House liberals are hopeful of drawing up a new bill and of by-passing the Rules Committee. They deserve full support in their efforts to help the lowest-income groups among the country's workers.

No Place for Fascism

The Senate Privileges and Elections Committee is to be congratulated for its prompt action to investigate the campaign for re-election being conducted by Sen. Theodore Bilbo in Mississippi.

Bilbo's campaign has been strongly reminiscent of the talk that used to come from a man named Hitler. Veterans returning from the wars must think "this is where I come in" when they read accounts of Bilbo's speeches.

A week ago, for instance, he called upon every "red-blooded Anglo-Saxon man in Mississippi to resort to any means to keep hundreds of Negroes from the polls in the July 2 primary." And, in a clear call for violence against Negro citizens, Bilbo added that "if you don't know what that means, you are just not up on your persuasive means."

Sen. Glenn Taylor (D. Ida.), in calling for an official probe of Bilbo's remarks, commented:

"I do not know whether the report is an accurate one. I hope it is not. Newspapers have been known to err before.

"But the situation is a very serious one and it reflects upon the dignity of the Senate.

"If our members are not respected as the duly elected representatives of their states, their prestige will fall."

And Sen. Smith (R. N. J.) commented that Bilbo's remark was "a terrible thing if it is true."

The decision of Sen. Green (D. R. I.), chairman of the committee, is doubly welcome because of recent actions taken by the House.

That body has already cited one person for contempt of the notorious Wood-Rankin Un-American Committee, and may take similar action against two officials of an anti-fascist refugee committee who thought the committee's fascist-minded investigators had no business demanding all their files.

The Wood-Rankin Committee has declined to investigate the reborn Ku Klux Klan, whose activities are rousing southern liberals to action.

Having fought a war against fascism abroad, it's time we cracked down on some of our homegrown would-be dictators.

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

POLL TAX: Supporters of the bill to outlaw the poll tax in seven Southern states hope they can get the bill to the floor of the Senate early in July.

H.R. 7 was passed by the House months ago. The Senate has shown marked reluctance even to debate the issue; but strong advocates of the resolution feel it may be possible to bring it up immediately after the big federal appropriations bill has been passed.

So this is a good time to remind your Senators that you want action on the polltax.

Write the Senators today; ask them to help bring the bill to the Senate floor, to fight against any possible filibuster, and to vote for its passage at the earliest possible moment.

ATOMIC ENERGY: The House Military Affairs Committee is still playing around with the McMahon Bill (S. 1717), designed to provide intelligent, constructive use of atomic energy.

It's almost nine months since the first atom bomb exploded in Japan; and now, as the fourth one goes boom at Bikini, the House committee still appears anxious to keep atomic energy as a plaything for the brass hats.

The McMahon Bill, which has been endorsed by CIO and thousands of leaders in the fields of education, science, industry and government, provides for civilian control of the atom while preserving necessary security.

But the Military Affairs Committee insists upon giving the military men wide control powers.

If humanity is to benefit by our new knowledge of atomic power, the McMahon Bill is a necessary first step. Write and wire your Congressman to vote for the McMahon Bill—without amendments.

HOUSING: After weeks of delay, the House Banking & Currency Committee has finally ordered hearings on the vitally important Wagner-Ellender-Taft low-cost housing bill.

CIO representatives in Washington have been clamoring for hearings, and will be appearing before the committee in the next few days.

Meanwhile, you can help get yourself some decent housing by writing to Rep. Spence, chairman of the House Banking Committee, and to your own Representative; demand quick action and a favorable vote on S. 1592.

ANTI-LABOR BILLS: Outright restrictive measures against the unions seem destined to be forgotten; but anti-labor Congressmen are making a habit of tacking sections of them on to other, necessary bills. Tell your Congressman to fight and vote against all these amendments.

Facts Pile Up

During the past two months, the Senate Labor Committee has been gathering a mass of material on the need for a national health program, as proposed in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill.

That bill would set up a national insurance system, very much along the lines of the existing social security system, to help millions of workers pay their doctor and hospital bills.

Dr. Michael M. Davis, chairman of the executive committee of the Committee for the Nation's Health, offered some convincing facts on the need for passage of the bill.

"In 1941," he pointed out, "all the 300 health and accident companies together paid out in benefits some 160 million dollars.

"The total direct wage losses of workers plus all medical costs were 3½ billion dollars.

"Thus these private companies covered only 5% of the potential need as measured in money."

Dr. Davis also criticized a substitute bill which has been sponsored by Sen. Taft (R. O.). The Taft proposal would provide limited charity benefits for a few families—but as Dr. Davis noted, what Americans want is an insurance program for the majority of self-supporting families.

That's the heart of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill. Ask your Senator to support it.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS

For a Better Tomorrow for Everybody

Leading the fight for abolition of OPA was the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. This week the NAM took full page ads in daily newspapers to tell the public that NAM members "face the future with confidence"—that they want a "better tomorrow for everybody." The CIO NEWS reproduces the ad, above, along with a few clippings from the daily press about the "better tomorrow" that the NAM is helping bring us.

OPA Compromise

FIGHT FOR LIFE IN SENATE

A "COMPROMISE" OPA bill, stripping out some provisions of the notorious Taft amendment but retaining numerous amendments to which labor and consumers had voiced objection, appeared ready for debate and vote in the Senate as The CIO NEWS went to press.

The compromise, approved in the Senate Banking Committee by a 12-5 vote, followed a hectic week of legislative activity during which uncontrolled prices headed upwards in line with previous predictions. As the week ended, nationwide protests against the scuttling and crippling of price control were being voiced on an unprecedented scale.

The House earlier had passed a simple 20-day "as is" extension of price control, but a similar effort in the Senate was defeated through the objections of Sen. O'Daniel (D. Tex.) and a few of his cohorts.

The new bill would extend rent and price control until June 30, 1947 and re-establish all ceilings and OPA regulations in effect when the old law expired. Like the old, amended bill, the version approved by the Banking Committee gives the Secretary of Agriculture rather than the OPA the final say on which agricultural products are to be controlled, and it sets up an independent board with power to over-rule either the OPA or the Agriculture Dept. on retention of ceilings for specific commodities.

Also missing from the new bill are the maximum average price plan to spur production of low-cost clothing; the billion dollar cut in food subsidies, and provisions to spur the lifting of controls on other items.

Over the shoulder of Congress stood the American people, united as on few previous peacetime occasions, to defend their living standards from inflation and ruin.

Standing shoulder to shoulder with hundreds of other organizations of women, consumers, veterans, minority groups and civic leaders, the CIO moved quickly to build public protest against the crippling of price control.

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, called on all unions to mobilize sentiment in their communities for immediate passage of a new, effective act. He urged CIO affiliates to confer with mayors and governors in order to secure proclamations calling for hold-the-line emergency measures, and suggested development of Citizens Price Defense Committees throughout the nation.

The results of the activities of CIO and other organizations, and of the public wrath at their sell-out by profit-builders in Congress and in the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, were quick to come. Shortly after President Truman had vetoed the phoney extension bill, with its wide open profit bonuses in the shape of the Taft amendemnt, unprecedented volumes of mail and telegrams deluged the nation's capital. The messages were heavily weighted in favor of continued price control.

The CIO statements and calls to action were too numerous to mention in detail. They came from international unions, state and city councils, and local unions by the hundred.

In N. Y., Chairman Sidney Hillman of PAC urged all PAC groups to plunge into the price control fight, warning that passage of a new OPA bill is necessary to preserve the "hopes of the people for peacetime economic stability."

"In 1946," he said, "Congress must be told that the people will hold them strictly accountable for their action on this vital measure."

Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union said that removal of controls in the textile industry will force a disastrous spiral of inflation. The N. Y. City CIO urged workers to hold shop meetings and to wire their Congressmen.

"The combination of polltax Democrats and big business Republicans, the Taft-Byrd-Rankin axis aimed at the American people, has . . . wrecked the OPA," a statement issued by the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers charged.

"Congress by this action is in effect nullifying wage agreements that had to be wrung from industry at great cost to the American people."

The public protests, together with evidence of immediate rises in the cost of living, obviously had the effect of chastening Congressmen who only a few days earlier had been parroting the NAM salestalk that "nothing much would happen".

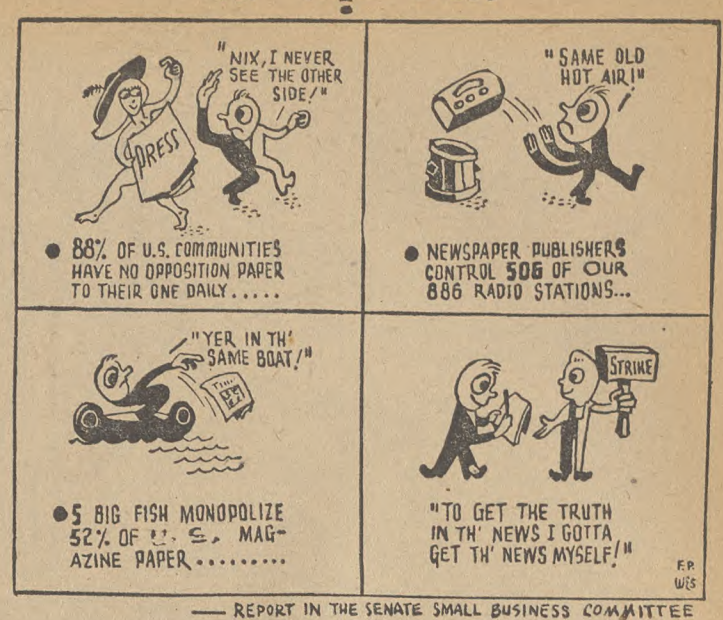
From every section of the nation, the rent increases were frightening. In Kansas City a landlord jumped rent for an apartment from $47.50 to $75 a month. In Chicago a man who had secured OPA help in cutting his rent from $35 to $31 a month, was told that hereafter it would be $70.

Food store prices also ascended rapidly, and feverish activity on the nation's wholesale commodity markets spelled out higher retail prices in the next few weeks. Against these tangible facts, the cries of the NAM that "everything's gonna be all right" rang hollow.

In a speech at the Natl. Lawyers Guild in Cleveland, CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman warned that 40% of the nation's savings are concentrated in the hands of 10% of the people, with the result that large masses of people are living on current income.

To maintain their living standards, Pressman declared, wage increases will be necessary, along with improved minimum wages and strict price control, if the national economy is to be provided with sufficient purchasing power to keep its wheels in motion.

Nevertheless, five Senators on the Banking Committee—Taft (R. O.), Butler (R. Nebr.), Capper (R. Kans.), Buck (R. Del.), Millikin (R. Col.) and Hickenlooper (R. Iowa) voted against the new price bill. All have been consistent foes of OPA in any form or with any powers.



Nice Work If You Can Get It!

$2 MILLION AND A CONGRESSMAN

A FRIENDLY - to - business Congressman and some fat little war contractors who raked in nearly $2 million in "salaries" during the national emergency provided a show this week that was hardly calculated to stimulate patriotism among at least 40% of the people whose income has been so low that they have savings averaging only $40 each.

The show was put on before the Senate War Investigating Committee. It was really small-fry stuff, with the dynamite reserved (possibly) for the "Big Hundred"—the 100 corporations that accounted for two thirds of all prime war contracts, or a total of $117,634,400,000.

The friendly-to-business Congressman was Rep. Andrew J. May (D. Ky.), chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee and co-sponsor of the May-Johnson bill which would turn over control of atomic bombs to the military.

May of course, was perhaps simply interested in helping to make a few small corporations a little bit bigger—something that business generally has been steadily plugging at until, now, 250 corporations control two-thirds of the nation's productive facilities.

But an eager-beaver medal should have been awarded him for his efforts, which helped bring two families who controlled 19 mid-west war firms a tidy little $1,690,000. It was split up among A. B. and Bertha Gellman, J. T. and Rae Weiss, and Henry M. and M. W. Garson. The Washington agent of the firms, J. F. Freeman, got $113,625 from 1942 to 1945.

May's part in the deal, which involved among other firms the Batavia Metal Products Co., Batavia, Ill., and the Basin Metal Products Co., was cited in testimony before the Senate Investigating Commitee in the form of confidential memoranda.

While May's reported conversation said that he wanted simply "an equal chance" for the firms, he also asked Maj. Gen. H. H. Campbell, Jr., chief of Army Ordnance, to "jump on" the head of the Chicago ordnance district in behalf of them.

May intervened at least three times on behalf of the firms, to aid in their manpower, production and contract problems.

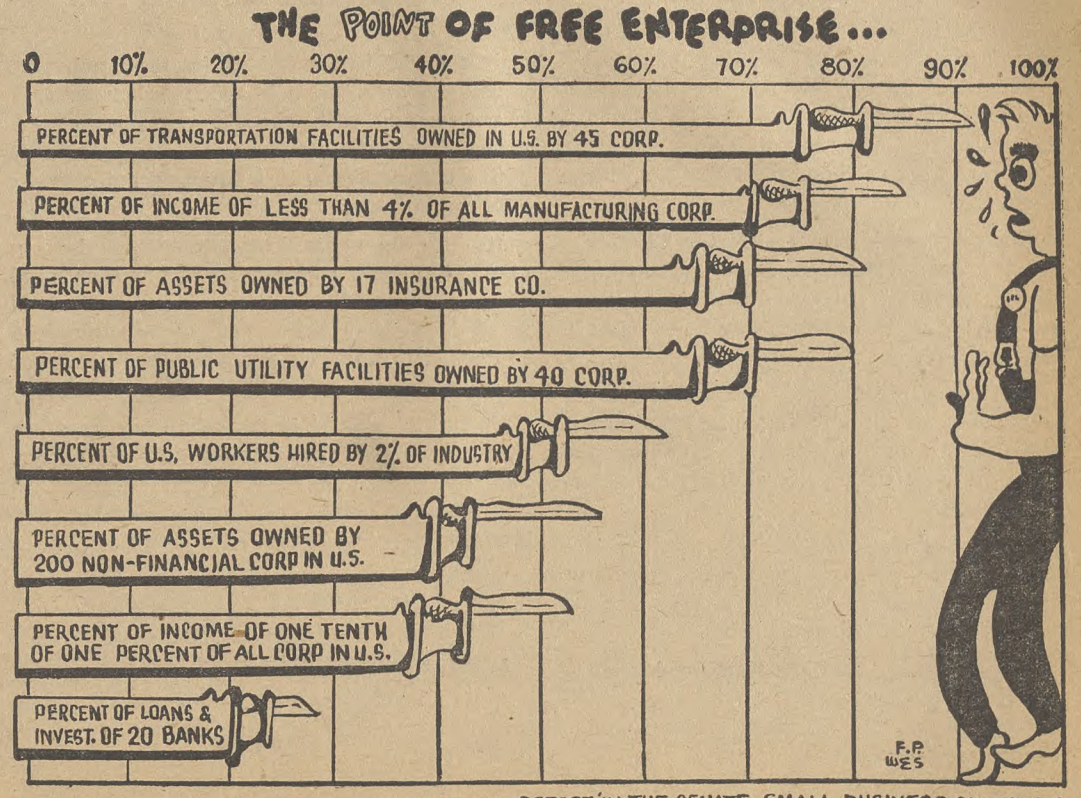
Commenting on the nearly $2 million profits of the families, Sen. James M. Mead (D. N. Y.), chairman of the investigating committee, said it was "an evil procedure that must not be tolerated."

Monopolies 'Can' Even What You Hear!

A sample of the monopoly control of American life is the situation in the newspaper and radio business, according to the recently issued report of the Senate Small Business Committee.

The latest figures show that newspaper chains (like Hearst, Scripps-Howard) control 40% of the daily newspaper circulation and one half of the Sunday circulation.

Of 886 radio stations operating Dec. 31, 1944, newspaper publishers owned or controlled 506.



Board Meeting

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week called a meeting of the CIO Executive Board in Washington, D. C., for Thursday, July 18. Important organizational matters will be on the agenda.

WOLF ON THE PROWL

The wolf is at the door of every American home today—the wolf of uncontrolled prices and inflation, threatening the living standards and savings of every family.

Who let this wolf loose? It was the majority of Congress, which yielded to the profiteers' pressure and amended the Price Control Act in such a way as to raise prices in all directions and make enforcement impossible.

President Truman had no alternative but to veto this bill, if any real price control was to be preserved. Congress upheld this veto but failed to enact even a temporary extension of OPA pending preparation of another bill.

Already the wolf has shown his fangs. Prices on wheat and corn, hogs and cattle, cotton and wool immediately rose to the highest peaks in more than 20 years. Wholesale food prices boomed to the highest level since 1920. Landlords began raising rents by large amounts.

Retiring Stabilization Director Chester Bowles warned that, if basic commodity prices continued to rise at the existing rate, living costs would double in 20 days.

Retail prices generally did not rise immediately to the same extent, though there were many cases of profiteering price increases. Many retailers boasted they were holding the line to previous OPA prices during the emergency.

But it was obvious that all retail prices would soon respond to the upward trend of basic commodities, once storekeepers had to pay higher prices for new stocks.

The only thing that has restrained much greater price increases is fear that the public will become so aroused as to compel Congress to enact effective price control.

A big campaign has been launched by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and others of its ilk to kid the public into believing that uncontrolled inflation is not so bad as it was painted.

But, in a few short days of no price control, enough damage has already been done to enough people, and enough evidence has been presented of what is in store, unless real control is restored, for even the blind to see.

There are heartening signs of such a storm of public protest that some of the inflation-happy politicians have already started to run for cover.

What can we do to keep this wolf of inflation from our doors, to prevent it from devouring our substance and threatening our future security?

The CIO has urged all its local unions and councils to join with other labor groups and with church, veterans', consumers', women's and all other representative organizations in a Citizens' Price Defense movement.

It urges shop-gate demonstrations and every other kind of mass protest to city and national authorities, so that an overwhelming demand for an effective price control bill may be channeled to Congress from the grass-roots of America.

Governors should be asked to set up state rent control by proclamation, the CIO says, and every price increase, every rent increase and eviction must be fought locally and brought to the attention of Congress.

Only Congress can remedy the harm it has already done. But Congress will do so only if its members are convinced the voters will stand for nothing less.

So it's up to us to make our voices clearly heard on Capitol Hill, demanding immediate enactment of a really effective Price Control Act, without any of the destructive amendments previously passed by Congress.

LOOKING AHEAD

EVER run into the little fellow who picks a quarrel with a big guy when he's sure enough good, strong peacemakers are around to separate them?

"Let me go. Lemme at 'im," he hollers, when his opponent's arms are securely pinioned, as well as his own. "I'll knock his block off." But imagine his embarrassment, if the peacemakers actually did release their hold.

The enemies of price control are rather similarly embarrassed at this moment, due to the unexpected veto of their bill to strangle OPA.

Many of them took alarm when suddenly confronted with the freedom from price control for which they had been hollering. They were scared that big fellow, the American people, might hit back, rather than let himself be kicked and robbed now they were free to try it.

★ ★ ★

The anti-OPA politicians did not plan it this way. They wanted to eat their cake and have it.

They wanted to amend the Price Control Act to lift the lid at once on most prices and to make all controls, including rent control, impossible to enforce before long.

But they also wanted to do this in such a fashion that they could claim (no matter how hypocritically) to have favored continued price control, and blame the gutted OPA for the resulting inflation.

Responding to labor and popular demand, the President called their bluff. He told the American people that the bill passed by Congress was as bad as no price control at all, since it amounted to the same thing.

When price control lapsed, due to Senate failure to vote a temporary extension, the profiteers and their politicians found their ultimate aims achieved more suddenly than they had expected. The full evil of their intentions was exposed as by a lightning-flash.

They were now momentarily free to rob the people to their heart's content. But still there was no dancing on the sidewalks of Wall Street.

Stocks jumped up only briefly and then went down again, as the speculators began to wonder if the American people would really allow themselves to be so shamelessly robbed of their earnings and savings.

While some profiteers took immediate advantage, more responsible business leaders urged restraint. "Business must be on its good behavior," they said, "lest the people take alarm and demand new and stricter price controls."

So an effort was made to kid the public, through newspaper ads announcing that this, that and the other store would not increase its prices.

But even a child could see that these retailers' promises were based on the prices they paid for their stock, and that as soon as manufacturing and wholesale prices went up, so too would retail prices.

The confusion, hesitation and alarm evident in the very circles where price control had been most damned were due not only to fear of the people's wrath, but also to lack of belief in their own propaganda.

This propaganda had claimed there were huge wartime savings in the hands of people willing and able to pay higher prices for what they wanted.

But recent government reports have shown that 60% of wartime savings are in the hands of a few well-to-do families (who can refrain from buying until prices are more reasonable) and that most of the people have little or no savings.

If, therefore, living costs are allowed to soar, most Americans will have to cut down on necessities and have no surplus for extra purchases even at present prices.

So saner business heads realize that only a few speculators and profiteers will benefit from lifting price controls, while everyone else, including business, will suffer from the failure of mass purchasing power to match our capacity to produce.

But there are none so blind as those who won't see. And experience has shown that the inflation-crazy majority of Congress, and the greedy profiteers behind them, are not susceptible to reason or even plain common sense.

They will have to be made to fear the wrath of an aroused electorate, determined not to be robbed by uncontrolled prices, if any effective price control is yet to be salvaged from Congress.

Truman Signs Hobbs Bill

ANOTHER SLAP AT LABOR

THE Hobbs bill—in theory aimed at racketeering, but in practice apt to be used as one more device to harass honest labor activity—became law on July 3, when President Truman signed the measure.

The new law makes it a felony to obstruct, delay or interfere "by robbery or extortion" with the movement of any goods in interstate commerce, and imposes fines up to $10,000 and jail sentences up to 20 years for violating the statute.

In signing the bill, Truman declared he had been advised by Attorney-General Clark that the bill does not in any way "interfere with the rights of unions in carrying out their legitimate objectives."

The opinion of the Dept. of Justice chief was in strong contradiction to the attitude of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who had urged the President to veto the Hobbs bill.

Murray's letter had made clear that the CIO is "opposed to racketeering and supports legislation directed against racketeering." The CIO leader warned the President, however, that the net effect of the Hobbs bill is only to invalidate sections of the 1934 Anti-Racketeering Act which specifically protect labor's legitimate bargaining and strike rights.

In his letter urging a veto, Murray said:

"The two simple protective provisions thus inserted in the 1934 act declare:

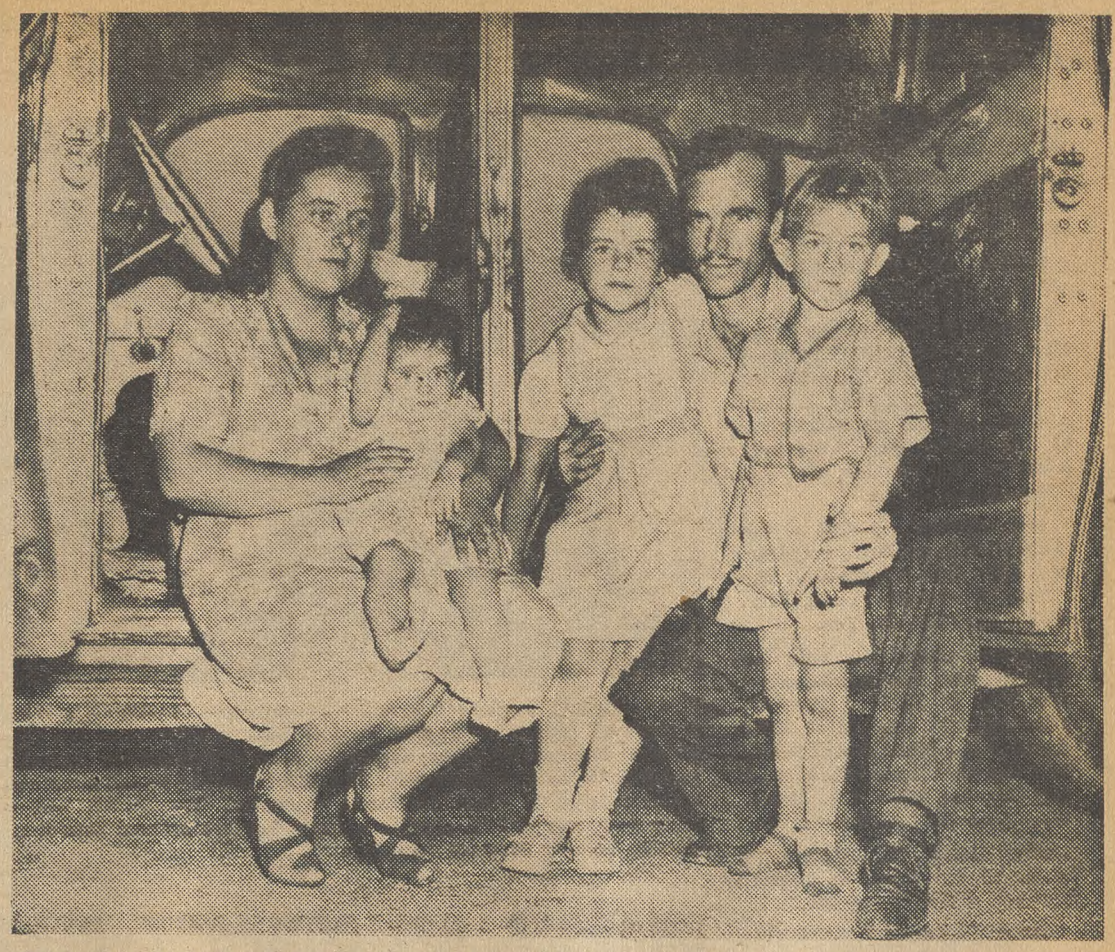
"1. That the Act was not to apply to the 'payment of wages by a bona fide employe, and

"2. That no court was to construe the Act 'in such a manner as to impair, diminish, or in any manner affect the rights of bona fide labor organizations in lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof.'

"It is these two provisions which the Hobbs bill would delete. That alone would construe the sole change which the Hobbs bill would make in the present anti-racketeering act."

Murray added that the bill was slipped through the Senate "against a deliberately ambiguous background in the hope that anti-labor judges might apply its extremely severe penalties to the legitimate activities of labor organizations."

The Hobbs bill was first introduced in Congress in 1942 by Rep. Sam Hobbs (D. Ala.) following a Supreme Court decision holding that the anti-racketeering law did not apply to certain practices of the AFL teamsters in N. Y. City.



The housing shortage has forced this Washington, D. C., family to live in a taxi and like it. James and Dorothy Fitzmaurice and their three children (l. to r.): Lynda, Lenora and John, temporarily occupied the basement of an apartment house, were even forced out of that. "I really don't have time to work long enough to make decent money," Fitzmaurice explained, "because I have to spend so much time looking for a place to live." The Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill (see Washington Guide) would help provide housing for low income families such as this one.

IT'S A LIE

By MARTY SOLOW

"BUT I read it in the papers — right there in black and white—it couldn't be a lie."

Wanna bet?

One week ago, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, in an editorial wrote, "It's bad enough that the word was passed out at the last Democratic convention to 'clear everything with Sidney'."

IT'S A LIE because Arthur Krock who made the original statement more than two years ago has long since denied its validity. This hasn't stopped dishonest newspapers and unscrupulous politicians from using it.

The Hearst press in a body has denounced the Allis-Chalmers strike as "an attempt of Communist labor agitators to use the government as a cat's paw in an act of arbitrary confiscation."

IT'S A LIE because Allis-Chalmers has defied government orders concerning peaceful settlemen of the dispute. The Pittsburgh plant of Allis-Chalmers has been shut down for 95 days despite the willingness of the union to settle on the basis of government orders and an 18½-cent hourly wage raise which follows the established national wage pattern.

Allis-Chalmers is actually defying the government and holding back production of vitally needed farm and power equipment.

The New York Times in an editorial last week wrote that the "Hobbs anti-racketeering bill (signed this week by the President) prohibits robbery and extortion by labor unions."

IT'S A LIE because the Anti-racketeering Act of 1934 already prohibited robbery and extortion of all kinds. What the Hobbs Bill does is to remove the safeguards, protecting legitimate trade union activity, which were written into the Anti-racketeering Act.

Under the Hobbs bill anti-labor judges can now interpret union fees as "extortion," union hiring halls as a "job racket," organizing campaigns as "coercion," wage raises gained through strikes as "extortion," picketing as the use of "force" and name-calling such as "scab," as "violence."

Three weeks ago the N. Y. Daily News wrote that PAC "tries to bulldoze politicians . . . makes political deals of all kinds and has a lot of money.'

IT'S A LIE because the News cannot name any politicians "bulldozed" by PAC (there aren't any). PAC does not make "deals" because it supports candidates solely upon the basis of the issues involved.

As for money — Peter Edson, conservative columnist, recently discussed PAC finances. He revealed that up to the 1944 primaries PAC had collected and spent $670,000. Between the primaries and election PAC spent a total of $492,000 and finished up with a debt of over $100,000.

The Daily News carried no account of the millions contributed by the DuPonts, Pews and other employers in 1944 to the Republican campaign.

GOLDEN RESIGNS AS STEELWORKERS VICE-PRESIDENT

Clinton S. Golden, a leading official of the CIO United Steelworkers Union since its birth as the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in 1936, announced his resignation last week as vice-president of the organization.

Golden, who resigned from office on grounds of failing health, will continue to be associated with the USA-CIO for special assignments.

The USA-CIO executive board, meeting at Asheville, N. C., accepted his resignation with deep regret, and elected James G. Thimmes, director of the union's 38th district in California, as his successor. Thimmes, a member of the old Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, was an organizer in Chicago and California during the SWOC drive.

In announcing Golden's resignation, other officers of the union—Pres. Philip Murray, Sec.-Treas. David McDonald and Vice-Pres. Van Bittner—paid tribute to his "outstanding abilities and devotion to duty."

RANKIN AND BILBO MAY NOT CHEER THEM

GEORGIA and Texas primaries in the next two weeks will provide progressive Southern forces with a chance to offset, in part, the re-nomination of Mississippi's Sen. Bilbo and Rep. Rankin, labor and race baiters whose return to Congress was assured. Victory in the Democratic primary is the equivalent of election.

A heavy Negro vote in Georgia and Texas is expected, following the Supreme Court decision outlawing white primaries in federal elections.

In Georgia the 120,000 registered Negroes out of an anticipated record-breaking total of 1,000,000, coupled with the 18-19-20-year-old vote, may well decide the ability of the liberals to hold the ground they have won in the past four years under Gov. Ellis Arnall. Texas reports an estimated 150,000 registered Negroes out of a probable total of 2,000,000.

Blessed by popular Governor Arnall, recognized as a spearhead of progressivism in the South, 36-year-old James V. Carmichael, lawyer and businessman, will face two former governors in the July 17 gubernatorial contest, Eugene Talmadge and E. D. Rivers.

Also closely watched will be the congressional race in the fifth district, scene of the forthcoming battle by Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin for reelection.

Mrs. Mankin, who in 10 years as Representative to the State Legislature, was responsible for more legislation for social improvement than any member of the House, was elected to Congress last February to fill the unexpired term of Rep. Robert Ramspeck. Progressive forces are lined up solidly behind Mrs. Mankin.

Further interest has been aroused in the Mankin race by the obvious efforts of the Democratic machine to displace her.

HINRICHS QUITS LIVING COST JOB

CIO and AFL accusations that rises in consumer prices have been inadequately reported by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics finally bore fruit this week.

The man responsible for reporting price rises, A. Ford Hinrichs, this week resigned. He had been acting commissioner of labor statistics for six years, and said he could not continue with the Dept. of Labor unless he was appointed full commissioner. Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach refused to give him the job.

ATOMIC FORUM

A call to a public forum on the World Control of Atomic Energy has been issued by the Natl. Committee on Atomic Information for July 15-16, in Washington, D. C. Key speakers from the fields of science, government, labor and industry will participate.

RUTTENBERG RETURNS

Stanley Ruttenberg, assistant director of research for the CIO, has returned to duty at national headquarters after a three-year period of service in the army.

25 SOUTHERN PLANTS GO CIO

DIRECTOR Van A. Bittner of the CIO's southern organizing committee this week announced CIO victories in Natl. Labor Relations Board elections at 25 plants since the campaign started.

Biggest triumph was at Laurel, Miss., where the CIO Woodworkers defeated the AFL at the Masonite Corp.—the largest industrial plant in the state—by a vote of 812 to 662. For three years prior to the election, the AFL had a closed shop.

Seventy-nine per cent of the 1,300 eligible employes voted for the CIO Auto Workers at the Texas Engineering and Mfg. Co., Grand Prairie, Tex.

At two plants the vote for CIO unions was unanimous—the Fur & Leather Workers winning at the Ideal Oak Leather Co., Morristown, Tenn., and the CIO Auto Workers at the Blanton Plow Co., Rome, Ga. Other CIO victories are:

Allied Feed Mills, Memphis Tenn., 45 for Food & Tobacco Workers, 6 for "no union."

Greenville Laundry, Greenville, Tenn., 19 for Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, 15 for "no union."

Dimick Casting Co., Birmingham, Ala., 26 for United Steelworkers, 18 for "no union."

American Bakery Corp., Rome, Ga., 25 for Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Union, 4 for "no union."

Southern Household Furnishings Co., Birmingham, Ala., 120 for Steelworkers, 3 for "no union."

Borden Manufacturing Co., Galesboro, N. C., 146 for Textile Workers, 37 for "no union."

General Box Co., Natchez, Miss. (woods crew), 9 for Woodworkers, 7 for "no union."

Aviation Activities, Inc., of Texas, 66% of eligible employes voted for CIO.

Algar-Sullivan mill unit, Century, Fla., 125 for Woodworkers, 96 for "no union."

Monroeville Bus Co., Monroeville, Ala., Auto Workers won in a card check.

Eleven other CIO victories were announced earlier.

Bittner announced appointments of John J. Brownlee of the Steelworkers to handle all committee cases before the NLRB and of Jerome A. Cooper, Birmingham, Ala., as southern counsel for the committee.

A former lieutenant commander in the Navy, Cooper saw action in the Pacific and the Mediterranean, and earlier was a law clerk for U. S. Supreme Court Justice Black and a regional director for the U. S. Labor Dept. in Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi.

This California cop, armed with teargas gun, pistol and club, was sent to scare off pickets of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers at the Libby plant at Sacramento where they have been locked out for refusal to pay dues to the AFL Teamsters. The Teamsters had signed sweetheart agreements with north California canneries. The NLRB had set aside an apparent FTA election victory, but has ordered that a new election be held in these canneries.

CHARGES AFL-COMPANY PLOT

PRES. Donald Henderson of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers this week charged the Campbell Soup Co. and the AFL Cannery Workers with "criminal conspiracy to smash the CIO union in Campbell's plants in Camden and Chicago" and with "a plot to bring on a shutdown in these plants at the height of the tomato canning season."

Meanwhile, the Campbell Co. reneged on its contract with FTA, failing to pay retroactive pay to workers in the two plants and charging the union with threatening to violate its contract. FTA officers pointed out that its members were staying on the job, but that the company was breaking the agreement.

Henderson's charges were supported by affidavits sworn to by Buford W. Posey, Memphis, Tenn. Posey declared under oath that Leon Schachter of the AFL Cannery Workers, James Heap of the Campbell Co., and H. L. Mitchell and Barney Taylor of the Natl. Farm Labor Union offered him a job as manager of the Campbell camp at Salisbury, Md.

He said that he was informed that his principal job was to report to Heap any CIO sympathizers who would be fired. Posey said he was promised $200 a month and also a bonus in the event of an election—if the AFL won.

Posey also asserted that Schachter told him $5 million in the AFL Cannery Workers' treasury would be used "to break the FTA" with the company's cooperation.

Heap said, according to Posey, that he was working with Schachter, that they planned to move into the Chicago plant first, that 17 workers had signed up with the AFL there, and that they later intended to move into New Jersey. Henderson wired Labor Sec. Schwellenbach asking him to halt "the conspiracy."

To Put It Briefly

Wives and children of members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers who have been on strike at the Phelps Dodge plant at Elizabeth, N. J., on July 3 picketed the headquarters of Local 3, AFL Electrical Workers, N. Y. City, after members of the AFL union went to work at the factory in an attempt to break the strike. Two days earlier company goons fired on the union's picket boat.

The strike of 5,500 members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers which started Feb. 3 at the Phelps Dodge plants at Long Island City, N. Y.; El Paso, Tex., and Douglas, Morenci and Bisbee, Ariz., was settled with union gains including wage increases of 18½ to 26c an hour.

A strike of CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. was averted last weekend when the Pacific American Shipowners Assn. said it would cut the work week at sea to a 48-hour norm and in port to 40 hours, as shipowners had agreed to in negotiations in Washington with the CIO Committee for Maritime Unity.

★ ★ ★

A four-day strike by San Francisco street-car and bus operators belonging to the CIO Transport Workers and the AFL ended this week when the city, which operates these facilities, agreed to a settlement including $1.24 an hour. Wages had been raised previously to $1.10 an hour for carmen and $1.15 an hour for busmen, effective July 2.

★ ★ ★

Labor Sec. Schwellenbach was urged this week by the CIO Textile Workers to seize three Georgia Mills where more than 2,000 workers have been on strike from two to 10 months because of the failures of companies to engage in collective bargaining. Companies involved are the Athens Mfg. Co., Athens; the Crompton-Highland Co., Griffin, and the Exposition Cotton Mills, Atlanta.

STEELWORKERS REJECT OFFER

Members of Local 1533 of the CIO Steelworkers, on strike since Jan. 21, last week rejected an offer from the Fairbanks Morse Co. in Beloit, Wis., to return to work.

Among reasons for refusal was the company's failure to observe a War Labor Board's ruling over a year ago which would amount to $1,900,000 for the 3,800 workers. The company offered a total of $190,000 on the condition that the slate be wiped clean.

WOODWORKERS WIN 22% RAISE

"THE GREATEST victory ever achieved in the history of the woodworking industry" was claimed last week by the CIO Woodworkers union as 37,000 members returned to work following a settlement of a 37-day strike against the British Columbia, Canada lumber industry.

Pres. Harold Pritchett of the B. C. District Council of the IWA said the union gained a 22% wage increase; a 40-hour week in logging operations for six months; a 44-hour week in sawmills, and for the first time an irrevocable check-off.

The dramatic highlight of the strike was the trek of thousands of IWA members and their wives to the provincial capital at Victoria, where they marched in the rain to press their demands.

WIN TWO IN ROW

Within three days workers at two Norfolk, Va., breweries last week chose the CIO Brewery Workers by overwhelming majorities over the AFL Teamsters in Natl. Labor Relations Board elections. The vote was: Rupperts Brewery, BW 81, Teamsters 5; Atlantic Brewery, BW 47, Teamsters 3.

Richmond, Virginia, city employes, members of the CIO United Public Workers of America, take their case to the public by distributing leaflets throughout the city. Public support and the solidarity of the union forced the city to grant them a 10% wage increase.

NEW CIO UNION GAINS GROUND FAST

If you get 28,000 new members without the benefit of a concerted organizing drive then you've got something that people want.

That's the record to date of the newly formed CIO Public Workers which sprang from a merger of two former CIO unions, the Federal Workers and the State, County and Municipal Workers.

With its membership at a peak now of 103,000 the union has chartered 17 new federal locals and has announced a comprehensive organizing plan to double the membership in the coming year.

In the meantime since April when the UPWA was formed, over $200,000,000 in wage increases have been gained for members as well as improved vacation agreements, insurance, paid holidays, grievance machinery and improvement of retirement and pension systems.

The Public Workers have a membership potential among federal, state, county and municipal workers which amounts to approximately half the membership of the entire CIO. And the Public Workers are out to organize these groups, to make them a part of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Their convention (in April) sounded one major note, "a determination to organize the unorganized. . . . The job of a union in the public service is to improve the conditions of workers, to raise their wages, to bring them first class political and social citizenship by gaining for them full collective bargaining rights and the privileges and benefits enjoyed by other American workers.

(Public workers now do not come under protection of the wage and hour act, they have no social security, they are not eligible for unemployment compensation and they are not protected by the Wagner Act.)

The largest single UPWA gain was registered in Detroit where the CIO union scored with a stunning 2 to 1 victory over the AFL in an election involving over 5,000 employes of the Department of Public Works. The city employes have also received a wage increase of 18 cents per hour.

The Westchester County Joint Board of the UPWA announced recently that an agreement had been signed between the city of Yonkers, N. Y., and the union which provided for settlement of all issues in dispute between the union and the city. The contract provides for three-week vacations, grievance machinery and wage increases in the next budget for operating employes who are on an annual wage. Employes covered by the new agreement work for the Department of Public Works.

Lackawanna, N. Y., UPWA Local 530, representing employes in the Department of Public Works, won a 35-hour week with the same take-home pay for a previous 48 hour week, sick leave with pay, and guarantees that there will be no discrimination against employes because of union membership, race or creed.

Their new organizing plan gives principal emphasis to organizing in the union's southern region.

The plan was approved after requests from the Director of the CIO's southern organizing drive, Van Bittner, that organizers familiar with the special problems and procedures in the organization of public employes be assigned by the UPWA to aid him.

Gadsden, Alabama, formerly the scene of vicious vigilante action against the CIO, now possesses a newly chartered UPWA local which has already started negotiations with the County Board of Supervisors.

UPWA Local 660 in the Birmingham, Ala., Department of Public Improvement won a 10 cent an hour increase as the result of an intensive campaign. The victory also marked the first time in the history of the city of Birmingham that white and Negro workers have received the same amount of pay increase. Past practice has been to grant Negro workers a lesser pay increase than white workers.

Cafeteria workers, maids, janitors and mechanics in the Richmond, Va., school system, members of UPWA Local 675, recently won a 10% wage increase retroactive to February 1. The total sum of the increase amounts to $280,000. Several months ago the same local won a 10% general increase for all other city workers.

Negotiations recently concluded between employes of the University of Virginia Hospital, members of UPWA Local 550, resulted in wage increases ranging from 20 to 24%. This marks the second increase within two years.

As a result of UPWA action, state liquor store employes in Virginia will work a 44 instead of 48 hour week, will receive graduated annual wage increases and minimum and maximum salaries.

Jefferson County Teachers in Alabama, members of UPWA Local 683, won equalization of salaries for Negro and white teachers.

The problems of the Public Workers are unique inasmuch as federal employes cannot, for instance, strike against the government to secure their aims. The constitution of the new union specifically forbids that and the union states that it has never struck against the government, never threatened a strike, never contemplated a strike, nor does it now claim the right to strike against the government.

The UPWA does call on the federal government for the establishment of a uniform labor relations policy including recognition of unions and the granting to majority unions the sole right to negotiate with government administrators on all matters affecting policy. In instances where wages and hours are specifically determined by Congress these would not be subject to negotiation.

At present the union negotiates with the individual administrators for each department and it has won many gains. However, each administrator sets his own rules for bargaining and he is not obligated to recognize a majority union nor is he obligated to submit disputes to arbitration. Therefore the union asks that union recognition be granted, that negotions be conducted in good faith and that disputes should be submitted to impartial arbitration when they cannot be settled otherwise.

When state, county or municipal workers are involved in a dispute the authority to make a decision upon a strike is vested in the union's International President.

The Public Worker's president, Abram Flaxer, says "We can have an organization that our membership and the CIO and the country can be proud of . . . one real, good, united organization of public employes under the CIO banner."

Why Painting Is Important to Your Children

Many young children are more deeply troubled and anxious than parents realize. Sickness in the house, birth of new babies, parents' quarrels and anxieties frequently cause children real unhappiness. What they can't express through words, they often express through painting. These summer days, keep on hand (1) large-sized painting paper, (2) ¾ to 1-inch wide brushes that can be pointed, (3) powder paints, primary colors recommended. Teach children how to stroke, how to keep brushes clean, then please, leave them alone to paint what they please, as they please. (To be continued).

WFTU URGES WORLD RALLIES TO HIT FRANCO

RINGING demands for the restoration of democracy in Spain and for the inclusion of labor representatives in the councils of the United Nations were voiced by the 26-man executive committee of the World Federation of Trade Unions, meeting in Moscow late last month.

Baron Walter Citrine, British union leader and retiring head of the WFTU, announced that the global union organization had empowered each of its national affiliates to adopt its own position on the question of the Franco regime.

The executive committee recommended, however, that mass demonstrations be scheduled throughout the world for the month between July 18 and August 18 to mark the 10th anniversary of General Franco's assault on the Spanish Republic.

In still a third action on the Spanish question, the WFTU strongly endorsed the UN Security Council's sub-committee report which called for a break with Franco Spain and a request that Franco's regime be "outlawed." It called on the UN to recognize the Giral Republican Government-in-Exile as the "legal constitutional government" of the strife torn Spanish nation.

Allied Labor News reported leaders showed "keen disappointment" that the UN Economic & Social Council had turned down the WFTU request to participate in the Council's work. The committee decided, according to the ALN report, to appoint a subcommittee of five men, headed by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey to draft recommendations for further action to publicize the WFTU's relations with the UN Council.

Carey, together with Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas of the Auto Workers and Director Michael Ross of the CIO Intl. Affairs Dept., comprised the CIO delegation to the Moscow parley.

In other reported actions, the executive committee meeting:

1. Urged the development of free democratic trade unions in all four occupational zones of Germany, with organizations based on the industrial union principle.

2. Criticized the penetration of Nazis into leading posts in the German industrial and governmental apparatus, and demanded both their removal and the granting of increased representation to German unions on denazification bodies.

3. Granted WFTU membership to labor federations in Burma, Korea, Greece, the Belgian Congo, Lebanon, Indo-China and Iran, the latter on a provisional basis. Louis Saillant, WFTU executive secretary, will travel to Iran shortly to check on information given the world labor organization.

4. Decided to send a WFTU commission to the Far East to determine whether the Korean labor movement is "bona fide" and democratically organized, and to study other union groups in the Far East.

5. Set the next meeting of the executive committee in the U. S., to coincide with the forthcoming session of the UN's General Assembly, which will meet in N. Y. late this year.

WOMEN LEARN POLITICAL SCORE

By VERDA WHITE BARNES
Director, Women's Division, CIO-PAC

"MY MOTHER-IN-LAW is tending my baby for me," confided one earnest young woman at the recent NCPAC School for Political Action. "I told her I would take notes in each class and tell her everything I learned when I got home.

"Why did I decide to come to the school? I suddenly woke up a few months ago to the fact that I didn't know what to do about my Congressman. I wrote him letters and sent him telegrams, yet he voted against a decent price control bill and against veterans' housing, he was not supporting the 65c minimum wage bill. In fact, he was against everything I wanted and for everything I opposed.

"Now, I know what to do about him. As soon as I get home, I'm going to invite a half dozen of my friends in to have a cup of tea and tell them what I learned at the school.

"A good man is running against him and after we get our little group set on a program of action, we'll look around for other organizations who want to elect this liberal to Congress and we'll join forces with them. Do I think we can beat our reactionary Congressman? You bet your life I do!"

That was the eager spirit of the 175 women who attended the school. It was the spirit of the thousands of CIO women—members of unions and auxiliaries and wives, mothers and sisters of CIO men—during the Roosevelt campaign in 1944.

One thing especially apparent about all of these women is their great desire to "do this political action business right," as one housewife told me. They want to know what the issues are and how the candidates feel about the issues. They want to learn how to organize themselves and their neighbors into effective political groups. They want to know how to make speeches—good speeches. They want to see that every possible voter is registered.

We learned a good deal about women in political action in the 1944 campaign. We found that in general women were the best canvassers and doorbell-ringers. They knew their neighbors. They were hardworking. They had a natural knack for saying the right thing at the right time, especially to that elusive figure of each election—the stay-at-home.

Now as we get into the 1946 campaign we must lose no time in overhauling and bringing up to date every women's PAC committee. If you have no women's committee, see to it that you have a good proportion of active women on your joint PAC committee. A PAC state director told me he plans to have a woman co-chairman of each precinct, each county and each congressional district in his state. I commend this director on his far-sighted action and recommend this plan to every other PAC state director.

Now in the final stages of a gigantic battle to win an effective price control bill, millions of women can be aroused to assume their responsibilities as citizens. On this one issue alone, by pointing out the action and record of the Senators and Congressmen, we can get the participation of heretofore disinterested women.

Take this issue to women wherever they gather, to their parent-teacher meetings, to their clubs, to their auxiliaries, to their churches. If this job is done, we will find millions of Miss and Mrs. Americans, who never before voted, marching to the polls.

LABOR GAINS BENEFIT ALL

Is that old friend of the cartoonist, poor John Q. Public, merely the innocent bystander who gets hit when those two bitter enemies, union and management, get to fighting? This in general is the question examined and answered in the negative in the latest Public Affairs Pamphlet, "Your Stake in Collective Bargaining," written by T. R. Carskadon and S. T. Williamson of the Twentieth Century Fund.

"Collective bargaining touches the life of every one of us in America," the authors say. Not only can it be used to settle disputes and create a working basis, they point out, "It can go further and increase the total of the country's wealth and productive power," the pamphlet decrees.

The pamphlet does a good job of explaining briefly to those who know little or nothing about unions except highly dramatized strike news, how a union functions, what its aims and problems are, and how a contract is negotiated and carried out. It's worth recommending to well-meaning but uninformed friends outside the labor movement.

Who said a woman's place is in the home? Jean Jansen, an active National Maritime Union member for over three years, is shown casting her ballot in the recent Maritime strike referendum. Jean voted right after her ship docked at the Port of St. Louis. In the event of a strike, Jean was all set to run a soup kitchen and inspect picket cards.

IT'S A MAN'S—ER— A WOMAN'S WORLD

WOMEN get around, and while they were prohibited from shipping out to sea during war, the number of women in the maritime industry on inland waters took a big leap. There are about 300 women members of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union employed on the Western and southern rivers and in the Pittsburgh Pool area.

The women work almost exclusively in the galley, with rare exceptions like "Barge Line" Mabel Bitticks. When she was young, Mabel disguised herself as a boy and shipped out as a deckhand. Although she insists that she prefers "decking" she now works in the steward's department.

The women take an active part in union activities. Jean Jansen, shown in the pictures, was on the strike committee in the Port of St. Louis. She had been assigned to take charge of clearing all picket cards if the strike came off. "Barge Line" Mabel raised over $100 in 1944 for the CIO-PAC dollar drive.

River boatwomen are fully aware of the dangers confronting working people in America today. They have learned that only through unity can workers make gains and that is why they hail the formation of the Committee for Maritime Unity.

"She can bake a cherry pie, she's the apple of my eye . . ." is the theme of the crews fed by Jean. As a chief cook, her reputation depends on the quality of the pies and bread which she bakes daily. (Before the recent increases awarded to the maritime unions, Jean received $169 a month for a 12-hour day, seven-day week).

2 65's Welfare Director Kenneth Sherbell (l.), himself a veteran, hands Newman a dispatch slip to a union shop under the on-the-job training program, while Redfield looks on with satisfaction.

3 While he is learning the fine points of glass decorating from Supervisor Emily Chandigian, Newman receives the journeyman's wage for his work—part of it an apprentice wage paid by the company, and the balance paid by the Veterans Administration.

UNION PLAN SETS VET TRAINING PACE

WHEN a union project draws the praise of employers, that's news.

It's even bigger news when a union's on-the-job training program for veterans draws not only the acclaim of the employers but also of the Veterans Administration.

Yet that is just what happened to the veterans' training plan of Local 65, Wholesale and Warehouse Union, New York City.

More important, veterans like the program, which, after all, was instituted for them.

Take the case of Eugene Newman, who was a $20-a-week stock-clerk in a wholesale drygoods firm more than four years ago when he went into the Army.

After serving in Africa, Sicily and France he was discharged wearing the Purple Heart with two clusters, the silver star, combat infantryman's badge and five battle stars. He found that those $100-a-week jobs which he had read about did not exist, and he had a problem, for he was a disabled veteran.

Pay Doubled

Under the union's program he is learning to be a skilled china and glass decorator and is receiving $45 a week—more than twice the pay he received before entering the service. That's the prevailing wage for decorators. The apprenticeship wage is paid by his employer and the balance is paid him by the Veterans Administration.

Upon the completion of his training period, he will receive full pay from his employer, and the union contract guarantees him seniority. So there is no danger of the employe trying to convert the program into a recruiting service for cheap labor.

At least a half-dozen shops are using the program and Local 65 is talking to a number of other employers to convince them to do their part by the veterans.

Who Are Eligible

Veterans already employed in the shops where the on-the-job program is in operation have first opportunity to avail themselves of the plan with disabled vets, unemployed vets and vets employed in shops which do not have the plan getting preference in that order.

At first both union members and employers were suspicious of the plan, but now that the provisions of the plan are known, its popularity is growing. The union has set up a committee to handle applications for members seeking training and the VA has assigned a full-time worker to help the union apply the program in its shops.

Mrs. Esta Brody of Peerless Art Co., Brooklyn, where Newman is working, declared:

"We are very pleased with the way in which the project has been handled between Local 65 and our firm. The program is a very promising one, and is actually a service to our industry. We have long felt the need for a system of training new hands for the skills that are required."

"It is a privilege to cooperate in this program," said another employer, Nat Bernthal, of Atlas China Co., N. Y. City. "It is a good plan, and one way of doing the right thing by our boys."

E. L. Kane, chief of VA's Vocational Rehabilitation and Education Division, wrote Local 65 that its program is "one of the most concrete and enlightened in existence at the present time" and thanked the local's Welfare Director, Kenneth Sherbell, for his efforts in working out the agreement with VA on the plan.

United States Needs Homes

This country needs new homes—desperately. Yet a small group of Republican Congressmen is trying to stall the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill—the only measure that can provide the nation with the hundreds of thousands of low-priced dwellings.

House Banking and Currency Committee hearings called by Rep. Spence (D., Ky.) have been moving at snail's pace. Reps. Sundstrom (R., N. J.), Buffett (R., Nebr.) and Smith (R., O.) have resorted to technicalities to stall the hearings.

These tactics fit in with predictions attributed to Reps. Wolcott and Crawford, both Michigan Republicans, that the W-E-T bill will never be passed.

The housing bill, which is receiving such cool treatment from some of the Congressmen, has been supported by a variety of housing experts and by the CIO and was passed in the Senate.

Its slum clearance program is aimed to provide 125,000 homes a year for four years—homes for the most lowly-paid working groups in the country.

In addition, its mutual home ownership provisions would make possible the construction of cooperative projects for many hundred thousands of workers at relatively low cost.

Without the financial arrangements made possible through the W-E-T bill, the goal of 2,500,000 homes envisaged in the program of Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt will disappear before our eyes.

Wyatt told the committee last week that the nation's housing shortage is severe because it has been so long a-growing. During the depression years, home-building dropped as low as 100,000 a year, and it slumped during the war because of the need for critical materials in war industry.

The veterans housing act, passed a few weeks ago, cannot meet the need for homes, Wyatt noted; the W-E-T bill alone offers a long-range solution to our pressing needs.

There's little time left to pass a housing bill. Wire your Congressmen today requesting that he fight all efforts to stall the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill and that he vote for the bill when it comes up for a vote.

Power Probe

John Brophy, chairman of the CIO's Missouri Valley Committee, has called upon the Senate Military Affairs Committee to approve S. R. 287 "for an official investigation of the activities of the power lobby."

Brophy wrote to Sen. Thomas (D., Utah), committee chairman, that "the CIO is strongly in favor of the adoption of measures like the Murray Missouri Valley Authority Bill and other proposals for valley development and river valley projects.

"Hence, it is of very great importance that the Senate Military Affairs Committee should approve the Murray S. Res. 287 for an official investigation of the activities of the power lobby. The implications with respect to national defense are obvious."

Send messages of support to your Congressmen on all three of these measures. Ask Rep. Flannagan (D., Va.), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, to rush action on the Thom Bill (HR 5793).

Call for Action

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, and Councils Director John Brophy have called on all city and state CIO councils to support three bills endorsed by the Intl. Woodworkers Union. The measures are:

The Thom Bill (HR 5973) which calls for federal aid to medium and small-sized timber owners and mill operators on cutting, utilization, marketing and management of timber resources. The IWA wants the bill's million-dollar appropriation increased to ten million.

The Hook Forestry Bill (HR 6221) calls for the same methods of stimulating output and conservation which were used so successfully in agriculture. It would end the destructive methods of lumbering which are laying waste to many precious American forests.

The Douglas Redwood Bill (HR 6201) would create a Roosevelt memorial park in the redwood forests of northern California.

Price Control	House has passed 3-week extension; Senate considering long-range OPA bill.	Senate Banking Committee approved so-called compromise bill this week. Vote due in Senate.	Wire your Congressmen, Senators to vote for extension of OPA without crippling amendments.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program necessary to give U. S. badly needed homes.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee starting to hold hearings.	Send letters to your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee, to act fast on this bill.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; House Rules Committee has pigeonholed the bill.	Ask Representatives to force action for 65c and added coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Truman anti-strike bill S. 2255 HR 6578	Provides basis for outlawing strikes, squashing unions, drafting strikers.	Senate passed somewhat milder version. Bill now in House Rules Committee.	Write Senators and Congressmen to vote against bill if it comes up again.
Labor Appropriation Bill	Title IV on NLRB bars Wagner Act to thousands of workers in food processing industry.	Referred by joint conference committee to House and Senate for decision.	Wire Congressmen and Senators to restore NLRB funds for food workers' cases.
Amputees Auto Bill HR 6114	Provides govt. gift of specially equipped auto to every vet who lost limb during war service.	Bottled up by Rankin's Veterans Committee. Petition to bring bill up for vote has more than 140 signatures.	Ask Congressman to sign discharge petition and vote for bill.
Anti-Poll-tax Bill HR 7	Would end polltax payments in seven southern states.	Passed by House, pigeon-holed in Senate.	Wire Senators to force vote, fight filibuster and pass bill.
Hobbs Bill HR 32	Under guise of anti-racketeering title, provides new anti-labor weapon by inviting attacks on union strike and picketing rights.	Passed this week by Senate. Signed by Pres. Truman and becomes law.	Remember in November.

HAVE YOU REGISTERED TO VOTE?

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

The amendments to the price control bill not only crippled OPA and forced a Presidential veto; they have also tied Congressional calendars up in a knot.

Senators and Congressmen, with an eye on the Washington summer thermometers and the political temperature back home, are anxious to adjourn by July 20.

That doesn't give them much time to pass considerable badly-needed legislation. Meanwhile, progressives are pushing these measures:

ANTI-POLLTAX BILL: The Mississippi primaries have provided the nation with Exhibit A for ending this feudal practice. With a population of 2,100,000 persons in 1940, less than 200,000 were able to vote in last week's primaries. Result: Bilbo gets another term.

Wire your Senators today. Demand that they bring H. R. 7 up for vote; ask them to fight any possible filibuster by the polltax minority; and to vote for H. R. 7.

VETERANS LEGISLATION: Two important bills to help the vets, both of them with CIO support, are in the Congressional mill and deserve your support.

One, to provide terminal pay for all enlisted men who served in the wartime army, has been passed by the House. The Senate Military Affairs Committee has referred it to the Budget Bureau and the White House for recommendation.

The other, H. R. 6114, was introduced by Rep. Norton (D., N. J.) to give every vet who lost a limb in service a specially equipped auto. Rep. Rankin, the Mississippi polltaxer, kept the bill bottled in committee. Now a discharge petition, initiated by Rep. Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) to bring the bill on the floor, has more than 140 signatures.

The cost is small compared to the sacrifices of the wounded vets. It should be passed at this session.

ATOMIC ENERGY: Military brasshats want to continue complete control of the atomic energy. The McMahon Bill (S. 1717) would give the control to civilians—a proposal that Rep. May and other members of the House Military Affairs Committee find distasteful. Some of the Congressional "soldier boys" are trying to amend the bill to keep military control.

Ask your Congressman to stand fast for S. 1717 without amendments, and help pave the way for a peaceful atomic era.

CITIZENSHIP: Maritime unions are supporting the DeLacy Bills (S 659 and HR 4956) to grant citizenship to alien seamen who served three years' wartime service with the merchant marine.

IT WAS A 'NICE' WAR FOR MR. MAY!

Rep A. J. May (D. Ky.) was found deeply implicated with Illinois munitions interests when his "secret story" was disclosed before the Senate War Profits Investigating Committee last week. Testimony indicated that he had received checks (see above) in the name of the Cumberland Lumber Co. from the Erie Basin and Batavia Metal Products Cos. despite his heated denial that he "never had been financially interested in any way."

Congressional Scandal

MAY DENIES USE OF 'INFLUENCE'

HARKING back to the post World War I Harding-Coolidge era and the Teapot Dome scandal, the Mead War Investigating Committee last week unearthed a fiesta of war profiteering.

Involved in the case are the Illinois munitions interests of H. M. and M. W. Garsson, J. I. Weiss, and A. B. Gellman and the connection with them of Andrew Jackson May (D., Ky.), chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee.

In testimony and exhibits before the Senate Investigating Committe May was proven to be the agent for the Cumberland Lumber Co., and on the receiving end of more than $18,000 from the munitions interests under the control of Dr. Henry M. Garsson.

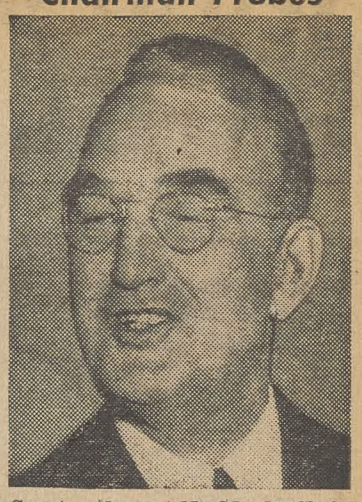
Rep. May answered with the rejoinder that the reports were "misleading" and "insinuations" and that he had never acted except "for the benefit of my constituents and the war effort, and, of course, I did not profit in any way or respect."

Meantime Dr. Henry Garsson, unable to appear before the Senate War Profits Investigating Committe due to a serious "heart ailment," was taking his daily swim in an expensive Havana, Cuba hotel.

Testimony during the early part of the investigation indicated that Congressman May repeatedly used his position to put pressure on high Army officials to favor the Garsson interests.

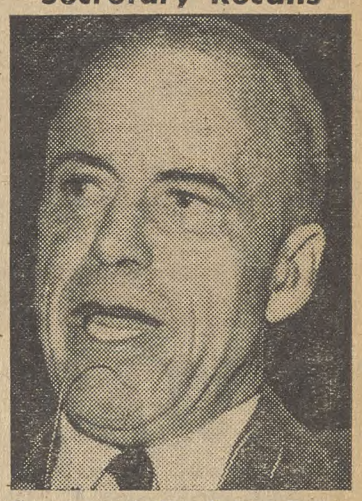
Sen. Hugh B. Mitchell (D. Wash.), a member of the Mead Committee, declared that the munitions interests had offered him a $5,000 bribe for his campaign fund to secure his intercession for the prevention of a "paper empire" investigation.

Chairman Probes



Senator James M. Mead, Chairman of the Senate War Profits Investigating Committee probed profiteering in Illinois munitions combine. (See stories, this page).

Secretary Recalls

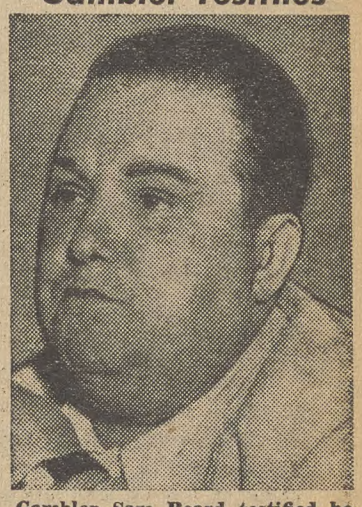


Secretary of War Robert Patterson testified before the Mead Investigating Committee, referring to Congressman May's calls for aid on Illinois munitions contracts.

Senator Reveals

Senator Hugh B. Mitchell (D. Wash.) declared that he had been offered a bribe to shield the "paper empire" of the Illinois munitions men.

Gambler Testifies



Gambler Sam Beard testified before the Senate Committee telling of checks he had cashed for munitions officials.

Munitions Probe

IT'S KNOW-WHO, NOT KNOW-HOW!

By RAY RAYNOLDS

BLASTING a War Dept. report with the charge that it is "whitewash," the Senate War Investigating Committee is continuing its probe of Illinois munitions concerns which it has been investigating for the past two weeks in connection with excessive profits received as a result of war contracts.

May Implicated

The Committee, headed by Sen. Mead (D. N. Y.), had earlier linked Rep. Andrew J. May (D. Ky.), chairman of the House Military Aflairs Committee, with the "paper empire" headed by H. M. and M. W. Garsson, J. J. Weiss and A. B. Gellman, through checks May had received in the name of the Cumberland Lumber Co. and through further testimony which determined that he had used his influence to secure war contracts for the munitions combine.

Mead Committee members stated that the War Dept. "whitewash" report almost nipped the investigation of the Garsson "paper empire" in the bud. The name of Rep. May was referred to time after time in the "whitewash" paper with particular reference to the "influence" he had exerted in favor of the munitions interests.

Know How

The report informed the Senate Committee that the Garsson munitions makers, including the Batavia and Erie Basin Metals Corps., had facilities "well suited for the performance of the work involved, engineering skill, 'know how' and financial responsibility".

Attorney Albert W. Jacobson, the man who had prepared the War Dept. report and who previously had resigned from the District of Columbia Bar under pressure, was designated as the one responsible for approval of large advance payments to the munitions combine which dealt with more than 78 million dollars in war contracts.

With his name on $18,000 worth of checks ("every dollar paid out") Rep. May screamed "Gestapo tactics" and denied any profiting from Illinois munitions makers in payment for his influence in securing war contracts.

Ranting before the House under a ruling permitting House members to reply to attacks, May labeled the investigation unconstitutional in a "conspiracy of falsehood and malice" designed to defame his character.

Opposes Labor

Chairman May has opposed organized labor consistently as is clearly indicated in his voting record as well as the legislation he has sponsored or backed. May was one of the co-sponsors of the May-Arends Bill which set out to halt labor's right to participate in politics. Another of May's legislative attempts was the malicious May-Johnson Bill for the complete military control of atomic energy. The Congressman from Kentucky backed both the Case Bill and the Hobbs Bill.

Senator Mead declared that May's secret testimony of June 4, revealed during the present investigation, was entirely "inadequate". However, May has so far refused to testify before the investigating committee, and experts declared that it was doubtful if May could be forced to testify.

Senator Mitchell (D. Wash.), a member of the Mead Committee, heaved a bombshell into the investigation when he disclosed that Benjamin F. Fields, representing the Garsson munition interests, had offered him $5,000 as a "campaign contribution" to take the heat off the "paper empire". Mitchell said that he had thrown Fields out of his office.

The investigators probed into the intricate financial details of the Cumberland Lumber Co. as well as the Erie Basin Metal Products Corp., tieing the two into a group of 16 midwestern corporations having interlocking directorships.

"E" for Excellence

The Batavia Metal Co. received the Army and Navy "E" (excellence, that is), despite the fact that Illinois district Army Ordnance officers had failed to recommend the corporation. In fact, chief of Chicago Ordnance, Col. John Slezak, had refused to indorse such an award, but shortly thereafter the company was given it anyway. Questioned as to how the award could be made under such circumstances, Army Ordnance officers declared that the recommendation must have come from "someone higher-up the scale."

Secretary of War Patterson, testifying before the Committee, defended the award of the "E" on the basis of a memo received from ordnance entitling the company to the honor or the grounds that the metal products outfit had exceeded its production schedule.

Influence Used

Patterson said that May had called in March 1943, requesting his influence to cancel a cutback in the Batavia production schedules.

Testimony was presented which indicated that May was authorized as an agent for the Cumberland Lumber Co. and personally endorsed and cashed checks totaling more than $18,000 paid for lumber which was never delivered.

In one spectacular bit of testimony, Sam Beard, self-avowed professional gambler, of Washington, D. C., stated that he had cashed checks for top executives in the munitions combine including M. W. Garsson and Joseph F. Freeman.

One thing is definite from the Mead investigation thus far: the "paper empire" had a remarkable ability to come up with Army munitions contracts and then a facility for losing track of Government payments in a giant maze which even accountants cannot follow. The investigation holds promise of many revelations to come, which threaten to reach deep into the hierarchy of Government, involving some of the major war contractors.

No Financial Interest

Rep. May came up numerous times in the early testimony, particularly concerning the exertion of his power as Chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee to press for war contracts. May himself declared that he had no financial interest in the empire, but that he had merely assisted the Garsson interests to obtain badly needed timberland. Questioned concerning the several checks which bear his name, May said that he had made them out to his son and nephew, and that they were definitely not his endorsements.

These statements do not coincide with the testimony of two Kentucky lumbermen who at different times managed the Cumberland Lumber Co. Both of them were under the impression that May was not only agent for the company but owner.

Meantime the Justice Dept. plans to probe the activities of Harry Paynter, publicity agent for the munitions interests, on the direction of Committee Chairman Mead. The publicity agent had asserted that anti-semitism had played a part in the investigation, though this contention was quickly repudiated by Garsson and his associates, A. B. Gellman and J. T. Weiss, in telegrams to Sen. Mead.

WORLD MOURNS HILLMAN'S DEATH

IN A MILE-LONG funeral procession, N. Y. City July 12 paid tribute to Sidney Hillman, president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers and world labor figure, who died unexpectedly of a heart attack July 10 at his summer home at Point Lookout, N. Y.

Three hundred and fifty thousand members of the ACW remained away from work July 12 in his honor, and the N. Y. City CIO Council called upon 600,000 CIO members in the area to pay tribute by observing five minutes of silence beginning at noon.

Funeral service were held at Carnegie Hall, where the body of the chairman of CIO's Political Action Committee lay for a day in state, with thousands of mourners passing for a final glimpse.

President Truman designated Sec. of Commerce Wallace as his personal representative to attend the funeral, and eulogies were delivered by CIO President Murray and Jacob S. Potofsky, general secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated.

Hillman came to this country from Lithuania. He had been president of the Amalgamated since it was founded 33 years ago. He played a leading role both in the formation of the CIO and of the World Federation of Trade Unions, of which he was vice-president.

Who will fill his place as head of CIO-PAC will probably be decided at a meeting of the CIO Executive Board, scheduled for July 25 in Washington, D. C.

The Amalgamated announced that a new president would be chosen to serve until the next biennial convention in 1948, by Vice-Presidents Frank Rosenblum and Hyman Blumberg and Sec.-Treas. Potofsky.

Hillman is survived by his wife, Bessie Abramowitz and his daughter, Selma Lerner, both of whom were with him when he died, and by another daughter, Mrs. Philoine Fried, in Paris.

SIDNEY HILLMAN

"A great reservoir of inspiration and courage."

TRIBUTE FROM TRUMAN

In the death of Sidney Hillman, the cause of democracy in this country and the world loses one of its most effective and devoted exponents.

Sidney Hillman was more than a distinguished labor leader; he was a great humanitarian and an outstanding statesman in the field of labor-management relations.

That he, an immigrant youth, could rise to eminence in the land of his adoption is a tribute at once to his own ability and character, and to the democratic ideals for which he fought.

Hailed For Service To Democracy

THE death of Sidney Hillman, the Lithuanian clothing worker who rose to a position of world-wide renown, was mourned in all walks of life this week.

Literally thousands of testimonials hailed his contribution to the fight for extension of democracy—from President Truman, from Philip Murray and from hundreds of other leaders of both CIO and AFL, and from statesmen high in the life of the nation.

President Truman said that "in the death of Sidney Hillman the cause of democracy in this country and the world loses one of the most effective and devoted exponents."

CIO President Murray declared that "at home and abroad his services were devoted to the cementing of friendly relations amongst the peoples of the earth, who regarded him as a devoted crusader for their social, economic and political emancipation."

Among a host of other expressions of sympathy and salutes to Hillman's great contributions were those from:

BARON WALTER CITRINE, retiring head of the World Federation of Trade Unions: "The world trade union movement and the American trade unions in particular have suffered a grievous and sudden blow. Mr. Hillman rendered a great service to the world trade union movement."

SEC. OF LABOR LEWIS B. SCHWELLENBACH: "In the field of political activity, Mr. Hillman was so basic in his approach to democratic principles that he shocked some of our more forgetful citizens. He believed that everyone should exercise his right to organize politically and to vote, regardless of his economic status."

SEN. ROBERT F. WAGNER (D. N. Y.): "His record of public service and human endeavor was so long and his application to the public interest was so constant, that the multitude of his friends and admirers almost took it for granted that he would always be there, battling for the right, striving with all his heart and strength to lift up the underprivileged and to expand the liberty, dignity and security of his fellow men throughout the world. Sidney Hillman's passing is an irreparable loss but his record of service is imperishable. His name will live as long as freedom, tolerance and justice strike a responsive chord in the hearts of men."

MAYOR O'DWYER, N. Y. CITY: "I deeply regret the passing of Sidney Hillman, a dear friend. His death in these disturbed times is a tragic loss to the nation and the world. I have known few men with such a clear concept of world-wide needs. His passing is a blow to progressive government everywhere."

AMERICA HAS SUFFERED A GREAT LOSS—MURRAY

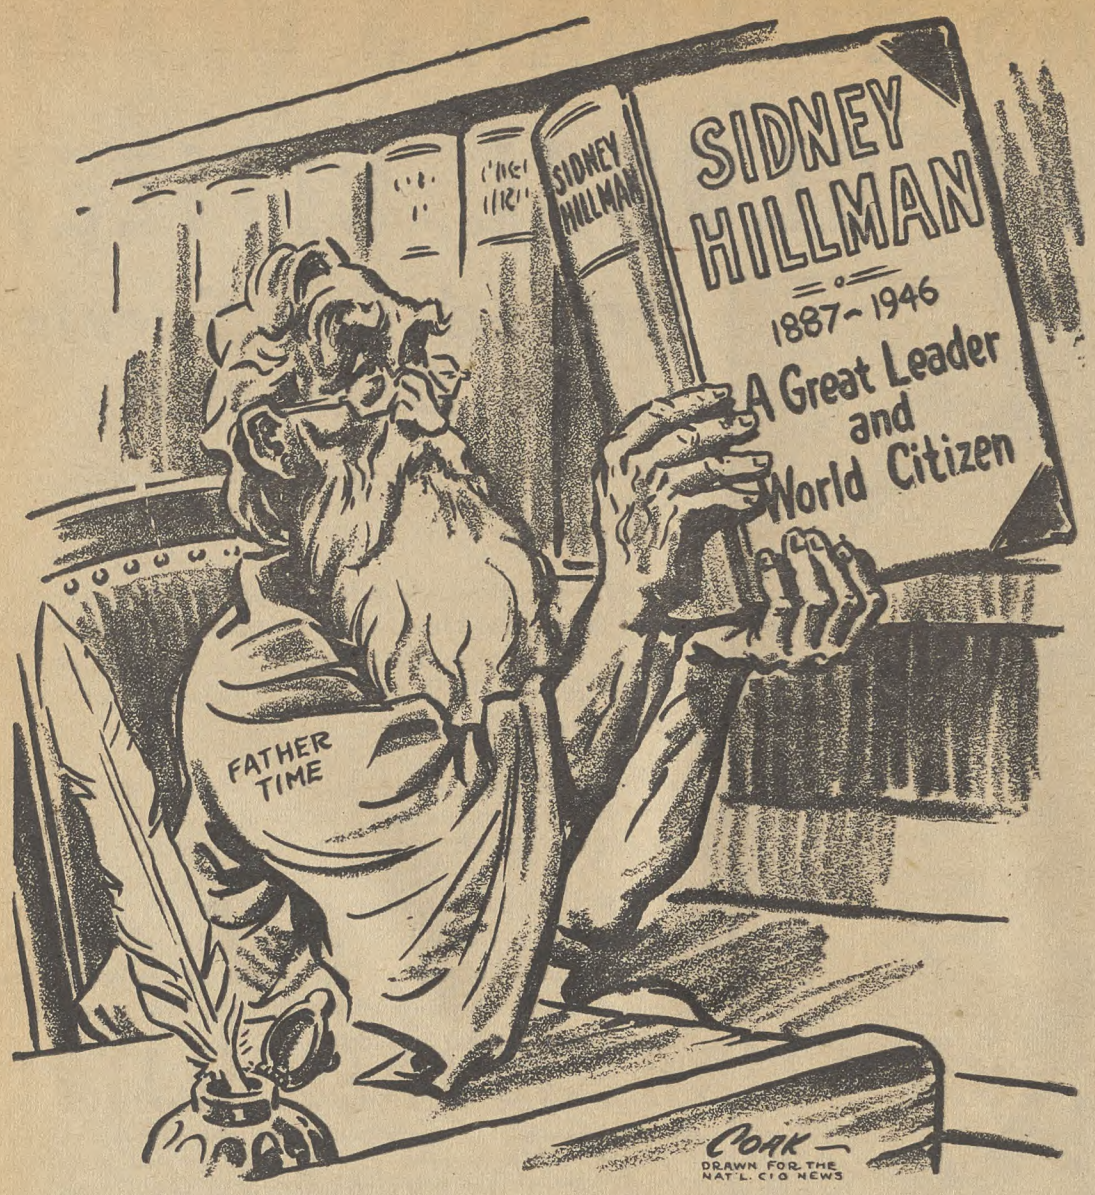
The members of the organizations affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations mourn the passing of a great man. His contributions to the welfare of the nation and humanity were rendered in the spirit of complete self-sacrifice.

The common people of this and other lands have come to regard him as an ever vigilant defender of their cause. At home and abroad his services were devoted to the cementing of friendly relations amongst the peoples of the earth, who regarded him as a devoted crusader for their social, economic and political emancipation.

Sidney Hillman lived the life and made the sacrifices in the cause of democracy. America has suffered a great loss and the common people a great friend.

We of the CIO are shocked over his untimely death. But Sidney Hillman has provided us with a great reservoir of inspiration and courage, a holy and noble legacy of his estimable work. We will carry on toward the fulfillment of his ideals, forever building in the spirit which permeated his life's work.

In mourning his passing we express our heartfelt sympathy to his beloved wife and family.



PASSING OF A GREAT LEADER

The untimely death of Sidney Hillman has robbed labor and the nation of one of its truly great citizens. His loss will be mourned not only in the U. S., where workers are fully aware of his great contributions to the people's cause, but also in every section of the globe where workers have formed labor organizations to protect their rights. In recent years, Sidney Hillman had won world renown as a spokesman for CIO in the establishment of the World Federation of Trade Unions, a man who had helped guide that organization through its difficult early months.

President Murray, in commenting on the loss of a close personal friend and colleague, remarked that "Sidney Hillman has provided us with a great reservoir of inspiration and courage, a holy and noble legacy of his estimable work."

That work embraced every sphere of activity which could contribute to the economic improvement of the great mass of people, to the advancement of their liberty and the strengthening of their security in a troubled world.

The growth of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is one indication of the effectiveness with which he waged labor's struggle for the better things of life. As president of the union since 1915—it was formed after long, desperate strikes to rid the clothing industry of the sweatshop evil—he led the Amalgamated to strength in its jurisdiction and gained a reputation throughout the country as a valiant supporter of CIO and the principles of industrial unionism.

Today the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is one of the world's great labor unions. It has lifted its members from poverty to a dignified place in the community. It pioneered in such various fields of enterprise as cooperative housing for its members, a union-owned bank geared to serve persons of moderate income, a widespread program of workers education.

Increasingly, as his own union grew in power, Hillman expanded his activities to help workers in other industries. In 1935 and afterwards, he worked closely and wholeheartedly to establish the CIO and insure its success. Under his leadership the Amalgamated contributed unstintingly of its financial resources to the big organizing drives that put CIO over the top as the dominant force in American industrial relations.

In 1940, when the Nazi legions were overrunning the map of Europe, he served on the National Defense Advisory Commission and later as co-chairman of the Office of Production Management. His influence on both those early wartime agencies helped speed the process of harnessing this nation's industrial capacity to the needs of desperate, total warfare.

As chairman of the Political Action Committee from its inception in 1943, Hillman became a leading exponent of the necessity for labor to organize at the polls as it had organized in the factories and shops. Working closely with President Murray and the affiliated unions of the CIO, PAC quickly showed itself to be an unusually effective organization. The measure of its effectiveness was demonstrated by the evil propaganda that spewed from fascist-minded writers and reactionary Congressmen, propaganda that often attained the same degree of vileness as the racist dogma of the Hitler regime.

Despite its volume, it failed to halt labor and it failed to daunt Sidney Hillman's determination to lift the status of this nation's workers. His contributions to CIO will always be remembered. His death is a saddening blow. In the months ahead we can show by our action at the voting registration booths and at the polls that the cause for which he worked so hard is treasured by American labor.

Len De Caux is on vacation. His column this week is fittingly turned over to the General Executive Board of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

SIDNEY HILLMAN has fallen in battle. Up to his last breath, he had been fighting the good fight for a larger and more secure life for masses of men and women everywhere. He died as he had lived, fighting.

For 36 years Sidney Hillman had been a standard-bearer for American and world progressive forces. He fought and helped destroy the iniquitous sweatshop in his youth, he fought reaction in season and out, and made the largest single contribution to the political awakening of labor in this country.

In war and peace, Sidney Hillman served his country, his people and his union. No task was too great, none too small for this man who burned his life away for the welfare and happiness of others. He loved America. Sidney Hillman was a tenacious, but modest warrior for the common good. His like, on the American scene, will not be seen soon again.

Though his talents and his genius led him to prominence in the national and international field, Sidney Hillman always remained close to his beloved Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and its 350,000 members. He never lost the common touch. He was welcomed with warmth and affection in every corner of the Amalgamated. We were proud of him. Sidney Hillman was the Amalgamated and the Amalgamated was Sidney Hillman.

In this hour of our great grief, it is impossible to give a proper estimate of what Sidney Hillman meant to us, to the Amalgamated family, to labor generally and progressive forces everywhere. History will accord him his proper place. Sidney Hillman will never be forgotten.

His name will inextricably be linked with the abolition of the sweatshop in the clothing industry, the establishment of impartial machinery for the settlement of labor disputes, labor housing, labor banking, holidays and vacations with pay for industrial workers and introduction of a comprehensive system of life, health, accident, hospitalization, maternity and old-age retirement insurance on a nationwide scale in an American industry.

His war work, also, will never be forgotten. From the late President Roosevelt down to the lowliest Army procurement officer have come testimonials as to Mr. Hillman's contribution to our war and victory efforts. His mobilization of labor for war was as magnificent an effort as his peace-time achievements.

The story of Hillman's life is the story of 350,000 men and women, members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. It is the rise from the industrial jungle into the light of collective bargaining and security for men and women who toil.

We mourn our loss.

TO REMEMBER IN NOVEMBER

HERE is a vote that hits you in the pocketboock—the record of Senate action on the Wherry amendment to the OPA extension bill. The amendment offered by Sen. Wherry (R., Nebr.) would exempt meat and poultry products from price control. It was approved by the Senate 49-26. Breakdown of the vote shows 18 Democrats and 31 Republicans favored the amendment. Voting against it were 25 Democrats, one Progressive and not a single Republican. Not voting—but adding his 2c worth this week—was Alf Landon, lost hope of the GOP in the '36 race against FDR. Said Landon: "We can hardly be maladroit enough to lose in 1948." Votes for the amendment are marked for (W); against (R); not voting (NV).

Not present but registered in favor of the price-lifting amendment were Sen. Wheeler (D. Mont.), Connally (D. Tex.), McFarland (D. Ariz.), Hickenlooper (R. Ia.), Butler (R. Nebr.), Shipstead (R. Minn.), Capehart (R. Ind.) and Morse (R. Ore.).

Not present but registered against the amendment were: Mitchell (D. Wash.), Bailey (D. N. C.), Taylor (D. Ida.), Thomas (D. Utah).

Washington, D. C. citizens picketing on down town streets to urge a one-day buyers' strike in support of OPA. Many local organizations, civic and labor, including various CIO unions, have joined together in the D. C. Citizens Price Defense to sponsor the picketing and the one-day buyers' strike.

Senate Charged With

'GROSS IRRESPONSIBILITY'

OBVIOUSLY angered by the slow-motion, log-rolling tactics used by a Senate majority to cripple the nation's vital price control machinery, CIO Pres. Philip Murray last week blasted "the spectacle of delay and legislative impotence."

In a letter to all members of the Senate, Murray charged that the present mess is an indication of "gross irresponsibility" on Capitol Hill. He warned that grave danger is being done "by this inability or unwillingness to act decisively in response to the overwhelming demand of the American people for a stabilized price structure."

Murray urged:

"1. Immediate interim extension of OPA to cover the period until the permanent measure is enacted;

"2. Vigorous and decisive action to achieve economic stability by restoring full OPA operation and rationing of basic essentials to assure the roll-back of prices to at least June 30, 1946 levels and their maintenance at no higher than that point."

The action of the Senate in voting the Wherry amendment to lift price controls from meat and poultry "is equivalent to passing death sentences upon hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of men, women and children in other lands," Murray commented bitterly.

"Cattle must not be permitted to consume the vast quantities of wheat and other grain which should be sent abroad for the saving of human lives. It would seem queer that the inhuman decision of the Senate majority on this matter gravely imperils the opportunity of the peoples of the world to achieve a lasting peace."

The CIO president's letter reflected the bitterness of the American people as they watched a Senate majority play idly with the price control bill while through the nation prices and profits moved steadily upwards.

Throughout the nation, in big cities and small towns, the protest against inflation mounted day by day.

WRECKERS STILL AT WORK

THROUGH a dreary week, the Senate continued its job of wrecking the system of price controls which are the nation's only guarantee against wild inflation.

Apparently unmoved by the coast-to-coast wave of protest against the amendment-ridden bill which had been vetoed by Pres. Truman, a Senate majority solemnly set about crippling OPA for a second time.

While the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics this week reported higher food prices in an increasing number of stores and a rise in wholesale prices on 28 basic commodities to 17% above the June 28 figure, President Truman again called for a workable OPA law. OPA died June 30.

In a statement accompanying the quarterly report of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, he asserted that "all of the ground we have laboriously won against inflation will be irretrievably lost without a workable price control law."

The OWMR report warned that without OPA America faces an "inevitable . . . sharp depression" like that which followed World War I.

By a 49-26 vote, the Senate approved the amendment of Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) to remove price controls on meat and poultry. (See voting record on this page.)

Next day, the Senators nailed another peg into the coffin of effective price control by approving, 51-27, a second amendment by Wherry to take milk, butter and cheese out of the jurisdiction of OPA.

They wound up that day's work by voting an amendment of Sen. E. H. Moore (R., Okla.), 40-30, to exempt petroleum products from price control. After a good night's sleep, the Senators got around to deciding that in cases where states take action on rent control, OPA loses jurisdiction. The move was obviously directed to cutting down the price agency's over-all efficiency.

Foes of inflation found only two occasions for comfort during the dreary series of Senate votes. One was the defeat of a proposal to remove grains and grain products from price control, the other the turning down of a proposal by Sen. Hawkes (R., N. J.) to permit three staggered 5% increases in rent ceilings.

The House had acted speedily after the President's veto of the first OPA bill to pass a three-week "as is" extension of OPA. That proposal got lost in the shuffle in the Senate, with the result that the Senate Banking Committee belatedly reported a complete measure. This contained many of the features of the bill vetoed by President Truman.

By its actions during the week, the Senate has restored most of the bad items chopped out of the bill in committee.

Thank You, Mr. Taft!

"I am sorry to say that the technique of propaganda is much better known by the CIO than it is by the Natl. Manufacturers Assn."—Sen. Robert Taft (R. O), speaking in the Senate on the OPA bill.

"MOST of all grant us brotherhood, not only for this day but for all years—a brotherhood not of words but acts and deeds. If our brothers are oppressed then we are oppressed. If they hunger, we hunger. If their freedom is taken away our freedom is not secure. Grant us a common faith that man shall know bread and peace—that he shall know justice and righteousness, freedom and security, an equal opportunity and an equal chance throughout the world."

Franklin Delano Roosevelt

REJOICE Bilbo! Rejoice Rankin! You howling hawkers of hate.

The Fair Employment Practices Commission which labored mightily to clean America of racial and religious hatred is dead.

That's the score on democracy to date. FEPC is dead. Rankin and Bilbo have been re-elected.

The Fair Employment Practices Commission was born on June 21, 1941, in response to growing protests that steps be taken to eliminate discrimination in our defense program. President Roosevelt issued the famous Executive Order 8802 and appointed a committee on Fair Employment Practices to enforce it.

The order read in part: "It is the policy of the U.S. to encourage full partcipation in the national defense program of all citizens . . . regardless of race, creed or color or national origin, in the firm belief that a democratic way of life within the Nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders. . . ."

The committee originally functioned within the labor-management division of the Office of Production Management but eventually as the result of pressure from liberal organizations the FEPC was set up in May, 1943, as an independent agency.

FEPC during its five years satisfactorily settled nearly 5,000 cases by peaceful negotiations. During the last year of the war, badly hampered by personnel shortages, it settled 1,191 cases. Most of these settlements were not publicized and generally received little attention. The impression that FEPC met with unyielding opposition was created through the comparatively few cases which received emphasis through public hearings and public expressions of defiance by recalcitrant employers and unions.

On June 30, 1946, the operations of the Commission were terminated because of the failure of Congress to enact permanent FEPC legislation.

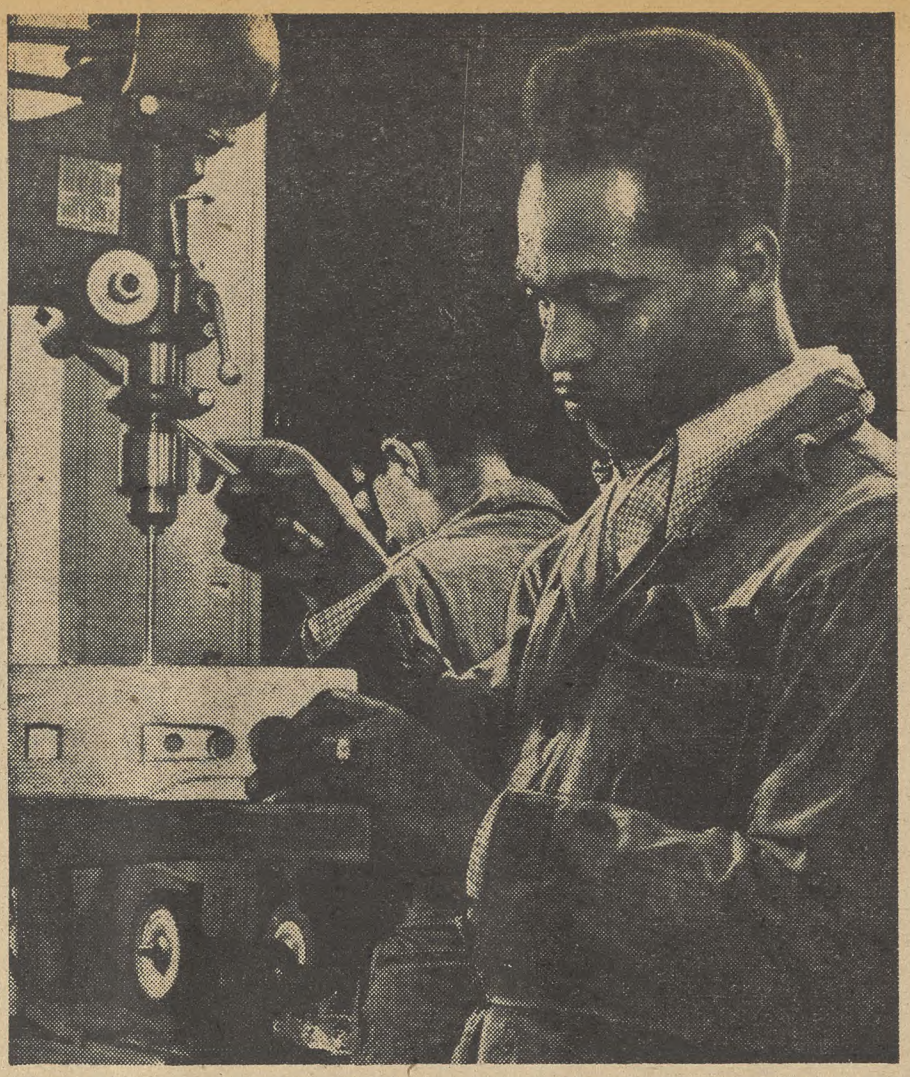
The "Summary and Conclusions" from FEPC's final report to President Truman, which is signed by the six FEPC commissioners, including John Brophy, representing the CIO, sets out the problems and charts the way for future action by those who believe in the fight for an America free from racial and religious discrimination.

Today's major problems in the area of human relationships as seen by the FEPC are these:

"The wartime gains of Negro, Mexican-American and Jewish workers are being lost through unchecked revival of discriminatory practices.

"The war veterans of these minority groups today face far greater difficulties than other veterans in obtaining training and finding work.

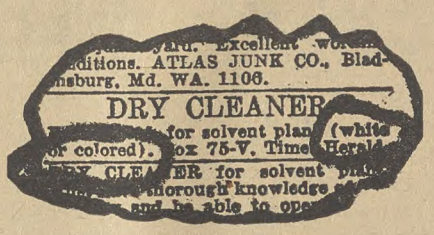
"This denial of equal opportunity, if allowed to become permanent, cannot fail to create civic discord and to be a cause of embarrassment to the U.S. in its international relations."



Skilled Negro workers like World War II vet Melton Rogeau will find their positions in industry unprotected wherever labor unions are weak, now that FEPC is dead.

BROTHERHOOD TAKES A BEATING

FEPC Means This



During the war, the report points out, the minority groups most frequently subjected to discrimination, as recorded by charges filed with the FEPC, were Negroes, Jews, Mexican-Americans and a scattering of religious creeds.

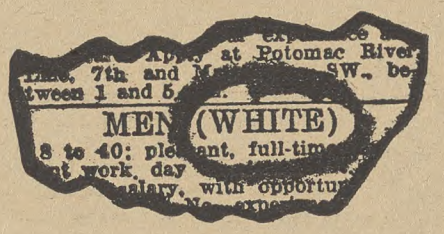
Negroes comprised the largest group suffering discrimination and 80% of the complaints filed with FEPC were concerned with discriminatory practices against them.

Despite the advances Negroes have made beyond menial labor, the report says, the "hard, hot and heavy" war jobs still fell to them. This was because white workers were first to rise above common labor, while Negroes newly entering the war labor market took the vacated common labor jobs.

Their position did become better as the war need for skilled men plus government action against discrimination increased. A large proportion of Negroes became skilled operators and foremen in plants. Nevertheless their basic concentration remained, and still remains in common labor.

Of seven centers studied by the FEPC during reconversion, all but Chicago showed a heavier loss of jobs by Negro than white workers and a necessity on the part of Negro workers to accept the lowest paid jobs.

Not This



Discriminatory job advertisements, says the report, have increased greatly since V-J Day both against Negroes and Jews. A sample study of job orders in 11 selected areas during February 1946 showed 24% of the orders to be discriminatory.

A survey of job-seeking by Jews conducted in 15 cities by local Jewish organizations showed a marked rise of discrimination against all Jewish applicants. Jews who had fought for their country fared no better than Jews who had not.

This survey did reveal however that discrimination in New Jersey and New York State cities covered by fair employment practice laws, was far lower than in cities where no attempts were being made to control discrimination.

Out of the five years of government effort to combat discrimination the report sees two "fundamentally hopeful facts":

1. Employers and workers abandoned discrimination in most cases where government intervened.

2. Once the barriers were down, the workers of varying races and religions worked together efficiently and learned to accept each other without rancor.

For the future, the report urges a national policy against discrimination. "Discriminatory practices, if they can be solved by negotiation, are the more quickly ended when the National Government makes clear that its authority will be exercised against offenders. Such authority need sparingly used. Its mere existence serves to ease the way to settlements at every stage of negotiation," the report says.

The report also recommends community educational efforts on racial problems and points out that employers and unions can be instrumental in breaking the "artifical social patterns" of discrimination.

The CIO through its Natl. Committee to Abolish Discrimination, as well as CIO affiliates, has undertaken a steady educational campaign at the local union level to eliminate the stain of race and religious hate from American communities.

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of CIO, and chairman of its Committee to Abolish Discrimination, declared that:

"Regardless of the demise of the FEPC, the CIO will continue to fight through every local union for fair employment practices. The CIO regards the continuance of discrimination and discriminatory practices as part and parcel of industry's attitude against full employment.

"Too many industrial leaders consider discrimination an unholy safety valve to use as an escape from their responsibilities to provide full employment for all willing and able workers regardless of race, creed or national origin.

"The CIO will continue to work for a permanent FEPC federally and in every state."

FEPC CAN STILL BE SAVED

The Senate has passed the FEPC bill but House tories have bottled it up in the House Rules Committee. Write your Congressman and demand that the bill be reported out on the next Calender Wednesday when committees report directly to the House and the bill can be brought on to the floor.

CONGRESSMAN DRIPP by Yomen

"YOU'RE LUCKY WE'RE NOT OLD ENOUGH TO VOTE!"

CIO-BACKED MEN WIN IN 2 PRIMARIES

CIO political action scored heavily in two state primaries this week—Washington and Minnesota.

In Washington one incumbent Senator and four incumbent Representatives won nomination. All are progressive Democrats.

In Minnesota, Sen. Shipstead, who cast one of the two votes against the United Nations, was defeated in the Republican primary, and progressive candidates in the Democratic Farmer Labor party were swept into office by majorities ranging from 2-1 to 6-1.

Senator Mitchell of Washington won easily, but will face a tough fight this fall against Republican Harry Cane.

Four Washington Congressmen with pro-labor records won renomination: De Lacy, Coffee, Savage and Jackson.

Toughest fight was DeLacy's. He defeated Howard Costigan, who based his campaign mainly on red-baiting, by a vote of 23,271 to 20,464.

Shipstead, in Minnesota, was beaten by Governor Edward J. Thye, who had the backing of former Governor Harold Stassen, Republican presidential hopeful.

Thye will be opposed in the finals by progressive Theodore Jorgenson, who won the nomination on the Democratic Farmer Labor ticket.

CIO-PAC-endorsed Harold Barker won the DFL nomination for governor, and will face Stassen-backed Luther W. Youngdahl in the finals.

In seven districts, CIO-PAC supported DFL men were nominated for the Congressional finals, including two incumbents, Reps. Gallagher and Starkey.

GLOVES OFF IN HAWAII

Hawaiian workers are preparing to put up a strong fight in the territorial elections this October, in an effort to break the control that sugar monopolists have exercised over their lives for nearly 100 years. This control has been so complete that some bosses even decide how many children workers' wives can bear.

For the first time, the workers will contest the elections as a united group, organized in the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. In 1944, political action committees started by the ILWU overthrew plantation-run machines in two counties. This year, they are aiming for a majority in the territorial legislature.

Outside Honolulu, in the plantation and ranching districts, the so-called "Big Five" monopolists have exercised control over every phase of life. The Big Five are five agencies which handle the islands' sugar.

However these five firms are so closely connected with nearly all other business in Hawaii that the whole tightly-knit group is popularly included in the title. This "ruling class" is confined to the white population, which is only a small percentage of the total.

There may not be any "pay call" this month for Idaho's fighting liberal Senator, Glen H. Taylor.

It's a matter of principle with the Senator who refused to sign an affidavit from the Senate Disbursing Office, giving assurances that he would not go out on strike during his term in the Senate.

The affidavit was distributed to all congressmen as the result of a rider, which had been tacked on to an important appropriations bill, prohibiting government employes from striking or belonging to any organization which advocates the right to strike against the federal government.

Calling the rider a "provision drafted in white heat," the Senator refused to sign the affidavit because he himself is a member of the AFL Sheet Metal Workers Assn., and "its constitution is silent on the specific point of strikes against the government."

Stating emphatically that he was proud of his union membership and would not give up his union card, the Senator declared that "the effect of this rider will be the further harassment of a favorite scapegoat — the hard-working government employes. I think a great wrong has been done to them and me. This rider is unconstitutional."

EAGER-BEAVER BRASS

CLINTON S. Golden, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, this week charged that some Selective Service field officers are still advising employers to apply superseniority, despite the fact that it was declared illegal by the U. S. Supreme Court. Golden this week wrote Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director:

"Apparently, some of your officers have not read this decision (of the U. S. Supreme Court), for on June 20, First Lt. Katherine J. Kindervatter of your Baltimore office rendered a contrary opinion to Edward R. Allan, superintendent of personnel, Celanese Corp. of America. The letter was signed by the State Director, Lt. Col. E. K. Klaesius.

"I have several times protested against the practice of your office handing down snap judgments on legal matters beyond their competence. Is it not time, General, that the Selective Service System cease issuing facts which are inconsistent with the law?

"I ask you to take measures to insure compliance with constitutional practices incumbent upon all servants of the Federal Government, and I ask specifically, that the rulings made by your Baltimore office in the Celanese case be rescinded."

LET BOSSES PAY FOR ERROR—CIO

Workers should not be penalized because employers followed the bad advice of Selective Service and applied superseniority to discharge employes to make room for veterans with less seniority, Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee this week told the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Bernstein appeared before the committee to oppose S. 2140, which bars workers illegally discharged through superseniority from getting lost pay. A similar measure, H. R. 6035, has been passed by the House. The U. S. Supreme Court has found superseniority illegal.

Bernstein pointed out that under CIO contracts, provision is made for compensating unjustly fired workers, that in the past management had to pay when it followed bad advice, and that it should have to pay for its mistake in following Selective Service's ruling despite CIO warnings.

CIO PROTESTS VET FIRINGS

Clarification of the employment rights of veterans working for various corporations engaged in the Clinton Engineer Works at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy plant, was requested of War Sec. Patterson this week by Eugene Cotton, assistant general counsel of CIO.

Cotton acted in behalf of the Atomic Workers Organizing Committee, a division of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, which is conducting an organizing drive among the several thousand persons employed at Oak Ridge. The union has petitioned the Natl. Labor Relations Board for an election as soon as possible.

The CIO official charged that large numbers of people, veterans and non-veterans, have been fired in recent months "with no apparent effort to proceed on the basis of any standards of fairness and equity" and added that there is "every indication" of the firings constituting simply "a wage-cutting tactic."

Even Pies!

A little shoe-shine boy came into the office of the New Castle County Industrial Union Council in Wilmington, Delaware, and approached the chairman, Gilbert Lewis.

"Is the OPA off? he asked.

"Yes," said Lewis.

"I knew it!" said the boy. "They're selling 5c pies for 8c now."

HUSH-HUSH ON HOUSING PROBE?

HEAVY Wall Street pressure on Washington is holding up a criminal anti-trust indictment charging more than 30 N. Y. City banks, insurance and trust companies with a monopoly conspiracy in the mortgage money-lending market which has contributed to the desperate housing shortage in the metropolis.

Details of the conspiracy and of the pressure by banking interests on high government officials which is preventing the indictment broke here July 9 after a special federal grand jury authorized by the U. S. Dept. of Justice several months ago recessed until August without taking action.

Evidence uncovered by the investigation reveals that planned withholding of mortgage money by some of the nation's leading financial houses has restricted the erection of thousands of new housing units in N. Y., adding to the present acute shortage.

These firms also conspired to confine Negroes and other minority groups to deteriorated slum areas. Together the three dozen firms under investigation control tens of billions of dollars of mortgage loans affecting hundreds of thousands of tenants and completely dominate the $10 billion N. Y. mortgage market.

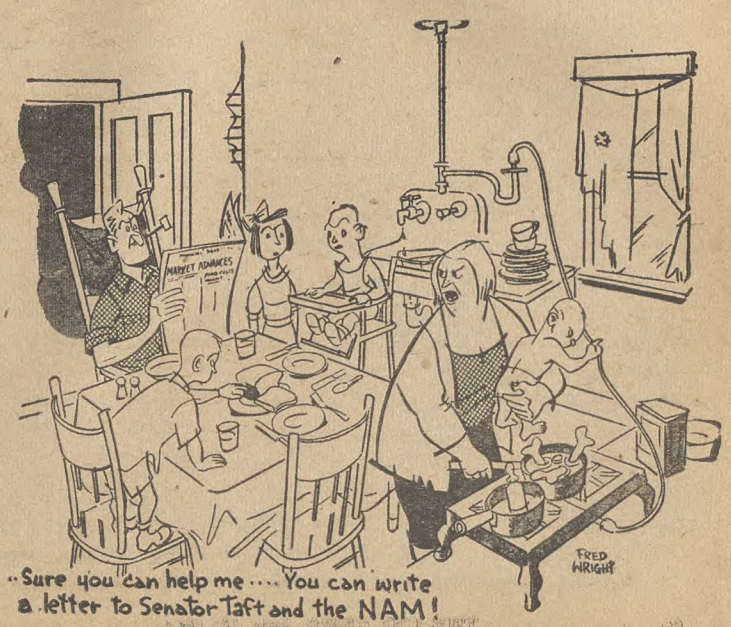
When Atty. Gen. Tom Clark authorized the special grand jury investigation the Justice Dept. clearly intended to seek a criminal indictment. Now it is said to be uncertain whether the evidence warrants civil or criminal action, indicating heavy pressure on Clark and the department to drop the whole matter or settle for a civil suit.

The sudden recess of the grand jury, delaying action for another month despite the growing housing shortage, followed secret pressure by Wall Street interests to prevent an indictment. The pressure campaign was reported to have reached into the cabinet with appeals to Sec. of the Treasury John W. Snyder.

Anti-Union Law Killed

A bill to outlaw the union shop in Louisiana was vetoed this week by Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, putting the brakes on a union-busting drive for this legislative session.

In his veto message, Davis asserted that the vetoed bill would interfere with the collective bargaining rights of employers and workers and would violate the Wagner wage-hour and railway labor acts.



"Sure you can help me .... You can write a letter to Senator Taft and the NAM!

By MARTY SOLOW

LIE-OF-THE-WEEK honors belong to columnist Frank Kent, political Bourbon (100% proof—against progress), who wrote this week that "the country has turned" on labor and labor leaders.

Scribbler Kent evidently felt no further than his own pulse. the Fortune magazine poll for June, 1946 shows that public support of labor swelled from 25.7% in January to 37.1% in June. During the same period, support of business dropped from 44.7% to 36.6%.

AFL's George Meany, in an emotionally charged piece called "We Back America," in the July issue of the American Federationist, accuses the World Federation of Trade Unions of being a "Soviet . . . Controlled Organization."

Mr. Meany's score on this is no runs, no hits—all errors. For his information we cite the following facts:

Executive committee votes in WFTU are apportioned as follows: USSR 3, U. S. and Canada 3, Great Britain 2, France 2, Latin America and West Indies 2, Near and Middle East 1, China 1, India and Ceylon 1, Scandinavia 1, Australasia 1, Western Europe 1, Southern Europe 1, Central Europe 1, South-eastern Europe 1, Africa 1.

The "so-called" WFTU has a world-wide membership of 55 nations. EVERY MAJOR LABOR MOVEMENT IN THE WORLD WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE AFL IS A MEMBER.

It is a fact that the AFL is outside of the WFTU by its own decision. Membership is open to it any time it wishes to affiliate.

WARNER-SWASEY Machine Tools in a June advertisement in Newsweek attacks unions for having ". . . control over the lives of others by the arbitrary exercise of power backed by threat of violence. That isn't free collective bargaining—it is dictatorship . . . brown shirt arrogance."

It's a lie because the reports of the American Civil Liberties Union and the LaFollette Senate Committee investigations turned up the fact that violence was nearly always precipitated by management.

Only recently Senator Murray of Montana in a two-hour speech before the Senate showed by documentary evidence from government sources that violence in labor disputes had been brought about by management resisting the growth of unions. He cited Homestead, Ludlow, Gastonia, Marion, N. C., and the Republic Steel massacre in Chicago as evidence.

Without a Union

FARMED OUT TO A FLEA CIRCUS

BASEBALL'S immortal pitcher, Grover Cleveland Alexander, was featured in a New York "flea circus!" The 20-year veteran was actually discovered competing for attention with insects. He was impoverished on retirement without any prospect of support. The pension problem is one of the many grievances the newly formed baseball union, the American Baseball Guild, aims to solve.

Last week Director Robert Murphy of the Guild invited baseball Commissioner Chandler and the presidents of the two major leagues to discuss unionization, despite the owners flat refusal to parley. He said the Guild organizing program will now "proceed at an accelerated pace."

The question of tyranny in the great national pastime blew wide open in a Seattle court recently when Federal Judge Lloyd L. Black handed the owners their first setback in a rousing legal explosion branding the players' contracts as "reminiscent of chattels." The case involved Al Niemiec's discharge from the Seattle Rainiers of the Pacific Coast League after playing in less than 30 games. The judge declared the club must pay veteran Niemeic's full season salary under the Selective Service Act.

No less than 100 former major league ex-GI's are affected by the decision, and if it holds those men will be eligible to file pay adjustment claims. The magnates, reeling under this legal lambasting, are rumored to be heading full-speed for an appeal to the Supreme Court in hopes of better treatment.

HEADING the list of exploitations in organized baseball is the "reserve clause" in the players' contracts. This clause, similar to the indentured servitude of early slave days, gives the club complete possession of the services of the player as long as he remains in baseball. The club can retain, sell for cash or trade the player as cattle, and should he dare to rebel at this treatment there is but one alternative, to get out of baseball forever.

Baseball magnates fear exposure of this "reserve clause," and for this reason in years past they allowed the "outlaw" Federal League to grab star ball players without filing a single law suit. This season the Mexican League has snapped up major league stars with the bosses not daring to do anything about it. Much animosity has been voiced but little action taken for fear of legal exposure. On the Mexican side of the fence the players have been well received and given far better treatment than the American baseball czars ever granted.

With their own union the players could fight management tactics which lower playing morale and affect their playing skill. Players are unanimously in favor of pension plans, particularly for those with long records of service to the sport.

The Baseball Guild is fighting for organization to stop baseball slavery. Big money rules baseball, making unionization an uphill battle.

SAD NEWS! Our beloved friend, Sidney Hillman, died July 10! His loss will be felt by the workers throughout the nation and in many other lands. Sidney rendered yeoman service to the labor movement and to the CIO in particular. Great credit is due him for steering the World Federation of Trade Unions to success in its deliberations.

We shall miss him much. In his memory we shall rededicate ourselves to build, as he would have us build. He was a great American, a great union man and leader, and a great human being.

WOODWORKERS, FURNITURE UNIONS TALK MERGER

EXECUTIVE officials of two CIO unions, the United Furniture Workers and of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, have completed a series of exploratory discussions on the possibility of merging their organizations, Congress of Industrial Organizations, it was announced this week by Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization.

The talks were held in Washington, D. C., and were attended by the following officials of the two unions: UFWA, Vice-Pres Morris Pizer; Secy-Treas. Max Perlow, and General Executive Board Member Michael DeCicco; IWA, Pres. J Fadling and Vice-Pres. Karley Larson

To implement the decisons reached in the preliminary talks, the UFWA excutive board will discuss the merger at a meetng on July 20 in New York City. The board will be asked to establish a negotiating committee to confer with a similar group to be set up by the IWA.

Under the terms of the agreement, "it shall be the objective of th two negotiating committees to work out a general plan of amalgamation by September 10, 1946, (at which time the next convention of the International Woodworkers of America takes place so that such plan may be submittel for consideration to the two international unions."

In announcing the preliminary agreement, Haywood declared:

"The CIO welcomes this preliminary move to merge the United Furniture Workers of America and the Intl. Woodworkers of America. Both organizations have made remarkable strides in gaining badly-needed wage increases and healthier, more safe working conditions for their thousands of members. Together in one united organization, wood and furniture workers will be enabled to accelerate their growth and influence The CIO will offer any necessary assistance requested by the parties to this forward-looking agreement."

STEEL UNION WINS LONG STRIKE

By ALFRED H. HIRSCH

AN enthusiastic meeting of CIO Steelworkers with more than 3,000 present, last week ratified the contract ending the 160-day strike at the Fairbanks-Morse & Co., Beloit, Wis.

Five leading management representatives were on the platform throughout the meeting, giving promise of new and beter relations between the company and the union.

The agreement ending the strike includes an 18½c hourly increase for all, with most day workers receiving more and averaging 20½c, partly due to reclassifications; a $50 "return to work" bonus; assurances that the regular bonus based on profits as of the preceding year will be paid within two weeks.

Also included in the contract are a standard arbitraton clause, never before included in a contract with the company; guaranteed wages for piece-rate workers, when they are not on piece-work jobs; improved vacation pay, now up to 80 hours after five years, and progressing from 40 hours after one year to that figure, year by year.

JAMES G. THIMMES

Thimmes was elected vice-president of the CIO Steelworkers by the union's executive board to succeed Clinton S. Golden, who resigned. Thimmes, director of the Steelworkers' 38th District in California, was a member of the old Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers and an organizer in Chicago and California during the drive of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

CASE, A-C STRIKES MAY SPREAD

By ESTHER HANDLER

POSSIBLE shutdown of the entire farm equipment industry faces the nation if settlement is not soon reached in the J. I. Case and the Allis-Chalmers strikes, which began seven and four months ago respectively. Thirty-five thousands workers are on strike in the biggest current CIO walk-out.

Top officials of the three CIO international unions involved—the Auto Workers; Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, and the Farm Equipment Workers—will meet soon to consider joint action on a nation-wide farm equipment strike recommended by the UAW policy committee.

In an effort to end the dispute, Labor Sec. Schwellenbach this week invited officials of the two companies and the unions to confer with him in Washington. Pres. Walter P Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers, who called on Schwellenbach, said that the strike would spread to the Case plants at Burlington, Ia. and Rock Island, Ill., and other plants in the farm equipment industry if necessary.

Schwellenbach has repeatedly recommended seizure of the Case and Allis-Chalmers plants after both firms refused to engage in genuine collective bargaining. President Truman's failure to act is reportedly based on beliet these strikes don't present serious threat to the national economy

HOEING PAYS OFF FOR CIO

BILL Gupton, Cedartown, Ga., found that an ordinary garden hoe is a good union organizing instrument.

Gupton, CIO Organizing Committee representative, had been trying for some time—without success—to get a key worker in the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. to join the CIO.

Gupton finally went to the Worker's home and found the man in his vegetable garden. Gupton grabbed a hoe and went to work.

When the hoeing was finished, the man said "thanks"—and then joined the CIO.

Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee this week reported the CIO had won two more collective bargaining elections in the South. They brought to 27 the number of NLRB elections won since the Southern organizing drive began.

Elections won included Morrell Packing Co., and H. C. Cole Milling Co., both of Memphis, Tenn.

"We now have on file with the NLRB about a dozen petitions for elections," Bittner said. "We have just completed the setting up of our organization and from now on will devote all of our time to actual organizing work. Elections should start coming thick and fast between the middle and last of August.

OPA OR MORE PAY—UAW

Chrysler and other auto makers were warned this week by Pres. Walter P. Reuther of UAW and Norman Matthews, of the union's Chrysler division, that wage contracts would be reopened within 60 days unless OPA were revived. They declared in a joint statement:

"We don't want to be forced to reopen our contracts with Chrysler or with other auto manufacturers because industry and the American Congress have broken their solemn contract with the people to control the cost of living"

AFL AT 'WORK'

PRES. Vincente Lombardo Toledano, of the Mexican Confederation of Labor, this week vigorously denounced what he called AFL tactics designed to split the organized labor movement in Latin America.

The CTAL president charged that AFL leaders represented the most reactionary of all the political and social forces seeking to halt progress in Latin America.

"Ever since the founding of the CTAL in 1938," Toledano said, "some leaders of the AFL have systematically attacked the CTAL, its program and its leaders."

Law Guild Hits Clark

NO LIBERTY LOVER

SHARPLY condemning the failure of U. S. Attorney General Tom C. Clark to uphold the rights of labor and minority groups, the Natl. Lawyers Guild convention in Cleveland pledged last week to seek his removal from office unless he "reverses the policies" of the Dept. of Justice.

A resolution assailing his conduct and his speech on June 21 before the Chicago Bar Assn., in which he attacked unions, labor leaders, and lawyers who defended minority groups, was adopted after Attorney General Robert W. Kenny of California, Guild president, warned that Clark's address was a "call to legal vigilantism."

Clark, in his address before the Chicago Bar Assn., had issued a warning to attorneys serving labor, progressive and minority groups that they were on the wrong side of the fence. He urged that the Bar Assn. take "those too brilliant brothers of ours to the wood-shed for a definite and well-deserved admonition."

Guild President Kenny also warned against the possible post-war revival of fascist ideology in the U. S. behind a cloak of red-baiting. He reminded the convention that fascism was pushed on the world behind "the big lie" which left people "powerless to defend themselves."

"The big lie," he said, "is simply that facts shall not be described for what they are but that they shall be labeled as communism . . ."

The NLG's sharply-worded resolution recommended that a committee call on President Truman to discuss with him Clark's fitness to remain in office.

"The Attorney General's address," says the resolution, "is an insult to the legal profession. It seeks to intimidate lawyers into an abandonment of the most precious function of their calling, namely, the vitalization of democracy through a defense of democratic rights."

REPORT ON WFTU

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

● The World Federation of Trade Unions is making wonderful progress towards its goal of bringing the labor movements of all nations together to work out their common program.

● The WFTU is rapidly perfecting its administrative machinery in order to carry out its assigned missions.

● A spirit of compromise and tolerance almost unique in international gatherings is obvious in WFTU meetings.

These were the highlights of reports brought back to the U. S last week by the CIO's three-man delegation who attended meetings of the WFTU executive committee and executive bureau in Moscow June 16-27. The three representatives were Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO and Michael Ross, director of the CIO's international affairs department.

Within a few hours after they had stepped from transatlantic planes which had returned them to Washington from Frankfurt, Germany, the trio told a press conference of their experiences and observations at the parley of world labor. Represented at the Moscow meeting were 66,000,000 workers in more than 50 nations; in fact, the only significant labor body not affiliated to WFTU is the AFL, which has run an "ineffective boycott of the year-old labor organization.

Here are the most important points covered at Moscow:

UNITED NATIONS—Passed a long resolution restoring WFTU's urgent demands for effective voice in the affairs of the UN Economic & Social Council, where representatives of the British and U S. government have sought to place the WFTU in a minor advisory position. With CIO taking a strong lead on the matter, the labor group called upon UN to recognize its unique position in world affairs. The executive committee expressed gratitude to both CIO and the British Trade Union Congress for their efforts, though unsuccessful, to change the position of their governments.

To aid its campaign of action, the WFTU urged national affiliates to back its demands in resolutions sent directly to the UN meeting next September, and called for a program to mass demonstrations or publicity to bolster these requests.

Meanwhile, the WFTU's top nine-man executive bureau scheduled a meeting in Washington about September 10 to lead its negotiations with UN, which will be meeting about the same time.

SPAIN—Charged the France regime with being "unconstitutional and illegal" and recommended to each national affiliate that it press its own government for the severance of diplomatic relations with the Spanish fascist government (See text of resolution on this page).

TRADE SECRETARIES—Called a conference in Paris during August to straighten out knotty details of the problem of bringing the international federation of unions in each industry into the mechanism of the WFTU. Present at that confab will be three representatives from each of these semi-autonomous international groups—most of which are indirectly represented in the WFTU throughout their national labor federations. Also attending the Paris meeting will be the WFTU executive bureau.

The CIO and the Russian All Union Central Council of Trade Unions, which have not been represented in the trade secretariats in the past but which undoubtedly will be represented through affiliated unions once they are established in the WFTU machinery, will each send six spokesmen to the Paris meeting.

FAR EAST—Voted to send a labor commission to the Far East in October. CIO will have one delegate, yet to be appointed, on the commission.

The group will visit Japan to study that country's young labor movement, and to examine general occupation policies in the same way that a similar study was made of the situation in Germany earlier this year. In addition, the WFTU leaders will meet with the labor organizations of China, Korea, Indo-China, Burma and Indonesia, several of which have just been admitted to the ranks of the world organization.

When the delegates and their advisors gathered in the Hall of the Trade Unions at Moscow, they heard Sir Walter Citrine announce his resignation as head of the organization. Citrine, for years the leading figure in the British union movement, is leaving that post to assume charge of the coal mining nationalization program of the Labor Government.

His resignation was accepted with regret, and at WFTU's request, Citrine agreed to carry on until the executive bureau meets in Washington two months hence. The American members at the Moscow meeting were told by several national delegations that there is strong sentiment to elect CIO Pres. Murray as Citrine's successor. Murray has given no indication of his attitude on the question.

Carey and Thomas served as alternates for Murray and the late Sidney Hillman on the 23-man executive committee. Hillman, as a vice-president of WFTU, was also a member of the nine-man executive bureau, which is responsible for guiding the organization's destinies between committee and assembly meetings. It is expected that Pres. Murray will soon announce a successor to Hillman to speak for the CIO on the bureau.

During their two-week stay in Moscow, the three CIO officials had frequent occasion to visit Soviet trade union leaders and to tour through factories.

Carey told a Moscow press conference that on this visit and on his previous trip to the USSR last October, "we learned that our difference of manners and customs do not provide obstacles that we cannot overcome . . . We learned that we can work and live together.

Death To Franco!

Excepts from text of resolution unanimously adopted by Executive Committee of World Federation of Trade Unions, on Franco Spain:

"The Executive Committee . . . reaffirms the unshakable opposition of the trade union organizations of the free countries to General Franco's regime in Spain. This regime, which came into being as the result of a coup d'etat, is regarded by the world trade union movement as unconstitutional and illegal.

"Believing that it is essential to put a speedy end to this survival of fascist dictatorship after the military defeat of Nazism and fascism, the WFTU declares that it desires:

"To recommend to each national trade union center again to demand of their governments to come out in favor of liquidating the Franco dictatorship and of breaking off all relations with the Franco government;

"To invite the national trade union centers to organize in their respective countries, beginning with July 18—the anniversary of Franco's aggression against the Spanish Republicans—until August 15, anti-fascist demonstrations . . .

"To request all national centers to send to the General Assembly of the United Nations . . . resolutions demanding that the UN adopt decisions favoring the restoration of democracy in Spain;

"To address a message to the Security Council demanding that it approve the report of the Sub-committee of the Security Council recommending the rupture of relations with the Franco regime.

"The WFTU addresses to the UN, the demand to declare Franco and his regime outlawed and calls upon member nations to recognize the democratic Republican Government as the legal and constitutional government of Spain and invite that government to the forthcoming meetings of the General Assembly of the United Nations."

ECONOMIC JUSTICE

(The material below is reprinted from a leaflet by Van A. Bittner, national director, and Sherman Dalrymple, secretary-treasurer, of CIO's Southern Organizing Committee. The leaflet, "The Fight For Economic Justice," is receiving widespread use in the CIO's current drive.)

THE marvelous achievements of the CIO during the past few months have been the greatest in the history of American labor. Never before has so much been done to advance wages and improve the living conditions of men, women and children. The CIO has won, not only for its own membership and their families, but for all labor in many sections of our country the largest increases in wages ever given.

The fight for economic justice throughout America has just begun and it will not end until men, women and children in the South, as well as every section of our country, live as God intends they should.

The campaign of the CIO to organize the South is on in full force. All of us working together must finish the job of bringing every unorganized man and woman that works in industry in the South into unions affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The CIO, headed by our great leader, Philip Murray, realizing there is just one way to cure this most serious problem of our economic life has inaugurated this crusading campaign to unionize the vast army of unorganized workers in the South. This great humanitarian effort of the CIO has but one mighty objective, a better life for the working men, women and their children of the South, realizing the men and women of labor of the South are real Americans and are entitled to as high a standard of living as any group of people in America.

You have nothing to be afraid of, throw away your fears—join the CIO and become a part of this great army of seven million men and women in the fight for humanity. Join the union—play your part in increasing the wages—bring better living and working conditions and real security for yourselves and your families through genuine collective bargaining. Let us bring—

1. Higher wages that will guarantee a real American standard of living for the workers and their families.
2. Improved health and safety conditions.
3. Job security.
4. Real security for the workers and their families in times of distress through adequate group insurance furnished by the employers where the union has as much to say in administering benefits of the workers as management.

To the complete fulfillment of this most holy task the CIO pledges our money, our influence and our lives. Join the union today in this great effort to cure the economic ills of the South, as well as the entire nation—that all men and women of labor, business and every element of our citizenship shall enjoy the rich blessings of this the richest and grandest country of the world, our own United States of America.

EDUCATORS MEET CIO

LEADING Michigan educators on a field study of various aspects of American society met with leading CIO officials this week in Washington to gain an understanding of the "philosophy, policies, organization and operation of the CIO."

Meeting in the CIO Board Room, the 26 educators, including superintendents and school principals from all parts of the state, were welcomed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who expressed a wish for wider understanding of what the CIO was trying to do in the field of education. Murray added that "our nation will progress only to the extent that our people progress in the field of education."

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey outlined the CIO's program for international education. He stressed the work of the International Training Administration through which representatives of labor, management and government cooperated to bring foreign workers to America. These workers remain for a year, then return to their country. "As people get to know each other," he said, "there will be less and less reason for conflict."

Carey, who also represents CIO on the World Federation of Trade Unions, told the group that the WFTU would also be considering educational questions as well as health, housing and wage problems.

The CIO's program for worker education was discussed by George Guernsey, assistant director of the national CIO Education Department. Guernsey pointed out that the problem of worker responsibility in a union was no different than that of the citizen's responsibility in a democratic society.

Other speakers included Eugene Cotton, CIO assistant counsel, who spoke on the development of union responsibility; William Oliver, co-director of the CIO Auto Workers Fair Practices and Anti-Discrimination Dept., on education for tolerance in the CIO, and Esther Peterson, legislative representative of the CIO Clothing Workers, who spoke on the CIO's legislative program for women and children.

ILO SEA PAY GAINS INADEQUATE - CIO

By SETH LEVINE
Research Consultant, CIO Maritime Committee

THE first worldwide minimum wage has been proposed by the Intl. Maritime Conference, which was held last month in Seattle. The conference, under auspices of the Intl. Labor Organization, proposed a universal minimum of $64 a month for able seamen.

Of equal importance are regulations of hours. An eight-hour day and 48-hour week were laid down for deck and engine departments.

The ILO convention on wages and hours will now be submitted to the governments of the world for ratification. After a specified number of governments have ratified, the minimums will have the force of international treaties for those governments.

Nine other conventions ranging from minimum standards on social security for seafarers to minimum conditions of accommodation aboard ship were also adopted. They propose:

1. Complete social insurance coverage including medical care and cash benefits for sickness, unemployment and old age, and survivors benefits for seamen and their dependents.

2. An annual vacation of 12 working days for certificated seamen and 18 for officers.

3. Periodic medical examinations to protect the health of seafarers and to assure safety at sea.

4. Limitation of the number men to a room aboard ship and specified conditions as to ventilation, heating, lighting, bathroom and other facilities.

5. Standards for the certification of able seamen and ship's cooks.

6. Pensions for seamen at ages as low as 55.

7. National training systems for seamen with opportunity for all to rise to top ratings.

8. Minimum standards of food aboard ship.

While the standards laid down represent gains in several merchant marines, and in particular for Indian and Chinese seamen who labor 14 and 16 hours a day for pitiful wages, the CIO delegates labeled the standards as "inadequate" and pledged support to seamen of all countries in their national struggles for improved conditions.

The CIO delegates included Herbert Daggett, Marine Engineers; Joseph Harris, Marine Cooks; Ralph Goldsmith, Inland Boatmen's Union; Seth Levine, CIO Maritime Committee; and Jack Winocur, American Communications Assn.

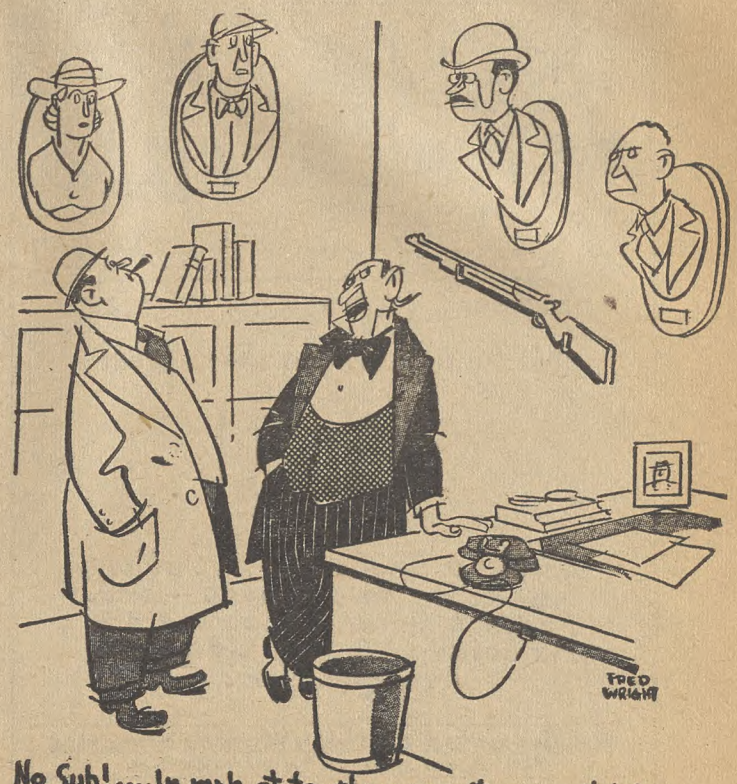
The CIO delegation pointed out that a $72 minimum and an eight-hour day, 48-hour week for all ships and all departments had been agreed upon at an earlier preliminary conference, and attributed the "backsliding" to ILO voting procedure and to a British-led bloc of Northern European votes.

In a statement to the labor press the CIO delegates said:

"ILO voting procedure is weighted in favor of the shipowners. Each government has two votes to one for the seamen and one for the shipowners and as a two-thirds vote is required, a handful of reactionary governments in collusion with the employers can block satisfactory standards.

"In addition, the British, with a large number of Scandinavian and British Commonwealth votes behind them, seemed determined to seek conditions just below the British level. Now the British government can ratify promptly and it will cost the British shipowners hardly anything. Unfortunately, the workers' delegates from many of these countries were blackmailed into going along with the backsliding, thereby outvoting those who stood for higher standards.

"Nonetheless, the decisions taken at Seattle represent the beginning of the end of international shipping competition based on the exploitation of seamen and the CIO delegation will press for speedy ratification by the U. S. Senate."



No Suh!....In mah state the opposition constitutes no menace at all.... suh!!

What's Wrong With This Picture?

Note the painting book. When children are given forms to fill, it kills their creative quality. Imaginations go to sleep as children color ready-made forms. Let them daub and smear around until they spontaneously paint what you'd call "a real picture." Be sure not to tell them how to improve their painting. That, too, kills desire and imagination. Their work will show improvement as they grow and develop. Your job is to provide materials, to show appreciation of work done and to let them alone with their painting.

URGES ANTI-CANCER LAW

In testimony read before the Senate Foreign Affairs Sub-Committee conducting hearings on the Neely-Pepper Cancer Bill, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey declared this week that "the affliction called cancer amounts to the murder of a human being each time it strikes."

Carey pointed out that from 1942 to 1944 cancer "murdered" a total of 501,019 men, women and children.

Indicating that the proposed legislation opened the way to a possible solution, the CIO official said that the bill "presents a challenge. It calls for mobilization in the U. S. of the world's outstanding cancer experts to put forth a supreme endeavour to overcome cancer."

WOMEN FACE LEGAL BOOBY TRAP

By HARRIET BOUSLOG

Legislative Representative, CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union

THE constitutional amendment with the booby-trap name—Equal Rights—is now on the calendar of the Senate. We must convince everyone now that the proper name for the amendment is the Unequal Rights Amendment.

What is the Amendment? The amendment says, "That equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." Congress and the States are authorized to enforce this equality by law.

What Will the Amendment Do? It will wipe out or throw into endless legal battles every known provision of law affecting women. Just think of it! Every right of women under common law or under present statutory law would be subject to attack on constitutional grounds.

The range of these rights include such widely different legal provisions as those relating to a widow's allowance, the obligation of family support and grounds for divorce, the age of majority and the right to annulment of marriage, maximum hours of work, minimum wages, and all other protective legislation for women in industry.

This is the considered legal judgement of Lee Pressman, CIO General Counsel; Joseph Padway, AFL Counsel; Roscoe Pound, Dean of Harvard Law School, and the deans and professors of 21 law schools and a group of eminent lawyers and judges.

Who, Then Supports the Amendment? Only a few measured in numbers, but a dangerous few because the Senate Judiciary Committee listened to and acted on the desire of a small group of American club women who expressed the desire to waive for all women preferential benefits now given by law. The Judiciary Committee listened to the few and turned deaf ears to the pleas of organizations representing millions of American women—especially trade union women who stand to lose the most in job security.

Of course, American industrialists would welcome the opportunity to increase profits.

Who Opposes the Amendment? All trade union groups are on record against the amendment. The CIO and the Women's Auxiliaries, the AFL, the Railroad Brotherhoods, organizations of university women, of women shoppers, of Catholic women, of Jewish women, of Negro women of women voters, all condemn the amendment.

What Does Equality Mean? The opponents of the Unequal Rights Amendment have sponsored a bill requiring equal pay for equal work of women. They believe this is meaningful equality. America's sixteen million working women work for the same reason men work—to support themselves and their families.

To be robbed of protective minimum wage laws and maximum hours legislation would be a staggering blow to women wage earners. Twenty-nine and a half per cent of the total employed in this country are women. Their wages are part of the purchasing power of the community. Their productive efforts are essential to all of us. Let's back them for real equality.

Tell your Senator.

Tell your friends.

Tell the organizations to which you belong. The so-called equal rights amendment is poison.

PICKET LINE VERSES

THE thoughts of pickets as they walk in front of a factory gate, hour after hour, day after day, are recorded in verse, prose and sketches by the pickets themselves in the Pavement Trail published this week by Local 248, CIO Auto Workers, who have been on strike against the Allis-Chalmers Co., West Allis, Wis., almost four months.

In a foreword to this unique volume Meridel Le Sueur, author, reports:

"The voice of the people is not so all-fired elegant, and sometimes they haven't the time to polish it up—picket duty comes early, lasts long; it is cold in winter, hot in summer. But the poetry of the people is full of muscle, straight from the forge, hot off the griddle."

Proceeds from the sale of the book, which may be ordered from Local 248, CIO Auto Workers, 8111 W. Greenfield Ave., West Allis 14, Wis., at 35c a copy, will go to a fund to aid 30,000 Allis-Chalmers strikers at seven strike-bound plants.

LESS WOMEN IN U.S. INDUSTRY

Figures released this week by the Bureau of Labor Statistics indicate that the percentage of women in industry has dropped from a high of 33% in the April, 1945 to 27% at present. In October, 1939, 26% of factory workers were women.

Women workers have retained part of their wartime gains in durable goods industries which account for 13% of their present employment, a 50% gain over 1939 records.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

The Polltax Must Die!

With the end of the war, the poll-tax Democrats and NAM-minded Republicans joined forces in a calculated and purposeful plan to sabotage the Administration's 21 point reconversion program. The history of Congressional legislation since V-J Day shows clearly that Congress is no longer the servant of the people but has become their master.

Last week, despite the wishes of the majority of the American people, the Congress attempted to wreck effective price controls, plunging us into a runaway inflation and consequent devastating depression. Already they have emasculated the full employment bill and the veterans emergency housing program, and delayed the minimum wage bill.

These Congressional actions are testimonials to every worker, farmer and independent businessman—to every American, that irresponsible government breeds irresponsible laws.

It is these so-called "representatives" of the people and their actions that the "poll tax" has fostered.

To rid America of this cancer that is tending to infest our whole economic and political life, we must first cut out the sore. That is why the passage of the anti-poll tax bill (HR 7) is so important today. That is why the enemies of the people are fighting so vigorously to prevent it from coming to a vote in Congres.

The question of the poll tax is not just a sectional issue, but one in which the stake of all working men and women is involved.

So long as only 1/15 of the voting population elects 1/5 of the Congress (69 members of the House of Representatives and 14 Senators); so long as 16 of the 37 House and Senate committees are headed by Southern polltax reactionaries, labor will always find a stumbling block in its path toward achieving a more fruitful life. The polltax has enabled these people to remain in Congress and gain the chairmanship or virtual control of the important Congressional committees through the operation of the seniority rules.

Every piece of progressive legislation—for smooth reconversion from war to peace, for decent living wages, for full employment and for better living conditions—faces a stonewall of irresponsible representatives.

The anti-polltax bill passed the House of Representatives over a year ago on June 12, 1945. Since then, the polltax bloc has kept it from coming on the floor of the Senate for a vote. Unless the people speed up their efforts on this basic issue—NOW—Congress will go home for the summer without voting on it. If the anti-polltax bill does not pass this session, the polltax Congressmen will become even more entrenched in their respective committees next year.

The filibuster—used in the past against polltax legislation—provides the reactionaries with a technique of political obstructionism. Senators Pepper, Mead and Ferguson should be urged to press the fight for bringing the bill to the floor during this session.

Further, all progressive-minded Senators should be urged to vote for cloture if and when it comes up.

HR 7 must be voted on during this session, before Congress goes home to meet its constituents.

The polltaxers are determined to employ all means at their disposal to stop it. This is their last-ditch fight. The people must see to it that it is their LAST fight.

But, the time is short. We must act quickly and concertedly. Write or wire Senator Barkley and your own Senators demanding action immediately after the completion of the OPA legislation to bring HR 7 on the floor.

No Time To Lose On Wage Bill

A new drive to force minium wage legislation to the floor of the House was started last week when Rep. Andrew Biemiller, (D., Wis.) filed a discharge petition designed to bring HR 3914 before the House for debate.

HR 3914, introduced by Rep. Hook (D., Mich.) is a companion bill to the Pepper Minimum Wage Bill in the Senate.

"It has become very obvious that a majority of the Rules Committee membership is endeavoring to block action on minimum wage legislation in this session. A discharge petition is the only effective method the friends of this legislation have to encounter the delaying tactics of the Rules Committee," Biemiller said.

"President Truman has repeatedly stated that there is no more important bill before the Congress," he continued.

The discharge petition was filed on behalf of the informal Congressional Committee for a Fair Minimum Wage, comprising nearly 100 members. Representatives George Outland (D., Calif.) and Homer Ramey (R., O.) are co-chairmen of the committees, while Biemiller is secretary.

Housing In A Hurry

R. J. Thomas, chairman of the CIO Committee on Housing and Community Development, has voiced a strong demand for House action on the Wagner-Ellender-Taft General Housing Bill, (S. 1592) during the present session of Congress.

In a letter to Rep. Brent Spence, chairman of the House Banking Committee, Thomas prophesied that "without this bill on the statute books, no homes will be provided under existing housing laws for veterans of middle and low income."

He stated that "unless the financing provisions of S. 1592 are enacted, unless public housing provisions become law, unless there is adequate planning and assistance to veterans in rural areas, all of the veterans' housing legislation thus far enacted will be little more than a mockery.

"The entire so-called Wyatt program is necessary to housing, and the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill is the corner-stone of that program," Thomas stated.

"If we produce only 'housing for generals,' the vast army of returning veterans and their families will have cause for strenuous action," Thomas stated. He sharply criticized those enemies of the veterans and labor "who are attempting to defeat the measure through points of order and delaying tactics."

Thomas emphasized that he is convinced that a vast majority of the people of this nation favor the enactment of S. 1592 and that "if it reaches the floor of the House, which it must, it will pass by a substantial majority."

The CIO housing official earlier had declared:

"Action is necessary immediately on a national scale to forestall this impoverishment of the home-renters of America.

"I call upon Congress to enact a price control act without loopholes at once. I call upon Congress to speed action on the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill, the only feasible method of providing veterans with houses at a price they can afford.

"And I serve notice to the landlords of America that the working people will tolerate no further abuses to their living standards in the form of outrageous, unjustified rent increases."

Milk prices went so high at Camden, N. J., that the CIO Shipbuilding Workers bought milk wholesale and distributed it free to Children. See Pags 8-9 for more OPA news.

FIVE-MAN BOARD TO RUN CIO-PAC

THE CIO moved quickly last week to repair the gaping hole in its leading ranks caused by the sudden death of Sidney Hillman.

A complete reorganization of the Political Action Committee to carry forward labor's campaign in the coming elections was announced by CIO Pres. Murray with the unanimous approval of Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and the nine vice-presidents, and was quickly ratified at the Executive Board meeting in Washington.

Highpoints of the shuffle:

1. Broadening of the Political Action Committee to include Murray, Carey and CIO's nine vice-presidents.

2. Formation of a five-man PAC executive board, four of its members the Secretary-Treasurers of big CIO unions.

3. Appointment of Jack Kroll, veteran Amalgamated Clothing Workers vice-president and Ohio union leader, to the important post of assistant chairman and director.

"Kroll, who has functioned as an assistant chairman of the PAC, will continue in this capacity and will be charged with day to day supervision and direction of the work of the PAC staff," Murray's announcement declared.

Serving on the Political Action Committee executive board to administer PAC affairs, will be:

Sec.-Treas. David J. McDonald of the United Steelworkers;

Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers;

George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the United Automobile Workers;

William Pollock, secretary-treasurer of the Textile Workers Union.

As enlarged, the Political Action Committee itself will consist of Pres. Murray, Sec.-Treas. Carey and the nine CIO vice-presidents: R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO; Frank Rosenblum, Clothing Workers; Albert J. Fitzgerald, UE; John Green, Shipbuilding Workers; Joseph Curran, Natl. Maritime Union; Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; L. S. Buckmaster, Rubber Workers; Emil Rieve, Textile Workers; and Allan S. Haywood, director of organization.

Murray had served in an ex-officio capacity on PAC. Carey, Rosenblum, Curran, Robinson and Haywood are new members of the committee, while Van A. Bittner has retired from political action work to devote his full time to the CIO's organizing drive in the south.

"The death of Sidney Hillman has come at a time when his leadership in the field of political action could ill be spared," Pres. Murray commented in his announcement of the new PAC structure.

"It came at a time when the needs of the nation for effective progressive political action are unprecedented. We are faced today with a situation in which a reactionary coalition is seeking to dominate our political life for selfish and sinister ends.

"The CIO is deeply aware that the work of Sidney Hillman must be carried forward and completed because the nation's interest so desperately requires it. This is the supreme hour for intensification of the work so brilliantly commenced by Sidney Hillman, through the CIO-PAC, of educating American people to the fundamental issues of progress and reaction which now confront them.

No chairman of PAC has been named, the CIO leader added. He stressed that the present structure is designed to repair as well as possible in the quickest time the damage caused by Hillman's sudden death. After the elections, he added, CIO will consider the advisability of further changes in PAC on the basis of its record and efficiency in the coming campaign.

JACK KROLL NEW PAC DIRECTOR

JACK KROLL, new director of PAC's staff work and head of its executive board, is a veteran of 31 years of organizing whose tanned, weather-beaten face belies his 61 years.

A long time official of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers—he participated in the famous Hart, Schaffner & Marx strike in Chicago in 1910 which gave so many ACW leaders their first experience in union activity—Kroll has served labor and the CIO in a wide variety of capacities.

His list of titles is imposing. He is a vice-president and member of the general executive board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and manager of its Cincinnati joint board for the past quarter century. Along with Sidney Hillman, he helped found the ACW in 1915 and throughout the ensuing years he was a lieutenant and devoted friend of the recently deceased union president.

Kroll has been president of the Ohio CIO Council for three years. In March, he was appointed an assistant to Director Van Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee and helped get the southern unionization drive moving off to a fast start. He has been an assistant chairman of the PAC for some time.

A modest, good-humored man, Kroll told reporters he hopes to "carry on the PAC work outlined by Sidney Hillman before he died." But, he hastened to add with a twinkling smile, "I'll need a darned sight more help than Sidney Hillman."

Associates of Kroll on the PAC staff hasten to add, however, that the new director of their activities is no political babe-in-the-woods, but a shrewd veteran of many political campaigns. He has been active in Ohio and national PAC work, and was a delegate to the Democratic convention in 1944.

"My politics?" Kroll replied to a question. "I vote the man, on the record."

PAC policies, he continued, will be substantially unchanged, though as the campaign moves toward the home stretch PAC work will be intensified.

"We line up with anyone that's going our way," he pointed out, "just as PAC has always cooperated with liberal groups seeking the election of candidates with good records on labor and social issues."

As in the past, Kroll said, endorsement of candidates will be done by the folks in the Congressional district or in the state. PAC headquarters will continue its practice of making available voting records, educational material, and technical advice.

TWO NEW UNIONS AT BOARD MEET

Two new CIO unions were represented for the first time at the Executive Board meeting in Washington.

One was the Amalgamated Lithographers, which parted company with the AFL after several years of affiliation and joined CIO after a referendum of its membership early this year.

The other was the United Brewery, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers, whose new CIO charter was presented in ceremonies during the course of the Board's session. The Brewery Workers, with a membership of about 65,000, is one of the nation's oldest industrial unions, and had been affiliated with the AFL for nearly half a century.

A referendum on CIO affiliation showed a heavy margin in favor, according to results announced a few weeks ago.

PAC WINS GREATEST VICTORY OF 1946

IN the year's most unforeseen political upset and greatest labor victory, Montana voters turned out Senator Burton K. Wheeler, who had held his post for 24 years, granting the Democratic nomination instead to CIO-PAC endorsed Leif Erickson, former State Supreme Court judge and railway labor mediator.

At the national CIO-PAC office in New York, Assistant Chairman Thomas F. Burns encouraged by the progressive tide, commented, "We are happy and pleased over results of the Montana election."

Judge Erickson's consistently liberal stands are in sharp contrast with Sen. Wheeler's isolationist policy and close association with such Hitler agents as George Sylvester Vierick, now in federal prison and his role in dismembering OPA and opposing a permanent FEPC.

Named to referee 150 cases before the Railroad Adjustment Board by President Roosevelt, Erickson campaigned on a "make the United Nations work" platform. He will seek a guaranteed annual wage for labor and a ten-year floor under livestock and farm prices. Erickson will face Zales N. Ecton, Republican, in November.

Rail Brotherhood members who place much of the blame for loss of their demands for work rule changes during the May strike on Wheeler, head of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, pitched in with local AFL groups, who defied President William Green's endorsement of the incumbent, and the CIO to hand the ex-America Firster this stunning rebuff.

Georgia's county unit rule, which works like the U. S. Electoral College in Presidential elections, gave Democratic primary nomination to Gene Talmadge, one of the worst of the demagogues.

James M. Carmichael rolled up a sizeable plurality over Talmadge, who was opposed by all union groups in the state, but the votes of low-population counties overcame Carmichael's lack of strength in the sparse rural areas where Talmadge carried on a campaign of reaction and race hatred.

As a result, Georgia liberals will have their hands full to preserve the great gains made under Gov. Arnall, who, under the state's constitution, was ineligible to run for re-election. During Arnall's term, Georgia abolished the poll tax, extended the vote to 18-year-olds, improved racial relations and instituted many governmental reforms.

Another casualty of the county unit rule was Mrs. Helen Mankin, progressive Congresswoman from the 5th District, in Atlanta. She too had labor support, received a popular majority but lost the primary through the unit system in which two small counties outvoted the heavy population of Fulton County in Atlanta.

Mrs. Mankin expects to run in the general election, where the county unit system does not apply, and has an excellent chance of success. She was elected a year ago in a special vote to fill a Congressional seat left vacant by the death of the incumbent.

Democratic primaries in Arkansas, Arizona and Wyoming renominated all incumbents.

CIO MEETS NOV. 18

The eighth annual convention of the CIO will open at the Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, N. J., on Nov. 18.

Pres. Murray announced that the Executive Board will convene five days earlier at the Jersey shoreside city.

The Chelsea was the scene of the 1940 CIO meeting, at which Murray was elected head of the organization. No convention was held last year because of travel difficulties. The 1944 parley met in Chicago.

CIO BOARD DEMANDS TRUMAN CALL GOVT. WAGE-PRICE PARLEY

(See text of CIO statement on inflation, page 7.)

THE CIO Executive Board last week uttered a grim warning that inflation and economic chaos endanger the safety and security of America's 140,000,000 people.

In a desperate demand for action to halt the forces of profiteering and disaster, the Board called upon President Truman to call an immediate meeting of labor and industry through which a program for "a stabilized national economy" can be achieved.

Voiced by the representatives of six million working Americans, the Board statement included:

1. An "eleventh-hour" plea to Congress to pass a price control bill free of crippling amendments.
2. A demand that the President veto any amendment-ridden OPA bill that "would be a fraud on the American people."
3. Called for action during the election campaign to hold responsible those in Congress who have fought OPA, either openly or through gutting amendments.
4. A plea for buyers' strikes and community action "by every available weapon" to protect the right to food, clothing and shelter for American families.
5. A demand for "immediate upward adjustment of pensions, social security payments and other fixed sources of income upon which needy persons are dependent for their livelihood."
6. A warning that workers' wages and purchasing power must be protected in the period before termination of contracts and before the development of a stabilized national economy.

WITH the price control bill crippled by amendments and locked in a legislative tug of war, and with commodity prices soaring upwards, the Board's major demand for relief was the establishment of a government industry-labor conference.

"We call upon the President of the United States," the resolution said, "to call before him in immediate conference, representatives of American labor and industry to the end that the demand and need for immediate wage increases may be given full and official recognition, and to the end that the crisis created by the drive to cripple and destroy price control may be met quickly through adequate guarantees for a stabilized national economy.

"Only in this manner can we avoid the terrible devastation and misery of an inflationary period which will otherwise descend upon the people of this country."

Throughout the press conference in which the CIO board's resolution was announced to the public, Pres. Murray emphasized again and again that fast and decisive action is necessary by the White House to avert chaos and panic.

Soberly he emphasized the import of a 25% rise in the price of important consumer items during the past fortnight. He mentioned the Dun & Bradstreet index of wholesale prices, now at the highest point in 25 years. He quoted from reports by Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union that raw cotton prices have advanced 150%—a rise soon to be reflected in higher clothing prices.

"The government should not only guide—it should participate in the conference to arrive at a satisfactory solution of our problems and help us achieve national economic stability," the CIO president told reporters.

"A conference is necessary in the absence of action by the federal Congress to meet its responsibilities. We have not hoped that Congress will produce real price control, or roll back prices to the June 30 level.

If the government takes an active hand in such a meeting of labor and industry, the fiasco of last year's union-management confab can be avoided, Murray said. He recalled that meeting, while called by the President, enjoyed no government participation or direction.

If such a conference showed a genuine intent to handle and master the inflationary problem, Murray said, the unions might consider the granting of a non-strike pledge to show their good faith and willingness to cooperate, although they are not prepared at this time, in the absence of any real anti-inflationary action, to do so at this time.

But CIO unions will observe their contracts, and will not strike illegally under any circumstances, Pres. Murray made clear.

THE Board's statement was severe in its castigation of Congressional handling of the price control bill. It charged that "spokesmen for monopolists and profiteers" have made the present OPA bill even weaker than that vetoed by the President.

It lashed out at the "scandalous exhibition of log-rolling", charged a "betrayal of the public interest", and accused profiteer-spokesmen in Congress of seeking to "perpetrate a hoax on the American people by pretending continuance of price control while so limiting its power and effect as to result in no effective control whatsoever."

The Board charged that CIO unions entered into long-term wage contracts with the "pledge and assurance of the present Administration that the price line would be held. That pledge has clearly not been kept."

The Congressmen responsible for such a situation "must be made to answer to the people," the CIO statement added. "The issue is not merely one of statistic and abstract economics. It is one of starvation and homelessness."

In calling for a buyers' strike against inflationary prices, the Board appeals to the consuming public, the housewives of America, the members of labor organizations, the white collar workers and pension holders.

It urged them "to refrain where possible — individually and in organized fashion—from avoidable purchases, to demonstrate to industry and government their opposition to profiteering, to protect by local and national action and by every available weapon their right to food, clothing and shelter for their families.

Board Acts on Major Issues:

U. S. HOUSING PLAN MUST PASS—CIO

PASSAGE of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill is a "must" piece of legislation second in importance only to an effective price control act, the CIO Executive Board meeting in Washington warned last week.

The bill is of "most critical" importance not only to returning veterans, the Board statement said, but also to "homeless union members who played an indispensable role in winning the war."

In another key resolution, the CIO leaders demanded that the federal government seize and operate the plants of the Allis-Chalmers Co., and the J. I. Case Co., which have been on strike for seven months.

"The J. I. Case Co., has refused to meet with their employes, and Allis Chalmers has made a pretense of bargaining," the Board declared. It added that both corporations "have defied the U. S. government, have flouted public interest, and refused to recognize accepted procedure of collective bargaining.

"The CIO National Executive Board calls upon the President of the United States and the Dept. of Labor to take immediate steps to seize these respective corporations in the interest of producing needed farm equipment, so that the farmer will not lose his investment and may successfully harvest his crop and relieve the world food shortage."

Involved in the Allis-Chalmers strike, which affects half a dozen plants, are the Auto Workers, the Farm Equipment Workers and the Electrical Workers.

CIO opposition to a proposed $677,400 cut in the appropriation of the National Labor Relations Board was expressed in a third Board resolution, which pointed out that the NLRB had asked only for the "modest sum" of $4,746,900 for the fiscal year.

"This proposed cut would gravely hamper the NLRB at a time when the needs of the nation in the area of labor relations require that the Act be effectively administered," the Board declared.

"The proposed cut would necessitate a reduction in personnel of approximately 20%. Such a cut in personnel would add to the delays of an agency which already is operating at an exceedingly slow pace."

"Congress should not place itself in the position of creating an agency to insure industrial peace and then refuse to underwrite is effective functioning. The modest amount requested the Board should be restored to the budget and the proposed cut promptly rejected."

The resolution on the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill called upon President Truman to instruct the Democraic leadership of the House to remain in "continuous session" until passage is assured.

It warned against "any concessions" to powerful real estate interests who are opposed to the bill, and declared the Board would hold the Democratic leadership in the House, the House Banking & Currency Committee and Congress responsible if the measure dies without action.

CONFEREES FIGHT OVER OPA CORPSE

SENATE and House conferees last week fought over the corpse of the price cotnrol bill, while Pres. Truman warned that prices are steadily rising in the absence of effective OPA machinery.

The 7-man committee representing the two branches of the national legislature wrangled over OPA's discretionary power and the Senate action which had resulted in the lifting of controls on meat, poultry, eggs and a variety of other important consumer goods.

Written into the Senate version of the bill was a little-publicized amendment, the product of Sen. Knowland (R. Calif.), which practically kills effective rent control on a national basis.

The amendment provides that OPA would have no rent-policing powers in any state where the governor or legislature institutes any form of rent control. It was pointed out, however, that the amendment makes no provision for the type of state controls. Accordingly, almost any action on a state basis—even to granting a 50% rise in rent ceilings—could be interpreted as effective action under the amendment.

CIO legislative experts warned that rent control, as it now stands, is all but dead unless the amendment is repealed.

The opinion grew, however, in many Washington circles that price control is all but dead. The CIO executive board, meeting in the capital, asked for 11th hour action, as reports from all over the nation described steadily spiraling price increases, particularly in the wholesale markets. These rises will soon be felt in the retail stores, where prices on a dozen or more of the most important staple articles has risen 25% in the fortnight since OPA went out of business.

The Senate version of the bill was passed by a 62-15 vote. It provides exemptions from price control for meat, poultry, eggs, butter, cotton seed, soybeans, petroleum, cheese oils, fats and lard; ends the maximum average price plan designed to bring low-cost clothing on the market; and provides a variety of loopholes for eager-beaver profit seekers.

Earlier the House had passed a simple "as is" extension of price control for a 20-day period. The House was faced with two alternatives—to accept the mauled Senate version and forward it to Pres. Truman for signature or veto, to send the bill to conference. It adopted the latter method by a vote of 211-64.

Representing the House on the conference committee are Democratic Reps. Spence (Ky.), Patman (Tex.), Brown (Ga.) and Barry (N. Y.), as well as Republicans Wolcott and Crawford (Mich.) and Gamble (N. Y.).

The Senate conferees are Barkley (Ky.), Wagner (N. Y.), and Radcliffe (Md.), all Democrats, as well as Republicans Taft (O.), Millikin (Col.) and Tobey (N. H.).

OFF TO FAST START

Getting off to a fast start, PAC's new five-man executive board scheduled a meeting for July 20 to institute plans for intensified campaign activity during the next few months.

For PAC's plans for a whirlwind campaign to elect progressive Congressmen, see next week's issue of The CIO NEWS.

UNDERMINING OUR FOUNDATIONS

The fight against inflation has reached a new stage—a stage of crisis.

Since Congress allowed all price controls to lapse, prices of basic commodities have risen almost 25% and of foodstuffs more than 34%. In the past two months essential living costs have risen about 40%.

Much greater increases are in store, as higher prices already in effect for raw and basic materials begin to be passed on from the wholesale to the retail levels.

Almost all hope has been lost of Congress reinstating effective price controls, still less of its rolling back present prices to the pre-July level.

The measures it is now considering are nothing but a hoax, designed to preserve price control in name only while lifting the lid on prices in every direction.

The Congressmen who have destroyed price control and who are refusing to reinstate it are undermining the foundations of our national economic stability.

They have already cut deep into the purchasing power of wages, salaries, savings, pensions, social security benefits—the incomes of all sections of the American people.

The lower-income groups are the worst sufferers, since nearly all their income goes into actual living costs; and when these increase, it means an immediate reduction of their standard of living.

The fight against inflation is the common fight of all the American people, and in this fight the CIO is taking the lead.

The program adopted by the CIO executive board is designed not only to remedy labor's plight but also to protect all American homes from the horrors of inflation.

Its purpose is not a senseless inflationary race between wages and prices but a stabilized national economy for all the people.

The CIO is making an eleventh-hour plea to Congress to reverse its present position and enact a really effective price control bill. It also calls upon the President to veto any bill which would be merely a sham or pretense of price control.

At the same time, the CIO is preparing to mobilize all its political power between now and November, in cooperation with all other forward-looking Americans, to see that the Congressional wreckers of price control are made to answer to the people at the polls.

As to immediate steps to combat the inflation already upon us, the CIO calls upon the whole consuming public to join with it in buyers' strikes and in every other possible demonstration of their opposition to profiteering and their determination to defend their living standards.

The CIO also calls for an immediate upward adjustment of pensions, social security payments and other fixed sources of income for the needy.

Finally, the CIO urges the President to call at once a conference of labor, industry and government at which steps may be taken for immediate wage increases to restore the workers' purchasing power and for adequate guarantees for a stabilized national economy.

This is the first clear-cut program for a real people's fight against inflation. It is a program behind which the CIO must mobilize all its forces.

It is also a program which should enlist the support of all Americans who want to save themselves and their country from the evils which an inflation-crazy majority of Congress has brought upon us.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

FORK out, fellow guinea pigs and Bikini goats. If it hurts to pay higher prices for everything, let's think of the Congressmen who are experimenting with us and of the theory they're trying to prove.

The experiment is intended to demonstrate the validity of "the good old rule, the ancient plan, that he shall take who has the power and he shall keep who can."

★ ★ ★

Government figures, gathered by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, show that prices of 28 basic commodities have risen about 25% since price control expired on July 1, and that basic foodstuffs have risen more than 34%.

So all we and our families need to do, up to this point, is to eat one-third less than we did before and buy one-fourth less of the other necessities of life.

But this is just the beginning.

Aside from some spectacular rent increases, the biggest price boosts so far have been in basic raw materials and at the wholesale level. Which means that the worst is yet to come.

After the atomic bomb exploded at Bikini, a lot of the experimental animals remained alive, for awhile. But its aftereffects on them were worse than its initial impact.

It also takes a little while for the increases in basic and wholesale prices to reach through to the retail stores.

But when they do, with a little or a lot more margin added for every middleman along the line, we'll know it.

The Congressmen who voted to destroy price control want to see how much we can do without and still survive. And if we don't survive, that'll prove something too.

If prices of food and other necessities double, and American working folk can get by with half what they had before, maybe the noble experiment can be continued until we're reduced to a handful of rice and a breechclout. Just think what that would mean to profits!

And if we stand for this kind of experimenting and still re-elect the same kind of Congressmen, boy oh boy, won't that give the politicians some scope in the future!

Of course, that isn't the way these Congressmen describe the purpose of their experiment.

They have a theory that if no limit is placed on prices and profits, everybody with money will see so many golden opportunities of making more money by robbing and exploiting everyone else that after awhile there'll be so many goods on the market and so few people with money enough to buy them that prices will just have to come down.

But to prove this theory, the workers who do the actual producing will have to survive on slimmer rations until they work themselves out of a job by producing more goods than they can afford to buy.

Along with the workers and other low-income folk, the small businessmen are also the goats in this experiment.

The big chain stores can afford to hold down retail prices for awhile, because they have larger stocks bought at lower prices.

But the small storekeeper has to pass on to his customers at once the higher prices he must pay.

So the chains can undercut their independent competitors until they have cornered the business and then clean up with as high prices as they please.

Similarly, with all other business, the big fellows have the chance of their lives to clean up on the little fellows, because they can hold out longer for a bigger killing.

★ ★ ★

The big question today before the American people is, "Are we mice or are we men?"

If we act like mice, we are going to have every kind of experiment tried out on us—to see how much we can pay, how little we can eat, and how much we will stand for.

But if we stand up and fight like men, as the CIO proposes, we can stop Congress from playing politics with human misery, we can end the present evil experiment, we can place some check on inflation, and we can teach the price-raising politicians a lesson they'll never forget.

HOUSE BACKS BRASS

THE HOUSE of Representatives last week over-rode the demands of Administration leaders and numerous civic and scientific groups, as it voted to reserve one seat on the atomic energy commission to a representative of the armed forces.

The five-man group would be set up under the provisions of the McMahon Bill (S. 1717), which has already passed the Senate. Military control of the group has been advocated by the House Military Affairs Committee, of which Rep. A. J. May (D. Ky.)—now involved in the nation's biggest wartime contracts scandal—is the chairman.

Two efforts to kill the bill, one by Rep. Rankin, the Mississippi polltaxer, the other by conservative Rep. Dewey Short (R. Mo.), were turned down in the House.

Rep. Ewing Thomason (D. Tex.) lashed out at charges that the demand for civilian control of atomic energy is a Communist plot. He complained that the brass hats and their Congressional spokesmen are "dragging a red herring across the trail."

Thomason noted that under the bill's provisions, there is adequate machinery for maintaining close contact with the military on atomic matters.

Earlier in the week Chairman W. A. Higinbotham of the Federation of American Scientists, gave a sobering picture of what can happen in a world in which atomic energy is not harnessed for peaceful use.

Speaking at an institute of the Natl. Committee on Atomic Information in Washington, Higinbotham said "men must cease to think of this primarily as a weapon or we are doomed." One of the top know-how men of the Manhattan Project, Higinbotham warned "America has no lasting monopoly of atomic bomb production. In four years other powers can have these bombs."

He said there is no foreseeable defense in science against the atomic bomb, and that a political program to prevent atomic warfare was the only reasonable solution for civilization.

"We shall breathe easily in an atmosphere of world trust and safety, or else we must scatter ourselves against the powers now loose in the world. We shall give up the concept of separate nations in an atomic arms race, or we shall have to give up the concept of cities," he said, outlining the serious proposals of top U. S. military leaders for breaking down the country into small communities and locating vital industry in vast underground caves.

He urged international control of the sources of atomic energy, uranium and thorium, and said an international development authority as proposed to the United Nations would become "the first world university, the first world industry run for the benefit of all."

At the entrance of the hall, as Higinbotham spoke, was displayed a set of Japanese on-the-spot photographs of the Nagasaki and Hiroshima destruction, taken a few hours after the 1945 blasts, showing the horror of heaped charred bodies amid the smoking ruins of homes, schools and factories.

Sen. McMahon (D. Conn.), introducing Higinbotham, said he thought America had "come a long way from the 'let's keep the secret' policy of almost a year ago" and that he hoped by Aug. 6, anniversary of Hiroshima, to see his civilian control bill enacted into law and atomic energy in the hands of "a high-minded commission." The bill, as he spoke, was about to come before the House with military affairs committee members gunning for its civilian control provisions.

MURRAY WARNS OF PEOPLE'S WRATH

CIO Pres. Philip Murray last week put the blame for failure to keep OPA alive squarely on the shoulders of Congress and warned that unless a strong price control law is enacted Senators and Congressmen would hear from "the greatest American economist, the American housewife," in November.

Testifying before the House Labor Committee's subcommittee investigating strike causes, Murray declared:

"We have national unrest and chaos, and a Congress derelict in the performance of its duties. Congress' responsibility is not to engage in wild goose chases to destroy the union movement but to devote its energies to one of the most vexing problems that ever confronted the American people—mounting prices and inflation."

The CIO president lashed out at the kick-back provisions of the Federal tax law, citing the case of Allis Chalmers and the Case companies which have refused to bargain with CIO unions for several months. He declared:

"Both companies are rich with war profits and have been collecting the kick-back under the 1942 tax law, and are thus being financed by the U. S. to destroy the unions. That is a factual record, but in face of the record Congress has not considered legislation to meet such situations. It might be well to amend the tax kick-back provision to stop strike benefits to companies trying to destroy unions."

When Rep. Landis (R. Ind.) complained that employers were deprived of the right to talk to their employes, Murray said that the purposes of the prohibition was to prevent employers from destroying unions.

'I thought there was another angle," Landis said.

"I never knew of any other angle," Murray retorted.

Murray said that big business' concerted policy after V-J Day was to force strikes, holding out against government proposals for settling the differences and then calling on Congress to ram through anti-strike bills.

The CIO president praised "the splendid service of the Labor Dept." but declared that Congress should appropriate sufficient money so that the department could get good men.

Dixie Drive In High Gear

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

A FLOW of membership applications, starting two months ago as a thin trickle but quickly developing into a steady stream, has greeted the first two months' activities of the CIO Organizing Committee's drive in the south.

Reporting to the CIO Executive Board on union organization plans south of the Mason & Dixon line, Director Van A. Bittner made clear that the "million dollar drive" is going even better than expected.

"To date we have won 36 elections and lost 4," Bittner declared. "That's top-flight batting in any man's league."

It's a new south in which the CIO organizing Committee's staff of 238 organizers are going about daily business. A few years ago, such a campaign might have been marked by fierce opposition from the press, from the employers and from the police.

"So far we've had to file only four or five practices complaints with the Labor Board," the veteran of half a dozen organizing campaigns told a Washington press conference. "Why, a few years ago we'd have had more of our people killed than that.

"Let's not kid ourselves," he added. "None of our organizers has been killed by a mob of people rushing into sign membership cards. But progress to date has been much faster than we had anticipated."

Although the organizers are scattered through the entire south, a few key areas are marked down on Bittner's map for special emphasis. One of these is Oak Ridge, the big atom bomb plant in Tennessee where organizing goes on around the clock in order to swing a CIO victory in an election which may be ordered any day by the NLRB.

Another key spot are the big Bibb and Cannon chains of textile mills in Nortn Carolina and Georgia. The campaign in the Carolinas is under the supervision of George Baldanzi, Textile Workers vice-president and assistant to the director.

Lumber workers in Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana; oil workers in Texas; textile workers throughout the southeast; employes of the south's new chemical industry; food processing and canning workers — the drive encompasses them all.

A key to the pace with which the campaign is moving was provided on July 14, when Bittner brought together his state directors for their first meeting since "D (for drive) Day" early in May. In the neat, remodeled headquarters of the committees, just a stone's throw from Atlanta's famous Peachtree Street, the key men in the campaign to unionize the south, told their story without dramatics or fanfare.

It was a story, repeated for each state, of petitions for elections, now or in the near future.

"We're going to hit our stride around August 15 or September 1," says John Brownlee, a staff official who handles all NLRB work for the drive. "I expect there'll be a flood of petitions around that time."

The AFL organizing campaign, announced in a blaze of publicity shortly after CIO had announced its plans, isn't visible to the naked eye, except at the Oak Ridge atom plant. A visiting northern newspaperman—one of many who has toured the south since the CIO drive moved into action—drifted back for a second visit to the office of A. J. (Pete) Swim, CIO publicity director in the south.

"Say, Pete," he said, "just as one newspaperman to another, can you help me out? I've been looking high and low for signs of AFL activity down here, and I can't find any. I know you're working for the CIO—but maybe you can tell me where to look!"

Nobody at CIO knows the answer any better than the visiting journalist.

"There's nothing wrong with the south that can't be cured if the region is put in balance economically with the rest of the nation," Director Bittner commented recently, during the course of a talk to a group of McGraw-Hill editors in Washington.

"The south is beginning to make up its mind that it doesn't like to be called the Economic Problem No. 1, of the nation. It is beginning to become tired of making excuses for its short-comings.

"I believe the south—now that its sons are back from war, has finally decided to take an honest look at itself and to eliminate the things it does not like."

CIO, with its staff of organizers (85% southerners, 75% veterans) is helping the south shed that "problem" label. It is dedicated to a simple program of higher wages, shorter hours, better working conditions, and greater prosperity for the entire area.

That message is getting across to southern workers, to ministers and merchants, editors and employers. Accustomed for years to a steady barrage of anti-union propaganda, they have seen CIO's hundreds of thousands of members in steel, auto and textile take their rightful place in the community.

POTOFSKY IS NAMED AMALGAMATED HEAD

JACOB S. Potofsky was designated unanimously July 14 by the general executive board of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers as president of the union to succeed the late Sidney Hillman, who died July 10 after 32 years in office. Potofsky has been general secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated since 1940.

JACOB S. POTOFSKY

Frank Rosenblum was selected to succeed Potofsky as secretary-treasurer. Rosenblum has been executive vice-president of the Amalgamated since 1940. The latter post has been left vacant.

Following the general executive board meeting at New York City,, where it held emergency sessions following Hillman's interment, the new Amalgamated president declared that he would scrupulously follow "the Hillman traditions and Hillman policies" both nationally and internationally.

Potofsky was born on November 16, 1894 in Radomisl, the Ukraine. In 1910 he participated in the famous Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing strike by Hillman's side and in 1914, aided in the formation of Clothing Workers. He has held many important posts since in the Amalgamated, the CIO and in community, relief and patriotic organizations.

Pledging to fulfill the Hillman policies, Potofsky declared:

"I shall devote all my energies to the advancement of the interests of the Amalgamated membership and the cause of labor generally.

"Under my administration, the Amalgamated will continue its active participation in the CIO Political Action Committee, the American Labor Party in New York State, the World Federation of Trade Unions and other activities in which our late president played such an active role."

"The Amalgamated will loyally support the policies of Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and we are, of course, pledged to support unreservedly the CIO campaign to organize in the South and elsewhere. . .

Potofsky will serve the unexpired term of Hillman until 1948 when an Amalgamated convention will nominate and the general membership will vote by referendum on the general officers of the union.

Frank Rosenblum, the new secretary-treasurer and former executive vice-president, was born in New York City on May 15, 1888. He also participated in the 1910 clothing strike in Chicago and led the insurgent revolt in Nashville, Tenn., in 1914 at the United Garment Workers' Convention which led to the formation of the Clothing Workers.

Rosenblum helped organize the Chicago clothing market in 1919, and as head of the Western Organizing Department of the Amalgamated, led in the successful unionization of such principal clothing markets as Cleveland, St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Cincinnati and other places.

Rosenblum has been a CIO vice president since 1940, succeeding Hillman who resigned his CIO post at that time to enter the government.

JOSEPH CATALANOTTI DIES, CLOTHING WORKERS LEADER

JOSEPH Catalanotti, a vice-president and founder of the CIO Clothing Workers, close co-worker of the late Sidney Hillman and president of the Free Italy American Labor Council, died July 15 of a heart attack at Bay Shore, Long Island. His age was 59.

The Amalgamated vice-president was also a co-manager of the New York Joint Board since 1932. Born in Castellmare, Sicily, on Nov. 15, 1886, he arrived here in his youth and joined Local 63 which became part of the Amalgamated in 1914 when it broke away from the United Garment Workers. Catalanotti was an active participant and leader of the general clothing strike in New York City in 1913.

In 1944 he became president of the Free Italy American Labor Council which represents 300,000 American trade unionists of Italian extraction, and recently helped raise $500,000 toward the establishment of cooperative shirt and clothing factories in his native land.

Last December he visited Italy on behalf of the CIO, the Amalgamated and the Free Italy American Labor Council.

Catalanotti leaves a widow, Elizabeth, and two married daughters.

MILLION PAY TRIBUTE TO SIDNEY HILLMAN

By BETTY GOLDSTEIN
Federated Press

SIDNEY Hillman, labor leader who taught America's organized workers how to shape the democratic destiny of their nation, was buried July 12 after one of the most tremendous tributes New York City has ever seen.

More than a million people, white and Negro, Jew and Gentile, in shirt-sleeves and overalls and sober business suits, lined four miles of city streets in silent mourning escort for his funeral procession. The entire men's clothing industry in New York City and throughout the nation closed down in honor of the dead leader of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Great political figures and leaders of all branches of the labor movement gathered in Carnegie Hall in respect for the man who led American labor into politics and left the CIO Political Action Committee as his heritage. From labor in all parts of the world came expressions of grief for the American with world vision who helped found the World Federation of Trade Unions.

Henry A. Wallace, New York's Mayor William O'Dwyer and former Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, members of Congress, CIO Pres. Philip Murray and the heads of the CIO unions, great and small, joined delegations from Amalgamated locals throughout the nation and New York unionists who filled the 3,000 seats of Carnegie Hall to the top of the fourth tier. The great stage was entirely banked with flowers, more than 1,000 floral offerings from every part of the country.

Murray, speaking slowly and with emotion, pledged the strength of millions of organized workers to carry forward the cause for which he died. "Let the membership of the CIO know today and let the U. S know today that it is our high resolve and firm purpose to carry forward the fight for the attainment of our economic emancipation and our true political freedom both in the CIO and the Political Action Committee."

The beautiful Hebrew Lament for the Dead was sung by tenor Jan Peerce as the casket, flaming with red roses, was borne down the aisle by the union's executive board through the weeping crowd.

Carnegie Hall could not begin to hold those who would pay tribute to Hillman. For a day and a night before the funeral a steady procession of more than 25,000 people had passed before the casket in which his body lay in state, between the American flag and the Amalgamated banner, guarded by officers of the union. Early in the morning they began gathering outside Carnegie Hall and along the route of the funeral procession.

As the procession began, a motorcade of more than 300 cars stretching more than four miles in length, every square of sidewalk along the route was packed four deep. The city had 1,500 policemen out to guard the way. The procession proceeded down 7th Ave., in Times Sq., past 42nd St.—the police escort barring all traffic. It headed into the fur district, where workers thronged the streets and hung out of factory windows.

As it approached the clothing district, the crowds swelled. Flags on men's clothing firms hung at half mast, many draped in black and in windows were pictures of the dead leader and signs reading, We Mourn The Loss Of Sidney Hillman. Twenty-five thousand people were in Union Sq., to watch the procession pass the Amalgamated Bldg., draped in mourning.

Earlier in the funeral service the members of Hillman's union expressed their tribute through Sec.-Treas. Jacob S. Potofsky, later chosen as Hillman's successor in the Clothing Workers. "He welded our organization into a mighty instrument for the service of our 350,000 members. But he was not only ours, he belongs to all labor and the world. The leadership he gave in forging the labor movement into a mighty unified force will leave its mark on the history of our nation.

"His recent contribution to the organization of world labor will help insure the peace of the world. His greatness will live for generations to come because he was of the people and fought for the people."

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise spoke of Hillman who, foreign-born and a Jew, for 40 years enriched his adopted America with his fight to make it more truly free and democratic.

EXECUTIVE BOARD RESOLUTIONS

HOUSING

IF the Wagner-Ellender-Taft General Housing Bill does not become law, full responsibility for such failure lies with the Democratic leadership of the House, the House Banking Committee and Congress, the CIO Executive Board declared in a resolution this week. The resolution follows:

WHEREAS: Second only to the maintenance of effective price controls, immediate passage of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft General Housing Bill is most critical to the welfare of returning veterans as well as homeless union members who played an indispensable role in winning the war, and:

WHEREAS: The present housing being constructed is in a price range beyond the pocketbooks of labor and veterans, and is essentially "housing for generals" and,

WHEREAS: The passage of S. 1592 is the only way to insure that the steady flow of materials as provided for under the Patman Bill go into homes for those who can afford houses costing $6,000 or less or renting at prices of $50 a month or less, and,

WHEREAS: The passage of S. 1592 is the only means of providing homes through public housing for that large group of returning veterans, both in cities and on farms, who cannot afford to pay even $20 or $30 per month and otherwise are forced to live in slums, and,

WHEREAS: In spite of the overwhelming mass support from all sections of the nation and from all citizens everywhere, an obstructionist minority of the House Banking and Currency Committee has used every undemocratic means to prevent consideration of the measure, through points of order and delaying tactics, and have so far successfully thwarted the will of the people, and:

BE IT RESOLVED, therefore, that the Congress of Industrial Organizations call upon the President to instruct the Democratic leadership of the House to remain in continuous session until this fundamental legislation is acted upon favorably.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the CIO express to the House leadership and to the President that any concessions on the part of House Democratic leadership to that small group of powerful private real estate interests, represented most vocally by the opposition members on the House Banking and Currency Committee, are unnecessary and unwarranted.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that, as representatives of the millions of voters we petition for immediate action and make clear that if this "Magna Carta" for all housing does not receive favorable consideration before the Congress adjourns the Democratic leadership of the House of Representatives, the House Committee on Banking and Currency and the Congress must bear full responsibility for failure to provide millions of badly needed homes.

BE IT STILL FURTHER RESOLVED, that copies of this resolution be sent to President Truman, Speaker Rayburn, John McCormack and Brent Spence, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

CIO URGES TRUMAN CALL WAGE-PRICE CONFERENCE

THE CIO executive board this week declared that Congressmen who wrecked price control must be defeated in November, called on the consuming public to conduct buyers' strikes and urged President Truman to call a labor - industry - government conference to give official recognition to the need for immediate wage increases. The resolution follows:

In the two months since the debates on OPA renewal have been taking place there has been a rise of essential living cost of approximately 40%. In the two weeks since the price control law was permitted to lapse there has been a rise of approximately 25%.

A reckless group in Congress, led by such individuals as Senator Taft of Ohio, have demonstrated their continued willingness to gamble with the fate of the nation and with the health of the people.

In the bill which has passed the Senate these spokesmen for the monopolists and the profiteers have actually succeeded in an even more effective destruction of the price control program than the bill which the President vetoed.

In the scandalous exhibition of log-rolling unequalled in its depths of betrayal of public interest the Senate has removed control on product after product in a manner which would leave the most important portions of the American pantry without even the pretense of price protection.

Fearing exposure of their aims by an outright termination of price control laws, they have sought to perpetrate a hoax on the American people by pretending continuance of price control while so limiting its power and effect as to result in no effective control whatsoever.

In the collective bargaining agreements concluded by labor organizations during the early months of this year labor accepted amounts which fell short of the drastic cuts in earnings which American workers had suffered since the war.

In the interests of a stabilized economy labor acceded to official pleas for extended contract terms so that today wage levels in major segments of industry have been fixed by contract for periods ranging well into 1947. Accompanying these agreements and these commitments was the pledge and assurance of the present Administration that the price line would be held.

That pledge has clearly not been kept. A 25% price rise in two weeks has wiped out all the wage increases of this year. A 40% price rise in two months has instituted a nationwide cut in wages, salaries, pensions, social security benefits. The upward spiral has not even begun to swing into its force and intensity. This nation is faced with a fast gathering crisis of appallingly destructive potentiality.

The crisis is not merely an individual problem of the wage earner, the salaried worker, the veteran pension holder, the pensioned widow, the aged worker dependent on social payments. Taken together those are the people of America. The threat of starvation and under-nourishment for them is the threat which inflation holds for the entire country.

The labor movement cannot and will not stand idly by and see our nation driven to ruin by a profit-hungry, irresponsible group of leaders and spokesmen for monopoly interests.

NOW, THEREFORE,

1) At the eleventh hour in the fight for a price control program:

(a) We make this final plea to members of both Houses of Congress to heed the voices of the millions who must feed themselves and their families out of wages, salaries and pensions, and to enact a price control bill which will give firm promise of keeping the cost of living down.

(b) We call upon the President to vote any bill which would be a fraud on the American people and to refuse to place his signature on any bill which offers merely a sham or pretense of price control.

2) The will of the great masses of the American people for price control has been clear. The callous disregard of national need by price control opponents in Congress is a challenge to every public-spirited citizen, every civic-minded organization and association, every labor organization and union member, white collar group, church and community organizations, to join together between now and November in more effective action than ever before to make sure that the facts, votes and debates in the current price control fight are clearly before the voters in this next election.

THOSE IN CONGRESS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DRIVE TO WRECK PRICE CONTROL AND BRING INFLATION UPON THIS NATION MUST BE MADE TO ANSWER TO THE PEOPLE.

3) Prompt and vigorous emergency action is called for to protect the people of this country against the ravages of the inflationary onslaught which is threatened by elimination of price controls. The issue is not merely one of statistics and abstract economics. It is one of starvation and homelessness.

(a) The consuming public, the housewives of America, the members of labor organizations, the white collar workers and pension holders, through their organizations and individually, are called upon to mobilize for nationwide defensive action to refrain where possible—individually and in an organized fashion—from avoidable purchases, to demonstrate to industry and to government their opposition to profiteering, to protect by local and national action and by every available weapon their right to food, clothing and shelter for their families.

(b) A demand must be made for immediate upward adjustment of pensions, social security payments and other fixed sources of income upon which needy persons are dependent for their livelihood. This nation must not permit the reckless action of price control opponents to cause hunger and homelessness among disabled veterans, pensioned widows, aged persons, and persons similarly situated.

(c) The drastic wage cuts which rising prices have imposed upon the great masses of wage and salary workers, to whom a pledge of a stabilized economy was given and broken, create a national problem and a national crisis.

It is imperative that pursuant to the very program which President Truman sponsored in February of this year, relief be afforded to the workers to meet the perils of the months which will intervene before the termination dates of existing contracts and before steps can be taken to achieve a stabilized national economy.

We therefore call upon the President of the United States to call before him in immediate conference, representatives of American labor and industry to the end that the demand and need for immediate wage increases may be given full and official recognition and to the end that the crisis created by the drive to cripple and destroy price control may be met quickly through adequate guarantees for a stabilized national economy. Only in this manner can we avoid the terrible devastation and misery of an inflationary period which will otherwise descend upon the people of this country.

ALLIS, CASE

WHEREAS: The workers of Allis-Chalmers Company and J. I. Case Company have been on strike in nine plants throughout the country for many months, and

WHEREAS: These plants are engaged in the production of farm equipment sorely needed to relieve world food shortages, and

WHEREAS: The J. I. Case Company has refused to even meet with the representatives of their employes during the seven months' strike, and

WHEREAS: One of these companies, Allis-Chalmers, has made a lame pretense of bargaining, using negotiations as a stalling maneuver to weaken and smash the labor unions, and

WHEREAS: Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach did on May 27 publicly proclaim government intervention if the company did not bargain in good faith, and

WHEREAS: The J. I. Case Company has refused to meet with their employes and Allis-Chalmers has made a pretense of bargaining, and

WHEREAS: These two companies have defied the U. S. Government, have flouted the public interest, and refused to recognize accepted procedure of collective bargaining, therefore be it herewith

RESOLVED, That the CIO National Executive Board calls upon the President of the United States and the Department of Labor to take immediate steps to seize these respective corporations in the interest of producing needed farm equipment, so that the farmer will not lose his investment and may successfully harvest his crop and relieve world food shortage, and be it further

RESOLVED, That the CIO National Executive Board calls upon every International Union to do all in their power to actively support, morally and financially, these striking workers in their battle against the Allis-Chalmers and the J. I. Case companies.

HILLMAN

THE PASSING of Sidney Hillman is noted by the Officers and Executive Board Members of CIO with the most profound sense of sorrow and personal loss. It is a loss shared not only with all of the millions in the ranks of organized labor in this country but also with working people, with down-trodden and oppressed peoples the world over.

Sidney Hillman came from the ranks of the American working people. He came also from the ranks of an oppressed and persecuted people. In his words, in his actions, and in his work he expressed the best traditions of America, the will of America to fight against oppression, against prejudice, against intolerance, against starvation and degradation and misery, to fight for a better life for all the people.

The CIO is proud to have numbered Sidney Hillman among the original founders of our organization. We are proud and grateful for the years of services and devotion and leadership which he contributed to the building of our organization into a major force for progress and for good in the nation today.

We are proud and grateful for the role he played in helping to create in the American people a broader understanding of their political responsibilities and of the importance in their daily lives of fuller and more effective participation in the formulation of the policies of our Government.

With the passing of Sidney Hillman a great American and a great leader of the people has passed on to his reward. In the tradition of a democratic America and a democratic labor organization others will rise to hold the torch and carry on the work. There can be no more fitting tribute to the greatness of his accomplishments than the assurance that the great movement to which he contributed so mightily will march forward in the spirit of his principles and ideals.

We mourn our loss. We pledge our continued and renewed devotion to the great objectives for which Sidney Hillman lived and fought and died — peace, prosperity and well-being for all the people of the world.

REVOLT AGAI

THE people of America are fighting mad over the destruction of OPA. All over the nation, unions, women's clubs, veterans organizations and other civic groups last week joined in calling for continuance of a strong OPA and more drastic action —such as buyers' strikes.

The largest demonstration occurred at Detroit when 50,000 workers jammed Cadillac Square. Sponsored by the CIO Auto Workers, the rally was attended by members of the AFL, railroad brotherhoods and 42 civic and religious and other groups.

UAW Pres. Walter Reuther called for a one-week meat buying strike, and UAW Vice President Richard T. Leonard called for a buyers' strike and reopening of wage negotiations. The crowd pledged that "it would not scab by paying higher prices to profiteers."

GAINST HIGH PRICES

"1773—No Taxation Without Representation;

"1946, Save the Nation from Inflation."

At Philadelphia the Industrial Union Council ordered a citywide boycott of merchants selling at over OPA prices. The strike call came after CIO pickets staged a demonstration at a large meat market and at the offices of a landlord accused of boosting rents 75%.

Across the Delaware river in Camden, N. J., the South Jersey Meat Dealers Assn. declared they would close their stores three days after they were picketed by members of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers. The merchants thought better of it after they learned that the union intended to run a newspaper advertisement publishing the names of the stores that had agreed not to sell meat above OPA prices.

In New York daily street meetings and baby carriage parades were being held in neighborhood shopping areas, leading up to a citywide buyers strike set for July 23. Buyers resistance against uncontrolled profiteering was already evident in leveled-off sales of butter. The U. S. Agriculture Dept. reported that chain and dairy stores in New York and Philadelphia were finding a ready market for butter at 78c to 80c a pound but that smaller dealers selling at 85c to 90c "were feeling the effects of high prices."

In Chattanooga, Tenn., grocers said that women were beginning to stop buying butter and certain meat products whose prices have gone up sharply. One grocer reported that of the first 15 women who priced butter that morning, 14 refused to buy when told that it was 88c a pound.

Thousands of Chicago consumers flocked to a giant demonstration in a city park in answer to an "Are You Fighting Mad?" appeal sent out by the Chicago Emergency Committee for the Extension of Rent & Price Controls, representing 65 citywide organizations and sponsors of the rally. More and bigger demonstrations are on the books.

By MARTY SOLOW

POSSIBLY the excellent new $4,000,000 air-conditioning system in Congressional buildings freezes some Congressional brains. In the past few weeks various Senators, among them Wherry of Nebraska and Hawkes of New Jersey in their frenzied attempts to kill OPA have shrieked that OPA "blocked production," "stifled business."

Perhaps these facts will help unthaw frozen Congressional brains:

Census Bureau reports show that civilian employment in June was 56,740,000. This is nearly 12,000,000 above the 1939 average and is the highest employment record in the history of the United States.

Federal Reserve Board Index figures show that industrial production for the first five months of 1946 was 60% greater than for comparable period in 1939.

Dun & Bradstreet reports that in 1939 there were 14,700 business firm failures, while in 1945 only 810 firms went out of business.

Various government reports show tremendous increases in new business under the supposed "hamstringing" by OPA.

★ ★ ★

A further sample of frozen-brained Congressional thinking is contained in the following quotes from a speech by Senator Byrd of Virginia. Says the Senator:

"A CIO-supported candidate... need have no worry about finances. This is taken care of out of the huge political fund of the PAC..."

It's a lie—because in 1944 the CIO spent only $492,000 on the elections, as contrasted with the millions spent by the DuPonts, Pews and other businessmen. Several weeks ago it was reported that dollar collections for PAC's "huge political fund" were running under five figures.

PAC's political strength comes from the response of the American people to its program for full employment, social security and equal opportunities for all regardless of race or creed.

Indulging in tactics typical of big firms which advertise about labor disputes, Macy's Department Store in New York asserts (full page ad, N. Y. Times, July 14) that the present strike against it by the truck drivers of the CIO Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union is a "jurisdictional strike."

It's a lie because the union states flatly it has no dispute with AFL Teamsters. Its dispute is with Macy's, which broke a contract with the union without notice.

MURRAY GREETS JAPANESE UNIONS

Japanese trade unions were formally greeted this week by Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO in a message welcoming the new unions to the world labor movement "as allies in the battle for bread, freedom and peace." He declared that a great opportunity and responsibility lies ahead for the Japanese Unions since thousands of Japanese workers "for the first time must be educated in the ways of democracy."

Murray said "we are looking forward to the day when your representatives will meet with us in the World Federation of Trade Unions."

"We of the CIO wish you well. Our movement is opposed to discrimination against any people because of race, color or creed. We believe immigration barriers based on race are evil. Because we so believed we used our influence to put Chinese and Indians on a quota basis.

"You are the foundation stones of a truly great Japan, dedicated to peace not war. The tasks of reconstruction facing the world are so stupendous that men of good will everywhere must unite."

There goes the best financial head on the exchange.....

LITERARY NOTES

FOR those desirous of finding a comprehensive account of the World Trade Union Movement Betty Wallace has filled the bill in part with her book entitled "World Labour Comes of Age," stressing powerfully the great import of the first World Trade Union Congress.

Part I of the book deals with the trade union movement as it developed in the various countries throughout the world, and then with this background Betty Wallace presents an analysis of that conference of world labor unions which took place in London early in 1945.

Throughout the conference CIO delegates took a leading role helping to build for trade union solidarity on an international basis, ultimately resulting in the World Federation of Trade Unions. The aim of that original conference bore fruit in this year's mid-June WFTU meeting in Moscow, bringing the labor movements of all nations together to plan a common program.

The original conference was born out of the war and was attended by 204 delegates representing more than 60 million trade unionists in 42 countries of the world. The author presents the conference as a dynamic force which assures that ultimately "the working men and women of the world will decide the future as they want to see it."

"World Labour Comes of Age" was published by Lawrence and Wishart, London, and retails for $2.50.

The first of September will mark the debut of a new monthly magazine, the Labor Review, designed to present a digest of the feature stories and news items appearing in the labor press throughout the month. Stories will be used from CIO and AFL union publications in an effort to bring the world labor movement closer together by reporting the latest developments in the trade union movement both in America and throughout the world.

Editing the Labor Review will be Ray Lancaster, a veteran of World War II, and formerly on the organizing staff of the CIO. Ben Yomen will serve the publication in the position of art director and his cartoons will be published monthly. He formerly served as art director for the CIO Auto Workers' publication, Ammunition, and has done cartoons for the CIO News.

Labor Review's office is 83 Virginia Park, Detroit, Mich. The subscription price is $3 or $5 for two years.

LEADER TRAINING

A four-week Leadership Training Institute, jointly sponsored for the first time by the Michigan CIO and the CIO Auto Workers was announced this week by the educational directors of both groups.

Starting on August 4 in the Michigan CIO's new Franklin D. Roosevelt Labor Center, the Institute will offer specialized training in such courses as collective bargaining, union counselling, political action, labor journalism and union administration.

LOAF 'N LEARN

A summer labor school for white collar and professional workers will be held from August 10-18 on the Monterey Peninsula by the Calif. Labor School.

Designed to teach labor history and trade union techniques to white collar and professional workers, the school will also be arranged to provide a pleasant week's vacation for the 100 students expected at classes.

The school's expanding program of trade union education has received an award of $3,000 from the proceeds of the Frank Sinatra film, "The House I Live In," as one of the ten organizations in the nation chosen to share in the films net receipts. The Trustees of the Robert Marshall Foundation have voted a grant of $2,500 to the school "for training of leadership in the trade union movement."

PLACE TO LEARN

If you're an office worker, government worker, social worker, librarian, teacher, clerk or other white collar worker, the Summer School for Office Workers, 437 West 59th St., N. Y., has designed a vacation particularly for you.

On the campus of Lake Forest, Ill., College, the school will conduct July 13-27 a course in current social, economic and political problems with time out for sports, dancing, hiking and sunbathing.

LABOR EXTENSION PLAN URGED

CIO Pres. Philip Murray last week gave his endorsement to the aim of the new Committee for the Extension of Labor Education which seeks establishment of a U. S. Labor Dept. extension service.

"The nation's farmers have had the benefits of the Agricultural Extension Service for many years and "it is high time the Labor Department supplied an extension service to the many workers upon whom so much of the country's future prosperity depends," Murray said.

"A free labor movement is indispensable in a free world. To establish constructive programs for the betterment of labor relations is to serve the welfare of the whole people.

"Demands for education services are now so numerous and so urgent and have grown to such vast proportions that only a government service can meet them. That service is a responsibility of the U. S. Dept. of Labor which can neither be ignored nor met half-heartedly."

Pres. Murray concluded his statement favoring the establishment of an extension service for labor with the fact that "the nation's industrial workers outnumber the farmers, and no one seriously denies that the nation's industrial health and wellbeing depend upon the industrial workers. In other words, all the resources of the government should be integrated by the Labor Department to serve the people it was established to serve."

DON'T BE A SUCKER

Anyone who hasn't seen 'Don't Be A Sucker," is a sucker if he doesn't see it, advises the CIO National Community Services Committee.

The picture (running time 18 minutes) was produced by the U. S. Army Signal Corps for showing to our troops and is being distributed by Paramount Pictures, Inc., without profit as a public service.

It is an effective attack against those who would destroy the unity of the nation, says the CIO committee. It urges those interested in sound community organization to persuade their local theatres to exhibit the film or arrange for private screenings.

HALF-PINT NAM

Here's the story of a pint-sized edition of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, not nearly as large, but just as vicious when it comes to battling against progress for America.

The story is contained in a 32-page pamphlet by Harry Becker which was published by the Cleveland (CIO) Industrial Council. It's called "An Old Foe With A New Face" and it cites chapter and verse the essentially anti-people activities of a group of Cleveland industrialists.

Copies of this pamphlet can be obtained from the Cleveland CIO Council, 1000 Walnut Ave., Cleveland, 14, Ohio.

'GUNG HO!'—IN PEACE AS IN WAR

By MARTY SOLOW

"Gung Ho!"—work together—the spirit which motivated a famous marine raider battalion in World War II, is the core of the Chinese Industrial Cooperative movement.

Slowly, painfully, a people possessed of an ancient culture are staking out on a minute scale one of the beginnings of a new way of life.

Here's a story of some of the patient, long-suffering people of China. A story of an idea which was brought to them, took roots and grew. An idea which today gives hope to those who wish to banish the hopelessness and misery of unequal struggle for living in that vast land.

The story starts in July, 1937, when the Japanese armies invaded China's soil for the second time to start their pattern for world conquest.

As the hordes of invaders spilled over the ancient lands of China, stamping out life wherever they moved, a tremendous exodus of the Chinese people, running high into the millions started up. It was a retreat from the armies of Nippon, from bombed cities, from the "scorched earth" of military defense.

The people moved on into the agricultural interior of China—an area which contained neither food nor employment for them. And yet, they could not be permitted to starve, to remain idle. Even on a small scale some beginnings had to be made to solve the problem.

In Shanghai, the next year, a group of people, Chinese and friends of China, gathered to discuss what could be done. They were acutely aware that China would suffer immeasurable hardships if no substitutes could be developed for even the scant industries that the Japanese had taken. They knew also that more than a bowl of rice was required to keep alive the mind and body of man.

The answer this group in Shanghai gave was cooperative industry—thousands of small cooperatives to be spread throughout the interior of China. These were to be set up in caves, farmhouses, deserted temples. They were to encompass those regions which had never reached even the "spinning-wheel" stage in industry. Worker-owned and worker-managed these workshops were envisaged as a way to give the people a stake in in winning the war.

Rewi Alley, a New Zealander, with a long background of experience in Chinese industry, was the sparkplug of the group which met in the Shanghai of 1938. Others included Hsu Sing-Loh, a Chinese banker, Frank Lem, an American-educated engineer, Edgar Snow, an American journalist and his wife Nym Wales, a writer.

Once the plan had been charted the next step was to put it into operation. This was done through the help of Sir Archibald Clark-Kerr, then British Ambassador to China, who in 1938 persuaded Chiang Kai-Shek to start the organization of a Chinese cooperative movement.

Rewi Alley was appointed head of the CIC movement, a loan of $500,000 was obtained from the Ministry of Finance, and the project was underway.

Free China was divided into five parts and an engineer and a co-operator sent into each of these regions. The natural resources of this great land were enormous, barely tapped. The men and women driven from their homes by the Japanese were waiting, eager to start work. . . .

Today, tribespeople in southwest China, near the Burma border, organized into membership-owned and operated co-ops are turning out quantities of goods ranging from Tibetan shoes to tinned butter.

Industrial co-ops in Likiang, Yunnan province, manufacture boots, army saddles, belts, footballs, basketballs, leather coats and jackets, shoe polish. Wool, cotton, hemp and silk spinning, weaving, wool knitting, dyeing have become leading industries there since the advent of the co-ops.

The original goal of the CIC movement was 30,000 work shops throughout the nation. By 1941 there were 2,000 work shops established. The obstacles were many. The introduction of cheap Japanese goods into villages that had just established co-ops closed many workshops. Hoarding of raw material by profiteers, inflation and the lack of financial support hindered their growth. There were also few technicians among a people whose industry had grown so slowly.

Today, out of these beginnings, out of the tremendous hardships which faced the initiators of the movement, there are co-ops in 18 of China's provinces. More than 300,000 people are involved in cooperative activity and there are 1100 co-ops in all parts of China.

The co-ops have formed federations for the purchase of raw materials, the sale of their goods and for serving the membership with medical, schooling and training facilities. The federations spur the education of members along the lines of democratic self-government and instill in them the cooperative's philosophy of "Gung Ho!"

The primary problem confronting the co-ops is the necessity for industrialization and in this the Bailie Schools play an important role.

These schools, named in honor of Joseph Bailie, an American missionary whose aim in life was to bring industry to China, are designed to train men who could bring new and more advanced techniques to backward villages.

The first Bailie School was set up in Paochi in 1941 where boys between the ages of 12 and 18 were picked for their ability and their willingness to serve their country. Courses vary from two to four years depending upon age, intelligence and experience of the students, and courses are held in mechanics, mining, tool-manufacturing, weaving, well-digging, current events and arithmetic.

Owen Lattimore, director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at Johns Hopkins University says of the Bailie schools, "In the years I have spent in China I have never seen anything like it, anything that filled me with so much hope . . ."

It is the aim of the CIC movement to equip the Bailie students with the "know-how" to enable them to enter the most primitive of villages and begin the organization of some industry.

The Chinese Industrial Cooperative movement is beginning once more to grow and give hope to great masses of the people in China. In her book "The Chinese Labor Movement," Nym Wales says it is . . . "the creation of China's common working men and women, a product of their initiative, ingenuity and organizational ability."

TWO FIRMS DEFY CIO, U. S.

By ESTHER HANDLER

THE CIO's largest current strikes at the J. I. Case and Allis-Chalmers plants appeared no closer to solution this week as the employers continued their fanatical resistance against bargaining with the union. Thirty-five thousand workers are on strike.

Although ordered by Schwellenbach two months ago to conduct genuine negotiations, or face government seizure, neither employer has yet complied. L. R. Clausen, Case president, continues to refuse to meet with Local 180's UAW representative at Racine, Wis. Allis-Chalmers officials, on the other hand, meet daily with the bargaining committee of Local 248, UAW, at the key plant in West Allis, Wis. However, after seven weeks of talks no progress is reported.

To end company stalling, union negotiators this week demanded that no other issues be discussed until full agreement is reached on wages and workable grievance set-up, the two key issues in the Allis-Chalmers dispute.

A movement to end these long-standing strikes through joint CIO pressure on the farm equipment industry, which began with UAW action to extend the Case strike to two additional plants of that company, gained impetus last week when the international executive board of the CIO Farm Equipment Union voted its full cooperation.

FE President Grant Oakes stated that if these strikes are not settled by July 31 when the FE convention begins in Milwaukee, they will be placed on the agenda for full discussion and a "forthright decision will be made on steps to take to force a settlement."

CIO President Philip Murray, testifying last week before the House sub-committee investigating causes of labor unrest, charged the Allis-Chalmers and Case companies with using tax rebates to fight strikes. Murray told the committee, "These companies have clearly violated the Wagner Labor Relations Act and they have financed lengthy lockouts with federal tax kick-backs."

CIO Pres. Philip Murray (right), presenting Joseph Curran head of the CIO Maritime Union with the annual award of the CIO National Committee to Abolish Discrimination for "outstanding contributions to the CIO's cause in the field of fighting discrimination."

CURRAN ELECTED

JOSEPH CURRAN, president of the CIO Maritime Union, was re-elected overwhelmingly this week by a vote of 27,742, more than 20,000 over the combined total of his opponents, the union announced.

Sec. Ferdinand Smith was re-elected by a vote of 17,984 to 14,945 for his opponent, Neal Hanley. Hedley Stone was re-elected treasurer by a margin of 60 votes.

Three vice-presidents elected out of six candidates are: Joseph Stack, 19,467; Howard McKenzie, re-elected with 17,577 votes; and Jack Lawrenson, re-elected with 12,440 votes.

William McCarthy, Luis Diaz and Josh Lawrence were elected national directors.

'LARGEST STORE' VOIDS CONTRACT

By JOE KONOWE

MORE than 900 delivery truck drivers and helpers of the R. H. Macy Department Store, members of Local 1, CIO Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, have been on strike against Macy's, New York, reputed to be the world's largest department store.

Samuel Wolchok, president of the International Union, this week said the strike was called when the management of R. H. Macy ran out on a contract with local 1, by selling its delivery service to United Parcel Service which has a closed shop agreement with Local 804, International Teamsters Union, AFL.

Despite a previous promise to let the drivers know "in ample time" should Macy's ever decide to sell their delivery service, the company informed leaders of Local 1 several days after the sale that it had been made, and that it would become effective the next morning, June 26.

The previous Sunday, June 18, Macy's and Local 1 ratified and signed a contract which was reopened for wage negotiations, and gave the drivers a raise of about five dollars.

There has been mass picketing by the drivers around the Macy store on 34th Street and Broadway since July 11 and, although the selling personnel, Local 1-s of the same International Union, are not officially on strike, more than 85 per cent have refused to cross the picket line, thus leaving the normal activities of the store greatly crippled.

The strike has also closed the Macy warehouse at Long Island City, and has cut the sales personnel at the firm's Parkhurst store by approximately 90%.

The strike was not called until two weeks after Macy's sold their delivery service because union leaders were attempting, with the aid of the U. S. Conciliation Service, to iron out their differences with management and come to an amicable agreement. All attempts at mediation having failed, the strike was called when Macy's refused to abide by the contract stipulation which said, "this agreement shall be binding upon the parties signed hereto, their successors and assignees."

The drivers, under the leadership of Jerry Deblon, President of Local 1, and Leonard Geiger, Business Manager, have emphasized in their campaign that the strike is not a jurisdictional one. "We have no fight with the Teamsters," Deblon said, "our fight is against R. H. Macy for their deliberate voiding of our contract."

NEW REGION ESTABLISHED

Creation of a new CIO regional office in Los Angeles to provide additional service for unions in southern California has been announced by Pres. Murray.

Harry Bridges, head of the CIO longshoremen's union, will continue as regional director in San Francisco. Bridges formerly had jurisdiction over the entire state of California.

Pres. Murray described the move as a routine administrative affair, designed to give additional CIO help to the unions in southern California. "The move doesn't reflect in any way on the capability or integrity of Bridges," Murray announced.

CIO LEADER WINS ANTI-BIAS AWARD

Sec.-Treas. Philip M. Connelly of the Los Angeles CIO Council recently was presented with the 1946 Los Angeles Catholic Interracial Council award for the Catholic layman who has performed outstanding service for the cause of inter-racial justice.

A former vice-president of the American Newspaper Guild and a pioneer in the Los Angeles CIO Council. Connelly has long been active in the fight against discrimination.

The award was a miniature figure of Martin De Porres, Peruvian, who was a Dominican Brother, widely acclaimed for his efforts in behalf of social and racial justice several centuries ago.

Is Your Child Getting Too Much Sun?

Fresh air and sunshine are healthful, but many children could be spared the extreme discomfort and bad nights caused by sunburn if they were allowed to play in the hot sun only for limited periods of time. Very blond-skinned children should be protected by suntan oil approved by a doctor. A variety of materials for quiet play in the shade or indoors should be kept on hand. Guard your child from too much hot sun!

FROZEN FOODS' FUTURE

HOW about a precooked frozen steak dinner with all the trimmings? Yes, the old familiar question, "What will you have for dinner, dear?" has taken on new implications with the advent of the precooked meal to the frozen food market. Everything from hors d'oeuvres to apple pie will be frozen, and the entire meal can be selected directly from your market-of-the-future's frozen food locker.

In a June report by Consumers Union the future of the precooked frozen meal is seen as a bright one indeed, despite a past which is spotted with quality variation, general inconvenience and high expense to the consumer. Frozen foods are not subject to government inspection, and though established firms have maintained a uniformly high degree of quality, many attempts by short term and marginal frozen foods packers have been made to exploit the salesworthy aspects of precooked frozen meals, CU reports.

Merchandisers of frozen foods plan great extensions of their present facilities for the markets of tomorrow. Manufacturers of the frozen food products are unanimous in declaring their desire to guarantee high quality as well as cut expense and make the precooked meals more convenient for the consumer to use.

The Consumers Union report advises one and all to wait and see the outcome of the precooked frozen meal, and if you do buy be sure to watch your source of supply to make sure that all storage cabinets are tightly closed. Also check to see that the food is packed in an undamaged sealed container and that the Department of Agriculture "inspected and passed" label appears on all meat and poultry.

WANTED—PROTECTION FOR YOUTH

COMPREHENSIVE child labor laws are still needed throughout the United States to insure that American youth will have sufficient time to develop healthy bodies and sound minds. The child labor regulations throughout the states are a crazy patchwork of standards which in few states give our children the proper protection for their full development.

In a publication entitled "Why Child Labor Laws?" the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Labor Dept. presents the case for child labor laws, specifically dealing with the weaknesses of the laws and the means to better the nation's child labor law structure.

One hundred years ago child labor was a commonplace factor in the American economy, and children of any age helped to support their families. Child labor is prevalent today where cheap labor and marginal employers are found. In families having small incomes children are farmed out as an additional means of support.

Federal regulation stems from the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, wherein minimum wages are set for the employment of children in jobs producing goods for interstate commerce. This provision of the law is administered by the Children's Bureau, yet the evil of child labor still exists in concerns not producing for interstate trade or regulated directly by state laws.

WHITE COLLARS, EMPTY STOMACHS

By DIANA FARNHAM

Legislative Representative, CIO Office and Professional Workers

CRACKERS and a "coke" for lunch. No money for the doctor, no visits to the dentist, nothing for emergencies. This is the daily budget experience of over two million American white-collar workers, 68% of the workers in the fields of finance, real estate and insurance, who make less than 65c an hour.

When we speak of substandard wages, most people tend to think of the rural worker, the sharecropper, and the domestic worker. It is true that the wages of these groups are substandard. But the office clerk, the switchboard operator, the bank teller and trained stenographer—the self-possessed, neat and efficient servants of the public—they too are caught, less dramatically perhaps but equally inextricably, in the never ending battle to stretch a diminishing and pitifully inadequate pay check to match an expanding cost of living.

The N. Y. Times of July 17 carries advertisements for clerks, permanent, $22-$26 a week; clerk-typist, $25; dental assistant, ambitious, neat, $25; assistant bookkeepers, $25. And many more.

This means WANTED: training, experience, attractive appearance and personality—at less than a living wage.

The story is the same across the country. In New York City Eleanor Auerbach works for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the producer of the super-colossal bathtub scenes. Eleanor, after a promotion, makes $24.15 a week—which is only $17,438.15 less, weekly, than the salary of Mr. Louis B. Mayer, who runs MGM and might find it a tough assignment to cash in on the box office receipts without the help of hundreds of white-collar workers like Eleanor.

In Washington, D. C., the Industrial Bank forks out $90 a month for a bookkeeper. Some social service agencies in Philadelphia entice clerical workers with salaries of $24 a week. Boston, Mass., San Francisco, Calif., St. Louis, Mo., and points north, south, east, and west, see weekly salaries like this: switchboard operators, $23; stenographers, $24; bank tellers, $26.

There are certain cost of living items that the lowest paid white-collar worker cannot abolish from her budget. She must look neat, attractive, or she hasn't got a job. So she cuts down on her expenses for food and living quarters. And she makes no provision at all for health and welfare.

And the elite of the industry, the professionals, with college educations and families — what about them? Average yearly salary in the banking industry during the war was $2,065, in insurance was $2,347. But the Heller Committee, which makes scientific budget studies at the University of California, set $3,600 as the minimum amount on which a white-collar family of four could live decently during the war.

White-collar workers benefited little from wartime wage increases. Between 1940 and 1943 a government survey of "representative" establishments showed that manufacturing wages had gone up 71% while white-collar wages had gone up only 21%.

Organized white-collar workers in the CIO Office and Professional Workers have done much to raise the standards of office and professional people. UOPWA at its 1946 convention voted unanimously to fight for a national wage floor of $30 for a 35-hour week. Organized office workers throughout the country are reporting wage gains of 18½, 20 and 25%. Thousands of white-collar people are flocking into the union to participate in its militant wage program. But the majority of white-collar workers still are not organized. Their low standards drag down the wage levels of all white-collar people—organized or unorganized.

The Pepper-Hook 65-75c minimum wage bill would set a $26-a-week floor on all wages. It would make possible for the first time decent standards for one-third of American workers who are living on incomes lower than a WPA rock bottom "Emergency Budget."

The same Congress which was able to rush through the labor-baiting Case and Truman bills in less than a week cannot find the time to consider the 65-75c bill. Passed by the Senate, though with the addition of the inflationary Pace rider, the bill is stuck in the House Rules Committee, from which Rep. Andrew J. Biemiller of Wisconsin is attempting to dislodge it with Discharge Petition No. 34.

White-collar workers—in and out of CIO—are barraging Congress with demands to sign Discharge Petition No. 34 and vote for the bill without amendments when it reaches the floor.

Has your Congressman heard from you?

JIM CROW HAS GOTTA GO!

Jim Crow took a pasting last week in two Detroit restaurants from Local 69 of the CIO Packinghouse Workers.

The restaurants, located next to the Hygrade plant where CIO white and Negro members worked side by side, had previously allowed Negroes to purchase lunches but refused to permit them to eat at the restaurant tables.

During rest hours and lunch periods, a union committee made up mostly of Negro and white World War II vets picketed the eating places till the Negroes were granted full rights.

Three 16 mm. sound movies available to CIO unions, (Left) "Food — Secret of Peace," which has a good discussion trailer, (Center) "World of Plenty"—good charts on world food problems, (Right) "Suffer the Little Children"—graphic portrayal of world food needs.

FILMS FOR UNION MEETINGS —NEW CIO SERVICE

By GEORGE GUERNSEY

MOST CIO unions recognize the advantage of using good 16 mm. sound movies in building a union educational program. Today between three and four hundred CIO locals own their own machines. More than 400,000 CIO members see movies in their own local union halls. Many unions are building community film forums.

To aid CIO unions in selecting the best labor films the CIO Department of Research and Education is establishing a film library, which will function on a limited basis until October 1. After that a full film service will be provided. Labor films and film strips will be available at low rental fees.

How To Use Films

In using sound movies, educational chairmen should preview them before they are shown to local union audiences. He should arrange a discussion period to follow the film, during which he ties the subject of the movie to CIO's program and policy. The CIO Department of Research and Education is preparing one page mimeographed guides which will be available to educational chairmen. Photographs from some of the important sound movies appear on this page. Many of these films are now available from the department's film library.

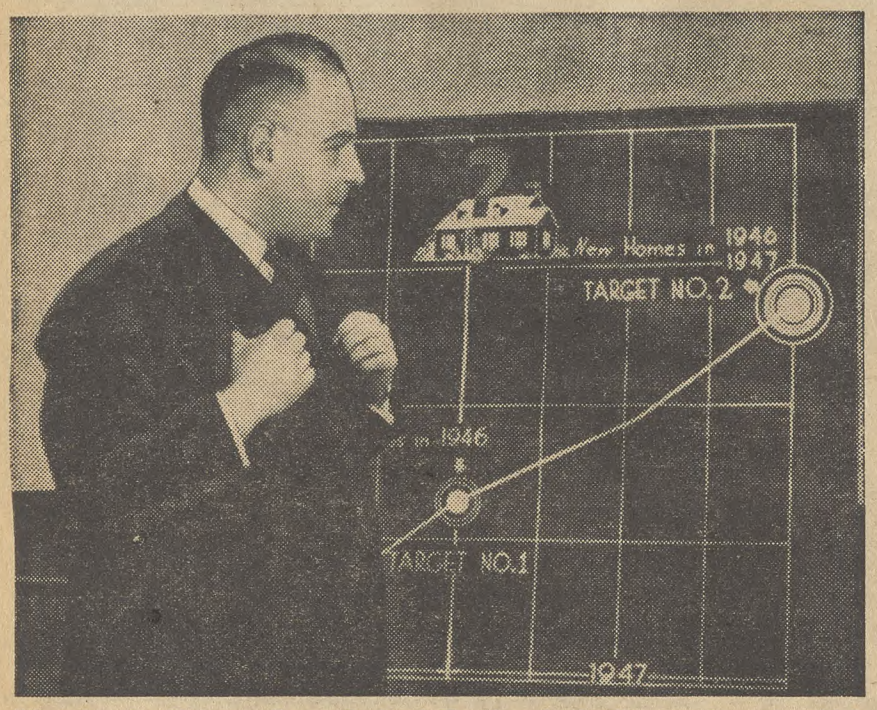
Other sound films of interest to CIO locals are as follows: "A Ceiling on Your Home," "Which Way This Time?" and Dangerous Pennies," all produced by OPA. An old film, but especially good for farm audiences which shows the devastating effects of inflation is, "The Plow That Broke the Plain." Three new excellent films on problems of discrimination include the new UAW color animation film entitled, "Brotherhood of Man," the army-made, "Don't Be a Sucker," and the new British film, "Man—One Family." These will not be available until the fall.

Other sound movies usable for labor groups if a discussion period is provided are: "United Action," story of the UAW Tool and Die Makers Strike in 1938; "Native Land," based on the LaFollette Civil Liberties Investigations of labor spies, Paul Robeson, commentator; "People of the Cumberlands," the story of the growth of the Highlander Folk School and CIO; "Canadian Labor Looks Ahead," contains shots of the World Federation of Trade Union meeting in London and CIO summer schools in Canada.

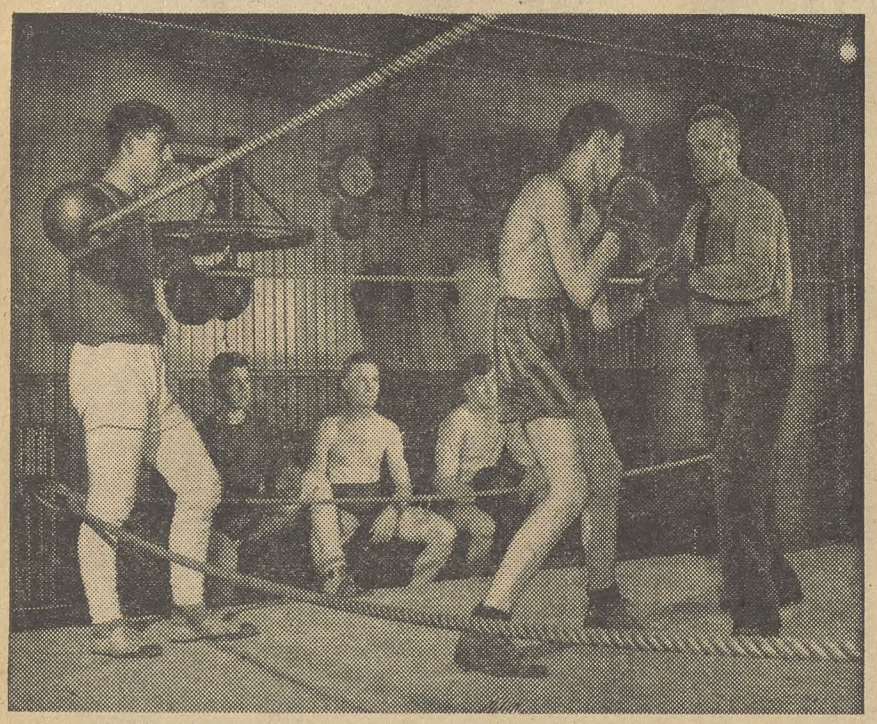
Films on Housing

"A Place to Live," "War Where You Live," and "The City" are the best films on housing and city planning. "Valleytown" has good depression scenes and can be used for a lively discussion on technological unemployment.

Most of these films are also available from Brandon Films, Inc., 1600 Broadway, New York City, New York; College Film Center, 84 East Randolph, Chicago, Illinois; the UAW Film Library, 281 West Grand Blvd., Detroit, Michigan; or Visual Education, Inc., 12th and Tamar, Austin, Texas. For more information write to the Department of Research and Education, CIO, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.



"Housing for Veterans," new Federal Housing Authority sound movie which is being released this week, outlines steps which local communities can take in supporting the national housing program.



"After Work," National Film Board (Canada) shows recreation program developing in Canada and includes shots of CIO summer schools and World Federation of Trade Union meeting in London.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Your Union May Be Next

The Senate, led by its liberal bloc, has shown it won't be pushed around all the time by pip-squeek foes of labor in the House.

The Elliott rider—brainchild of Rep. Elliott (D. Calif.)—was intended as a quiet little device to knock Wagner Act protection away from an estimated million workers in the food processing industry.

Although the proposal amounted to a major amendment to the Wagner Act, it wasn't presented as such. Instead, it was offered as an amendment to the appropriation bill for the Natl. Labor Relations Board, and barred the use of NLRB funds in food processing cases.

Twice in six weeks the House has passed the bill. The Senate has refused to take similar action.

The Senate fight was led by Claude Pepper (D. Fla.) and Wayne Morse (R. Ore.).

"If we don't stop this practice and tell the House we won't pass appropriation bills with it, the abuse will grow worse," Pepper said.

The CIO vice-presidents have commended the Senate majority for "its insistence that an appropriation bill should not be made the vehicle for a deprivation of basic rights." They called for defeat of the rider.

A Progressive Action

By an overwhelming vote, the House approved the British loan; the President has signed the resolution; and a credit of $3,750,000,000 has been extended our wartime allies.

CIO consistently supported the loan. Pres. Murray wrote to Congress voicing that support. Spokesmen for a number of affiliated unions testified before House and Senate Committee, urging its approval.

The CIO and its unions took this action, not because they approved of imperialism, but because they wanted to strengthen the hands of those in Britain and elsewhere who fight imperialism.

In addition, workers know that free world trade is necessary to world prosperity, just as interstate trade is a condition of our national well-being.

The effect of the loan will be to encourage trade not only between the U. S. and Great Britain, but among all the countries of the world. It will help avert cut-throat competition on a global scale.

Having acted to help world prosperity, it's time that Congress acted to help the folks at home. A real price control bill, a housing bill, a minimum wage bill are yet to be voted.

Wire your Congressman today!

Get Yours To Sign!

Discharge Petition No. 34, to bring up for debate and vote the 65c Minimum Wage Bill, has already received the signatures of 107 Congressmen.

Has your Representative signed?

Wire him today and request that he sign the petition at once, so that action can be had at this session to force through the badly needed bill.

Rep. Outland (D. Cal.), together with Rep. Ramey (R. O.) and Rep. Biemiller (D. Wis.), have taken the lead in the fight to win a decent minimum for the nation's underpaid workers. They have the support of 15 national organizations, including CIO.

"We took this action because we felt that the present legal minimum wage of 40c an hour, or $16.00 per week for full time work, is not only obsolete but an actual crime against millions of our citizens," the three Congressmen declared.

CIO says "aye." Send your wire today. Force action despite the blocking tactics of the House Rules Committee.

Reneging On Promises

When the boys went off to war, they were promised eternal gratitude by their country. A lot of Congressmen seem to have forgotten their speeches of two or three years ago.

The Amputees' Bill (HR 6114) would give each man who lost a limb in service a specially constructed auto. But Rep. Rankin (D. Miss.) has kept the bill under lock and key in the Veterans Committee. A discharge petition hasn't yet got the necessary 218 signatures.

"Amazing . . . incredible. I'm thoroughly disgusted," says Rep. Edith Rogers (R. Mass.) a sponsor of the bill.

CIO, a strong supporter of the proposal, agrees. In the name of decency, ask your Congressman to sign the petition and vote for the bill.

Remember— In November!

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control	House has passed 3-week extension; Senate loaded long-range OPA bill with crippling amendments.	Joint House-Senate conference committee in tug-of-war on amendments.	Wire your Congressmen, Senators to vote for extension of OPA without crippling amendments.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program necessary to give U. S. badly needed homes.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee holding hearings.	Wire your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee to act fast on this bill. It's a "must."
Minimum Wage S 1349 HR 3914	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill. Coming Up On Capitol Hill

Congressional adjournment is just around the corner. Leaders predict that the House and Senate will recess around the end of this month.

Meanwhile, the list of "must" bills on which action has been stalled looks like a "who's who" of liberal legislation.

PRICE CONTROL: You know the story of what's happened here. You may not know that the Senate slipped through one amendment that makes a joke of federal rent control.

Sen. Knowland (R. Cal.) was the father of the amendment to turn "control" back to the states. But control, as defined in the amendment, is an elastic term.

If a governor issued a proclamation allowing 15% or 50% rent increases in his state, that would be considered control. In that case, OPA would lose its authority in the state.

The amendment, like all the others in the price control bill, is an invitation to inflation.

HOUSING: The Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill to provide thousands of units of low-cost homes, is apt to die in committee unless there's a quick reversal of the trend.

The bill is sponsored by a New York liberal, a Louisiana poll-taxer and an Ohio conservative. Nevertheless, Republican members of the House Banking Committee are fighting a delaying action; and Administration forces are showing little gumption in forcing a faster tempo.

Wire your Congressman today, and wire members of the House Banking Committee; demand action at once. Next to OPA, this is the most important bill in Congress for you and me.

POLL TAX: HR 7, to abolish the poll tax in seven southern states, is still cooped up in a dusty pigeonhole.

It has passed the House, but the Senate leadership has sat on this measure for months. Unless it receives favorable action now, the long fight to eliminate this feudal hang-over will have to start from scratch again.

Let your Senator hear how you feel about it.

FEPC: The wartime, temporary Fair Employment Practices Committee is dead, as of June 30. Racial and religious bias is on the upsweep, according to official reports.

The reactionary House Rules Committee has blocked this measure for months. Polltaxers have ganged up to prevent its consideration on Calendar Wednesday for weeks.

Try another wire to your Congressman demanding a debate and vote on the FEPC. Do it today!

HOW TO KEEP PRICES DOWN

HOUSING BILL HAS A CHANCE

WILL the American people get the needed housing?

Last week the answer seemed a definite "no," as the Wagner-Ellender-Taft homes bill lay pigionedholed in the House Banking & Currency Committee.

Today, the answer is a hopeful "maybe."

The change was brought about by Pres. Truman, who had apparently noted strong demands from CIO, civic and public housing organizations for action on the W-E-T bill before Congress adjourns. The President wrote Democratic leaders in the House that he considered the bill an "urgent" measure and asked speedy consideration.

The housing bill, which would clear the way for construction of hundreds of thousands of low-priced homes under federal auspices, was passed by the Senate months ago. It stalled in the House Banking Committee, where Republicans tried all the tricks in the parliamentary book to prevent its consideration.

Democrats on the committee showed something less than unbounded zeal in seeking to break the log-jam and force the bill out for vote.

Rep. Brent Spence (D., Ky.), committee chairman, immediately called a meeting of his group in an effort to wind up the dragged-out hearings and get the bill set for action. He faces opposition in the committee from Reps. Wolcott and Crawford, Michigan Republicans who have sabotaged the bill ever since it left the Senate.

The action followed repeated demands by Chairman R. J. Thomas of the CIO Housing Committee, who had warned that failure to pass the bill would give the nation "homes for generals" and few if any for the vast multitudes of vets and workers who need them most.

How important the bill is to America was underscored last week by William Guste, chairman of the Natl. Public Housing Conference. He told a Washington, D. C., radio audience that without passage of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill, "there is no possibility that the great majority of veterans and their families will obtain housing in the foreseeable future.

"At least 80% of these veterans require homes at a cost to them of less than $50 a month. Unless this measure passes, there is no chance under the shining sun that such housing will be available."

While the housing bill was moving close to its crucial test, another important social welfare measure — the Wagner-Murray-Dingell health bill — progressed one notch closer to action. A sub-committee of the Senate Labor & Education Committee voiced strong approval of the health insurance plan.

Sen. Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), sub-committee chairman, supported the bill's provisions for financing of the national insurance program through Social Security tax payments and other federal revenue.

Pointing up the fact that the bill is not—as its opponents have argued—socialized medicine, Pepper's report declared:

"National health insurance . . . is simply a logical extension of private group health insurance to cover all the people. It is a joint national endeavor. It will guarantee free choice of a doctor or group of doctors, and free choice of hospital by the patient, and free choice of patient by the doctor."

The report quoted army statistics to show the 40% of recent draftees have been found unfit for military duty because of physical ailments, and added that 23 million Americans are suffering from chronic illness or disability.

Half of the maternal deaths and one of every three infant deaths could be avoided through proper medical care for all, the committee charged.

GROUP BACKS WAGE PARLEY

PRES. Truman is still considering CIO's demand for a management - labor conference under government auspices to consider the hundred and one problems growing out of the country's rising inflation.

Support for the idea of a national conference came last week in a letter to the White House signed by more than 40 businessmen, economists, writers and professors.

They called for a meeting to formulate policies that will remove the need either for anti-labor legislation or for strikes to gain wage increases badly needed by labor. The program called for increased pay to match production gains; lower prices for consumers; "clear-cut rules of the game, scrupulously obeyed;" and team-play among labor, management and other groups.

The appeal was signed by Morris L. Cooke, noted engineer; Stuart Chase, economist; Wayne Coy, Washington publisher; Max Lerner, of PM; Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon, and several others.

BUYERS' STRIKES SWEEP NATION

THE people of these United States are up in arms, determined that the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and other lobbyists who persuaded Congress to cut the arteries out of OPA shall have no profits to show for their efforts.

Buyers' strikes are becoming the order of the day. Seventy organizations in New York City with a membership of two million and including CIO unions sponsored a Buy Nothing Day last week which virtually depopulated many stores of customers.

While rain caused cancellation of some demonstrations, it aided the pickets in their work of cutting down the number of shoppers. Demonstrations were held throughout the city, the biggest in Times Square at noon attracting 8,000 persons. In the Bronx 1,000 retail stores closed "in support of the Buyers Strike."

The strike was by no means confined to New York City. In Syracuse, N. Y., sponsors reported that 10,000 residents had signed pledges to buy only necessities until OPA is restored.

In Massachusetts, demonstrations were held in a half-dozen cities and towns including Boston.

The CIO Industrial Union Council in Chicago conducted a Buyers' Slowdown, pushed down some prices and pledged to keep "up the pressure until all prices get down to reasonable levels."

Nor were buyers' strikes limited to the East. Auxiliaries of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and of the Steelworkers joined with a variety of women's organizations at Salt Lake City in getting hundreds of housewives to sign a pledge to refuse to make any purchases above recent OPA ceilings.

Eight thousand San Franciscans pledged themselves to refuse to pay higher rents and prices, and to buy only what they absolutely needed, at a mass meeting sponsored by the CIO, AFL, the American Veterans Committee and civic groups.

Apparently taking as their motto "Let it melt," Indianapolis housewives refused to buy butter, which was offered at 85c a pound.

Six thousand persons attended a consumers' rally at South Bend, Ind., made possible by a two-hour labor holiday at the Studebaker, Bendix and Oliver plants and heard Vice President Richard T. Leonard of the CIO Auto Workers declare:

"Rising prices will bring industrial strikes, consumers strikes and political opposition to an unfaithful Congress."

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, the Federation of Hosiery Workers and the Textile Workers, all CIO, joined with an independent union in planning a Buyers' Strike Day at Riverside and adjoining towns in South Jersey.

Bedlam broke loose in Denver City Hall as more than 1,000 persons angrily demanded the recall of city councilmen who had voted for an ordinance approving rent increases up to 10%. As the crowd filed from the council chamber they began to sign recall peitions circulated by the American Veterans Committee.

Washington had more meat than at any time within the last five years, but it was in wholesale warehouses because housewives refused to buy it at exorbitant prices. Retail and wholesale butter sales virtually stopped.

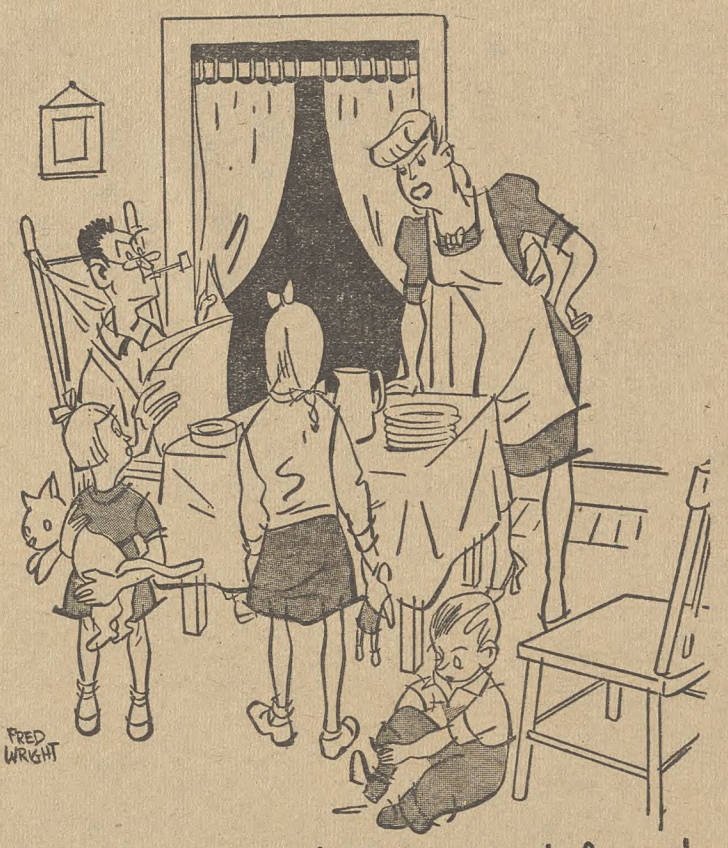
The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported that buyers' resistance has brought the price of butter down since July 15 and has returned poultry and egg prices to the June level. An official of the U. S. Agricultural Dept. said that despite customer resistance in several cities, high prices of meats and hogs persisted in the Midwest exchange.

Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers called off a meat boycott in Detroit because he said that the week-long buyers' strike had been so successful that prices on some cuts were forced down as much as 20c a pound. He promised resumption of the strike if meat prices rise and said that the union would take action to force down other prices which have risen beyond reasonable levels.

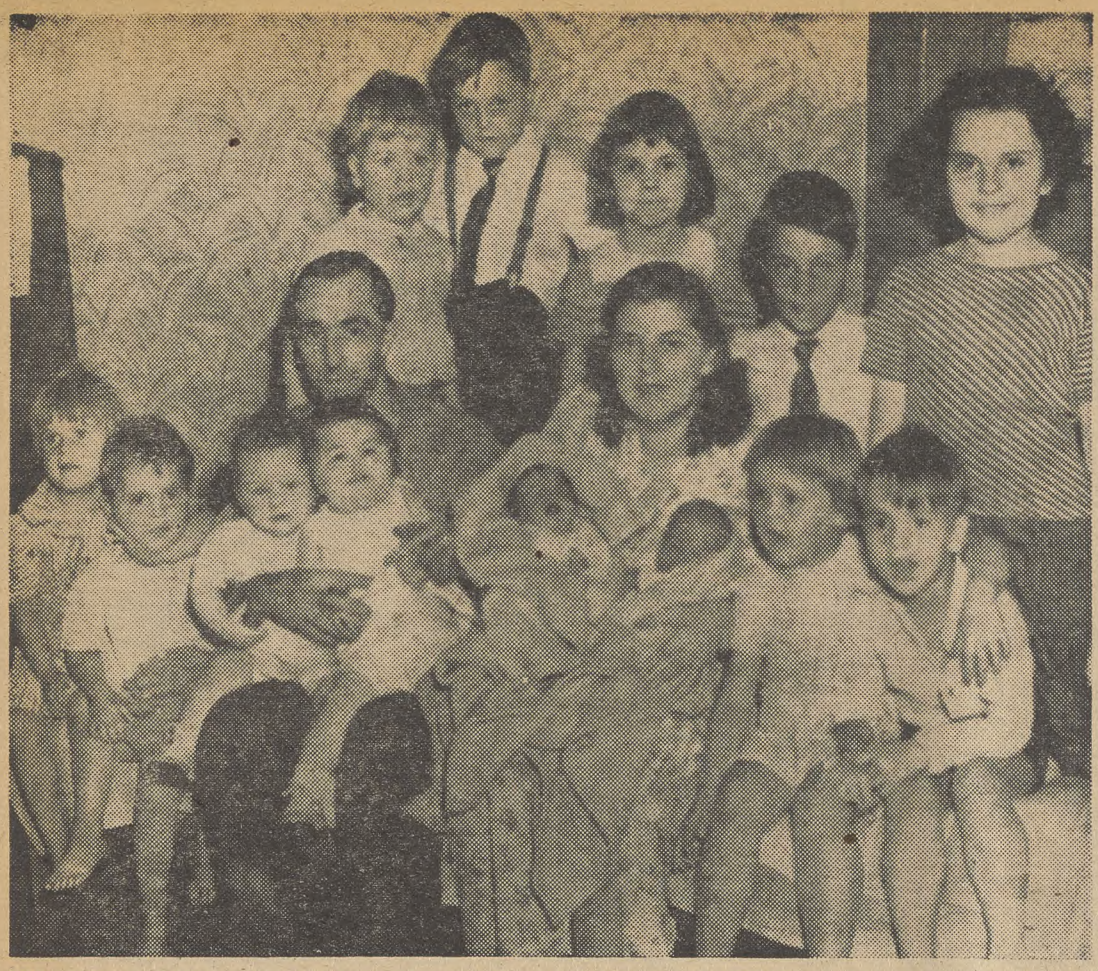
Plans were being made for stiffening of buyers' strike in New York City on a borough-wide basis, with the Buyers' Strike Committee conducting a three-day meat boycott in the Bronx as a starter.

Pres. Robert Wason of NAM may be wondering whether there was any reason for glee when he reported to his board:

"We also knew that the public was strongly in favor of extending price controls without restrictions . . . The NAM's willingness to fight industry's battle was the action that really broke the ice and kept OPA from being extended unamended for a year."



Take the kids out for a while, Elsie, ... I want a few words with your father about Senator Taft and the NAM



This picture of the fourth set of twins born to Mrs. Irma Griser was printed in many newspapers because of its human interest angle, but the story of the struggle of the head of the house, Arthur Griser, member of the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of Pitcairn, Pa., to keep his family of 15 together on $200 a month was ignored.

The Story Most Papers Didn't Print:

HOW FAMILY OF FIFTEEN GETS BY ON $200 A MONTH

NEWSPAPERS from coast to coast printed their pictures. When a husband and wife have four sets of twins in six years, that's news. When there are enough "singletons" in the same family, the oldest 12 years old, to run the total up to 13 children, that's even bigger news.

But sometimes, in the hustle and bustle that make up American journalism, the newspapers miss an angle or two. They missed quite a few in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Griser of Pitcairn, Pa., according to the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Here are some of the things, that happen to a man when his wife presents him with 13th child: Mrs. Griser was delivered of her fourth set of twins on July 3—three days after OPA ceilings were eliminated.

At about the same time Arthur Griser told his children they no longer could enjoy the canned chicken soup he formerly bought for them. The price of the soup had gone up three cents a can—too high a price for the Griser budget.

Griser, a World War II veteran, an employe of the Westinghouse Air Brake Co. in Wilmerding, Pa., and a member of the UE, also took a long look at the increased cost of milk and knew that he would find it impossible financially to continue buying enough for the entire family. But the milkman started leaving two extra quarts free of charge.

When the furniture store sent a man around to collect $58 or pick up the table and four chairs on which the payments were overdue, Griser went to his union office.

"How can I feed my kids?" he asked. He was referring to the possible loss of the table and chairs—but the question touched a broader subject. A boiler fireman, Griser told the union that he earns $1.18½ an hour. In June his take-home pay was $198.02.

How do you feed 13 children on less than $200 a month? Here's how:

Griser says he buys two dozen oranges a week. That's all the fruit the entire family has. He buys milk, potatoes, corn and beans as the family staples.

Meat? "For me the price is out of this world," says Griser. "It's lucky this is summer. Four of the younger children don't have any shoes and have to go barefoot. Buying clothing is a real problem."

Added to Griser's constant financial worries was a fire last January which caused severe damage to the family's house.

When Griser was in the Army—he served with the 47th Raiders through the Battle of the Bulge and in Germany—his wife drew a government allotment of $280 a month because of his large family. The fraulein in Germany told him he should have lived in Germany under Hitler—"Lots of money for so many kinder."

CIO MAPS WAR ON INFLATION

THE nation continued its battle against inflation this week, helped only slightly by a mauled and tattered price control bill which Pres. Truman had signed only with reluctance.

Pres. Truman, obviously dissatisfied with the bill, told Congress he would call it back into special session if the new law proves ineffective, and will demand strengthening of its provisions.

"I had hoped for a bill under which the government could, with full confidence, assure the people that prices would remain generally stable in these last few critical months of the transition to a free economy," the President declared.

"This bill falls far short of that hope. I am advised, however, that it is the best bill the Congress will now pass."

While the bill moved through its final stages on Capitol Hill, the CIO Cost of Living Committee warned that "the people of America must develop their own program of keeping prices down, or suffer the effects of disastrous inflation."

In a lengthy memorandum to CIO unions, the committee called for buyers' strikes, close monitoring of the price situation in each community, and strong resistance—with union support where necessary—to paying any rent higher than the June 30 level.

Meanwhile the CIO Dept. of Research and Education, after a two-day confab with research officials of numerous affiliated unions, pledged complete support of all union research staffs in "this popular war against inflation."

"In the past several years, our research departments have given material aid in promoting the success of collective bargaining between employes and employers, "the statement said. "For the next several months at least, a considerable portion of labor's economic 'know-how' will be devoted to developing with equal success a campaign of consumers' resistance to soaring prices."

The Cost of Living Committee offered a 5-point guide to combat the soaring rise in prices:

1 Avoid buying any commodity or item that can be done without, especially if the item is overpriced.

2 Get your union to set up a committee to call on individual merchants and landlords, and on their organization heads, to make clear to them why the cost of living must be held down.

3 Organize shopping committees to check prices and report price gougers to the public.

4 Get ready to do whatever direct buying and selling you can. Make arrangements with nearby farmers' organizations and other producer groups, for goods that can be bought in large lots and sold directly to your members.

5 Be ready to use picket lines if you need them, to tell the public what the facts are, and whom not to support.

"We know that no family can avoid buying many of the food, clothing and other items on which prices are now going up," the statement added. "However, we urge you to think carefully before making any purchase during this inflationary period."

The OPA extension bill, approved by Congress 27 days after its predecessor had been vetoed by the President, has much of the shadow and little of the substance of a genuine price control measure.

To be chalked up on the good side is the preservation of rent control. Weakening amendments on that subject which had been adopted in both House and Senate were cast aside in the conference committee.

In other sections, however, the bill leans over backward to weaken OPA's jurisdiction, and it stresses constantly the desire to hasten the lifting of price controls on commodities in the course of the next year.

Controls over meats, dairy products, cottonseed, soybeans and a few other items will not go into effect until August 20.

YOU CAN HELP HOLD THE PRICE LINE!

HERE'S what you can do as an individual in the battle against inflation.

The advice comes from the CIO Cost of Living Committee, which has been making a close study of the price situation. Follow its suggestions:

1. Rent

Don't pay more than the rent you paid on June 30, the last day of OPA rent control. Get your union, or other organization, to back you up, if you have to fight an increase.

Send a delegation to see the judges in your city, and get them to agree to investigate thoroughly, before issuing eviction notices to people resisting rent increases in this manner. Set up a committee to protect families from unjust evictions.

2. Clothing

Some clothing is essential, but many merchants today are pushing fancy luxury and novelty items at inflationary prices. Every such item you buy contributes to the inflation.

Don't buy novelty clothing. Make your present wardrobe do as long as possible. If patches become popular, clothing prices will stay down. Keep your clothing purchases down to a minimum.

3. Food

Nobody can avoid buying food. Many cereals and other highly advertised and overpriced foods, however, can be eliminated immediately from the family purchases. Find simple, lower priced substitutions for foods which are used as "sucker bait" by inflation-minded merchants.

Every food item which can be dropped from the family diet without injuring health will be one more item removed from the inflationary race toward disaster. Boycott restaurants which make sharp increases in prices, or which cut portions or quality of food.

4. Appliances & Auto

Cars and many appliances, like radios, toasters, and vacuum cleaners have become near-necessities. Consumers feel they must have them. However, many of these commodities are overpriced; therefore, those of us who can postpone our purchases should do so.

Besides fighting inflation, we would be better off to postpone buying because the present models do not have the improvements which can be expected on later models. This is particularly true of radios and phonographs.

5. Gadgets

The market today is being flooded with gadgets for which consumers have little or no real need, but which are being sold at highly inflated prices. Every time you buy one of those gadgets you are feeding an insatiable inflation. Don't buy gadgets. Don't feed inflation.

6. Pat. Medicines, etc.

The American people spend billions of dollars each year for patent medicines that cannot cure anything; for overpriced toothpastes and soaps; and for overpriced and over-glamorized cosmetics. Think before you buy.

HOW DOES OUR GARDEN GROW?

Congress is nearing adjournment with a record of willful neglect of the public interest.

Nearly all our present troubles are traceable, directly or indirectly, to some sin of omission or commission by the reactionary majority in Congress.

Are prices too high, cutting deeply into real wages, savings, pensions, etc.?

Congress is solely responsible. It could have acted promptly before June 30 to renew and strengthen the Price Control Act, thus keeping down living costs and preventing inflation.

Instead, the tory Republicans and polltax Democrats combined to massacre price control and promote inflation. They adopted so many destructive amendments to the Price Control Act that the President had to veto their bill.

Then they left the country completely at the mercy of uncontrolled prices and rents, rather than continue OPA pending a new bill.

The new Act finally passed is too late to remedy the damage already done, and in any case it so weakened OPA that price increases are bound to continue.

Is there a serious housing shortage, making it almost impossible for veterans and other low-income groups to find new homes?

Again, Congress is to blame. It has for months had before it the Wagner-Taft-Ellender bill, to promote new housing and bring it within reach of the veteran's purse. The Senate has passed this bill, but it is still being stalled in the House.

Are commodities of all kinds still hard to get, even at the higher prices?

Congress could have speeded up reconversion and peacetime production, if it had not been so intent on favoring the profiteers at the expense of the workers and consumers.

As it was, Congress encouraged the sitdown strikes of big business and its conspiracy to hold up labor and the public for soaring profits, higher prices and low wages.

Repeal of the excess profits tax led industry to keep goods from the market until this should take effect. And even after that, Congressional assaults on OPA led to continued holding back of goods in hopes of higher prices.

When big business provoked stoppages by refusing genuine collective bargaining and denying decent wages, this hold-up of labor and the public was financed from the public treasury through the carry-back tax provisions, which Congress failed to repeal.

Are millions of Americans still paid much less than a living wage?

The bill to raise the minimum wage to 65c was passed by the Senate only with the inflationary Pace rider, and the whole matter has been pigeonholed in the House.

Are Hitleristic job discriminations rampant in American industry?

Congress killed the FEPC by refusing to renew its appropriation and, despite campaign pledges of both major parties, has taken no action for a permanent FEPC.

On full employment, health, social security and other legislation necessary for the future welfare and security of the American people, Congress has either refused to act or has passed totally inadequate measures. It has denied the right to vote to millions of Americans by failing to pass the anti-polltax bill. It has spent most of its time on vicious and vengeful attacks on labor.

This is the state of our national garden after another year of Congressional neglect. The healthy roots for future progress still exist, but they will have to be watered by the people themselves, through progressive political activity to elect a better Congress in November.

BY LEN DE CAUX

"IT'S all I can do to look out for myself, without bothering about a union," said Joe Hardway, the first time a CIO organizer spoke to him.

"I believe in minding my own business. I'm not mad at anyone, and I don't want to pick any fights. So just leave me alone."

But life didn't leave Joe alone. He found it increasingly tough to get by on his wages, while other people in nearby plants were getting theirs raised through union agreements.

So, rather sheepishly, Joe looked up the organizer and told him: "All right, bud, you can count me in.

"But," he added, "don't think I've changed my ideas about minding my own business and not mixing into what doesn't concern me.

"I don't go for all your CIO stuff. All I want from the union is a raise. A union should stick to its knitting—just wages and hours—and not get mixed up with anything else."

★ ★ ★

Joe got his raise. But he would snort when he heard union talk about social security and other legislation.

"There you go," he'd say, "spreading out all over the lot. Why can't we just mind our own business?"

But along came unemployment—and it didn't leave Joe alone. Looking out for himself now included trying to get by without his job and find a new one.

Unlike some AFL unions Joe had praised for "sticking to their knitting," his CIO union concerned itself with the welfare of unemployed members who couldn't pay dues, just as much as with the wages of those still working.

When he drew his unemployment compensation, Joe admitted the union was right in fighting for more social security. He even approved CIO's "right to work" program for public works and other plans to make more jobs.

"That's our business all right," he conceded. "It's just looking out for ourselves. But I don't go for all this CIO stuff against Hitlerism. Why can't we stick to our knitting?"

★ ★ ★

Came Pearl Harbor, and Joe Hardway saw at once that the war was his and the CIO's business.

He didn't gripe about the CIO "spreading out all over the lot" when it advanced plans for increasing war production. He joined in his union's many war activities.

"It's just a matter of looking out for ourselves and our boys," he said, "and after all, we didn't pick this fight."

But, noting a gleam in the organizer's eye, Joe hurriedly added: "I haven't changed my mind. The war's different. Aside from that, I still think the union should stick to its knitting, and not get mixed up in politics and such stuff."

★ ★ ★

Soon, however, Joe couldn't help noticing that every wage case was ending up in Washington before the War Labor Board, and that Congress was having a lot to say—and doing practically nothing—about his bread-and-butter interests.

So he got sore when Congress passed the Smith-Connally Act, to do a job on the unions and to try to keep them from political activity. He even felt some satisfaction when CIO's comeback was to establish its Political Action Committee.

"After all," Joe said, "we've got to look out for ourselves. If Congress tries to cripple the unions, and to block every bill for better conditions and more security, it's our business to try to elect a better Congress."

After the war, Joe threw himself into CIO's wage movement. "Like I always said, the chief thing is to go after higher wages, stick to our knitting, and not get all het up about price control and inflation," he said.

But Joe did get het up, when his wage increase began to vanish in higher living costs, and he hit the ceiling when Congress practically destroyed price control.

When last heard from, Joe was picketing in a CIO buyers' strike. "We've got to look out for ourselves," he said, "and do a job on those Congressmen who've been doing a job on us. I always said we ought to mind our own business, or nobody else will. And this mess is certainly our business."

SUCCESS STORY: CIO IN DIXIE

CIO unions in the South now have pending with the National Labor Relations Board 85 petitions for certification, Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO Organizing Committee, reported last week at the campaign headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

"Our state directors reported during the past week that we had won 12 more collective bargaining elections and had lost none. This brought to 39 the number of elections the CIO has won since our Southern drive began," Bittner said.

"During the early part of the campaign we lost five elections, but we have lost none since the drive began to roll."

The victories reported the past week:

Norfolk Bag Co., Portsmouth, Va.; Marshall Brick Co., Marshall, Texas; Debonair Hosiery Mills, Cleveland, Tenn.

Staunton Textile Corporation, Verona, Va.; Acme Boot Manufacturing Co., Clarksville, Tenn.; Montgomery Limestone Co., Montgomery, Ala.

Southwest Building Products Co. of Texas; Salant & Salant, Inc., Union City, Tenn., and George Byers Sons, Louisville, Ky.

L. A. Young Wire & Spring Co., Memphis, Tenn.; Glover Steel Co., Cordele, Ga.; P.A.G. Brokerage Co., Atlanta, Ga., and North American Fertilizer Co., Louisville, Ky.

★ ★ ★

Seventy-eight persons are now devoting full time to the CIO's organizing campaign in North and South Carolina, it was reported here last weekend at a meeting of the CIO Organizing Committee's staff for the Carolinas held at Charlotte.

William Smith, Committee director for North Carolina, and Franz Daniel, South Carolina director, reported "real progress" was being made in their membership campaigns in both states.

Staff men working in the field said their drive among employes of the Cannon Mills was moving along fine."

Van A. Bittner of Atlanta, Committee director, told the staff organization work has been completed or is nearing completion in about 110 industrial plants and that "by the end of August it will almost keep one man busy just keeping tab on the elections that have just been held or are going to be held soon by the National Labor Relations Board."

Van A. Bittner, Director of the CIO Organizing Committee, last week reported that all national and international unions and industrial union councils in the South set up volunteer organizing committees to aid in the current membership campaign.

"We have put into the field approximately 270 paid organizers and all of them are hard at work signing up new CIO members," Mr. Bittner said. "These men are doing a fine job and making real progress, but if our campaign is to move along at a pace that is satisfactory to everybody we must have the cooperation of everybody in the CIO movement in the South.

"We have found that our best results are obtained where our paid organizers are able to work in close cooperation with local union members who volunteer to help them."

ADOLPH GERMER

GERMER GETS WFTU POST

ADOLPH Germer, veteran of decades of union activity in the United States, has been named by Pres. Philip Murray of CIO's permanent representative at headquarters of the World Federation of Trade Unions in Paris.

Germer will have the title of assistant secretary-general of the WFTU. Along with one representative of the British labor movement and a representative of the Soviet trade unions, he will help Secretary General Louis Saillant of the French CGT administer the affairs of the new and growing world organization.

A one-time coal miner, Germer has held a variety of important posts with CIO. In recent years he has been active in the Pacific northwest. He will leave for Paris in the near future.

PRAISES LABOR

The cooperation of the CIO and the AFL in the efforts of the U. S. Labor Dept.'s Retraining and Reemployment Administration to establish uniform minimum standards for the on-the-job training program drew praise this week from Maj. Gen. Erskine, RRA administrator.

Meyer Bernstein of Natl. CIO Veterans Committee is serving as CIO consultant to the Federal interagency committee on standards for on-the-job training.

SENATE PASSES LEAVE PAY BILL

THE legislative journey of the terminal leave bill, passed last week by the Senate, showed who are the ex-GIs' friends and enemies.

For example, the CIO continued to be a true friend of the former servicemen.

More than three months ago when HR 4051 was stalled in the House Military Affairs Committee, Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee wrote all representatives asking them to sign a discharge petition to get the legislation before the House. HR-4051 would have provided cash terminal leave—the bill that passed the Senate provides for payment in five-year bonds.

Sen. Ball (R., Minn.)—also an enemy of the 65-cent minimum wage bill—delayed Senate action on the leave bill two weeks ago by keeping it from being passed on the unanimous consent calendar and last week attempted to amend the measure by providing that mustering out pay be deducted from leave pay. Mustering out pay is not deducted from officers' terminal leave pay.

"Any veteran who wants a job can get one today," Ball declared. "If there is any group in our whole population which should be able . . . . . to stand on its own feet and make its way without handouts, it is this group."

Apparently all the officers who received terminal leave pay were badly in need of "handouts."

Another supporter of the Ball amendment was Sen. Taft (R., Ohio) remembered by many Americans for his amendments to cripple OPA. Just before the bill went to vote that tried and true friend of liberal legislation — Sen. Pepper (D., Fla.) made a strong plea that terminal leave payments be made in cash.

The measure—which provides up to 120 days leave 2½ days for each month—for all wartime enlisted personnel, now goes to the House, which is expected to pass the bond-payment bill.

LOWDOWN ON VET ORGANIZATIONS

"VETERANS' ORGANIZATIONS" — which shows how the major vet groups stand on legislative issues, eligibility rules, dues, etc.—is the newest CIO pamphlet.

Published by the CIO Veterans Committee, the attractive eight-page pamphlet carries this foreword:

"The CIO urges its membership to join one or more of the legitimate veterans' organizations of World War I or II. The CIO does not sponsor any particular group. It believes that each CIO veteran can choose that organization most nearly meeting his needs.

"To aid in that selection, the CIO Veterans Committee presents a summary of replies made by seven veterans' groups to a recent questionnaire."

The pamphlet summarizes the rules and position of seven organization — American Legion, American Veterans Committee, Amvets, Disabled American Veterans, National Conference of Union Labor Legionnaires, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Veterans League of America.

It compares their eligibility rules, cost of membership, service to members, and their stands on labor posts and mixed color posts. A chart shows the groups' attitudes on 10 major legislative issues, among them compulsory military training, anti-strike bills, FEPC, Housing Bill, etc.

AVC ASKS 65c BILL ACTION

THE American Veterans Committee last week urged the House to give consideration to the four million workers attempting to live on $16 a week by taking up the Minimum Wage Bill setting basic rates at 65 cents an hour.

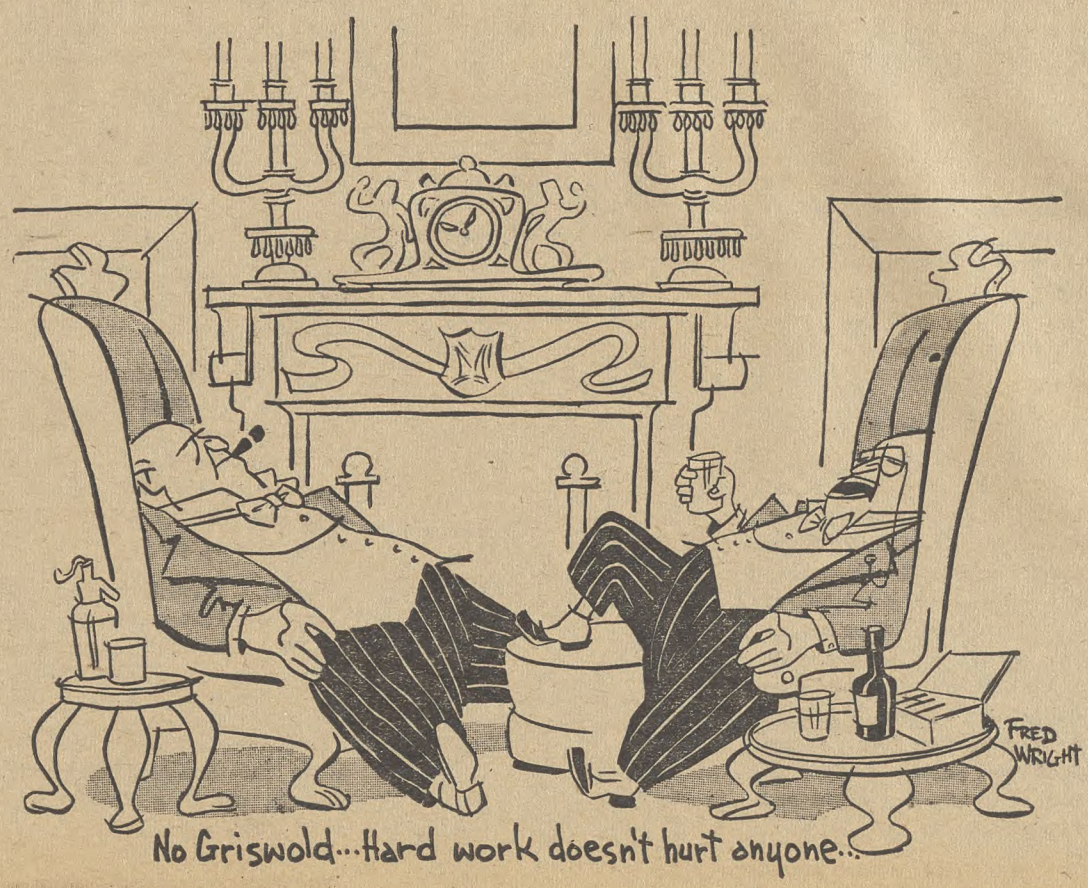
The AVC asked members of the House in letters to sign petition 34 to discharge the Minimum Wage Bill from committee and make possible debate on the floor.

Chat Paterson, AVC's natl. legislative representative, said that improved minimum wage legislation is demanded by the increases in the cost of living which the consumer now undeniably faces.

"The cost of maintaining a barely decent standard of living requires considerable increases in the worker's income, and the plight of the wage-earner attempting to feed, clothe, house and educate himself and his family on $16 a week needs no explanation," he said.

VETERANS GET JOBS

Value of the establishment of CIO Veterans Committees on the city level is shown by the experience of the Greater New York CIO Council which reports within the past five months several hundred veterans and a large number of disabled ex-GIs have been placed as trainees in wide variety of industries through the initiative of the unions.



Greek Union Leader Bares Labor Fakers

CIO has been warned by the Greek Confederation of Labor that a six-man delegation due to arrive in the United States in the near future has no authority to speak for the workers of Greece.

In a cable to CIO, Secretary Paparigas of the GCL, which has successfully applied for membership in the World Federation of Trade Unions, named the six visitors as Hadji, Dimitriou, Theocharidis, Tsakos, Volotas and Rendjis.

"The GCL wishes to inform you that the above-named persons have no connection with the GCL, and represent nobody," the cable said. "The members of the delegation are notorious splitters of labor unity and collaborators with the Germans.

"They have been sent by the plutocratic oligarchy with the manifest aim of defaming the Greek trade unions and the progressive movement of the working people in general."

Scorning pro-fascist groups, more and more veterans are participating in programs advocated by progressive veterans and labor organizations. Veterans joined in this delegation sent by the New York Chapter of the American Veterans Committee, the American Legion Duncan-Paris Post, Independent Citizens Committee and the CIO Veterans Committee of the Greater New York CIO Council to demand that Mayor O'Dwyer act to alleviate the housing crisis. Most ex-servicemen want constructive action, not blind, Nazi-like hatred.

VETS SAY 'NO SALE' TO PRO-FASCIST GROUPS

By DeWITT GILPIN

VETERANS of World War II have surprised the enemies of labor by their almost complete rejection of the numerous pro-fascist veteran organizations that are appealing to ex-servicemen for membership.

There are some 20 veterans organizations which are openly anti-labor and anti-Semitic enough to be classified as pro-fascist grouplets.

Investigators for the major veteran organizations and for the Friends of Democracy agreed that their combined organizational strength does not exceed more than 10,000.

The domestic programs of these grouplets stress opposition to all unions and to any progressive legislation. In world politics, most leaders of pro-fascist veterans organizations support any move to disrupt relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

It is a splendid testimonial to the good sense of our veterans that the pro-fascist organizations have not been able to get a single hero of World War II to head any of their groups. Most of the leaders of the pro-fascist veterans spent their Army time this side of the oceans. Many of these leaders, while doing stateside duty, got themselves indicted for sedition, court martialed, and dishonorably discharged.

In contrast to the records of the pro-fascists, the veterans in labor's ranks number thousands of men who were decorated for the part they played in defeating the Axis.

Truman Henderson, of the CIO Textile Workers Union, for example, won all the medals the Air Corps hands out for 50 missions, and walked back from two weeks in the New Guinea jungle when his plane was shot down.

The military record of George Vose, head of the Protestant War Veterans, on the other hand, is not so impressive. Vose, a stateside commando, was court martialed at Camp McCoy, Wis., and convicted of selling passes and army property. He was given six months and a dishonorable discharge. One of the leaders with Vose of the Protestant War Veterans is Edward Smythe, an indicted seditionist who never got any nearer the front than the Dept. of Justice.

Mike Jiminez, of the United Electrical Workers, is another CIO unionist whose Army record speaks for itself. He was awarded a battle field commission and the Legion of Merit for his work behind German lines with Italian partisans.

Frederick Kister, however, who heads Gerald K. Smith's Christian Veterans of America, never got close enough to the war to let either side take a shot at him. Kister was formerly an associate editor of Scribner's Commentator, which was suppressed as subversive during the war. At present, Kister talks very tough, and in appealing for members says, "no softies need apply."

Paul Brooks of the CIO Auto Workers landed by parachute in Normandy on D-1, held the bridge outside of Carentan with his machine gun section, was awarded a Silver Star, and had half his face blown away 10 days later by a German mortar shell. Then Brooks was flown back to England by C-47.

Larry Asman, founder of the Christian Veterans Intelligence Bureau, unlike Brooks, never got to England the hard way. This hasn't stopped him from issuing a leaflet alleging that 20,000 children were born to English women out of wedlock by American-Negro soldiers.

The chilly reception accorded Asman's organization indicates that most veterans consider him a better liar than he was a soldier. Asman claims that he was drafted as an act of persecution.

While sweating out the horrors of stateside training camps, Asman used to slip into Washington and plead his case with Congressmen. Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, recently defeated for the Democratic nomination for the seat he now holds, and Rep. Clare Hoffman both gave him audiences.

The "war" records of other would-be fuehrers of the veterans are similar. Joseph McWilliams, the Silver Shirter who heads the Serviceman's Reconstruction Plan, promoted anti-Semitic street brawls during the war.

Robert R. Reynolds, former senator who wants veterans to join his Nationalist Party, waged verbal war against President Roosevelt in Washington salons.

Benjamin C. Richards, Jr., who heads the American Order of Patriots, did time for forgery shortly before Pearl Harbor, his prison number in the Texas penitentiary being 64202. Harvey Hanson, leader of the United Sons of America, promoted the Ku Klux Klan in Michigan during World War II.

A good percentage of the Armed Forces, of course, did not see combat service during World War II, and these jibes at the non-combatant records of the pro-fascist leaders are not meant to reflect upon those millions who did the jobs assigned them behind the lines.

It is usually agreed among veterans, however, that those who have seen a war at first hand should be allowed to speak first on the advisability of starting another one. Not so with our native Nazis among the veterans.

Most of them are hell-bent for a war with Russia, and this time, so they say in their speeches, they will be on the firing line. Veterans who met the Reds on the Elbe River in the last war are unimpressed with this display of courage. They point out that the next war will be different.

The pro-fascist veterans leaders undoubtedly believe that they will be allowed to congregate in Yorkville and push atom rocket bomb buttons.

Out of the Nazi Chaos:

German Unions Offer Hope for Democracy

By MELTON S. DAVIS

EVERYBODY in Hitler's Germany belonged to the Deutsche Arbeits Front. There were no jurisdictional beefs. There was "collective bargaining," nicely pre-arranged by the industrialists and Nazi Party officials.

The DAF had all the independence of a brightly painted marionette. It jiggled when the employers said "Jiggle!" and it bowed when Robert Ley pulled the necessary strings.

The average German worker was fed a continuous flow of carefully selected propaganda, cleverly calculated to keep him satisfied, silent and sweating—for Hitler's war machine. The Gestapo had special instructions to take steps—strong steps like concentration camps and executions—to prevent any semblance of democracy in the German Workers' Front.

Unions Growing

Today, all that is changed. Any competent observer will tell you that the hope for democracy in Germany rests with the men in the new, free, democratic labor unions. They have organized far quicker than other segments of German society.

What is more, German workingmen are showing that they are capable of choosing democratic union leaders in democratic fashion. In Frankfurt, a short time ago, workers voted for 3,600 shop stewards. Out of those elected, only 10% proved, after investigation, to have questionable records and less than 3% were definitely undesirable.

In 1933 there were 3 major labor organizations. They had no joint program for the crisis period. Socialists, Communists, Catholics were continually fighting each other within the various trade union confederations. This left them wide open for Hitler.

Today all three have agreed that it was this very division which enabled the Nazis to walk in over the ideals of working men. One of the present union leaders, Willi Richter, recently said that "it was difficult to face union leaders in other parts of the world because German unions had not stopped Hitler's rise."

A Spotty Picture

THE post-war labor picture, of course, is still spotty. In Berlin and Bavaria unions are highly centralized. In Greater Hesse individual unions are autonomous. In North Wuerttemberg the WGB, which is the Wuerttembergische Gewerkschafts Bund, gives assistance to local unions by helping with organization, regroupment and de-nazification.

But locals retain some measure of autonomy. Those that tend toward centralization say it is a form of organization which is necessary during this transitional period.

Virtually all unions in Germany are organized along industrial lines. This includes clerical employes and supervisory personnel as well as manual workers. There are few unions solely of white-collar workers. The WGB is very active in planning for the education of younger people in trade union operation.

A trade union weekly is published in Stuttgart. Frankfurt also gets out a weekly. In Berlin they publish a daily. Within the structure of the Freie Deutsche Gewerkschafts Bund (Federation of Free German Trade Unions) in Frankfurt are autonomous unions who negotiate their own contracts, control their own treasures, run separate educational programs and conduct their own vocational training.

Ideas Circulate

The FDGB is used more or less as a clearing house for the various representatives to exchange information, confer on common problems, and plan cooperative action. In Berlin the dominant union has the same name, FDGB, as the Frankfurt group, but is not part of it.

All this has been done against the obstacles of disease, hunger, looting, uncertainty and insecurity. As a result of these factors, the general life of the people is chaotic, shifting and fearful.

They are living in a country where the black market holds an almost equal status with the legal channels of trade. In Berlin, for instance, it is estimated that over half a million black marketeers are operating on a full time basis. Some of these men are in the millionaire class. A lot of them are Nazis, who refuse to do common labor. They get the lowest ration card possible.

Some are Franco's Spanish boys, who are left over from the Blue Division which fought against the Russians. They are here illegally, so they have no ration cards at all.

ONLY those employed are allowed to be members at the present time, since there are so many people not working that the main trade represented would be that of the unemployed. There are 800,000 without jobs in Berlin alone.

Uniform social insurance is starting to be set up on the contributions of 10% of the earnings of workers and an additional 10% by employers. This will cover payment for unemployment, illness, accidents, old age and funeral expenses. Dues run around one hour's wages per week. These are collected by shop stewards.

Works councils once again have been re-established and negotiate on the operation of collective agreements, submit ideas for improving production, cooperate in preventing war production, aid in the de-nazification program, and help in the creation and management of social works. This is a pretty full program, but for men who haven't known opportunities of this sort for 12 years, they do pretty well. Work Councils are taking the place of shop stewards.

Labor Courts Used

Labor courts, used for arbitration of labor disputes, handle minor disputes. Other cases are taken up by arbitration comittees composed of panels suggested by trade unions and employers.

Occupation authorities are beginning to release some of the properties that German labor unions formerly owned. Frankfurt, for instance, had a workers' bank, one of the largest in the city. Other unions owned newspapers, life insurance companies, housing companies, office buildings, theatres.

Plans are being made to reopen the Academy of Labor, the workers' college. Active help is being given by the unions to youth organizations.

UNION operations are still hampered by lack of material, such as paper, gasoline, automobiles, office machines. They are expected to act like democratic trade unions, yet outside of the older members, none of them have seen a democratic trade union in operation.

Only feeble steps have been taken in this direction to reeducate the German trade unionist. Just recently has permission been granted to trade unions to print pamphlets and trade journals. Now, all they have to do is find the paper and machinery!

However, German trade union aims are broad. They include, as the Munich shop stewards unanimously declared, "opposition to the reinstitution of a private, capitalistic economy and support of reformation along democratic and socialistic lines."

Union Aims

The Frankfurt unions have come out for "re-shaping the individualistic - capitalistic system into a socialist one." There is hardly a trade union in Germany that has not expressed the desire for equal representation in economic and social institutions and asked for a voice in management.

Virtually every union is strong in its call for a thorough denazification of business and industry. Other aims are uniform social insurance and healthful housing facilities.

German trade unions have not hesitated to take a strong stand for the raising of the economic standards of living and the elevation of the intellectual and cultural level of all Germans. Along with this, they feel, will come better international understanding based on the well-being and the political awareness of workers in all countries of the world.

NO LONGER VALID: This is a page from a membership book in Hitler's DAF—the Deutsche Arbeitsfront. Under the Nazis, every worker had to belong and pay fancy dues to this giant, nationwide company union. Today, 15 months after war's end, the DAF is dead as a duck; and no German worker sheds a tear for it.

NEW UNIONS ARE BORN: Scene at the Bavarian Trade Union Congress, held in mid-June. Germany's new democratic unions are committed to extensive de-nazification, nationalization of industry, big social reforms. Everyone admits: in the hands of the unions lies Germany's greatest hope for Democratic progress.

ALLIS-CHALMERS WRECKS TALKS

By ESTHER HANDLER

CHARGING the company with conducting "phony negotiations in order to force the union to accept an inferior agreement," the bargaining committee of Local 248, CIO Auto Workers, broke off negotiations at the key plant of Allis-Chalmers Co. at West Allis, Wis., last week. Just as adamant is the J. I. Case Company, which refuses to negotiate with the UAW at Racine, Wis., where a strike has been in progress seven months.

The union's action terminated talks which were re-opened on June 3 when Labor Secretary Schwellenbach ordered the company to conduct genuine bargaining or face government seizure.

The union walked out when the company offered a counter-proposal on the grievance procedure which proposed that workers grievances be written by foremen instead of stewards.

"In making this ridiculous proposal" 248's president Robert Buse declared, "the company knew it would not be acceptable to the union. This move was calculated to precipitate a stalemate which the company threatened would be the signal for a 'back to work' movement."

The only union of the seven on strike still negotiating with the company is at LaCrosse, Wis. Talks are expected to end there early this week as no progress is reported.

The Allis-Chalmers workers represented by the CIO Automobile, Electrical and Farm Equipment unions last week published full page advertisements stating that the unions were ready to end the strike "within 24 hours" if the company would:

Reinstitute old contracts with all WLB directives.

Permit arbitrations of all disputes.

Grant adequate retroactive wage increases.

Protesting against F. W. Woolworth's five and dime policy when it comes to wages, these pickets, members of Local 65, CIO Wholesale and Warehouse Workers employed in the firm's New York warehouse, take their story to the public. The company has rejected arbitration and mediation proposals and refused further negotiations with the union to raise present minimum of $32 to decent level.

CANADIAN STEEL STRIKE ON

By CHUCK ADAMSON

MORE than 15,000 Canadian steel workers, members of the CIO Steelworkers, have virtually shut off the production of steel in a strike at plants of the "Big Three" of Canada's steel industry.

They are employed at Algoma Steel Co., Dominion Steel & Coal Corp., and plants of the Steel Co. of Canada.

They are striking to establish a program adopted by a conference of local union representatives which met in Quebec in October, 1944—20 months ago. That program included:

1. National recognition of their union.

2. A minimum guaranteed annual wage of $1750.

3. A 40-hour work-week "as soon as sufficient manpower becomes available."

4. Two week's vacation with pay.

5. Union security.

The strike was authorized by a strike vote taken by the union last April and May, when 21,831 members out of 25,440 voted to authorize national Canadian USA-CIO officers to take "appropriate action" to win the program.

Conferences with the Canadian steel industry were carried on for six months before negotiations broke down.

"Over this long period of time we tried to reach settlement by persuasion and explanation," Charles Millard, USA-CIO national director in Canada told a House of Commons committee investigating the strike. "We used all the machinery available. We explored every avenue known to us that might lead to settlement."

Government intervention, as The CIO News goes to press, has failed to produce a settlement.

FURNITURE UNION SELECTS PIZER

MEETING in New York last week, the CIO Furniture Workers Executive Board appointed Vice-President Morris Pizer to serve as acting president until a new president is chosen by a membership referendum. The vacancy was created by the resignation of Morris Muster.

In answer "to a widespread press campaign against the union," the board adopted a statement of policy in which was incorporated the policy statement adopted by the recent CIO Steelworkers convention. It further pointed out that the union "will continue to be guided by the democratic principle that there is room in our international for all points of view. Our inspiration, program and policies are derived from our parent body, the CIO, and are executed within its framework."

The board also appointed a committee to negotiate with the CIO Woodworkers on a possible merger of the two unions and authorized expansion of the union's Southern organizing drive and the addition of several organizers to the staff.

FIGHT ABERDEEN DISMISSALS

THE arbitrary dismissal of five employes at the Aberdeen, Md., ordnance proving grounds by the War Dept., because of "security reasons" was sharply challenged last week by Pres. Abram Flaxer of the CIO Public Workers, as an effort to create a spy scare on the eve of the House debate on the atomic energy bill. The five were members and officers of UPW Local 250.

Flaxer said the dismissals "officially took place on June 26 but the announcement was made July 18.

The union president pointed out that "in the case of the five Aberdeen employes, no specific charges were presented to them either verbally or in writing by the War Dept.; no witnesses were brought in to testify and none of the judicial rules of evidence or trial have been followed."

"It is also interesting," Flaxer said "that these five employes worked at their positions at Aberdeen during the entire period of the war, when the need for national security was at its height." He added that although Gen. A. B. Quinton, in command at the proving ground, had "completely satisfied himself as to their loyalty" higher officials of the War Dept. "must have reversed the charges."

TOBACCO UNION MAKES HISTORY

The largest wage gains in the history of the tobacco industry in the South were won last week by Local 22 of the CIO Food and Tobacco Workers at the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., in Winston-Salem, N. C. The newly signed contract will bring an estimated $3,000,000 a year into the household budgets of some 8,500 employes.

The contract sets up a 65 cent an hour minimum, improved seniority, three paid holidays, improved grievance machinery, maintenance of membership, end of 14 week exemption from overtime payment for seasonal workers and the checkoff for union security.

TENN. CIO BACKS BUYERS STRIKE

Congressional destroyers of effective price control must answer to the people at the polls, Director Jack Kroll of the CIO-PAC, told the Tennessee CIO Industrial Union convention last week-end in Chattanooga, Tenn. Earlier in the two-day meeting representatives of the 86,000 members of Tennessee had thrown their weight behind the statewide buyers' strike proposed during the first meeting of the convention.

With the Tennessee PAC planning an all-out campaign to nominate Edward W. Carmack for Senator in the Democratic primary August 1, Director Kroll of CIO-PAC branded Carmack's opponent, Senator Kenneth D. McKellar as the leader of the southern reaction against the anti-poll tax bill and the permanent FEPC.

Allan S. Haywood, vice-president of the national CIO and Director of Organization made the final address of the convention.

John Brophy, Director of the CIO Industrial Union Councils, urged the delegates to support the CIO Executive Board's request that President Truman convene representatives of labor and industry to consider the problem of OPA and the growing need for wage increases.

The following officers were elected at the TIUC convention: Pres. W. A. Copeland, First Vice President Lawrence Marine, Secretary-Treasurer Matt Lynch, Vice Presidents B. R. Allen, C. N. Henderson, Henry White, H. S. Williams, Harold Marthenke, Edna Nowlin, Ed Orton, Paul Christopher, Blanche Evans, and C. W. Adams.

GLASS UNION VOTES NEW DRIVE

Meeting at their 7th annual convention in Buffalo, N. Y., the CIO Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers last week authorized the union's executive board to proceed with plans for an extensive campaign in the ceramic industry in Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania. Authority was granted the board to arrange for the employment of additional organizers.

The convention also voted to increase the salary of the main national officers by $500 a year and to put District presidents on a flat-salary plus expenses basis in place of the previous per-diem arrangement.

Guest speakers at the convention included Boris Stern of the Department of Labor, Hugh Thompson, CIO Regional Director and Father Boland.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS By Rose H. Alschuler

What Shall We Do Now?

On rainy days, hot days, or whenever that "what shall we do now" moment arrives, it's well to have a supply of games on hand. Parents with a good bag of tricks and riddles are a great asset. If you don't know any, we suggest you learn some! Ten cent stores are also a great help. They carry games such as: Anagrams, Authors, Bird, Flower and other card games, Dominoes, Jack Straws, Lotto, Parchesi, Ring Toss and soap bubbles. A good supply of games that children can play by themselves or with their parents is a small investment but a fine and continuous resource.

FIGHT AGAINST RISING RENTS

A joint campaign against rising rents has been undertaken in Rock Hill, S. C., by the CIO Textile Workers, the Machinists Union and Railroad Brotherhoods. Newspaper ads were published calling upon local citizens to join with trade unionists in resisting the persistent upward trend of house rents. This particular area was never under rent control.

Until OPA died the efforts of the labor unions, sparkplugged by TWUA Business Agent, A. B. Sanderson, was principally directed toward having OPA extend its control to Rock Hill and vicinity. Workers are being urged to resist rent raises and to use their collective bargaining power as protection against gouging.

SOAP BIG BUSINESS

Soap is under very tight control with the three largest companies controlling 80% of the business and one, Procter & Gamble (Ivory), leading the field with almost 40% by itself. The others are Lever Bros. (Lifebuoy) with about 20% and Colgate-Palmolive-Peet handling another 20%.—Senate Small Business Committee.

WOMEN WIN LONG BATTLE

By ESTHER PETERSON
Legislative Representative, CIO Clothing Workers

ABOUT a week ago the women labor representatives here in Washington had real cause for celebration. The so-called Equal Rights Amendment — more accurately, the Unequal Rights Amendment— was finally brought to the floor of the Senate for a vote, and our side won! The vote was 38 for to 35 against, and even though the margin looks close it was better than it appears for a two-thirds majority is needed on a Constitutional amendment. So our opponents would have had to gather many more supporters to put this phony measure across.

It's about the only measure of this Congress where we can say "Look, we won!" It's too bad we couldn't say this about a good price control bill, a good housing bill, a good minimum wage bill, a good health bill. But we'll keep up our fight and we'll get these measures, too, in time. Defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment— which the CIO fought consistently — was merely holding our ground, not taking a step ahead.

The Women's Party, which has been the principal sponsor of this measure, greatly disliked having the amendment called up at this time. This amused us because they have been pressing so vigorously for action. In the final round-up it was our forces that really brought the measure to the floor and got a clear-cut vote.

This amendment has been kicked around for so many years that the people are tired of it, the Senators and Congressmen are tired of it, to say nothing of how the legislative representatives feel. However, its importance must not be under-estimated.

Passage of such an amendment would greatly retard the progress that women have made. This measure would jeopardize the obligation of the husband to support his family, it would jeopardize the rights of widows to get support from their husband's property, it could wipe out all the legislation that has been built up to protect working women.

The eight-hour day, a good meal period, suitable work and suitable working conditions, good chairs, lights, etc.—these things could have been wiped out. Also important was the threat to protection against unfair industrial home work and to minimum wages.

We who have fought for these minimum wage measures know that thousands of women are receiving at least subsistence wages because of the work of minimum wage boards in states which operate under a law for the protection of women, felt a great relief to know that this amendment was defeated and that these protections, at least for the time being, are not jeopardized.

We felt very sorry to see many of our friends in the Senate vote wrong on this measure. We can understand that many had to do it because of political commitments. The lesson is that all of us must get active in the parties and see that platforms which are drawn up in the future do not have this phony equal rights amendment among the provisions.

The immediate job to promote real equality lies in putting all of our efforts toward passage of the Equal Pay Bill. People who are genuinely interested in equality will forget this phony equal rights issue and make every effort to support this real measure. It is the next step ahead for women.

During the war women proved without a question that they can perform almost any kind of job. Without women's work the job of producing the equipment of war could not have been done.

Women are taking their places beside men in the labor movement and yet statistics on average hourly earnings in manufacturing industries show men's earnings at least 50% higher than those of women. And even in unskilled jobs, men's hourly earnings are 20% higher than women. Union contracts are gradually wiping out this great differential but not until we have Federal legislation will the problem really approach solution.

Check on your Senator's vote on the Equal Rights Amendment, tell him you are glad it's out of the way, and tell him to support the bill for Equal Pay for Equal Work as a real measure working for the equality of men and women.

GOVT. INDICTS MIMEO MONOPOLY

Every time a union brother turns a mimeograph handle he's helping make money for an illegal monopoly. But there are going to be some changes made!

That's the story from the Justice Dept., which announced last week the indictment of five mimeograph firms headed by A. B. Dick Co., and six of their officers, with "conspiracy to restrain and monopolize the mimeographing industry in violation of the Sherman antitrust act."

The illegal deals of A. B. Dick and friends, the indictment says, resulted during the war in serious shortages for the army, navy, government agencies and industrial concerns engaged in the war effort. The complaint seeks "such dissolution of the A. B. Dick Co., as will effectively end the monopoly."

By MARTY SOLOW

ADVERTISING makes newspapers a big business, so labor can almost always expect to see the business point of view championed by the commercial press. Even the most virtuous fall under the fatal spell of the NAM, as witness the conduct of the NY Times on the fight to retain a strong OPA.

On July 23, a Times editorial writer, gazing into his crystal ball (and undoubtedly a full-page NAM advertisement) wrote of rising prices to this effect: "Practically all of this increase in living costs has been due chiefly to the elimination of food subsidies."

It's a lie! The OPA Daily Price Summary, which is prepared by expert economists and statisticians, reported on July 19 that, "It is estimated that of the 25% rise shown to date, about 2% can be attributed to the removal of . . . subsidies, with 23 of the 25% reflecting price increases that had no subsidy counterpart."

★ ★ ★

New York Times news story, July 21: "Organized and publicized 'strikes' are a negligible factor . . . according to most merchants."

New York Times weekly roundup, July 21: "Buyer's strikes gained in popularity. Big city retail markets cancelled meat orders because their customers could not or would not pay peak prices."

★ ★ ★

George Seldes' weekly, IN FACT, which specializes in rooting out newspaper lies, exposed another piece of press fakery on OPA last week: ". . . the main Scripps-Howard chain paper, the NY World-Telegram . . . reported July 6 'BIG STOCK SUPPLY DROPS MEAT PRICES'. Under this false headline the facts were given: 'Prices at Chicago for steers which initially soared from a standing start of $18 per hundredweight to $22.50, dropped back to $22.25."

★ ★ ★

In the Senate debate this week, before the passage of the OPA Bill, Texas Senator, W. Lee ("Pass-the-biscuits-Pappy") O'Daniel, thundered that the only inflation now existent is "in the minds and brains of these bureaucrats in Washington."

It's a lie! And a whopper of a lie at that! The Senator doesn't have to look further than his own backyard. Down in Texas his son, a property owner, raised rents so high on the apartment of a recently returned overseas vet that angry veterans picketed in protest.

And perhaps these figures will also help the Senator. Bureau of Labor Statistics show that since OPA expired on July 1, basic foodstuffs have risen more than 34%. After the death of OPA, Dun & Bradstreet reported wholesale food prices were at their highest level since July 29, 1920.

If the Senator can tear himself away from his suite at the luxurious Hotel Washington and look in on a neighborhood grocer he can get all the facts he wants—if he's interested.

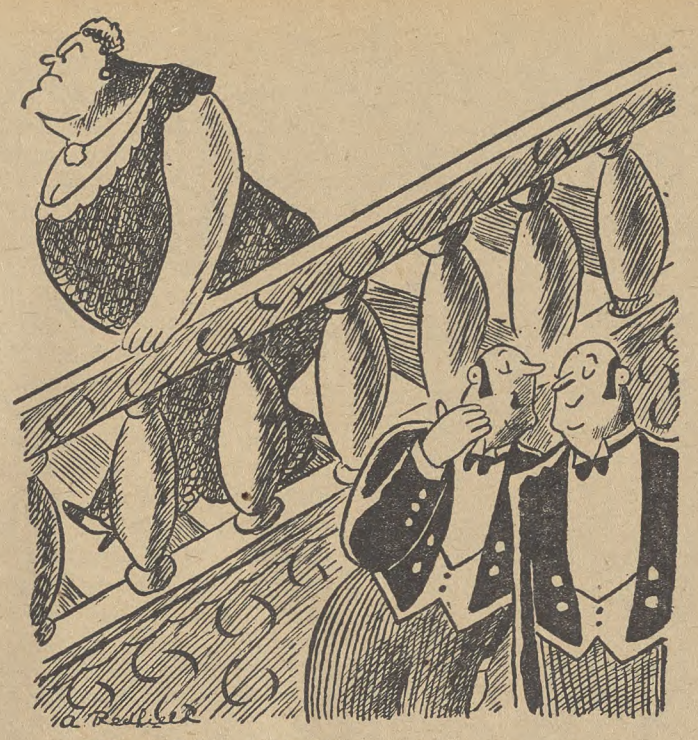
★ ★ ★

One Ernie Adamson, counsel for the House un-American Committee on un-American activities, famous for protesting that America is not a "democracy," stated after a hasty trip to the atomic energy plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn., that "subversive" groups down there were endangering our security. Said Mr. Adamson: "The security officers at Oak Ridge think that the peace and security of the United States is definitely in danger."

It's a lie! Col. E. E. Kirkpatrick, Manhattan district engineer, stated that no such statement was made or authorized by any of the security officers.

Col. David E. Shaw, security officer of the Manhattan project added: "I have not said that I consider the security of the Manhattan project in jeopardy as the result of any activity of any current group at Oak Ridge."

NOVEL TELLS FACTS OF UNION LIFE



"The cook just decided to go on a buyers strike."

THOMAS BELL's "There Comes A Time" is a fine and honest book, a story told with warmth and understanding of ordinary people.

It's the story of Joel Pane, who came to New York City from a Western Pennsylvania steel town at the age of twenty, eager to storm the topmost towers of the big city.

To start his climb to the top, Joel started working as a clerk in a large bank but at the end of 20 years he was still a clerk, though he now had the exalted title of head teller and received $2400 a year.

Meanwhile, he had become happily married, had two children and an apartment in the Bronx.

But Joel himself had become troubled. His adolescent dreams about carving out a niche for himself among the greats of the world had been buried in the reality of everyday living. Joel was aware constantly of a sense of loneliness, a lack of place and purpose for himself in the world.

Not until the CIO Office Workers Union started their campaign to unionize the bank in which he worked, involving Joel in union activity, did he find that there was a definite place in the world for him.

In the round of union activities, in the fight for a decent salary, better working conditions—Joel discovered a new purpose in living. More and more as he was drawn into union activity—speaking at meetings, taking part in the election of President Roosevelt through the American Labor Party, fighting against discrimination—he became aware of the rich life which trade union activity opens to its membership.

He became aware too that as a citizen and a union member he could have a voice in his government and in setting down what his wages and working conditions should be.

This is an exciting book and union readers will enjoy particularly the scenes at the bargaining table between workers' representatives and the employers as the employes slowly realize that they have a right to talk up to the once-feared "bosses."

There's a love story in the book, a warm, sweet story of the relationship between Joel and his wife Nancy which is never oversentimental, never over-idealized, but just about the way love is.

Thomas Bell has written a book that cannot be dismissed as "propaganda," for his people are always alive, their problems always real. They grow naturally into their convictions and ideals.

It's a splendid book on the part unions play in advancing the welfare of our people and in enriching the whole stream of American life.

"There Comes A Time," by Thomas Bell, published by Little, Brown & Company, $2.50.

NEW BILL FITS LABOR'S NEEDS

"LABOR needs, and is asking for, the lighted lamp of education," Rep. Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.) declared as he introduced a bill in the House, (HR-7108), to establish a Labor Extension Service under the Dept. of Labor. The bill would authorize grants-in-aid to educational institutions to make such a service available to the workers.

Co-sponsored by Rep. Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) the Labor Extension Service Bill will, provide "for the diffusion of more useful knowledge among workers so that, as employes and citizens, they may conduct themselves with intelligence and responsibility, conscious of the rights and duties that the spread of economic and political democracy is laying upon them."

CIO Pres. Phil Murray had previously endorsed the aim of the Committee for the Extension of Labor Education seeking to set-up just such a Labor Extension Service as Rep. Biemiller's bill would establish. Pres. Murray stated that "the nation's farmers have had the benefits of the Agricultural Extension Service for many years, and it is high time the Labor Department supplied an extension service to the many workers upon whom so much of the country's future prosperity depends."

CIO CALLS ON DIXIE PASTORS

THE Church and the CIO Must Co-operate," a new pamphlet issued by the CIO Southern Organizing Committee, declares the CIO welcomes the aid of all Southern clergymen in developing good union leadership.

"The CIO anxiously desires that the right type of men and women assume the leadership of the unions it is now setting up in your town and throughout the South.

"The CIO invites you to take full advantage of this opportunity and it asks you to invite CIO representatives and union leaders now in your town to become acquainted with you and your Church through the close personal contact that is so essential to complete understanding."

The pamphlet declares that "ministers . . . should be the guardians of the spiritual and moral welfare" of CIO members. "The Church . . . and the CIO should cooperate more closely in the fight for a more abundant life."

Copies of the leaflet may be obtained from the Organizing Committee, 79½ Poplar Street, N. W., Atlanta, Ga.

In a pamphlet entitled "Workmen's Compensation in Ontario, Canada," the Pennsylvania CIO Industrial Union Council presents the results of the CIO's investigation comparing Pennsylvania's compensation law with Ontario's.

The Ontario law is characterized as "humane-efficient-right." The premium rates are lower than those charged employers in the Keystone State, and injured workingmen are paid much more promptly.

The pamphlet urges improvement of the Pennsylvania statute until compensation provides "better recompense for accidents to workingmen in their employment without unduly burdening the employer."

URGES NATIONAL HEALTH ACT

WRITING in the July issue of Forum Magazine, Kermit Eby, Director of the CIO Department of Education and Research, stated the case for the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill, declaring that "health is a matter for national concern and national action."

Quoting figures, Eby showed that about 75% of all American families need financial assistance to pay their medical bills. Families with incomes of less than $3,000 a year require financial aid to pay their medical bills and in case of serious illness find themselves heavily in debt. Health is then neglected and the family does everything possible to avoid the expense of a physician.

The cost of the National Health Act would be paid through small regular contributions from the workers and employers, as well as from the government, similar to the pre-payment plan now provided under the old age and unemployment insurance systems.

Eby stated "we believe in a federal system because under it our members and all working people can obtain for themselves and their families complete medical and hospital care by small regular contributions. It will spread the risk, lower the cost and break down financial barriers between the patient and the doctor or hospital."

CIO BOOK-LIST

THE CIO Department of Education and Research has just issued its latest bibliography of CIO books and pamphlets including a list of union periodicals as well as the addresses of all CIO intl. unions.

The bibliography is divided into 14 sections dealing with some of the various phases of union activity, ranging from union history and collective bargaining through labor and social legislation, political action and labor's part in international relations.

Books and pamphlets are listed as to date of publication, costs, and where the selected book or pamphlet may be obtained. Copies of the bibliography may be secured by addressing the CIO Department of Education and Research, 718 Jackson Place, Washington 6, D. C.

CONDEMNS BRITISH PALESTINE TACTICS

British strong-arm methods in Palestine following bombing of the King David Hotel in Jerusalem brought a renewed plea last week from Rep. Emanuel Cellar (D., N. Y.), for American influence to restore peace and Jewish rights in the Holy Land, Federated Press reported.

Cellar asked for a cessation of force, freedom of Jewish prisoners, and a "forthright decision on the highest possible level to admit immediately into Palestine 100,000 Jews."

Mountains And Mice

Last week the House voted some minor improvements in the Social Security Act. It's likely that the Senate will endorse the action before adjournment.

In terms of the tremendous need for liberalization of Social Security, the House improvements are pretty meager.

Principally, they (1) retain old age insurance tax at 1% for another year; (2) increase by $5 a month the U. S. contribution to states for payment of needy aged and other pensions—in some of the wealthier states; (3) makes unemployment compensation available to seamen; and (4) gives old age insurance protection to vets for three years after they leave the army.

As liberal Rep. Helen Douglas D. Calif.), commented: "Here again we have another tragic case where the mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse. H.H. 7037 . . . is totally inadequate from any point of view."

CIO and other liberal organizations testified at length before the House Ways & Means Committee on the subject. They showed the need for more uniformity in benefit payments, for provisions to give the needy in poor states the same break as needed in the wealthier states—and above all, a simplification of the present jumbled, complicated federal-state system.

The Ways & Means Committee reported and the House—with no alternative—passed H.R. 7037. It's better than nothing; but not much better.

Danger Reduced

The Elliott rider to the NLRB appropriations bill, which would have scooped hundreds of thousands of workers out of Wagner Act benefits, has been rebuffed.

Thanks to firm Senate resistance, the rider was rejected on several occasions, but it wasn't completely defeated.

The rider would have barred NLRB funds in cases of workers defined by the Social Security Act as farm workers. That Act goes a long way from the farm in its definition, and would have included industrial workers in all sorts of food and processing plants.

As finally adopted, the rider bars the NLRB from acting in cases of farm workers, as defined in the Wage-Hour Act. In case you didn't know it, "Wage-Hour farmers" are much different from "Social Security farmers." Accordingly, few people in unions or eligible for unions will be affected by the rider.

But labor should remind candidates for office: we don't want vital bills passed in the form of half-baked riders.

Two Phony Propositions

The score is 1-1 on constitutional amendments which don't mean what they say.

The so-called "equal rights amendment"—also known as the "gold brick" proposal—failed to muster the necessary votes in the Senate. It would have written into the Constitution a clause that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States nor any State on account of sex."

That sounds good—but would have eliminated every progressive measure adopted in the past 50 years to give special protection to women on such matters as working hours, industrial safety, night work, etc.

More sinister is a proposed amendment suddenly reported out of the Senate Judiciary Committee with an 8-3 majority.

This one, sponsored by Sen. Andrews (D. Fla.), would fit into the Bill of Rights as an eleventh section.

The Andrews amendment would guarantee "the inherent right of a person to work and bargain freely with his employer, individually or collectively . . ."

This proposal is aimed at giving an air of righteousness to the scab and the strikebreaker, the fink and the company stooge.

Labor Education Extension Bill HR 7108	Provides a federal-state program, thru colleges and schools, for labor education work.	Introduced in House by Reps. Biemiller, Kefauver; similar bill to be introduced in Senate.	Ask your Congressmen to support this bill.
Anti-Poll-tax Bill HR 7	Would end polltax payments in seven southern states.	Passed by House, pigeon-holed in Senate.	Wire Senators to force vote, fight filibuster and pass bill.
Gwynne Bill HR 2788	Changes statute of limitations, would upset workers' claims on wage-hour and other cases.	Passed by House; now on Senate calendar for possible early vote.	Wire your Senators to vote against bill.

What's Doing On Capitol Hill

Congress, about ready to wind up one of the most sterile sessions in years, is cantering through a variety of important bills. House and Senate will probably adjourn by the end of this week.

It is unlikely that highly important labor and social legislation will be passed before the Congressmen head to their home districts to round up votes for the coming elections.

Here's a check-list on some of the important items on the Congressional calendar:

ATOMIC ENERGY: A joint conference committee has worked out a compromise on the Atomic Control bill which Sen. McMahon (D. Conn.), sponsor of the measure, calls "satisfactory."

The conference knocked out most of the House provisions aimed at setting up joint military-monopoly corporation control.

Most important, the atomic commission will be in civilian hands, and will have wide powers for using out newest, most potentially important asset in the public interest.

PUBLIC HOUSING: Pres. Truman has finally advised Congress of the "urgency" of passing the Wagner-Ellender-Taft public housing bill. Approved by the Senate, the bill has been a-mouldering in the House Banking Committee, thanks to obstructionism by the Republicans and inactivity by the Democrats.

This bill must pass if the nation is to work itself out of the current housing mess. Wire your Congressman and Rep. Spence (D. Ky.), Banking Committee chairman, today. Demand fast action so that the bill may be voted upon before Congress adjourns.

POLL TAX: Sen. Wayne Morse (R. Ore.), scared the shirts off a good many Senators last week when he tacked an anti-polltax amendment to the tidelands oil bill.

Poll taxers and northern reactionaries, who have used the rider method against labor on a dozen occasions, screamed with false outrage.

However, Sen. Barkley has promised that H.R. 7 will come up for debate and vote before adjournment. Wire your Senators today to vote for a short debate—and to vote for the bill. Send your wire NOW!

How They Voted

In an early issue, The CIO NEWS will carry a complete voting record of the Senate and House of Representatives on many important bills of this session of Congress.

The record will appear as a special supplement of The CIO NEWS, and will contain a check-list on what happened to labor-sponsored legislation.

The supplement will be available for special bulk distribution at low prices.

'AMERICA IS ON TRIAL'

Two Negroes and their wives were shot to death this week by lynchers at Monroe, Ga. Mary Frances Boyce, sister of May Dorsey, one of the victims, is comforted by the Rev. James Maddox (right), as they look at Mrs. Dorsey's body. Her husband's body is at the left. CIO demanded apprehension and trial of the murderers, said "America itself is on trial." For details, see page 2.

PROTEST

TO TRUMAN

Delegations from Negro organizations marched this week to the White House, in Washington, D. C., to protest to President Truman the lynching of two Negro men and their wives at Monroe, Ga.

FIFTEEN lynchings since January 1! Six in the last month!

An aroused nation bitterly protested this week the latest mass murder—that of two Negro men and their wives who were bound and riddled with bullets by a gang of 30 white men in Georgia.

CIO and other liberal groups by the hundreds demanded that President Truman act immediately to apprehend the killers of Roger Malcolm, farmhand, and George Dorsey, a World War II veteran, at Monroe, Ga.

Nearly $30,000 in rewards have been offered for information leading to arrest of the lynchers—$5,000 of it by the CIO Natl. Maritime Union.

The crime that rocked the nation was followed within the week by the murders of two other Southern Negroes:

1. Harrison Johnson, sharecropper, who was shot six times and beaten with a gun butt near Eatonton, Ga. Tavernkeeper John Holt, accused of the killing, said Johnson attempted to attack him and his family with a knife. Eatonton officials were unable to describe or identify the knife.

2. Leon McTatie, tenant farmer, who was whipped to death by six white men near Lexington, Miss. The men accused McTatie of stealing a saddle. He denied it. The persons who stole the saddle later confessed, Sheriff W. L. Murtagh, said.

Protests to President Truman and Attorney General Clark from CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, chairman of the Natl. CIO to Abolish Discrimination, urged that "the full powers of your administration be used to supplement the efforts of the admittedly impotent local officials to apprehend and promptly bring to justice those guilty."

Carey said: "The time for expressing shame has gone. Prompt and effective action by your administration is demanded now, in order to prevent a continued domination of an intolerant, irresponsible government, false to its duty as an elected government, operating on the theory that nothing can be done when a mob of citizens sets aside the orderly process of justice to mete out its own punishment and to force upon an unwilling public its code of social behavior.

"Your office, our theory of law and justice and America itself is on trial. We cannot demand justice in Poland and other parts of the world in the face of the abdigation of responsibility by our elected officials sworn to uphold the laws and Constitution of the U. S."

Clark said that President Truman, who has not issued a statement personally, has "expressed to me his horror at the crime, and his sympathy for the families of the victims.

"He has asked," continued Clark, "that the Dept. of Justice report its progress in the investigation and proceed with all its resources to investigate this and any other crimes of oppression to ascertain if any Federal statute can be applied to the apprehension and prosecution of the criminals."

Both state, and Federal officials (who do not have authority in local murder cases) were investigating, but were hampered by a tied-tongue tradition that makes it "inadvisable" for white or Negro people in the South to expose lynchers.

It was reported that the leader and five of the mob who lynched the two Negro couples have been identified, but action is impossible now in the absence of conclusive evidence.

There was one witness, J. Loy Harrison, prosperous white farmer, who had freed Malcolm from jail on a $600 bond.

Malcolm had been accused of stabbing a former employer. Malcolm and Dorsey were employed on Harrison's farm. He described them as good workers.

Harrison, after freeing Malcolm, drove the Negro couples toward his farm, but was stopped on the road by the white gang which forced the Negroes out of the car, took them to a nearby field, and shot them, Harrison said. Harrison declared he did not know the names of any of the murderers.

Demonstrations throughout the nation and a march by the Natl. Negro Congress of nearly a thousand people to the White House in Washington protested the lynchings. A rally by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare drew more than 2,000 people in the nation's capital.

The Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People offered $10,000 reward for the apprehension of the Monroe murderers, matching a sum posted by Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia.

Meanwhile, the Ku Klux Klan, which has instigated lynchings in the past, was under attack.

Clark said Federal agents are investigating the KKK in seven states.

N. Y. State, meantime, outlawed the Klan by court order, turning over a list of the secret organization's 1,000 officers and members to the FBI for action.

In Kentucky, the state filed suit in circuit court asking immediate dissolution of the KKK charter on the grounds that the organization was a "lawless, seditious one of Nazi tendency, whose sole purpose is to create division and dissension in the U. S."

Polltax Upheld

A PRESENT FOR BILBO

SENATORS from the seven polltax states, banding together to keep their power, succeeded this week in preventing a vote on HR 7, which would have outlawed the tax and probably would have resulted in the election of more liberal Congressmen from many southern districts.

The test came on a motion to apply the rule of cloture—limited debate—to the polltax discussion. Cloture can be adopted only by a two-thirds vote. Thirty-nine Senators voted for it, 33 against—far short of two-thirds.

Since the southern Senators have promised a filibuster if the bill comes up, it appears likely that the bill is dead for this session of Congress.

Twenty-three Democrats, 15 Republicans and one Progressive voted for cloture (R). Twenty-six Democrats and seven Republicans voted against (W). Twenty-four Senators did not vote (NV).

WHILE VETS HUNT HOMES!

WHAT happens when the demands of millions of veterans and workers for better homes run up against the opposition of the real estate interests, the knifing tactics of Republican Congressmen and a lack of energy upon the part of the Democrats?

The answer was spelled out in one-syllable words last week. The bill was killed.

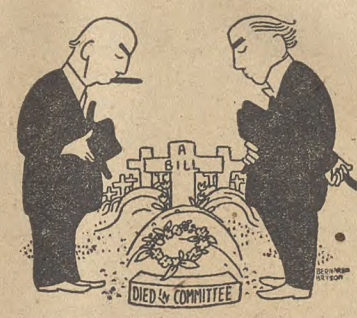
The decision came in the House Banking & Currency Committee, which had had the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill on its docket for months. The Committee decided that it would be unable to report out the bill in time for action by the current session of Congress.

While the committee concluded its pondering, scores of representatives from local real estate interests were clamoring for a chance to get their speeches on the record—most of them aiming to prove that public housing in the midst of the nation's worst homes crisis was socialism.

Failure to get action on the W-E-T bill—even though President Truman belatedly called upon Administration forces on Capitol Hill to hurry it through—brought a prediction from Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt that the entire veterans homes emergency project will be jeopardized.

Wyatt said that the Natl. Housing Agency had relied on the W-E-T bill "to provide vitally needed rental housing, particularly for veterans in the low and middle income brackets. It makes our job that much harder, and in the end, if we are to meet the goals of the emergency program as well as meeting the housing problems of the nation as a whole, we must have such legislation," he added.

"If a special session of Congress is called, we hope and expect that the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill will be high on the calendar. If there is no special session, we will ask for this legislation as soon as the Congress is convened in regular session."



How the big vested interests of the real estate industry consider the situation was revealed in a statement by Herbert Nelson of the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards, who termed the demands for a public housing bill "a clever propaganda phrase."

In Congress liberal Rep. Charles Savage (D. Wash.) warned his colleagues that the House would have difficulty in providing alibis for their inaction to the hard-pressed vets.

"Our explanation that we did not have time to act on this bill will not satisfy the veteran who spends hours out of each day seeking a home.

"Let us recognize frankly that we are in this position because of the calculated opposition of certain highly organized real estate interests to any realistic housing program. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent by the real estate lobby to defeat the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill. . . .

"For the moment, the will of the people, and I truly believe, the will of Congress have been nullified by a subtly conceived strategy of filibuster and obstruction by the reactionaries on the committee."

And Rep. Rowan (D. Ill.) commented that the "great mass of veterans, those who can pay no more than $5,000 or $6,000, those who are not prepared to buy at all and those in the lowest-income group who need public low-rent housing—for all these veterans, the W-E-T bill will remain as 'must' legislation."

GRAVEYARD CONGRESS

THE last session of Congress has been chiefly noteworthy for smothering, strangling, cutting up and burying major legislation urgently needed for the welfare and security of the American people.

The murder of price control was one of its worst crimes. But it has also been responsible for burying housing, health, anti-polltax, FEPC and 65c minimum wage legislation, and for many other offenses against the public interest.

As they pass, on their way home, through the graveyard they have filled with the people's frustrated hopes, the reactionary majority of Congressmen may well try to whistle to keep up their courage. For, between now and November, they must make an accounting to the people they have wronged.

On the other hand, the minority of progressive Congressmen who fought a good fight on all these issues can point to their records and say, "We fought for you, now fight for us—and send more like us to Congress."

The CIO NEWS has published the voting records of both Senate and House on each major issue, as action was taken. It is now preparing, in cooperation with the CIO Legislative Department and Political Action Committee, to publish a special supplement in which these records will be assembled together.

If the voters are to get the action they want from the next Congress, they must study the records of their Congressmen and Senators on all matters which vitally affect our interests. They must also ask new candidates how they stand on these issues.

Only so can we vote intelligently and not be tricked into voting for our enemies by campaign oratory and the raising of false and inconsequential issues.

ANOTHER SURRENDER

THE failure of the Senate to act on the anti-polltax bill is another disgraceful surrender to reactionary minority rule.

Everybody knows that this bill, repeatedly passed by the House, would be enacted if it actually came to a Senate vote.

But a small polltax minority has been able to defeat the will of the majority by filibusters and other maneuvers to prevent a vote.

It has only succeeded, however, through the collusion and appeasement policies of proclaimed opponents of the polltax, who could easily squelch a filibuster and pass the bill if they all voted for a cloture motion to limit debate.

There is some encouragement, however, in the fact that for the first time a majority of the Senate voted for cloture on this issue, though the vote of 39 to 33 still fell short of the necesary two-thirds majority.

So long as 10 million Americans are effectively denied the right to vote by the polltax, this issue will and must be kept alive.

The polltax is one of the chief reasons why Congress so repeatedly fails to reflect the progressive wishes of most Americans.

A Gallup survey shows that only 55% of adult American citizens voted in the last elections, as compared with 80% of the citizens in the recent French and Italian elections, 76% in Britain and 74% in Canada.

The polltax is one of the reasons for this sad commentary on American democracy. But it is not the only reason.

If we are to abolish the polltax and make our democarcy really effective, many more voters will have to do their democratic duty and turn out to the polls. To get out the vote is one of PAC's main aims. Let's get behind it.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

JUVENILE question of the week: "O Pa, is OPA better than No-PA—or should it be pronounced Oh Pay?"

Ask your Congressman, Junior. After all the price raises he ordered OPA to make, all I know is that I'm left with No Pay.

•

HAVING RAPED price control and fathered an illegitimate inflation, Congress decided on a somewhat belated marriage to legitimize its offspring.

Then it left OPA, without alimony, trying to make it responsible for inflation hereafter.

•

AFTER A DEPARTING Congress has left behind it footprints on the prostrate body of labor, now comes Mr. Robert Wason, president of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, proclaiming that labor unions have become a "super-government."

The NAM must be a "super-duper-government" then.

•

SUCH HUMILITY, Mr. Wason!

The NAM says to Congress, "Destroy price control," and Congress meekly obeys.

The NAM demands more profits, and pronto. Congress nearly trips in its haste to abolish the excess profits tax.

The NAM frowns on full employment, health, housing, minimum wage legislation. Congress says, "Perish the thought!"

The NAM loves the anti-labor Case and Hobbs bills, and Congress says, "Me too."

Each time the NAM takes snuff, Congress sneezes.

It has been to your NAM, Mr. Wason, like a mid-Victorian wife, "who trembles with joy when you give her a smile, and bursts into tears at your frown."

•

AND YET, with what unctuous humility, Uriah Wason, do you disclaim all earthly power and say labor is the "super-government!"

We dub you Uriah, since you must be modeling your NAM career on the famous success story of the so "humble" Uriah Heap. Just so humble did he proclaim himself each time he extended his grasping dominion over his superiors."

•

OR PERHAPS you and your big-business associates have been reading about another Dickens' character, the widow lady who always got her way, and had the rest of the household waiting on her hand and foot, by constantly bewailing that she was "a poor lone body that nobody loves."

•

WHILE BIG BUSINESS bewails that nobody loves it, and that labor is getting all the governmental affection, it is very comfortably improving its star-boarder status in our national household.

A Commerce Dept. report on profits for the first quarter of this year reveals that, in some industries, "production and sales broke all previous records and, with the elimination of the excess profits tax and some reduction in other corporate levies, it was almost inevitable that net earnings would reach new highs."

Despite the big strikes during the first quarter, Poor's Investment Advisory Service reports that "almost half the manufacturing companies included in the tabulation showed higher first-quarter profits after taxes than a year ago, and more than a fourth of those with increases had gains exceeding 100%"

Standard & Poor's Outlook predicts both "high corporate profits and more liberal dividend payments." It also declares that "profits in prospect for industrial corporations generally over the next few years are likely to make 1929 and 1937 look small by comparison."

•

AS FOR "super-government" labor, to use another Dickens' analogy, it has been getting the kind of treatment accorded to Oliver Twist in Dotheboys Hall.

How horrified was the schoolmaster who was "doing the boys," when Oliver Twist asked for a second helping of the weak gruel, which was all the boys got!

And how shocked were the profiteers at labor's "exorbitant demands," when the CIO asked higher wages to maintain the workers' take-home pay!

Yet the June issue of "The Labor Market," published by the U. S. Employment Service, reports that the settlement of most major labor disputes "left the average factory worker, who had three dependents, with about 11% less 'real' wages—purchasing power—in March, 1946, than he had the year before."

LABOR'S WORLD

EXPERIENCES in the Soviet Union during the recent meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions have been the subject of recent articles by two of the CIO delegates—Sec. Treas. James B. Carey, writing in the New Republic, and UAW-CIO Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas, writing in the union's monthly, Ammunition.

Thomas, acknowledging that he doesn't pretend to be an expert after 10 days' visit, found much to interest him in the Soviet auto workers union.

"No closed shops exist in Soviet industry," he wrote. "This does not create much of an organizational problem for the unions. Since the union administers the health, safety, social security, educational, cultural and vacation benefits for Soviet workers, the incentive for union membership is very strong indeed.

"The union in the Stalin auto plant also has charge of the very large and well-equipped summer camp run for the benefit of the workers' children. All of the kids are given at least one month at the camp during this summer.

"THERE are few strikes in Soviet factories, although the existence of the right to strike is very strongly emphasized. While I was in Moscow, the trade union papers were full of criticism for the leadership of the local union in one plant for failure to take strike action.

"It appeared that this local leadership has been fighting for some months to improve ventilation for workers in one of the plant's departments. They had run up against a stone wall of resistance from plant management. Their decision to avoid strike action and to carry the grievance up through channels to top union and industry officials was blasted as disloyalty to their workers.

"Plant management came in for some hot criticism, too, and was, I understand, demoted to a less important assignment."

The average Russian, Thomas commented, doesn't know "a great deal" about what is going on in the U. S.; "he knows as little about us as we know about him, although we probably have a big edge when it comes to misinformation."

SEC.-TREAS CAREY commented that he had noticed no visible evidence of the so-called "Iron Curtain" on his trip to Moscow, and talked of the willingness to join in compromise resolutions exhibited by the Soviet union leaders at the WFTU meeting.

He spoke of the different viewpoints of persons living under the Communist regime, and cited the case of a professional woman who had heard of the recent maritime labor dispute in the U. S.

She couldn't understand why—since the unions and the public were strong in support of the U. S. maritime workers' wage demands—the employers wouldn't grant the requested wage increases.

Carey contrasted the success of the WFTU meeting, with its atmosphere of cooperation and compromise, with less successful international conferences of government agencies.

★ ★ ★

LOMBARDO Toledano, head of the Latin American Federation of Labor, took time out recently to nail lies in the Mexican press that he had returned from the Moscow meeting of the WFTU with instructions from the Soviet government to "begin a great popular crusade against the U. S., thus breaking the cordial friendship existing among all the peoples of the western hemisphere."

The Mexican labor leader pointed out that the future of the Good Neighbor Policy "will not depend upon us or upon other Latin Americans, but upon the government of the U. S. The strongest government in this hemisphere is the one that will have to decide whether it does or does not want our friendship."

The prime aim of Latin American labor—and one with which CIO delegates to the ILO's hemisphere conference several months ago expressed full sympathy—is to industrialize their countries.

FLASH: AUG. 8—PRICE DAY!

CIO Pres. Philip Murray late this week called on all CIO affiliates to designate Thursday, Aug. 8, as a special day for maximum mobilization throughout the nation by all the friends of price control for the purpose of telling the Price Control Board that it must keep controls on vitally important food commodites.

In his statement, Murray urged all workers to stay on their jobs on August 8, causing no work stoppages or otherwise failing to fulfill contract obligations. He said "a new stage in the fight against inflation has been reached," for the new OPA does not curb inflation, making rises in the cost of living inevitable.

On August 8 labor must join with consumers' groups, veterans' organizations and other groups interested in price control to express by demonstrations "the overwhelming demand of the American people for vigorous application of the price control law," Murray said.

At the same time he called an "enlarged conference" of leading officials from each CIO international union, all regional directors, and representatives of state and city CIO groups, to meet at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, Aug. 15.

A CIO vice presidents' meeting was scheduled for the morning of Aug. 14. A CIO-PAC parley with all state CIO leaders will be held the afternoon of Aug. 14 to discuss political action problems with particular reference to the November elections.

10 YEARS OF FRANCO

★ ★ ★

HIS FASCIST RECORD

FRANCISCO Franco, 10 years dictator of Spain, is a man who has put his views squarely on the record. Some of them:—

● "I stand ready at your side, entirely and decidedly at your disposal, united in a common historical destiny."—Letter to Hitler, Feb. 26, 1941.

● "The German, Italian and Spanish revolutions are phases of the same general movement of rebellion,"—Speech to Spanish Falange, Oct. 7, 1942.

● "Spain will have the structure of totalitarian regimes such as Italy and Germany. It will break with the liberal institutions which have poisoned the people. The patterns of Italy and Germany will, of course, be our inspiration."—Statement to United Press, July 1937.

● "The Axis is now a triangle comprising Germany, Italy and Spain."—Speech, July 17, 1941.

RALLY AGAINST FRANCO—CIO

TEN years ago this month General Francisco Franco inaugurated his revolt against the democratic government of Spain—a revolt that succeeded only after three years of bitter fighting, material help from Hitler's Germany and Mussolini's Italy, and the employment of thousands of savage Moors against the Spanish people.

This week CIO lent its full support to the demand of world labor and progressive groups to force the ouster of the shoddy Franco regime, which is relying on indecisive action and short memories on the part of the democratic countries to keep it in power.

In a letter to all CIO affiliates, Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey forwarded copies of the recent resolution of the World Federation of Trade Unions against the Franco regime—a resolution which was approved by the CIO executive board at its meeting in July.

The CIO Board statement declared:

"The CIO reaffirms its position with regard to urging our government to break relations with Franco Spain, and that CIO organize meetings for the purpose of gaining support to this program."

Carey's letter to the affiliated unions noted that the resolution "does not call for any work stoppages, but does recommend the holding of public meetings to gain support of our efforts to prevail upon our government that it should break off relations with Franco Spain, and recognize the democratic Republican government as the legitimate one."

Instructions are being forwarded to all CIO regional directors by Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood to "call anti-Franco meetings or undertake other suitable activities consistent with the local situation" in cooperation with representatives of the international unions.

THE FRANCO regime is "unconstituational and illegal" in the eyes of world labor. A strong resolution passed by the World Federation of Trade Unions at its executive committee meeting two months ago in Moscow "reaffirmed" labor's opposition and declared the regime came into being through a "coup d'etat."

The WFTU expressed its belief that "it is essential to put a speedy end to this survival of fascist dictatorship after the military defeat of nazism and fascism."

The resolution recommended that each national trade union affiliate of the WFTU call upon their governments to break relations with Spain. It invited the national affiliates to mark the month between July 18 and August 14 — "the anniversary of Franco's aggression against the Spanish Republican"—by demonstrations, resolutions or other forms of union activity.

The WFTU urged the United Nations to declare Franco and his regime outlawed and to call upon member nations to recognize the democratic Republican government as the legal and constitutional government of Spain.

It added a plea to the UN to invite that government-in-exile to the fortchoming meetings of the UN's General Assembly in New York this September.

ALABAMA VICTORY

REP. John Sparkman of Alabama, who had demonstrated a strong progressive voting record in the House of Representatives, probably will be sitting on the Senate side of Capitol Hill when Congress reconvenes in 1947.

Sparkman galloped well ahead of four opponents to secure a plurality in the special election to fill the vacancy created by the death of Sen. John Bankhead a few months ago. However, under Alabama laws, a run-off will be necessary.

The Congressman, who had vigorous PAC support, polled more than 81,000 votes—close to the combined total of his opponents, on the basis of nearly complete returns.

Opposing candidates were Rep. Frank Boykin, State Senator James H. Simpson, Ted Allen and Thomas H. Maxwell.

In Tennessee Sen. Kenneth McKellar, strongly supported by the high-powered Memphis city machine of "Boss" Crump, won the Democratic primary over Edward Carmack, who had CIO-PAC's backing.

State PAC Chairman W. A. Copeland said that labor accepted its defeat at the Tennessee polls "without rancor or bitterness." He added, in obvious reference to the Crump machine's stranglehold control of Memphis and the state capital, that "it should be apparent to all that something should be done in Shelby County (Memphis) to return the elections to the people."

Six runoffs in Texas August 24 will decide Democratic nominees for the governorship and five Congressional races. The July 27 primaries renominated all incumbents seeking reelection except Rep. John Mansfield, oldest member of Congress at 85, who will be in the runoff.

A foursome, composed of Reps. Fritz Lanham, Sam Russell, Hatton Sumners and Luther A. Johnson, did not seek reelection, and progressives are vying for the nomination in each of those districts.

The battle for the governorship will involve Beauford Jester, attorney and farmer, and Homer P. Rainey, a liberal and former president of the University of Texas.

An estimated 90,000 Negroes voted for the first time in the primary which polled a record total of over a million ballots.

Oklahoma deposed three of its bitterest Congressional OPA opponents in a runoff primary: Representatives Lyle Boren, Jed Johnson and Victor Wickersham. A fourth, Paul Stewart, did not enter the race.

The rest of the country will regard with interest, too, the August 3 primaries in Kentucky where popular reaction to the current Senate investigation of Rep. Andrew May's efforts in behalf of a munitions combine will be mirrored in the ballots.

Also that day CIO-PAC candidate Enos A. Axtell will enter a three-cornered race, in Kansas City, Missouri, in an attempt to dismount Rep. Roger C. Slaughter, who as a member of the House Rules Committee, has used his position bottle up progressive legislation.

Voters in Kansas, New Hampshire and West Virginia will be beating paths to the polls on August 3 also, with emphasis on the last-named state where Sen. Harley Kilgore, a fighting progressive, is up for re-nomination.

THEY'LL 'REMEMBER' IN NOVEMBER!

Registration last week in New Castle County, Del., added over 3,000 voters to the county lists, after an active campaign to get-out-and-register by New Castle County CIO Council.

Rural registration increased by 1,774, and urban registration by 1,908 with four districts unreported.

"MAIZIE, THROW HIM BACK — IT'S DRIPP."

PAC TO CALL 45 KEY CITY PARLEYS

REFUSAL of Congress to heed the people's demand for a strong OPA has brought the question of politics to the dinner table of every American home.

Thus spoke CIO's Political Action Committee this week in N. Y. City, in announcing a plan for meetings in 45 key cities to take the issues to the people before the November election.

A meeting of the PAC executive board, attended by Director Jack Kroll and board members George Addes, Julius Emspak, David J. McDonald and William Pollock, declared:

"The American people know today responsibility for the tremendous rise in living costs, and the unbridled inflation now threatening the nation despite the patch quilt OPA law finally enacted, rests directly upon those members of the Congress who were deaf to the needs of the people and gave heed only to the profit-mad representatives of big business.

"They know that the only answer to the failure of Congress to enact an effective OPA law and to approve other basic legislation designed to advance the security of all Americans lies in an aroused and understanding electorate in November.

"The American people do not wish to see repeated the experience of the 1920's when runaway inflation ruined the standards of workers and farmers, resulted in mass unemployment, and finally, the world's worst depression and war.

"They have it in their power in the year 1946 to determine whether we shall have a Congress responsive to the best interests of the masses of Americans, or whether it shall continue to represent monopoly and the vested interests of the few.

"The CIO Political Action Committee is determined to intensify its efforts to bring the vital issues of the 1946 campaign to the people and to assist in organizing them for effective action designed to elect progressive candidates who will serve the people's interests.

"Its immediate task is the mobilization of the six million members of the CIO for increased political activity.

"Registration of every eligible voter in remaining primary elections and the November 5 general election, the guaranteeing of a large vote on Election Day and acceleration of the dollar voluntary contribution drive are activities earmarked for concentration.

"To effect this mobilization and organization of CIO strength, the Executive Board is planning to hold a meeting of regional and state CIO leaders in Washington on August 12.

"This will be followed by meetings in approximately 45 key cities throughout the country in which members of the PAC executive Board will participate.

"Out of such functions will come the planning and action, which combined with the efforts of other forward-looking organizations and individuals, will result in a cooperative effort to unseat reaction from the Halls of Congress."

EX-CIO EDITOR NOMINATED

Graham Dolan, formerly publicity director and editor for the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter workers, this week was nominated unopposed as Democratic candidate for the Colorado house of representatives by the Jefferson county, Colo., Democratic assembly. A veteran of World War II, Dolan is editor of the progressive Denver weekly, Challenge. He has pledged to rid the legislature of "big cattle and big mining interests" if elected.

President Truman last week nominated Ewan Clague, veteran government economist, to head the Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. CIO and AFL research experts praised the appointment of Clague, who formerly served as director of the bureau of employment security of the Social Security Board.

'46 ELECTIONS: 28 DOWN AND MORE TO GO

LABOR'S political observers are beginning to see the much-hoped-for "new face on Congress" taking shape. A glance over the political campaigns throughout the country revealed that of labor's bitterest Congressional enemies 28 have already relinquished their seats—voluntarily or involuntarily.

With 30 primaries over, it is already possible to count eight anti-labor Senators out of the 80th Congress, six ousted in primaries and two declining to seek renomination. In view of the fact that only 31 members of the Senate face reelection this year, progressive voters may well look to 1947 with optimism.

Members of the Upper House ousted in primaries or nominating conventions include Senators Charles Andrews (D. Fla.), George Radcliffe (D. Md.), Burton K. Wheeler (D. Mont.) Henrik Shipstead (R. Minn.) Raymond Willis (R. Ind.), and Charles Gossett (D. Idaho). Senators Peter Gerry (D. R. I.) and Thomas C. Hart (R. Conn.) did not seek reelection.

Majority of the displacements occurred south of the Mason-Dixon line, where unprecedented numbers of voters—both Negro and white—are showing a political awakening. It points up a growing dissatisfaction with the old regime and must ring ominously in the ears of old-line politicians, accustomed to returning to their seats virtually unchallenged term after term.

Labor opposition, combined with that of progressive civic groups, is acknowledged to have been the determining factor in the decision of Sen. Gerry and Reps. Fritz Lanham, Sam Russell, Hatton Sumners and L. A. Johnson (D. Texas) not to seek renomination.

The list of reactionaries in both houses who will not return includes 11 Republicans and 17 Democrats as follows:

Senators Charles Andrews (D. Fla.), George Radcliffe (D. Md.), Burton K. Wheeler (D. Mont.), Peter Gerry (D. R. I.), Henrik Shipstead (R. Minn.), Raymond Willis (R. Ind.), Thomas C. Hart (R. Conn.), and Charles Gossett (D. Idaho).

Representatives H. Street Baldwin (D. Md.), Zebulon Weaver (D. N. C.), Jed Johnson, Lyle Boren, Victor Wickersham, and Paul Stewart (D. Okla.), Malcolm Tarver, John Gibson (D. Ga.), Pat Cannon (D. Fla.), Jessie Sumner (R. Ill.), Brazilla C. Reece (R. Tenn), James Wolfendon, J. Roland Kinzer, Robert Rodgers and Howard E. Campbell (R. Pa.), Clare B. Luce (R. Conn.), Henry Dworshak (D. Idaho), Frank Carlson (R. Kans.), James Curley (D. Mass.) and Thomas Burch (D. Va.).

Of equal concern to local PAC groups as the task of cleaning out reactionaries is the problem of retaining their forward-looking Congressmen.

Only one progressive incumbent has failed of renomination to date—Rep. Luther Patrick in Alabama.

Georgia progressives are battling the outdated county unit vote system, which has "frisked" liberal Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin out of her victory, as she puts it. After securing the necessary 8,000 names on a petition, her name will appear on the ballot as an independent, and the choice between her and James Davis will rest with the voters on November 5.

Amputee veterans want cars. Patients from Forest Glen Hospital storm the Old House Office Building, in Washington, D. C., protesting the House Veteran's Committee hold-up of a bill which would grant cars to all veterans suffering leg amputations or paralysis of the legs. The House committee reported out a bill which limited the free automobiles to above-the-knee amputees and vets who have lost the power of locomotion from above the knee. See story below.

LEAVE PAY VICTORY

SPURRED on by veterans organizations and the CIO, Congress has passed the GI terminal leave bill aimed at removing one of the major "caste system inequalities" of the war.

Five-year bonds, whose total value runs over two and a quarter billion dollars, will be distributed to enlisted vets for the furlough time which they earned in service but never used. Army statisticians figure that the average vet will receive about $165.

The bonds are negotiable only in payment for life insurance premiums. If not used for this purpose, they will pay 2½% until they mature in 1951.

Payment will be made on the basis of unused furlough time at the rate of 2½ days a month at the rate of pay upon discharge from the services, plus 70c a day subsistance and $1.25 a day living allowance for married vets.

CARS—NOT CRUTCHES—NEEDED!

"MY fiance lost a leg at Iwo Jima. He has been wonderful in readjusting himself, but a means of getting around is now his greatest problem."

A Washington, D. C., girl wrote those lines in a letter to a local paper. The problem isn't that of only one couple. It affects an estimated 19,000 vets who have lost the use of their legs while in the country's service.

Last week, while a bill for the relief of the amputees was in process of being strangled by the hidebound House Rules Committee, vets had about given up hope of relief from the current session of Congress.

The log-jam was broken by liberal Sen. Magnuson (D., Wash.) in a surprise tactic which forced quick action on the measure. Magnuson offered the substance of the bill—first proposed by Rep. Edith Rogers (R., Mass)—as a rider to an appropriation bill. It was quickly adopted by the Senate, without debate, and approved by a House Conference Committee, thereby practically assuring its passage in the final hours of the Congressional session.

Magnuson's move left the House Rules Committee caught with its bill down. The Rules group had been dallying over a watered-down version of the Rogers bill for several days.

The rider sets up a $30,000,000 fund to give specially equipped auto purchase certificates worth $1,500 to each amputated veteran, as originally proposed by Mrs. Rogers.

Mrs. Rogers (R. Mass.) hadn't reckoned with Rep. Rankin (D. Miss.), chairman of the House Veterans Committee.

Rankin's committee, after sitting on the bill, brought it out in amended form. Vets whose legs were amputated below the knee wouldn't get any car, under the Rankin bill; cars are reserved for men whose legs are amputated above the knee. But the House Conference Committee changed this to provide cars for all vet leg amputees and for others suffering loss of locomotion of their legs.

The bill has caused widespread interest among the wounded veterans, who have expressed a strong appreciation of CIO's efforts to push the measure through Congress at this session.

Helping push the cars-for-vets program were 100 members of the American Veterans Committee in N. Y. City who traveled to Washington for button-hole lobbying of Congressmen. They were joined by amputees from Walter Reed Hospital in the nation's capital.

PROBLEMS, AND BIG!

NOT enough jobs, not enough homes and not enough schools are the three big problems plaguing veterans, a survey by the Brooklyn Veterans Service center in N. Y. City revealed this week.

The center went to vets to get their own idea of the major problems which have sent more than 60,000 of them to the agency since it opened nine months ago. The survey was based on returns from a thousand veterans.

Almost three out of every four veterans who answered the questionnaire were unemployed. Of those unemployed, 28% gave low salary as their reason for not working. Others stated that they did not possess sufficient training and that jobs offered lacked security.

The survey also showed that unemployment was widespread among veterans with pre-service work experience, although those who had not held jobs before the war were hit the hardest.

Nearly one-third said they had a housing problem.

AMPUTEE WAR VETS GET 3 GIFT AUTOS FROM UAW

THREE gleaming new Oldsmobile four-door sedans with special driving equipment for amputee war veterans have been awarded by the CIO Auto Workers to maimed soldiers convalescing at the Percy Jones Hospital in Battle Creek, Mich.

Two of the lucky three were members of AFL unions. The third was not a unionist. They had been chosen by vote of their fellow soldier patients at the veterans hospital in Atlantic City at the time of the UAW convention there last spring as the most deserving recipients of UAW generosity.

Two of the vets had lost one leg and the third was paralyzed from the hips down. The special equipment enables them to drive with the other leg or with the hands in the case of the paralytic.

Presenting the cars were Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the UAW, Chairman Richard E. Reisinger of the UAW veterans committee and Director Emil Mazey of its veterans department. Reuther announced that the union was pushing its plan to have Congress vote special cars for all veteran amputees and disabled.

"The first thing we'll do with the cars," said Cpl. Walter Bernstein, "is to give the other vets at Battle Creek a ride." He is a member on military leave of the AFL Garment Workers.

"The UAW is the most wonderful organization we have come in contact with," beamed Pfc. Donald Murray, a member since 1940 of the AFL Teamsters.

His enthusiasm for the UAW was echoed by 1st Lt. Austin Kelly who in civilian life worked for N. Y. City in the department of docks.

All three men relearned how to drive at Atlantic City and have had additional lessons at Battle Creek. They expect to drive their cars home when discharged from army medical care.

HALF OF U. S. FAMILIES GET LESS THAN $2,000 A YEAR

NEXT time somebody tries to tell you that "labor got rich during the war," you can throw the book of government statistics at them.

ITEM: Half of all the families in America have an income of less than $2,000 a year. More than two-thirds of the families have less than $3,000 a year.

ITEM: The top 10% of our nation's families held 62% of the value of all U. S. bonds, 71% of the value of all savings accounts, 79% of the value of all checking accounts. That top 10% held 60% of all the total liquid assets.

ITEM: The lowest 60% of American families held 7% of the total liquid assets.

ITEM: The top 10% of American families—those with incomes of $4,450 and up—received 29% of the 1945 income.

ITEM: The 30% of families making over $3,000 received almost 58% of the total income.

The figures were prepared in a special study of the Federal Reserve Board and the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economies.

Most of the savings are accumulated among the small group of most prosperous families, the study said, while one-half of all the families have neither bonds nor savings accounts.

"Although in 1945 the concentration of income was somewhat less pronounced than before the war, about 30% of the spending units of the nation saved nothing out of 1945 income," the report said. "Most of the money saved in 1945 was saved by a small proportion of the people."

Looking into the future, the report predicted that people will save "considerably less in 1946 than they did in 1945, even if incomes are good." Reasons—hope of buying goods that weren't on the market last year, and the feeling that "higher prices will compel them to spend more for living expenses."

Total savings in 1945 amounted to 22.8 billion dollars. The top 10%of prosperous families saved 53% of the total. In other words, that small 10% group was able to soak away more than 12 billion dollars in one year.

During that same year, 13% were unable to save anything, and another 17% had to dip into savings to the tune of 2.9 billion dollars.

It was a great war year—for the wealthy!

WAGE 'GAINS' ARE WIPED OUT

"CONGRATULATIONS," Mister! You've taken a 10% wage cut—as of last March. As of today, you've taken at least another 5% or so.

Not in money wages—although your take-home pay has come down from its wartime level; but in "real" wages, which is the statisticians' term for your pay measured in terms of what it will buy.

Source of the statistics in the U. S. Dept. of Labor, whose monthly magazine, "The Labor Market," said:

"Settlement of most labor-management disputes in manufacturing left the average factory worker who had three dependents with about 11% less 'real' wages—purchasing power—in March, 1946 than he had a year before."

Meanwhile, as anyone can see by walking into the neighborhood store, the cost of living has been rising steadily since March. Last month William Wirtz, chairman of the Natl. Wage Stabilization Board, quoted a 4.1% rise in the cost of living; later Bureau of Labor Statistics show the cost rising higher and faster.

Those 18½ cent-an-hour wage increases were a mighty lucky thing for American labor, the statistics show very clearly. Even with them, take-home pay has dropped 8.9% in one years.

In April, 1945, average weekly take-home pay was $47.12.

In April, 1946, average weekly take-home pay was $42.92.

The drop, in spite of wage increases throughout industry, was caused by the end of the war and consequent cutting down of overtime work. During the same period straight time hourly earnings in manufacturing industries increased from an average of 97c to $1.02.

But compared to 1945, you're still behind the eight-ball.

SLICING THE BALONEY THINNER

PROOF of how unsuspecting consumers are being socked with hidden price increases was uncovered in N. Y. City this week in a confidential memo from a nationally known firm giving slice-the-boloney-thinner instructions to managers of its fountain and restaurant concessions in three big chain stores throughout the U. S.

The six-page memo, sent out after OPA was killed July 1, was exposed by Union Voice, N. Y. labor newspaper.

Selling prices are not to be increased on any item where you can achieve the same result by changing the makeup or size, the managers were told. Detailed illustrations were given with the added advice that they survey every item sold and exercise "a little ingenuity" in figuring out how to dupe the customer into thinking he was still getting his money's worth.

Here are a few of the instructions passed on to the managers:

● "Ice cream sandwich—You may have been cutting SEVEN to a quart. By cutting NINE to the quart, you can still sell at your established price and maintain normal markup.

● "Ice cream sundaes—The common practice is to use one No. 30 and one No. 20 scoop of ice cream in making up a 15c sundae. Instead, use one Mel-o-rol or an item similar to Mel-o-rol and you can still prepare a nice sundae, with more ease and less shrinkage. The use of Mel-o-rol will save .035 on the cost.

● Fruit juices—Some stores sell 4 oz. for 5c. It would be better to increase the size to six ounces and sell for 10c.

● "Ice cream sodas—The 10c soda is about out of the picture. If your cost prices indicate a 15c selling price then we suggest that you use a Mel-o-rol instead of bulk ice cream. On your signs advertise that 15c sodas are made with Mel-o-rol. This makes a better soda and will be good value.

● "Malted milk—Most stores serve a 12 oz. glass for 15c. It is suggested that you cut the size to 10 ounces and maintain the 15c price.

● "Hot roast beef sandwich, mashed potatoes, gravy, 25c—By adding cole slaw or sliced tomatoes and serving on a compartment plate, you can make it look like super-value and get 30c."

On items where prices must be increased, the memo orders: "Do not scratch out selling prices on your menus or streamers. Instead make up new menus and new streamers. Most people cannot remember selling prices, except on a few everyday items. Therefore, if you scratch out prices on your menus or streamers, you are then advertising your price increases."

UP, UP, UP, UP, UP, UP

● It was July 19. OPA was 19 days in "limbo." The Bon Marche department store, Seattle, advertised men's suits for $108.50. Commented the New World: "This will undoubtedly tickle the returning serviceman to death. He can take his $100 discharge bonus, borrow $8.50 and have a suit of civies."

● In Detroit, the UAW-CIO and the AFL reported that the cost of meat, fruit, vegetables and dairy products had jumped 32.1% in the 15 days after June 30. Typical increases: butter, 79 to 95c from former ceiling of 68c; porterhouse steak, 73c from ceiling of 55c; pork chops 69c from ceiling of 31c; ground steak 48c from ceiling of 29c.

● In N. Y. City, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported wholesale food prices resumed their advance to reach the highest general level since Jan. 8, 1920. The agency's index for 31 food commodities for the week ended July 30 rose to $5.24—just 6c under the all-time high of $5.30 reached on July 31, 1919.

● In Washington, OPA authorized an 11% retail price hike for men's shirts, shorts and pajamas. A $2.50 shirt will now cost $2.80. Other price boosts are rumored—including a 10% rise in the cost of new cars.

Comptroller General Says:

INDUSTRY STOLE BILLIONS IN THE 'LUSH WAR YEARS'

YOU can blame your high income tax on certain Congressmen, the War Dept. and war profiteers in industry who cooperated to cheat the U. S. Treasury out of billions of dollars during the war.

That was revealed by Comptroller General Linsay G. Warren this week before the Senate Mead Investigating Committee.

"From my seat," said Warren, "it has looked as if everybody and his brother were out to get the government during the lush war years."

Warren declared that under the War Dept's. procedure for settling war contracts, $65 billion in cancelled contracts already had been settled "and the door closed forever on any recovery of over payments by the government."

• "With some high officials of the government the acceptance of entertainment, including cocktail parties, hotel bills and even travel from the contractor, while at the same time drawing travel expense and per diem from the government, was the rule rather than the exception," he said.

• When Congress changed the laws governing placing and auditing of war contracts, it gave military officers power to settle their own contracts. "It has been officially reported to me," Warren said, "that a great many of them constantly fraternize with the contractor after working hours—golfing, dining and wining with them. These reports say that this intimate relationship has a tendency to make them more liberal in their dealings with the contractor."

• Officers have conducted contract settlements and then have left the Army to take high paying jobs with companies affected.

The scope of the graft involved in the $65 billion in closed contracts (and others yet to be settled) was indicated by the fact that Warren's office has recovered in the past fiscal year more than $100 million in "illegal payments."

MUD IN YOUR EYE!

Ex-GIs who had to be satisfied with a little warm beer on some lonely Pacific outpost will be interested to know that back home at least one war contractor was doing all right by the "brass."

Involved was the Erie Basin Metal Products Co., subject of the Senate Mead Committee investigation of the Garsson brothers munitions maze.

The firm spent more than $19,000 in 1943 alone for rum, bourbon and other gifts for high military and other public officials, according to Sen. Mitchell (D., Wash.). The firm, without success, attempted to charge the $19,000 off to the government as "legitimate expenses." Here are the items:

25 gold pen sets	$437
6 pen and pencil sets	720
2 cigarette lighters	376
Liquor and liquor baskets	255
17 cases of bourbon and 14 liquor baskets	823
9 cases of rum	1,399
10 gold pen and pencil sets	918
" "	918
100 cases of liquor	5,363
Gifts and liquor	2,812
" " "	3,080

Total	$19,213

$3 MILLION CONTRACT—NO PLANT

A $3 million contract awarded to a company "not then in existence" was only one of the sensational facts regarding war graft which was caustically criticized this week by a member of the Senate Mead investigating committee.

Corruption of high officials and "traitorous conduct" were assailed by Sen. Mitchell (D. Wash.) in a speech that covered three pages in the Congressional Record.

Involved was the munitions maze of the Garsson brothers—Henry and Murray W.—who operated the Erie Basin Metal Products Co. and the Batavia Metal Products Co.

Firms controlled by the Garssons manufactured most of the Army's 4.2 mortar shells. This ammunition reportedly was defective, and was said to have caused the death of at least 29 GIs and the injury of 83. (See adjoining story).

Discussing the committee hearings, Sen. Mitchell said:

"A $3 million contract was awarded to a company not then in existence, headed by a man without demonstrated experience as a manufacturer and a producer, and whose moral and financial responsibility, if investigated, would have been disclosed to be questionable.

"A million dollars of public funds were overpaid on the termination of a contract with Batavia Metal Products Co." (The Garsson firms obtained $78 million in war contracts).

"Huge sums of money were expended for administrative salaries, travelling expenses and other expenses such as propaganda and entertainment . . .

"The question in my mind is how such fantastic operations could have been possible unless sanctioned by Government officials who failed in their high duty of protecting the public interest and safeguarding the public funds . . .

'The conclusion is inescapable that those favors (extended by officials) were not merely in the nature of courtesies, or more matters which were handled for the contractors, but that they involved outright corruption."

One of the favors done for the Garssons involved Brig. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, who made a special trip to Europe during the war to intercede with General Eisenhower for Capt. Joseph H. Garsson, Murray Garsson's son, who was threatened with court martial proceedings, and subsequently was cleared.

Gen. Waitt carried a letter to Gen. Eisenhower from Congressman May, who exhibited a deep personal interest in the affairs of the Garsson paper empire. The Garssons paid the Cumberland Lumber Co., for which May acted as agent, more than $18,000 during the war. Gen. Waitt described his role as that of "a messenger boy."

'There were," continued Sen. Mitchell, "12 chemical mortar battalions stationed in Europe, but Gen. Waitt had time to visit only two or three, including the one that held Capt. Garsson in custody.

"Garsson, who had been court martialed for flat refusal to carry out a battle order of the regimental commander, was restored to duty and received a Bronze Star for previous meritorious action, which, incidentally, Gen. Waitt pinned on his breast."

KILLED BY OWN SHELLS!

"TO BE killed in combat was bad enough, but when American soldiers were literally murdered as a result of someone's carelessness and greed, then myself and millions of others hope your investigating committee really follows through and brings to justice the war criminals responsible."

That quotation was from one of 50 letters that the Senate Mead Investigating Committee has received from ex-GIs protesting the quality of 4.2 mortar shells, most of which were manufactured by firms connected with the Garsson munitions combine.

The shells, according to the letters, frequently exploded in the muzzles of mortars, in some cases wiping out entire gun crews.

One letter from the former commander of a Chemical Warfare Service Depot in Normandy in 1944 said that so many deaths resulted from defective 4.2 shells that 50 defective lot numbers were "impounded" so that they would not be distributed to gun crews.

"On numerous occasions," he wrote, "we were unable to make any shipments to the front, because all of stock, upwards of 100,000 shells, were all impounded."

The veterans said that the manufacturers of the defective shells could be traced by lot numbers. The Mead committee is investigating.

CIO VS. AFL IN ATOM BALLOT AUG. 20-22

MORE than twenty-thousand men and women who helped build the atomic bomb at Oak Ridge, Tenn., will go to the polls August 20-22 to vote in a Natl. Labor Relations Board election on whether they want to be represented in collective bargaining by a labor union.

The vote will mark the first major clash between CIO and AFL in their drives to organize the unorganized in the South. Both CIO and AFL have been conducting intensive organizing drives at Oak Ridge under conditions unlike those ever encountered before by union organizers.

Organizers have to obtain special "labor" passes from the army. They are not allowed to engage in house-to-house solicitation. They are permitted to hold meetings only under conditions specified by the army.

Until a short time ago, the army would not permit distribution of printed material inside Oak Ridge without first approving it. Then a ban was placed on distribution by organizers of printed material at the gates of production areas. This ban was later removed.

The CIO, using a weekly newspaper, "The Atomic Worker" and a weekly radio program has been waging an aggressive campaign to convince Oak Ridge workers to vote for "one big efficient union of the industrial type" as represented by CIO.

The CIO has also attacked the employment practices of the atomic energy operating companies—Monsanto, Tennessee Eastman and Union Carbide—and the conditions under which Oak Ridge workers are forced to live.

AFL organizers, stationed primarily in Knoxville, issue volumes of handbills and utilize a Knoxville "labor" paper to make bitter attacks upon the CIO, while at the same time they complain bitterly that the army and the CIO are in "cahoots."

'WE WANT ANNUAL WAGE' CIO PACKING HOUSE WORKERS

By NORMAN DOLNICK

"WE are out to get that full paycheck coming in every week of the year," say the CIO Packinghouse Workers as they start negotiating this week for new contracts with the "Big Four" packers.

At preliminary negotiating sessions, the CIO union formally presented its demand for year-round pay "at a minimum of 40 hours per week at the employes' regular rate of pay."

No strangers with the guaranteed annual wage, the CIO packinghouse workers have some 4,000 Hormel workers at Austin, Minnesota, receiving full pay throughout the year.

The Hormel workers are not the only ones to crow about the benefits of a guaranteed wage plan. Local merchants, bankers in Austin and neighboring farmers have all benefited by the packinghouse workers steady income and they are quick to tell you about it.

Since the annual wage was extended to all Hormel workers in 1935, Austin has doubled its population, rid itself of packingtown slums and is a thriving business center.

In addition to the annual wage, CIO packinghouse workers are demanding $1 an hour minimum wage and a cost-of-living bonus.

The minimum wage is intended for packinghouse workers in all sections of the country.

A NEW FEATURE of the union's demand is a cost-of-living bonus designed to compensate the packinghouse workers for any rise in living costs. The bonus is not to be part of the wage structure but is to be paid in addition to the regular wages.

UNION WINS AIR BATTLE

Key plant in Canada's key strike—that of 15,000 CIO Steelworkers—was the scene of an aerial dogfight this week as a union plane successfully made ten runs over the Hamilton works of the Steel Company of Canada, dropping leaflets to 1,500 strikebreaking workers inside despite efforts by a management plane to drive the union craft out of the air.

During the half-hour dogfight which was watched by thousands of Hamilton residents, union pilot Ernie Taylor managed to drop the leaflets even though his plane was considerably out-engined by the company craft.

The leaflets contained "safety passout slips" to give workers inside the plant safe passage through the picket lines.

Meanwhile, as the strike continued in the "Big Three" of the Canadian steel industry—Algoma Steel Co., Dominion Steel & Coal Co. and the Steel Co.—a committee of Canada's House of Commons was expected to make a decision setting the pattern for settlement.

It is expected that the committee will order Canada's three basic steel producers to grant wage increases in the neighborhood of 15c an hour, in line with the union's compromise offer for strike settlement.

Gladys Dickason, vice-president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who was designated last week as an assistant chairman of the CIO's Southern Organizing Committee, succeeding Jack Kroll, also an ACW vice-president, who has become director of the CIO's Political Action Committee.

CIO UNION BLASTS JOHNSTON ARITHMETIC

Hitting at Motion Picture Association President Eric Johnston's recent assertion that "this motion picture industry of ours pays the highest wages in all industry" the CIO Office & Professional Workers made public a letter this week containing the results of a recent budget study conducted among 3,000 motion picture employes in its jurisdiction. The union survey found that:

•44.5% are paid less than $30 a week.

•81.8% are paid less than $40 a week.

•99.0% are paid less than $73 a week.

"At present," continued the study, "we find that a weekly budget for a family of four in N. Y. City should be at least $73.05 after deductions. This figure is conservative because it does not take into account any of the recent price increases."

The letter pointed out that the "exhorbitant salaries of the industry executives and some of its production talent" do not give a true picture of industry wage rates.

Guildsmen Win Harvard Awards

Five newspapermen who won annual Nieman fellowship awards for a year's study at Harvard University are active members of the CIO Newspaper Guild. The awards include a grant of money equal to the recipient's normal income to insure full opportunity for study and research.

Stephen Fischer and Jack Foisie of the San Francisco Chronicle are World War II veterans planning to study government and economics at Harvard. Clark Porteous of the Memphis Press-Scimitar, a veteran and former vice-president of the Memphis Guild, will study social and economic problems of the south.

Remaining two members of the Guild chosen for the Harvard awards are ex-serviceman Jay Odell, Jr., of the Philadelphia Inquirer, and Richard Lauterbach, foreign correspondent for Time Magazine.

This union has given us invaluable support in several instances of this kind. I urge our people to work closely with them. They have worked with the CIO on legislative and PAC matters pretty closely also.

The writer attended the District Conference held in Cleveland, Ohio, on July 27-28 of USA District No. 28 of which Brother Wm. F. Donovan is the District Director. The meeting was enthusiastic and the workers are proud of their union and the membership is determined to build the United Steelworkers more solidly and take an active part in PAC and other affairs in the CIO. While in the City of Cleveland, I briefly addressed the Truck and Trailer Conference of the UAW-CIO who are attempting to unify wages, etc., in the truck and trailer plants throughout the Nation.

IT'S CIO 8 TO 1 IN THE SOUTH

CIO unions have won 10 more collective bargaining elections in the South, Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee reported last week.

"This makes 49 Natl. Labor Relations Board elections we have won since our campaign started," Bittner said.

"During the past week our field men reported that we had lost only one election, which brings our total number of losses to six."

Largest election of the 10 saw the employes of the Magnet Knitting Mills in Clinton, Tenn., vote nearly 2-1 for the CIO Hosiery Workers as their collective bargaining agent.

Other elections won by the CIO were at Swift & Co. in Dallas, Tex.; Cabot Carbon Co., Pampa, Tex.; Lion Chemical Co., El Dorado, Tex.; Texas Pipeline Co., Houston, Tex.; Cherokee Mfg. Co., Palestine, Tex.; Roger Wade Furniture Co., Paris, Tex.; Gaylord Paper Container Co., Atlanta, Ga.; Sallee Brothers, Pocahontas, Ark.; Owosso Mfg. Co., Benton, Ark.; Reliance Mfg. THE NAM CALLS THEM 'DARLING'

STORY AND PHOTOS BY ESTHER HANDLER

TODAY the NAM's union busting drive is being led by two Wisconsin firms, the Allis-Chalmers and the J. I. Case Companies. By arrogantly refusing to bargain with unions at their plants, they are vying with each other for the chance to provide the test case on the constitutionality of the Wagner Act.

Last week the Case Co. had the edge on Allis-Chalmers when a 42-page report was issued by an NLRB trial examiner finding this company guilty of violating the Wagner Act on a number of counts and recommending that it recognize Local 180 of the CIO Auto Workers as bargaining agent of the workers.

MORE than 30,000 workers are affected by these strikes. Case workers have been out for seven months, Allis-Chalmers workers at seven plants have been out for as long as four and one-half months.

Wages, arbitration of all disputes, strengthened grievance procedures and maintenance of membership are the key issues in both Allis-Chalmers and Case strikes. The unions are basing their demands on War Labor Board recommendations.

L. R. Clausen, defiant Case Co. president, who refuses to acknowledge the existence of a union at his plant—although the UAW has been the certified agency of workers there for many years—declared if the NLRB orders him to recognize the union, he will appeal the order. If his appeal is denied, he claims that he will carry his fight "to the Supreme Court if necessary."

It is obvious that the NAM and Wall Street are using the J. I. Case Co. as a guinea pig in their drive to wipe the NLRB off the books. Clausen has been criticized by a number of industrialists for his "short-sighted" labor policy, however, it is no secret that Wall Street is providing the wherewithal to finance this "shortsightedness."

While Allis-Chalmers, often referred to as "America's Krupp," with its enormous reserves and fat war profits, is in a better position to stand on its own feet in this costly campaign to smash the union through a prolonged strike, there is no question that Wall Street is ready to give this company more than mere moral assistance.

The Mellon family has a substantial interest in Allis-Chalmers. Walter Geist, Allis-Chalmers president, is a vice-president of the Nam and one of its most prominent mid-west figures.

From the standpoint of public relations, Geist is smarter than Clausen who flatly refuses to talk to the union. Harold Story, Allis-Chalmers vice-president and labor strategist, put on a great show at the bargaining table. But despite the fanfare and continuous sessions before federal conciliators and special labor department investigators, the net result was the same as if no bargaining had been conducted at all.

Picketing is a serious matter for workers at the Allis-Chalmers Brass Foundries. Here is a typical morning scene at the foundry gate, one of the 15 gates of the huge plant which are picketed around the clock.

Listening intently to the report of the union's bargaining committee following the break-off of negotiations with the company last week is this group of Allis-Chalmers workers, members of the CIO Auto Workers.

The position of the Allis-Chalmers Co. has not changed one iota since negotiations for the current contract began on March 15, 1944. While putting on a good front, the company stopped at nothing to put on smear campaigns against the union and incite picket-line violence. Few labor leaders have been as maligned and misrepresented as the courageous founder and long-time leader of UAW Local 284, at West Allis, Harold Christoffel, now with the armed forces in Japan.

PEOPLE will never forget the bloody battle on 70th St. during the 1941 West Allis strike instigated through terror tactics of the company. Today the company is exercising its "goon" squads on the Norwood, Ohio workers. Having secured an injunction against the CIO Electrical Workers at that plant, the company has attempted a back-to-work movement there. Pickets are beaten frequently by company "goons" and hired thugs.

However, despite intimidation and terrorism, union officials at Norwood report that not more than 200 of the 1800 production workers have become scabs.

Represented by the CIO Automobile, Electrical and Farm Equipment Unions, Allis-Chalmers workers at seven striking plants are planning their strategy jointly through a workers' council and are determined to stick it out until settlement is reached at all of the plants.

FE CONCLAVE HITS CASE, A-C

Sharply worded condemnation of union-busting tactics by reactionary employers in the Allis-Chalmers, Case strikes, marked the first two days of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers convention in Milwaukee, Wis., last week.

FE president Grant Oakes and CIO Director of Organization, Allan Haywood, joined in denouncing the activities of the two companies. A resolution was passed empowering the incoming executive board to plan any action necessary to force settlement of the two strikes in which two other CIO unions, the Electrical Workers and the Autoworkers, are involved.

'SEIZE CASE, A-C PLANTS,' INDIANA CIO URGES

CALLING on President Truman and the Dept. of Labor to seize the Allis-Chalmers and J. I. Case Cos., the Indiana CIO Council Convention pledged to do "all in its power to actively support, morally and financially, the striking workers" in their seven-month struggle against the farm equipment manufacturers. This resolution was supported at the convention with a cash collection of $254.94.

Meeting in Indianapolis, last week, the 521 delegates representing CIO membership in Indiana swept James McEwan and Walter Frisbie back into the presidency and secretaryship of the union council. Pat Reilly, a Gary Steelworker, was chosen as vice-president.

John Brophy, director of CIO Councils, reported on the present status of anti-labor and labor legislation now awaiting Congressional action. Citing the CIO Southern Organizing Drive, Brophy declared that the CIO which had previously organized more than 300,000 Southern workers, was making progress swiftly towards its over-all goal of 1,000,000.

Attacking the government for failure to act in the recent Negro lynchings in Monroe, Ga., the convention demanded immediate action by the Dept. of Justice. Sen. Theodore Bilbo (D. Miss.) was singled out for condemnation in the resolution because of his threats of violence to all Negroes attempting to visit in Mississippi.

Other resolutions passed by the Indiana delegates demanded the removal of all troops from China and a thorough investigation of Ku Klux Klan activities in connection with the outbreaks of anti-Negro violence in the South.

As a means of protecting the workers' standard of living, the Indiana CIO Council delegates proposed a national convention of CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood leaders to plan a common program designed to give the workers this badly needed protection.

Convention delegates voiced strong criticism of Governor Ralph F. Gates for refusing to call a special session of the state legislature to enact a veterans' bonus and decided to battle for the bonus at the next regular session of the legislature, as well as for the extension of benefits under the Employer's Liability and Workmen's Compensation Acts.

ROBOT STOOLIE

It used to be that there was one stool pigeon in the Ford Rouge plant for every ten honest workers but the 10 to 1 ratio proved too expensive to maintain so now they've got a mechanical "stool-pigeon."

Called a "Chronolog" by the Ford Motor Co. and "Dick Tracy" and "Mr. Hitler" by the workers in Department 498 of the plant where the "stool-pigeon" has been installed, the machine is a robot measuring device which records every split second of a worker's time in an eight-hour production period.

It operates on a code dial system. A code letter is used for each element in an operation. It records the actual time used to grind a crankshaft and totals the time used for machine setting and dressing of wheels.

It even records time for personal use such as going to the water fountain, the toilet, etc.

Time—marches on!

PHELPS-DODGE 'GOONS' MUST GO—N. J. CIO

FIVE thousand CIO workers from all parts of New Jersey gathered in a giant protest rally last week before the gates of the Phelps-Dodge plant in Elizabeth, New Jersey, where 2,000 CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers have been on strike since Jan. 4.

The rally, which also received the statewide support of AFL, Railroad and independent unions, sharply attacked the importation of "goons" by the company in an effort to break the strike.

Earlier in the week armed company "strikebreakers" had fired against peaceful pickets and wounded one in the leg. The shooting occurred when a boatload of strikers maintaining a 24-hour water borne picketline, were fired at from the plant by Phelps-Dodge thugs.

The UE applied immediately for John Doe warrants on charges of assault with intent to kill, and is seeking a search warrant to permit entry into the plant to find those responsible for the shooting.

The 2,000 workers of UE Local 441 went off the job in January when Phelps-Dodge consistently refused to negotiate demands for an 18½c hourly wage increase and six paid holidays which the union had already won in other copper-wire plants. The company has rejected negotiations completely and refused to sign a contract since May, 1944.

At a union meeting of 800 members on the night of the shooting, it was voted unanimously to continue until the company is forced to settle. The union points out that in the face of company intimidation, strikebreaking and phoney back to work calls not one member of the local has returned to the plant.

'BIG 3' SPURN CIO AUTO UNION 'FULL PRODUCTION' CONFAB

The auto industry's "big three," Ford, GM and Chrysler, joined last week in rejecting an offer from the CIO Auto Workers to attend a joint labor-management conference to analyze obstacles to full auto production and take steps to eliminate them.

In his letter of invitation to the auto company heads, UAW Pres. Walter P. Reuther, said: "The UAW-CIO has just completed a survey of the current strikes in our industry, and we are at a loss to explain how the existing strikes could seriously retard the achievement of higher production schedules."

Following rejection of the offer union spokesmen, Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes and Vice-Presidents R. J. Thomas and Richard T. Leonard charged that "low production has been chosen as a deliberate policy by important sections of American industry.

"The fact is that the need of the American people for cars over the last six months has been casually sacrificed to management's desire for a postwar show-down with labor and to management's desire for a showdown with government price controllers."

TELLING SECRETS

Most people—young and old—enjoy secrets. Some people like to have secrets so they can tell them. Others really want to keep their secrets to themselves. If your child enjoys being secretive, it's his privilege. Wise parents show no curiosity. They respect the children's rights in this, as in other matters. They know too that confidences should never be forced, demanded—or even expected. Where mutual confidence exists, secrets can easily remain untold.

A FUTURE, UP IN THE AIR

GIRLS! What a job in aviation? The Women's bureau of the Dept. of Labor reports that due to the tremendous expansion taking place in commerical airlines, opportunities for career girls in aviation are greater than ever before.

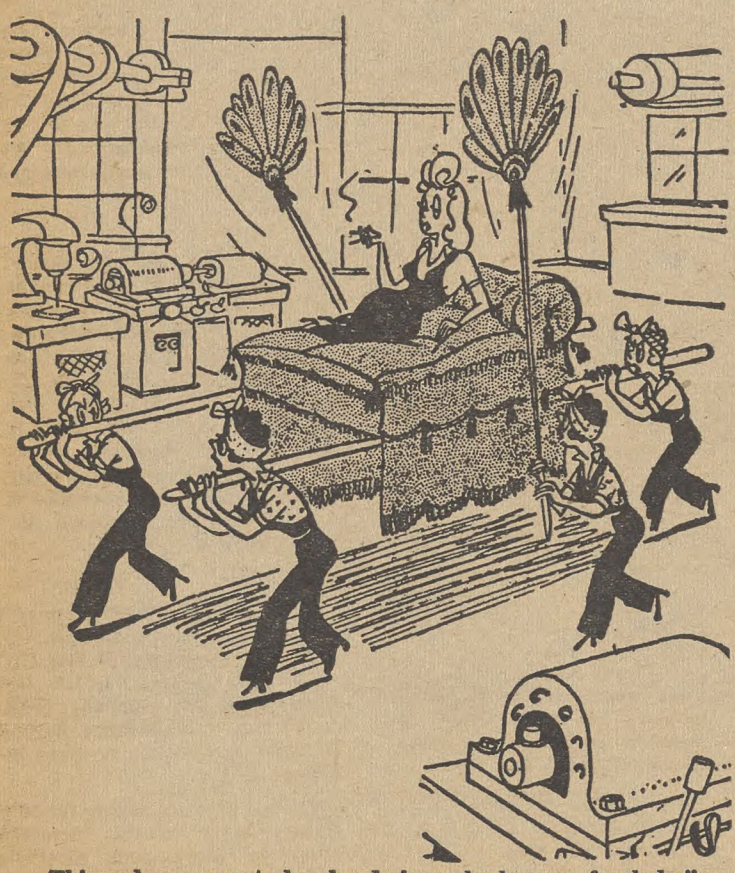
Most glamorous is the hostess or flight stewardess who cares for the needs of the airlines passengers from baby care to meal preparation.

Marriage breaks up the careers of many stewardesses with a turnover rate as high as 50% a year.

Though stewardesses get the publicity, there are still plenty of jobs open for the air minded career girl. Secretarial and receptionist positions are the keys to better jobs in the industry.

The present situation bars women as pilots, for there are 200,000 former Army, Navy and Marine pilots waiting for flying assignments with ccmmerical airlines.

Many women who held jobs as pilots, meteorologists and mechanics during the war have been pushed out by veterans returning from the air forces. However leading women flyers predict that there will be jobs for women pilots in the future, for "individual flying ability is not a question of sex."



Thinge have gone to her head since she became forelady."

WOMEN LOOK AT THE 79th CONGRESS

By EDITH PRATT

Legislative Assistant, United Steelworkers of America, CIO

ON a recent trip home to Connecticut, a friend and neighbor asked, "Why don't you do something about the price of meat?" I, in turn, asked, "Did you write your Congressman?" The reply was, "Who is he?"

This struck me as a good example of how closely the actions of Congress touch the lives of every woman in America, and how little a great many of them do about it. In this particular case, the Congressman had been one of the leaders in the fight for a strong price control act, but was getting no credit from this constituent, to whom her Congressman was an unknown person down in Washington doing unknown things.

What Congress did to wreck price control is perhaps the clearest case of how your Congressman's actions and votes affect you as a woman. Every woman in America is feeling the results of higher prices—the housewife when she buys the family groceries, the mother when she buys clothing for her kids, the working girl when she buys her lunches and clothes, the widow, when she tries to make her meager pension stretch to cover the cost of living. And union members and wives of union members are watching the pay increases, which they won after weeks of strike and hardship, melt away in the added cost of milk, meat, and clothing.

But the wrecking of price control is only one of the many things that Congress did which affect the daily lives of the women of America. As the 79th Congress packs its bags and scurries home to campaign for re-election, it's important for women to look over the record and see what Congress did or didn't do for them, find out where their own Congressman stood, and then tell the other women in their neighborhood (and there are many like my friend who didn't know who her Congressman was) who he is, what he did, and what they can do about him.

Here are some of the other things to tell your friends and neighbors about:

Is there a mother in the U. S. who doesn't want a decent home for her family, with enough room, light and air to make for good health, and a safe, pleasant place for her children to play?

The Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill would have made this possible for a lot of women who are now forced to struggle along in overcrowded, unsanitary quarters because there's no place for them to go even if they could afford it. But Congress put the housing bill on the shelf in its hurry to get home, because so many members of the House committee handling the bill were opposed to having the government do something about decent houses.

Have you ever had a sick child, or husband, or been sick yourself and not been able to afford a doctor? That happens all too frequently, and the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill would have done something about it, by providing a national health insurance fund so that you could call in a doctor as part of your rights as an American citizen. The opponents of this bill kept it bottled up in a Senate committee by producing a long list of witnesses to testify against it, and Congress didn't even get a chance to vote on it.

Were you a war worker, laid off after V-J Day? Congress kept you from getting a better break in your unemployment compensation. Are you struggling along on a wage that's not enough to give you a decent living? Congress killed the minimum wage bill which would have raised your wages to at least 65c an hour.

Are you paid a lower wage than a man doing the same work? Congress refused to take action on the equal pay bill and instead tried to take away all the protective legislation you've won by bringing up the phony "equal-rights" amendment.

Are you a union member, or the wife of one? Well, Congress almost took away your right or the right of your husband to strike for a decent wage.

Yes, what Congress does and doesn't do means a lot to you as a woman, and it's up to you to tell other women about it—not just price control, but all the other things as well—and do something about it with them next November. The women of America can do a lot to make the 80th Congress different from the sad 79th.

MUSIC PACIFIES IRATE BUSMEN

Music hath charms to soothe even irate, overworked Fifth Ave. bus drivers and conductors, who have voted to make buses carrying music lovers to Lewisohn Stadium concerts an exception to their decision not to work overtime and on their days off.

The men, members of Local 100, CIO Transport Workers said:

"Our drivers and conductors, over-burdened though they have been because of extra hours of labor, are deeply conscious that these low-cost and very excellent concerts are a source of great pleasure."

The unionists added that they hoped the public would understand their decision not to work overtime and on their days off on all other Fifth Ave. double-deck buses because of "the company's refusal to hire additional men, preferably veterans, to provide adequate service for the public."

GLAMOUR FOR THE UNION

By PAT BRONTE

Detroit labor's first Charm School got under way, experimentally, this year. Without benefit of ballyhoo, it soon reached an enrollment of 65, and has been so successful that it may be resumed this Fall in individual locals.

Formally known as the Industrial Health and Physical Education course, it was jointly sponsored by the CIO Auto Workers Union and Wayne University. Classes met in the beautiful UAW Health Institute—former riverfront mansion of Edsel Ford—in Detroit.

The Charm School is a typical rank-and-file project. The eight-week course featured instruction in cosmetics and make-up, posture and corrective exercises, health and nutrition, and hair-styling.

During the Summer, Charm School graduates have kept a hand in with weekends at the Franklin D. Roosevelt Institute, State CIO camp at Port Huron, Mich. Swimming, riding, tennis, ping pong, dancing, shuffleboard, and the acquisition of mahogany tans put the finishing touches on their Charm School foundation.

All this was the idea of 26-year-old Ann Lemmons, hard-working UAW International Representative, and, at present, their only woman organizer.

Ann, a tall and willowy blonde who could easily be mistaken for a model or show-girl, originated and directed the Charm School project while working in health education on George Addes' staff. She was also one of Addes' most effective organizers on his Bendix staff.

Better Luck Next Time

The anti-poll tax bill is dead for another two years.

The bloc of southern polltax Senators, elected by a thin percentage of the voters in the seven polltax-ridden states, succeeded in heading off action to end the feudal-like levy on a person's right to vote.

The 39-33 vote for cloture, which would have eliminated a painful filibuster against the tax, was far short of the two-thirds necesary to limit debate in the Senate.

Thus H.R. 7, introduced by Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP N. Y.) and passed by the House, never came up for vote in the Senate.

The failure to act on this most pressing of voting reform bills was characterized by the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax as a "tragic defeat for the cause of free and democratic elections throughout the world."

But the committee sees a minor victory in the fact that it "rose to the surface" in the Senate, if "even for a moment," because of popular demand.

"The most powerful bloc in the Senate, the polltax bloc, wanted it killed by inaction. Their reactionary Republican supporters were only too glad to go along," the committee declared.

And Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare—which has taken a leading role in the fight to kill the tax—thought it "particularly discouraging" that a number of western Senators from states "which have a reputation for full democracy" sided with the polltaxers.

Among the obstructors, he named Sen. McCarran (D. Nev.), Hayden and McFarland (D. Ariz), Gurney (R. S. D.), Williken R. Col.), Young (R. N. D.) and Wheeler (D. Mont.).

"It is hard to see how we can obtain a victory for democracy at the Paris peace table when the Senate which must approve the peace treaties, also by two-thirds vote, has voted so flagrantly against democarcy at home."

One lesson must be learned for the next effort to repeal the polltax.

During the past session, liberal Senators had a tendency to agree to pushing the polltax bill back on the calendar. By the time it came up for possible consideration, there were few pieces of "must" legislation left for action.

Consequently, the situation was set for an easy filibuster.

Next time the polltax bill must come up promptly. Even the most leather-lunged reactionaries can't talk for ever—particularly when it holds up important, necessary legislation on which the people demand action.

A "Streamlined Congress"?

Regardless of how you vote in November, the next session of Congress is going to look different.

Whether it acts better is largely up to you when you go to the polls on election day.

The Legislative Reorganization Bill has made some major changes in the way Congress goes about its business. But good Congressmen can get along with old mechanisms, and reactionaries can always find a way to snarl up a bill in the people's interest.

It may be a little harder for them to do so in the future.

Under the provisions of the bill, the 48 standing committees of the House will be reduced to 19. The Senate's 33 committees get trimmed to 16.

Joint meetings of House and Senate committees are authorized—a move that can speed up tremendously the passage of a vital bill through Congress.

Still another section provides for a Congressional summer recess—from the end of June to the second Tuesday in October—with exceptions for time of war or national emergency.

An important phase of the bill is that calling for registration of professional lobbyists. It has been the custom, in sections of the anti-labor press, to rant occasionally about the CIO's "streamlined" lobby.

Compulsory registration will bring the situation into a true light.

It will show a small group of legislative representatives of CIO unions; and a tremendous number of highly paid corporation lobbyists with large expense accounts and slush funds. Compared to the mass of special pleaders for the wealthy special interests, the CIO's lobby is small indeed.

The effect of cutting down committee work, of raising Congressmen's salaries, and of providing retirement pensions for all who serve six years, may make Congress more efficient.

But efficiency isn't necessarily democracy. There's nothing in the new bill that compels Congressmen—be they from the south or north—to listen to the will of the people.

That's your job between now and election day in November.

Ford Dealer Makes Good

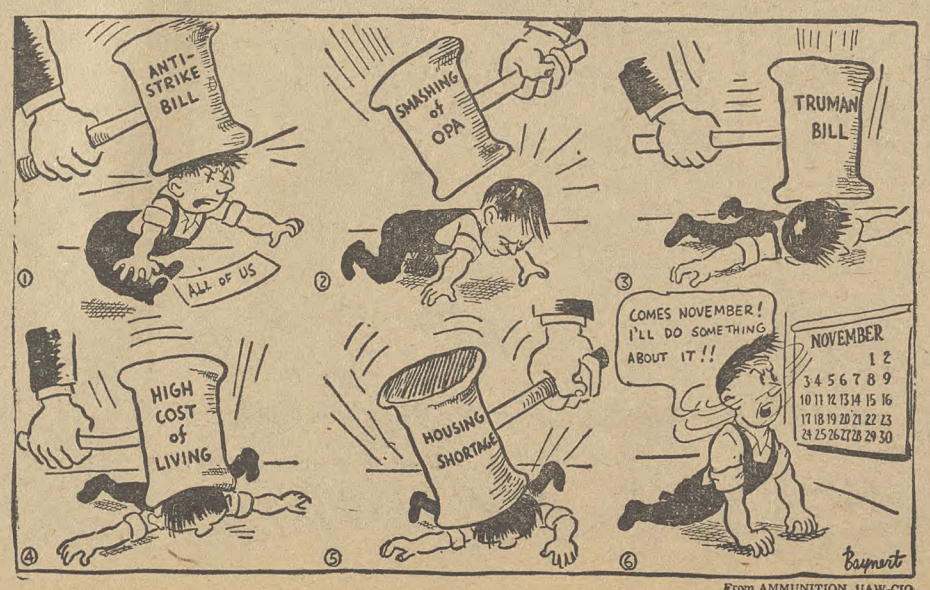
Pres. Walter Reuther of the UAW-CIO has some pertinent questions to ask about the motives behind the crippling amendments to the price control act.

Pointing out that retail car prices will be going up immediately as a result of a clause restoring dealers' prewar profit margins, Reuther declared:

"Consumers are entitled to know that Sen. Wherry of Nebraska, who is responsible for this provision, is described in his officiai biography in the Congressional Directory as a partner in Wherry Bros., a firm operating Ford agencies in Pawnee City, Wyoming, and Humboldt, Nebr.

"This price increase promoted by Ford Dealer Wherry will be the fourth suffered by auto buyers since V-J Day, all of which have been challenged by the UAW-CIO and which, we are ready to prove, cannot be justified.

"The UAW-CIO believes that American citizens have a right to question whether government officials who promote legislation that directly benefits themselves are acting purely in the interest of the people who elected them to office."



From AMMUNITION, UAW-CIO

Where Do We Go From Here?

Four thousand miles east from Washington, American military and civilian officials are trying to teach the war-shocked Germans the principles of democracy and of government in the interest of the people.

Nine thousand miles west of the capital, other Americans are trying to get the same lesson across to the postwar remnants of feudal Japan.

The 79th Congress, which will probably have adjourned before this appears in print, hasn't set a very good example for our vanquished pupils.

With a few outstanding exceptions, bills in the people's interest have been given a brusque turn-down by the majority of Congressmen.

THANKS to some adroit political maneuvering, the bill to end the polltax in seven southern states was held up until it could be easily killed by a potential filibuster.

THE 65c minimum wage bill was loaded down with irrelevant inflationary amendments and then permitted to die.

THE HOUSING bill, aimed at delivering the country from its present acute shortage of homes, never reached the House floor for vote.

The full-employment bill was weakened to the point where it means almost nothing. The public health insurance bill was stalled in committee. Long-overdue amendments to the social security program were whittled down to a bare minimum.

FORTUNATELY, the record wasn't 100% bad. The Case bill, to rob labor of its rights, was vetoed and the reactionaries weren't able to muster sufficient votes to make it law. Luckily, Congress regained its senses in time ot bury the Truman anti-strike bill—the gravest threat to civil rights in two decades.

FORTUNATELY, TOO, the efforts of brasshat-minded Congressmen—led by the publicized Rep. May of Kentucky—to hand over our atomic energy program to the military, were defeated. A GI terminal leave bill and a program of cars for amputees managed to squeeze through. Congress voted some overdue changes designed to modernize its own machinery.

But all in all, it's a pretty sad record. To the 25 or 30 Senators who fought for the people's rights and needs, and to the 100 or more liberal Congressmen who did likewise, CIO offers its thanks and appreciation.

Meanwhile, between now and November, our job is clear: to elect more progressives to Congress and pave the way for fulfillment of the people's program.

CIO QUEEN. Miss Rose Doman, Elyria, O., this week won the beauty contest held by the Lorain County CIO at its annual picnic. Vital statistics: 20 years old, five feet five, 116 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes. Miss Doman says that she intends to study to be a model.

what would you do for a drowning man?

CHECK YOUR ANSWER:

- ☐ Write Congress asking for a Federal law requiring more life-guards.
- ☐ Arrange to give him swimming lessons next year.
- ☐ Pull him out of the water.

Having more life-guards and giving the man swimming lessons are good things. But the most important thing is to pull him out of the water.

This is the same reasoning used by your National CIO Community Services Committee when asked the question, "What shall we do for those people of the world who have been left to starve in the wake of war?"

There are many possible answers to this question. We can ask the people of this country to conserve food. We can ask Congress to reinstate rationing and to double relief shipments abroad. We can ask our Government to give full support to UNRRA. These things are good, and they should be done.

But the most important thing is to feed the hungry now!

That is why CIO-CSC joined other national organizations to form CARE (Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe). CARE is a non-profit co-operative set up to get good food to the needy quickly.

PAC SPARKS 2 BIG VICTORIES

PAC-endorsed candidates in two vitally important primary races galloped to victory last week as voters indicated their demand for progressive government.

In West Virginia, Sen. Harley M. Kilgore, one of the most liberal members of the Upper House, had little difficulty in winning renomination for another term.

In the hotly contested race in the ninth district of Missouri, PAC-endorsed Enos A. Axtell ran well ahead of reactionary Rep. Roger C. Slaughter to capture the nomination. Jerome Walsh, endorsed by a few AFL unions, came in a poor third.

The Missouri vote was particularly important because of Slaughter's bad voting record during the past session of Congress and because he had resorted to violent smear propaganda throughout his entire campaign in the hope of scaring citizens away from the PAC. Axtell had been endorsed by President Truman, who took a personal interest in the campaign.

Even as he lost the nomination by a margin of more than 2,000 votes, Slaughter returned to his campaign of sharp criticism of PAC, which he had attempted to picture as Moscow-dominated—a line which the voters failed to swallow in great numbers.

Slaughter had fought against progressive bills during his Congressional tenure and had made a special point of attacking the proposed Fair Employment Practices Bill.

Kilgore's renomination was accomplished with strong CIO support in West Virginia, and with the votes of thousands of mine workers who resisted the efforts of their union's district officers to boycott him. The West Virginia Senator has developed a splendid record in Congress, where he has been in the front ranks of the fight for workers' rights, for international cooperation and peace, and against the rule-or-ruin tactics of the monopolies and international cartels.

The Virginia primaries were notable by the size of the opposition vote to the smooth-running, anti-labor political machine of Sen. Harry Byrd. Byrd had pitched the weight of his campaign against the CIO-PAC to divert attention from vital state and federal issues—although PAC had made no endorsement in the Senatorial primary.

Martin Hutchison, who was outspoken in his criticism of the Byrd machine and its reactionary tactics, polled a high vote for the opposition in the Old Dominion, running up 81,000 votes to the 139,500 received by Byrd in gaining another term.

PAC figured importantly in one of the Virginia Congressional races when its endorsed candidate—Porter Hardy, Jr., a farmer—defeated incumbent Rep. Ralph Daughton. Other Virginia incumbents were renominated, which is tantamount to election in the state.

CONGRESS VOTES JOBLESS AID FOR MERCHANT SEAMEN

CIO Maritime Workers, who have conducted a decades-long fight for equality with shoreside colleagues, are hailing a major victory—Congressional action to give them unemployment compensation. More than 250,000 seamen will reap the benefits of the victory.

Working closely with Rep. Henry Jackson (D. Wash.) and Rep. Walter Lynch (D. N. Y.), the unions and the CIO Maritime Committee won inclusion of merchant seamen in the existing state systems for unemployment compensation, as well as a temporary setup to provide similar insurance for seamen on government-owned vessels.

The maritime committee pointed out that it has constantly fought for a uniform federal compensation system, which would bring higher benefits with a minimum of interstate confusion. Since the bill was not passed early in the war, when employment was rising and big reserves could easily have been accumulated, the committee noted that establishment of a financially solvent federal system is not possible at this time.

"At the present time, seamen will have decidedly better protection under state coverage than under a federal system," the CIO committee stated. It established that average benefits under the Jackson bill currently would be about $14.16 a week, while benefits in New York and California—the two largest maritime states—will average over $20 weekly.

The maritime union legislative spokesmen voiced high praise for the manner in which the bill was studied and acted upon by the House Ways and Means Committee.

In drafting the provisions of the bill which finally passed Congress, the committee took account of every recommendation and safeguard proposed in the testimony of the CIO Maritime Committee.

RULES FOR VETS IN GM STRIKE

THOUSANDS of war veterans who were unable to get unemployment compensation during the strike periods last winter may be entitled to those benefits if the Veterans Administration approves a veteran's appeal for compensation readjustment. Approval might set a precedent.

In the appeal, pending final Veterans Administration action, Michigan Readjustment Agent Harry Slavin decided that a General Motors worker, August J. Golas, ex-GI and a member of the CIO Auto Workers, should be granted unemployment compensation for the period of the General Motors strike last winter.

Golas was unable to draw unemployment compensation under the state law, because during his period in the army he had lost consecutive work credits which would have entitled him to state benefits.

The CIO veterans committee has fought unsuccessfully to get Congress to repeal this part of the law which prevents vets involved in labor disputes from getting federal unemployment compensation under the GI Bill of Rights. Resorting to test cases, the CIO veterans committee, headed by Meyer Bernstein, is endeavoring to get a reversal in the interpretation of the law.

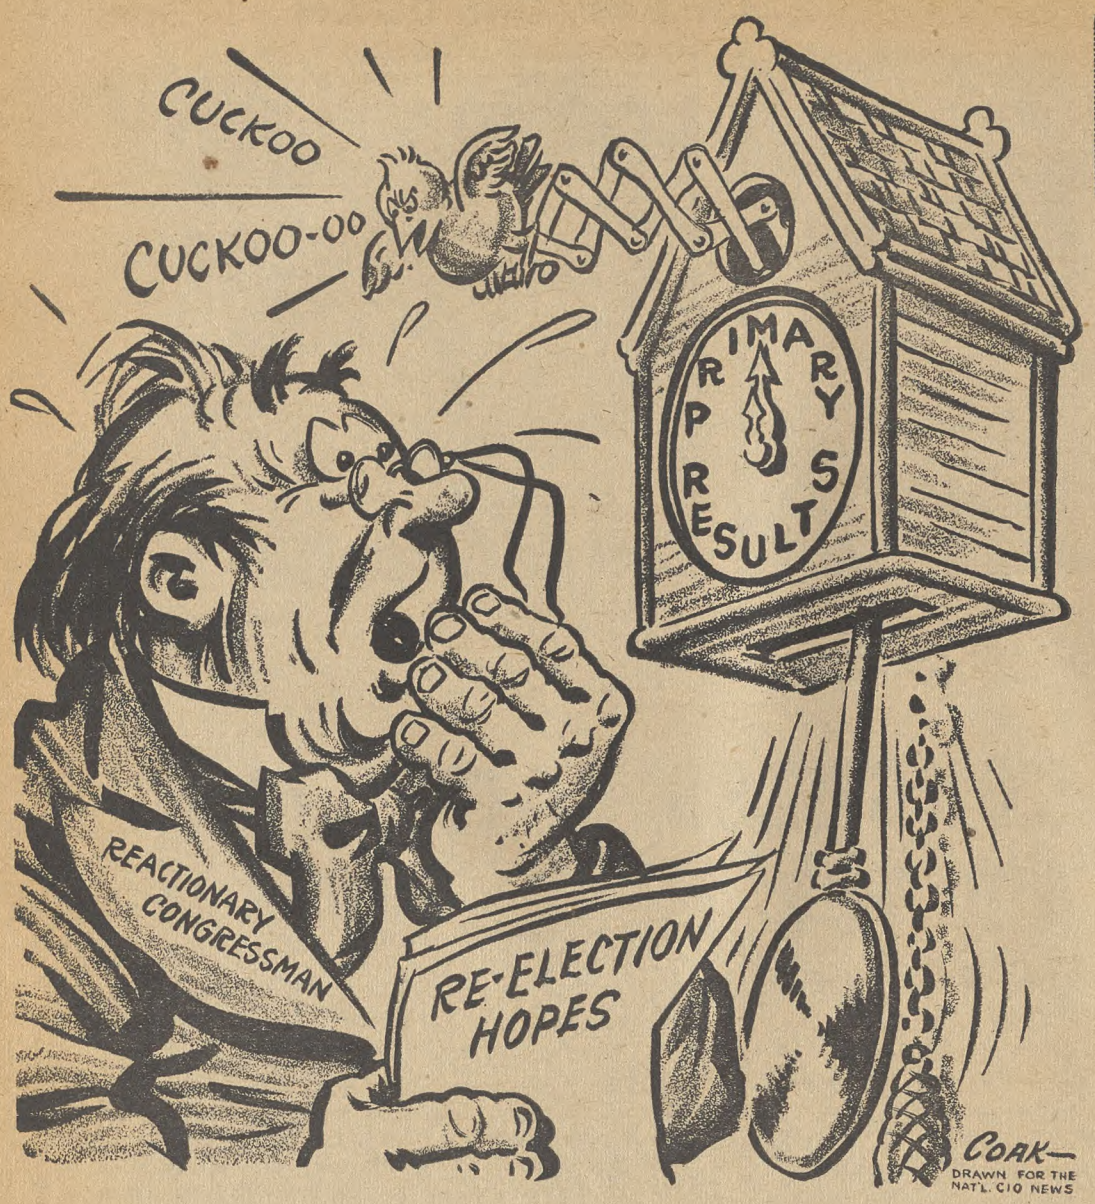
Prior to passage of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, the GI Bill of Rights, more than 20 states had frozen benefit laws permitting veterans to use work credits accumulated before military service for state unemployment compensation benefits. But with the GI Bill of Rights in effect, the states repealed frozen benefit laws, leaving veteran unemployment compensation entirely in the hands of the federal government.

During the GM strike period the non-veteran workers drew unemployment compensation from the state due to the work credits they had amassed throughout the war period, while ex-GI's like Golas, who served with the armed forces, drew no benefits for unemployment.

The decision handed down by the Michigan readjustment agent reversed the law, declaring veteran Golas is entitled to compensation for the unemployment incurred during the General Motors strike.

The decision, now awaiting approval by the Veterans Administration, held that the stoppage of work in General Motors from November, 1945, until March, 1946, was due to the shortage of material, the corporation's dissatisfaction with prices fixed by the OPA, and the corporation's eligibility for tax refunds if its profits were below its 1936-39 average.

Nominated as Under-Secretary of Labor this week was Keen Johnson former Governor of Kentucky. Johnson, 50 years old, is president of the Daily Register Publishing Co., Richmond, Ky.



PRIMARY RESULTS

THE RESULTS of most of this year's primary elections to date have been encouraging to labor and all progressives.

Some eight reactionary and anti-labor Senators and more than a score of like-minded Representatives have been denied party nomination for re-election by voters who looked at their record in Congress and didn't like it, or else have decided not to run.

On the other hand, progressive members of Congress have found their constituents appreciative of their records and have all won re-nomination, with only one or two exceptions.

★ ★ ★

OF COURSE, there have been disappointments in the failure to defeat some of the worst reactionaries in a number of states, where labor and progressive political action is not yet sufficiently advanced.

But, even in these cases, there is encouragement to be drawn from the fact that these reactionaries were sharply challenged, sometimes for the first time, and vigorous campaigns were conducted for their opponents, with substantial results.

There is significance too in the fact that many of the displacements of reactionaries occurred south of the Mason-Dixon line, where new voters—both Negro and white—went to the polls in much larger numbers than ever before.

★ ★ ★

THE CIO membership, through the Political Action Committee, has played an active part in most of these primaries and deserves much of the credit for the results.

But the PAC is not always entitled to all the credit it has been given, by its enemies. In a number of election districts where the PAC is relatively weak, reactionary candidates have tried to make it an election bogey and have proclaimed themselves slayers of a mythical dragon.

In many cases, however, this tactic has recoiled on those who used it. The voters have been sufficiently intelligent to see through this fraud, and the "dragon" slayers have themselves been slain, or at least discomfited by substantial opposition votes.

In any case, the PAC is never disposed to hog the credit. For its basic policy is to join with all other kinds of progressive groups in supporting candidates who will be best for all the people. The victories it helps to win are people's victories, not just victories for PAC.

IT IS TOO EARLY to predict the character of the next Congress. Primary indications point to it being better, and certainly it could hardly be worse, than the last. But the main job is still to be done between now and November, if the partial improvements already effected are to be followed by a real job of renovation on Congress.

Most of the primaries so far have shown that the tide of American opinion is running in favor of progress and against the type of reaction represented by the present Congressional majority of tory Republicans and polltax Democrats.

Let's take full advantage of this tide by backing the PAC in its campaign to enlighten the public on the real issues, to publicize the records of all candidates and to bring all possible voters to the polls. The more people vote, the better will Congress be.

LOOKING AHEAD

HERE's a little inflation fable: A man was robbed and pushed into a deep lake. As he struggled and called for help, his assailant sat down on the bank and said:

"Come, come, my good man! A little more effort, if you want to save yourself. I could use your shirt as well as your money, and I can't wait all day."

•

THE VICTIM, in this story, is labor—and most of the American people.

Robbed of his real wages and savings by higher prices, he has been pushed into inflation to sink or swim, if he can.

The fellow who did the dirty work is big business. It created inflation by holding up production, by extorting outrageous price increases and by wrecking price control—and is now counting its loot.

•

AS THE DROWNING man struggles, his attacker makes no move to rescue him, by lowering prices, by adjusting wages to living costs or by putting all possible goods on the market.

He has only advice to offer—advice prompted by a desire to squeeze more profit from his victim.

With one voice—their master's voice—business publications, daily editorial writers, columnists nad commentators are offering this exhortation to labor:

"You must work harder, speed up, produce more for the same wages. That is the only solution for inflation."

•

ONE MORE curious touch must be added to this fable:

Up comes a portly gentleman, claiming to represent the drowning man. He sits down by the assailant, nods his head and says:

"You heard what the man said. As your representative, I advise you to obey. You did wrong to resist being robbed. If you hadn't been so rambunctious, the man might have let you keep a little of your pay and not have shoved you so far into the water of inflation."

•

THIS IS no more fantistic than the speeches now being made by AFL Pres. Wm. Green, parroting Wall Street's advice to labor.

The AFL "Monthly Survey" actually blames labor's postwar effort to maintain its take-home pay for creating inflation.

It says the CIO Steelworkers should have accepted the companies' 15c wage offer and not have struck for the 18½c increase recommended by President Truman.

According to these AFL yes-men of big business, it was not the employers' production hold-ups, their exorbitant price increases and the wrecking of price control that caused inflation—no, it was CIO demands for wage increases to maintain take-home pay and adjust purchasing power to living costs!

•

THIS NONSENSE comes with peculiarily ill grace from the "free riders" of the AFL, who let the CIO do all the fighting for adequate wages and then cashed in, to the best of their limited ability, on CIO's victories.

•

OF COURSE, more production is desirable to alleviate inflation. But consider these facts:

(1) Total production of goods and services now stands at the highest point in peacetime history, according to the Office of War Mobilization & Reconversion.

(2) When the UAW-CIO called a conference to plan more production, the Big Three auto companies refused to attend. The union points to these prime causes of the auto lag: monopoly control by the Big Three; shortages of basic materials; high prices allowing big profits on low-volume production; and carry-back tax provisions that enable companies to get refunds for not producing.

(3) The productivity of American workers increased 25% between 1939 and 1944, according to the WPB. It has shot up still further since then. So further increases in workers' productivity, without corresponding wage increases, simply mean a higher rate of exploitation and more gravy for the profiteers.

MEANWHILE, the CIO points out, an immediate rescue job is necesary, if we are not to be sunk by inflation.

It calls for resistance to higher prices; strict enforcement of remaining price controls; a government-labor-industry conference to adjust wages to living costs and stabilize our economy; and political action to elect a new Congress that will act effectively to halt inflation.

REPORT FBI KNOWS LYNCHERS

THE FBI has identified several members of the gang that lynched George Dorsey and Roger Malcolm and their wives in Georgia, it was reported this wek.

Meanwhile, as rewards for apprehension of the killers mounted to $30,000, more than 12,000 white and Negro residents in the nation's capital marched in protest of the murders.

Led by three Negro amputee veterans, the crowd halted at the Lincoln memorial, to hear speakers call for passage of a federal anti-lynching law.

At the rally, sponsored by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and the American Veterans Committee, Pres. Henry Beitcher of the Washington CIO Council called for strong labor pressure to compel Congress to pass legislation against mob terror.

In Georgia, two Negroes who said they witnessed the wanton killing of the two Negro couples, declared that the crime did not occur near Monroe, as previously reported, but south of Augusta.

The two, Willie Johnson, 56, and Leroy Greene, 44, said they were fleeing murder threats as a result of voting in the recent Democratic primaries, and witnessed the lynching from a hiding place near Highway No. 1.

NEW WAR PROBES

With the hunting season on war profiteers in full swing the Senate War Profits Investigating Committee has been swamped with inside stories of the men who got rich from the nation's war effort.

Heading items awaiting investigation are alleged exressive rates charged by the railroads for government traffic. Sen. Glen Taylor (D. Ida.) raises the question in letters to the Committee, stating that the "rate committee" of the Army Transportation Corps was composed largely of "officials of the carriers who wore the uniform of the Army and Navy to negotiate rates with their former and future employers."

With bigger and better investigations to come, Rep. Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) has been unable to appear before the War Profits Committee because of a heart attack and has been forced "to retire for an indefinite period of rest."

Sen. James Mead (D., N. Y.), chairman of the Committee, recently dispatched a sub-committee to Hawaii to open an investigation of the pre-Pearl Harbor construction work under direction of Col. Theodore Wyman.

Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser is also in line for Mead Committee probings. Kaiser said that he is ready to testify. He asked for an investigation of the steel industry with particular reference to U. S. Steel Corp.'s expenditure of $200 million in government money to build its Geneva, Utah plant, and then its purchase of the plant for 20c on the dollar.

The Dept. of Justice has started an investigation of the Andrew J. Higgins' shipbuilding interests in New Orleans. Higgins denied that his firm had ever made false or fraudulent claims against the government.

Also included in the investigation program is the Canol oil project in Canada, originally estimated to cost the government $24 million. The final cost was $45 million.

Mead Committee Counsel George Meader disclosed that the General Accounting Office has many more cases for investigation.

Debunking 'Production'

FOR INFLATION, NO CURE-ALL

INCREASED production is not "the sovereign cure for inflation which many voices today proclaim it to be," the CIO Economic Outlook said this week.

"Release of hoarded goods, to be sure, puts a brake on rising prices," the Outlook stated. "But increased factory output increases both the supply and the money available for buying it, and its net deflationary effect, while difficult to estimate, certainly is not overpowering.

"We would be ill-advised to rest easy in the simple faith that production will rise like a cool tide to quench the fires of inflation. Long before the slow creep of those waters reaches the bonfire, consumers either will have exhausted the funds which they have to spend, or will have quit feeding their dollars to the flames because they have discovered that they are stoking the fire that is giving them a roasting."

In seeking to measure the length of the inflationary period, the Outlook offered the possibility of three situations of varying degrees of seriousness arising.

One, in which "consumers take fright and begin to liquidate their savings" would lead to catastrophe, the CIO publication said.

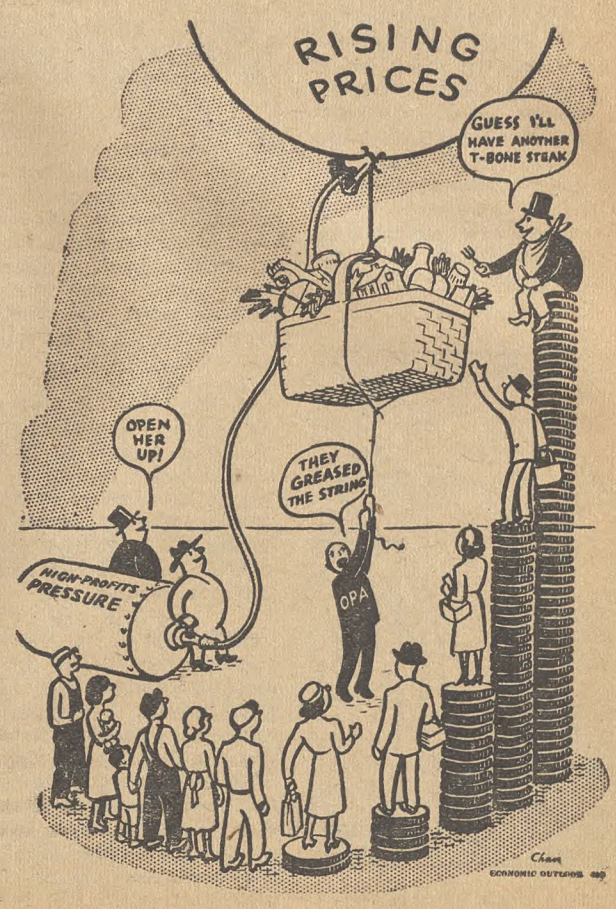
If consumers hold on to their savings but devote all their current income to spending, it predicted a 20% rise in the cost of living during the next 12 months.

"Third," the Outlook continued, "consumers may strike against rising rents and prices. That is to say, they may become unwilling to pay high prices before the time arrives when, on the whole, they are unable to pay them. This is the one prospect now in sight that may check inflation soon and allow the nation to escape a first-class boom-and-bust with all its political and economic hazards."

Prospects for checking inflation by mass consumer action are "not so hopeless" as they may appear, the Outlook declared. It based its analysis on the fact that today's rising prices "are in fact speculative values reared upon a flimsy structure of long chances taken by market operators, manufacturers, middlemen and other assorted gamblers.

"Not costs, but hoped-for turnover profits, account for the greater part of the rise. The whole structure is as shaky as it is rotten."

If consumers, by withholding purchases, implant fear "that the gamble will not pay out", the speculators will then unload their inventories and get out from under, the Outlook predicted.



FARMER-LABOR UNITY URGED AT FARM EQUIPMENT PARLEY

PAYING tribute to the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Union for its role in bringing an understanding of the labor movement to farmers, James Patton, Natl. Farmers Union president, told 400 delegates at the union's third biennial convention in Milwaukee last week that labor must continue to strive for closer cooperation with farmers.

Convention speakers, including Allan Haywood, CIO Director of Organization, and Leo Krzycki, Vice President of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, joined in unanimous condemnation of the union-busting tactics employed by the J. I. Case and Allis-Chalmers companies in the months-old strike against them by three CIO unions, FE, the Auto Workers and the Electrical Workers.

The union's strong anti-discrimination policy was emphasized clearly in the election of Azay Martin, Negro candidate for vice president, by convention acclamation. The national editor of the Chicago Defender, on hand for the last two days of the convention, called it the greatest display of Negro-white unity he had ever beheld.

A veterans program, calling for special support of the American Veterans' Committee and general support of the other vet organizations, was adopted by the convention following a speech by Ken Pettus, AVC national committeeman.

Strongly worded resolutions attacked the anti-American activities of the Wood-Rankin committee, called for intensive political action work in the coming elections, and urged anti-lynch laws.

The delegates also unanimously voted to support any and all unions engaged in strikes, lockouts or protracted negotiations, and authorized special assessments to carry on the union's widespread expansion drive now under way in the farm equipment industry.

Final business of the convention was the election of officers. Re-elected were Grant W. Oakes, president; John Shaffer, vice-president; Gerald Fielde, secretary-treasurer, and Pope Huff, board member-at-large.

Additional officers elected were Ajay Martin, vice-president; Milt Burns, director of organization, and Katherine Hall as board member-at-large.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

CALLING out of hundreds of state troopers and guardsmen to be used against pickets at the Rex Mfg. Co. in Connersville, Ind., last week, was strongly condemned by Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in a wire to Ind. Gov. Ralph R. Gates.

Emspak declared that the appearance of troopers when the picketing was completely peaceful "can only be construed as a deliberate attempt to weaken the fight of the strikers for a living wage and the right to belong to a democratic union of their own choosing."

LOCAL 100 of the CIO Transport Workers Union in N. Y. began distribution last week of 75,000 leaflets to the public describing the issues in its dispute with the Fifth Avenue Coach Co.

The leaflets urged the company to give war veterans jobs which they so justly merit and thus remove the headaches of overtime work from the drivers and conductors which will result in improved service to the public.

CONFRONTED by a hostile audience of CIO and AFL leaders who jammed its chamber last week, the San Diego, Calif., city council at a public hearing retreated from its original plan to adopt an ordinance regulating picketing. City Atty. Jean F. DuPaul publicly acknowledged that the ordinance, which was proposed by a firm of corporation lawyers, probably "has some flaws in it."

President Murray has announced the selection of Brother Irwin L. DeShetler as the CIO Regional Director for the Southern half of California. Brother DeShetler will establish offices in the City of Los Angeles. Brother DeShetler has had many years of experience in the labor movement, having served as president of the Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers and for the past three years as regional director for the CIO in the Kansas City area. He has acquitted himself and the movement. The new region will have jurisdiction over San Luis Obispo, Kern and San Bernardino counties and all areas south in the State of California. Brother Harry R. Bridges will of course, continue to serve as the CIO regional director for the northern half of the state.

The writer attended the convention of the Farm Equipment and Metal Workers Union, held in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, last week. They had a splendid convention and their organization shows progress. They whole-heartedly adopted the policies of the CIO and are determined to intensify their activities to organize the unorganized in their industry.

IT'S A LIE!

By MARTY SOLOW

THE "Air Conditioning & Refrigeration News" asks "What's the matter with America?" Answering itself, it replies; "Labor unions are wrecking the country."

IT'S A LIE! Latest Civilian Production Administration report showed "Industrial production" hit "a post-war high in June." Some wreck!

★ ★ ★

THE NAM and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce claim "the problem is production." The N. Y. Times insists "the right method is production." David Lawrence, Arthur Krock, George Sokolsky, Mark Sullivan and Frank Kent, columnists who reflect big-business viewpoints, insist on the necessity for "production."

Newspaper editorials daily sing paens to the great God "production." Harvard economist Sumner Slichter lends an authoritative tone to the campaign by predicting dire events if we don't have "production" and laments now that "production has been lagging."

The implication, sometimes direct, sometimes indirect, in all of these cries is that labor doesn't want to produce; that workers are too eager to seek wage increases without a corresponding increase in production.

What's the score on this "production" cry? How does this steady chant for "production" which places the onus on labor stack up against reality?

The facts show that the problem is not production, that production has not been lagging and that labor has increased its efficiency.

The 6th Report from the Director of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion (April 1, 1946) to the President on the state of production says:

"Total civilian production now stands at the highest level ever reached by the nation, in war or in peace: an annual rate of more than $150 billion."

The 7th Report from the same office, July 1, 1946, points out:

"Total production of goods and services stands at the highest point in peacetime history . . . The Federal Reserve Index of the physical volume of industrial production which had averaged 160 for the first three months of this year (1935-1939=100) rose to 165 in the second quarter."

A War Production Board analysis of "The Effect of War Upon Industrial Economy" demonstrated that labor productivity during five war years rose an average of 25%. Thus in terms of efficiency it now takes four hands to accomplish what five did previously.

We've got production and we've got efficiency. Now if business will cooperate by keeping prices down and by planning orderly acquisition of scarce and basic materials maybe we'll get still more production.

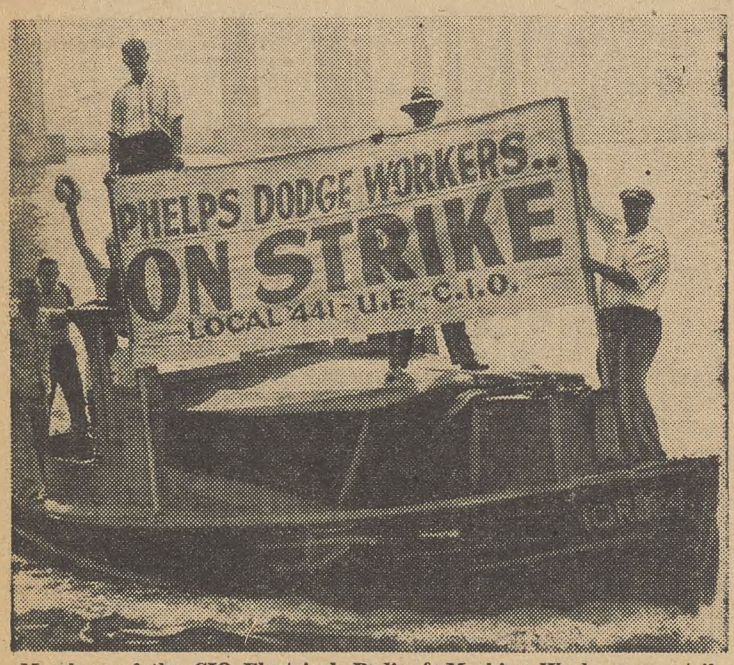
HOW a lie is born.

TIME mazine Luce-ly reported recently that "No Yugo-slav dared be seen at a British or American information center."

Richard Breese, director of the U. S. Information Service in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, called TIME's statement a lie. Reported Breese: "We have several hundred a day" at the U. S. center and "a few less" at the British.

TIME lamely alibied that its 'source of information substituted assumption for fact . . ."

How many other "assumptions for facts" do TIME and the rest of the commercial press make?



Members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, on strike at Phelps-Dodge, Elizabeth, N. J., do water-borne picketing. The seven-month strike, which has been marked by company-inspired violence, seemed on the way to solution this week as the company agreed to open negotiations with the union.

CIO UNION STAGES FIGHT AGAINST AFL-COMPANY DEAL

By C. W. FOWLER

THE biggest NLRB election in West Coast history drove nearer to a climax this week with the CIO's Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers Union picked to win a majority of some 50,000 cannery workers in northern California.

Tentatively scheduled for the end of August, the vote will decide the issue between the AFL Teamsters, backed by the employers, and the FTA-CIO, backed by the national CIO and by the rank and file of the cannery workers.

Full CIO support for the FTA drive is being highlighted this week and next by a radio speech from CIO Pres. Philip Murray and personal appearances in the field by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

President Murray will start off a two-week daily radio program beamed at the entire northern California area where the cannery workers live and work, to be followed by Secretary Carey with radio interviews and appearances at a series of mass meetings in the valley towns.

Chief issues in the campaign are wages, which have been held down well below CIO levels by Teamster-employer collusion, and grievances, which are left totally unsettled in the same company-union deal.

The election is the second to be held in the canneries within a year. The first, won last October by FTA-CIO on a plurality of votes against the AFL and an "independent," was thrown out by the NLRB as a result of political pressure by the Teamsters. FTA won a large majority over the AFL at the time, but failed by 63 votes to win a majority over both AFL and "independent." This time the AFL is FTA's only opponent, and a clear majority is expected.

The California CIO, as well as the national, is going all-out on the drive. Formation of a "Committee of One Thousand" to support FTA-CIO was announced last week in the San Francisco Bay area. The committee is sending hundreds of volunteer organizers into the closing weeks of the drive.

Donald Henderson, president of FTA-CIO, is leading the drive from FTA offices in San Francisco.

Of course we want you to print the truth...but can't you print it from the ADVERTISER'S point of view?

TRADE JOURNAL TELLS BOSSES TO BREAK U. S. LABOR LAWS

WILFUL violation of the Wagner Act and elimination of collective bargaining, advocated by the "American Wool and Cotton Reporter," textile trade journal, in its July 11 issue were strongly condemned last week by Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO Southern Organizing Committee.

"The proposal . . . is one of the most outrageous things I have read in a long time," Bittner said.

The article urged textile manufacturers to come together and set wages and working conditions for the entire industry, "and then if there is any trouble let the employers go on strike.

"It might be illegal according to the Wagner Act—but what of it," the article said.

"I believe," said Bittner, "that few if any of the textile manufacturers will even give serious consideration to this ridiculous proposal" to violate a federal law and to "bring an end to real collective bargaining."

PACKERS WANT 'FEUDALISM'

A DEMAND for a "return to feudalism" is the reply of the Big Four meat packers to the CIO Packinghouse Workers' request for wage increases, a guaranteed annual wage and a health fund, union president Ralph Helstein said this week.

The packers have proposed to do away with union security, maintenance of membership and dues checkoff provisions which the union had previously won, Helstein declared, "In effect they want to revert to feudalism in labor relations, where the employer does as he pleases with the employes."

The management terms were incorporated in an exchange of contract proposals to replace those expiring throughout the country on August 11. The union seeks a guaranteed annual wage for 52 weeks of 40 hours employment, a $1 hourly minimum wage for men and women, and semi-monthly or monthly bonuses to adjust pay scales to the increased cost of living.

FIRMS GAIN--WORKERS LOSE

WORKERS in the oil industry have had their purchasing power cut by 25% since June 30 while oil companies have given themselves an extra billion dollars a year through price increases, charged the executive council of the CIO Oil Workers Union last week.

The council, meeting in Fort Worth before the OWIU convention on August 12, declared that oil workers have been caught in an economic scissors between soaring living costs and lowered purchasing power.

"The so-called price control bill, as finally enacted, exempted petroleum products from OPA," continued the council statement, "and despite their excellent profit position the companies have taken immediate advantage of the situation by boosting crude oil 25c a barrel and gasoline by one to two cents a gallon."

NINE-YEAR CAMPAIGN BENEFITS RED-CAPS

Spurred by the CIO Transport Service Employes for the past nine years, railroad retirement benefits for the nation's station ushers and Red Caps became a reality this week when Congress passed and President Truman signed the bill liberalizing the Railroad Retirement Act.

Under the new law, all years of service rendered by Red Caps are creditable for pension benefits.

Other improvements in the new amendments, for which the CIO union has been striving since 1937, include increased survivors' benefits, sweeping changes in eligibility pensions, sick and maternity benefits and wider coverage.

WHAT CAN COME OF DOG DAYS?

In the good old days, parents were wont to say, "Tell me who you go with; I'll tell you what you are." It's still true. Be glad if your boy enjoys a good dog, a good friend. Make your home a place where both can come, where the boys will find a welcome, a jar of cookies, a cold drink. If your son's friends aren't desirable, help him to find lively, exciting new interests. New friendships will grow around new interests.

WILL OPA PROTECT CONSUMER?

By ELEANOR FOWLER

THE decision of the Price Decontrol Board on August 20 on whether there shall be price ceilings on meat, milk, grain, cotton-seed and soy beans will be a first test of whether the new OPA act will give the people of America any protection. That is the considered view of the national Consumer Advisory Committee which met in Washington the first three days of August to study the new bill.

The Committee pointed out that 60% of food is not now under price control. The Decontrol Board has the authority to re-establish price control over the most basic elements of our diet—milk, meat, bread and butter. It can also decide whether the $1,000,000,000 Congress voted for subsidies shall be used to roll prices back to the June 30 level on those basic foods.

Unless the Board brings food under price ceilings, OPA cannot possibly prevent inflationary increases in manufactured goods and rents.

Don't expect too much price control, though, the Committee warns, even if the Decontrol Board does right by the people.

The act gives Secretary of Agriculture Anderson final authority over prices of foods and food products. That department has always fought for higher food prices and for removal of ceilings, so we can expect the worst. The only hope is that the President may influence Anderson to hold food prices down. He certainly should be urged to do so.

Consumers—and that means all of us—should start the pressure at once to influence the August 20 decision of the Price Decontrol Board.

In order to re-establish price ceilings the Board is required by law to show:

1. That the price has risen unreasonably over June 20.

2. That the commodity is in short supply and that its regulation is practical and enforceable.

3. That the public interest will be served.

Each one of us can send the Board facts from our own experience to prove that need for re-establishing the ceilings. It will help if they know that hundreds of thousands of Americans are watching their procedings.

Hearings are scheduled for August 12-15. The major consumer organizations will ask for time to appear. Write to Roy L. Thompson, Chairman, Price Decontrol Board, Federal Reserve Bldg., Washington 25, D. C., and get your letter in before the hearings close.

YOU CAN HALT PRICE RISES

BY VERDA BARNES, DIRECTOR, WOMEN'S DIVISION, PAC

ALTHOUGH the Price Control Act was renewed only a couple of weeks ago on July 26, already consumers see that the dam against inflation has been broken. Let's not fool ourselves—we are in for higher and higher prices.

OPA has announced an increase in cotton textiles which will result in your paying 10% more for cotton clothing and 17% more for such household linens as sheets, towels and pillowcases. OPA was compelled to raise prices on cotton because of provisions in the emasculated Price Control Bill. Analysis shows that the increase can be expected not only in cottons, but straight across the board.

There will be increases in foods, most manufactured items and clothing. These increases are the result of the powerful pressures which were exerted by unscrupulous lobbyists, whose sole interest was high profits for the few and "the public be damned."

Their henchmen in Congress amended the Price Control Bill so that the OPA must raise prices.

In spite of the dark outlook, there are measures which consumers can take to prevent prices from going sky-high. Organized labor is particularly fitted to spearhead action, because it has leadership, know-how, and the strength which comes from organization.

Recently the Danville, Va., local of the CIO Textile Workers Union decided that action must be taken in Danville to prevent prices from getting completely out of hand.

The local discussed the matter with the Director of the Southern School for Workers who contacted a local minister. He took the lead in organizing a Citizens' Committee, consisting of representatives from civic, social, veterans, school, labor, church and business organizations.

On July 31 booths were put up in the city and citizens signed pledges promising not to buy or sell at runaway prices. Every one wore a button saying, "I WILL BUY WISELY!" That evening a rally was held and, for the first time in Danville's history, Negroes and whites sat together in the Armory participating in discussion of a problem of common interest.

All the people were aroused because of the scandalous price jumps. Fat back had gone up from 19c to 38c, 42c and 45c in some stores. Ham had jumped from 60c a pound to $1.25, butter to $1 a pound, and rents had zoomed as high as 328%.

The people demanded action and they got it. A permanent committee was organized to take complaints by telephone and check with merchants on overcharges. Illegal overcharges will be brought to the attention of the local OPA Price Control Board.

The committee was given orders to ask the City Council to cancel the permits of hucksters who were buying fruit and vegetables at low cost from nearby farmers and selling them at exorbitant prices to the townspeople. Not content with these measures, the Danville citizens have threatened to picket any unscrupulous merchant who profiteers.

Action by the Danville group should serve as an example of what you can do.

Here are some suggestions:

1. SEND letters asking that price controls be reinstated on meat, dairy products, grain and gasoline. List the high prices you are paying for these items. Address letters to Roy L. Thompson, Chairman of Price Decontrol Board, Federal Reserve Building, Washington, D. C.

2. WRITE President Truman requesting that subsidies be reinstated on meat and dairy products to help bring prices down.

3. BOMBARD President Truman with letters urging him to call a special session of Congress to strengthen the Price Control Bill. Then OPA can keep prices in line.

4. ORGANIZE a buyers' strike, taking as your slogan "BUY ONLY WHAT YOU NEED!" A buyers' strike means refusing to buy anything except absolute necessities, but you can do without extras.

5. PRACTICE food conservation. Use leftovers. Buy foods that are in season — stretching expensive foods with inexpensive ones. Hamburger will go twice as far if it is served as meat sauce with spaghetti.

Intelligent, directed action is your weapon against unwarranted price rises.

Paulette Goddard displays her obvious charms as she sets out to capture a man to raise her station in life. A French femme, she winks at theft but balks at murder in her latest, "Diary of a Chambermaid." Burgess Meredith helps her keep the picture intriguing and charming, albeit a bit confusing at times.

PLAYING AROUND

THE SEARCHING WIND—Robert Young plays the role of a striped-pants diplomat who appeased Hitler and Mussolini when the world was crying for decisive action. When war comes, his wounded son blames the diplomat and heaps vituperation on his weak chin. A gripping drama with excellent performances by Sylvia Sidney and Dudley Digges.

TILL THE END OF TIME—Serves to introduce the new heart-throb, Guy Madison, in the latest of what-shall-we-do-with-the-returning-vets series. Dorothy McGuire is tops as the ex-marine's newly acquired feminine interest. Best scene—the three marines giving the Iwo Jima treatment to three friends of Bilbo in California.

ANNA AND KING OF SIAM—Irene Dunne does a superb enactment of an English widow, confidante and educator to a King who hasn't completely adopted the ways of the western world. Done with good taste and humor, the picture provides some solid entertainment for two hours.

OF HUMAN BONDAGE—Why Hollywood found it necessary to do a remake on the former excellent version of Somerset Maugham's famous novel is still a puzzle. This latest production, starring Eleanor Parker and Paul Henreid, lacks the lustre and dramatic conflict of the Bette Davis version.

FLICKER FRONT

FACTS vs HATE

By GEORGE WEISSMAN

THAT "it can happen here" is being demonstrated daily by the lynching reports from Georgia and Tennessee; by the Congressional murder of FEPC; by the flood of new questions as to "race," "religion," "nationality" and "color" on employment applications throughout the nation, and particularly by the Nazi-like election campaigns just put on by Talmadge and Bilbo.

Why it should not and must not happen here has been said often, but rarely more effectively than in two new War Dept. shorts just released for national showings. "Don't Be a Sucker" and "Teamwork" are two of the most effective weapons against bigotry and prejudice to join labor's arsenal in recent years.

Originally produced for the armed forces, the shorts play on the theme that the world is full of suckers. There are those who would fall for the old shell game, be taken in by pretty women and even those who are still fair game for the NAM's antiquated malarkey about unions. There always seems to be someone anxious to seize on the credulity of honest men to take away their valuables—or valuable rights. In this case, it is the native nightshirters who would make the Bilbonic plague a national way of life.

"Don't Be A Sucker" introduces a healthy young guy, with a job—and a country he is proud to live in, America. He listens to a park orator prate about an "American Mein Kampf," attacking first the Jews, then the Catholics and so on down the line. He also manages to work in "them foreigners" until the country is stripped bare of its people—except for "supermen."

Because he is a sucker for this stuff, the young worker finds himself in agreement with the nightshirter—that is, until the orator attacks the Freemasons to which he belongs. The bait is no longer tempting and he turns to Paul Lukas, a Hungarian-American professor who "saw it happen" in Berlin in 1932.

The camera shifts to Berlin as the professor describes what takes place—another park and another speaker. The uniforms are different, but the words the same—hate, hate and hate. Divide and rule.

The Nazi orator (Martin Kosleck) splits an average group of a Freemason, a small business man, a metal worker and a farmer. Standing together they had a chance to survive. Split by the brownshirter's tactics, they lost all to the powerful group of German industrialists who put Hitler into power.

Typical is the case of the metal worker, a "pure aryan" by Nazi standards. He works longer hours and for less pay under the Nazis than he did before he joined their ranks. And when war comes, he finds a snowy grave with millions of his brother "supermen" in the cold wastes of Russia.

Excellent shots compiled from "The Hitler Gang," army films and newsreels depict the crushing of labor unions, opposition political parties and religious persecution as the Nazis make their headlong rush to power and eventual catastrophe.

The Nazi tactics are carefully dissected by the professor and their startling similarity to the words of the park speaker lead the young American to see the light. What the professor did not fully understand in Berlin in 1932, he can explain to the American in 1946.

Paramount Pictures is releasing the film in 35 mm. throughout the country as a non-profit public service. If it isn't scheduled for your local theater, request that the manager book it. It can also be obtained for showings at union meetings.

SECOND in the series of fine films is "Teamwork", the army's story of the accomplishments of Negro soldiers in the war. This solid ten-minute short, one of the finest yet presented to the American public, performs a valuable service depicting the important role the Negro troops played in the defeat of the Axis. It is particularly pertinent at this time when the army has put a ban on Negro enlistments.

This Negro soldier was an expert communications specialist with the U. S. Signal Corps in France. Under the most hazardous battle conditions he kept important messages flowing between front line units. His story is told in "Teamwork".

As the battle scenes flashed across the screen, I remembered with some feeling a solid month spent on the Anzio beachhead, constantly under attack by the Luftwaffe and long range German railroad guns. Every morning the Messerschmidts came over the horizon with the sun. But a mighty cheer would go up from the sailors at their guns (even the Southerners) as the valiant Negro pilots of the 99th Fighter Squadron flew in from the Naples area to drive off Hitler's supermen.

Every ounce of material that reached the hard pressed front lines was put ashore by Negro port battalions working in the midst of increasing shell and bomb bursts.

One of the most effective scenes in "Teamwork" shows the Normandy beachhead defenses and our convoys moving in in irresistable fashion. As the D-Day attack opens, the narrator says:

"These are the sacred shores of the Fortress Europe.

"And approaching those shores is the mongrel American Army. Protestant and Catholic, Jew and Gentile, rich man and poor man, black man and white—they all hit the same beach under the same enemy fire.

"When they were hit, they felt the same pain. The same kinds of blood flowed from their wounds. They established their beachhead and they held it . . . the Americans had landed."

The picture pays tribute to the finest transportation job of the entire war—the Redball Express—and ends with a close-up of white and Negro troops marching in a victory parade.

Bilbo and Talmadge won't see "Don't Be A Sucker" or "Teamwork" but the majority of Americans will see the shorts, like them and take heed. In fact, both should be recommended showings for the Army and Navy "brass" as well as Attorney General Tom Clark, all of whom seem to have short memories when it comes to the lessons of the German fiasco. "Teamwork" is available in 35 mm for commercial or organizational bookings from Mayer-Burstyn, 1481 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Felix Bressart, one of the stars in the army's newly released short, "Don't Be A Sucker," points out the "true aryan characteristics" to his class in a German university in the early thirties. An Aryan is "slender" like bemedaled Goering.

Scene from "Don't Be A Sucker" shows a Catholic priest being carried off to a concentration camp by Nazi stormtroopers. He joined thousands of other ministers and rabbis who dared speak of the Brotherhood of Mankind.

14 PCT. FOOD PRICE BOOSTS SET RECORD

RETAIL food prices shot up 13.8% in one month, June 15 to July 15, to break all U. S. records, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported this week. The BLS survey that revealed the jump was made after Congress failed to extend the old price control act, while subsidies were ended and price controls were suspended.

Forerunner of even worse to come was the report this week from Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. that wholesale food prices for the week ending Aug. 6 set an all-time record. The D & B index stood at $5.32, 2c above the record set on July 31, 1919. A year ago the index was $4.07.

In Washington, the OPA and the people were already feeling the effects of Congressional weakening of the price control law.

OPA said it was forced, by the new Congressional pricing policy, to lift cotton apparel prices in retail stores an estimated 8% and raise the retail price of items such as sheets and towels by 17%.

The new increases will be in addition to the 11% rise announced a week ago on men's shirts, shorts and pajamas.

The 13.8% rise in food prices, along with other increases, caused a 5½% rise in general prices paid by consumers, the BLS reported. However, raises in rents were not included in the BLS survey.

The prices surveyed by the BLS are for living essentials for moderate income families.

The BLS said the June 15-July 15 rise brought the consumers' price index to about 140% of the 1935-39 average. The index rose about 9% from V-J Day and 8% from January 15 to July 15, 1946, the BLS declared.

The agency reported that the 13.8% rise in retail food prices was due mainly to increases of about 30% in meat prices and 20% in dairy product prices.

"There were increases between June 15 and July 15 in prices of bituminous coal and coke," said BLS—an afterthought for the winter!

BUYERS ON STRIKE. Members of the Wausau, Wis., local of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers this week urged customers not to pay inflationary prices for goods that they don't really need.

PROTEST PRICE RISES

MORE than 5,000 people packed Madison Square Park in N. Y. City this week to protest rising prices in a demonstration duplicated in many other cities.

The meeting, called by the N. Y. City CIO Council, heard a message from CIO Pres. Philip Murray that "we now have 'rationing in reverse'—a vicious method by which the well-to-do can buy all they need. Meanwhile," said Murray, "America's workers are fighting for their very existence."

Sen. James M. Mead (D., N.Y.) told the crowd that "the present OPA bill leaves us on top of an economic bomb but the fuse is not lighted as it would have been if the authors of the crippling amendments had their way in the Senate."

Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman of the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee, called the OPA bill inadequate.

"Taft (Sen. Taft, R., O.) wrote the bill. Truman signed it and the people will repudiate it," Kingdon said.

Other speakers included Rep. Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), Councilman Michael J. Quill and Martin Miller, national legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Cooperation with all other groups interested in keeping down prices was urged by Murray, in his call for price control demonstrations.

"Together with citizens in every section of the land," he wired the meeting, "we will press forward our campaign for thorough-going price control, for barriers against profiteering, for consumers' action and consumers' strikes if necessary—and above all, for the election next November of a Congress prepared to act in the interests of the people."

LIVING COST NO. 1 ON CIO ACTION LIST

TOP space on the agenda was reserved for price control and what to do about it as leading officers from all CIO international unions flocked to Washington, D. C. to meet with CIO-Pres. Philip Murray Wednesday, Aug. 15 at the Mayflower Hotel.

CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan said the meeting will be concerned primarily with the new price control law and the formulation of policy in connection with it. The CIO is demanding that controls be re-established for food products.

Meanwhile, three of CIO's big unions talked about wage increases as a means of offsetting the cut in pay caused by price inflation.

● The Packinghouse Workers, in wage negotiations with the Swift Co. are seeking a guaranteed annual wage and a $1 an hour minimum. The company has requested a wage freeze. Pres. Ralph Helstein of the Union said: "We will not stand for a wage freeze when the packers led the fight against OPA and started this inflationary period."

● The executive board of Ford Local 600 of the CIO Auto Workers Union unanimously adopted a sharply worded resolution calling for reopening of wage negotiations, an end to speedup, and an organized fight for price reductions. Fifteen presidents of Chrysler locals have asked the UAW-CIO executive board to allow reopening of wage negotiations.

● The executive board of the CIO Oil Workers, meeting in pre-convention session at Fort Worth, Tex., declared that "workers in the oil industry have had their purchasing power cut 25% since June 30."

The board said that oil companies will net about a billion dollars in the coming year by raising crude oil prices 25c a barrel and boosting gasoline prices 1c or 2c a gallon since petroleum products were exempt from the new price control bill.

"The nation's oil workers," the board said, "do not intend to stand idly by while their living standards are cut drastically and oil company profits soar to new heights."

AID POLIO VICTIMS

With the increasing number of polio cases throughout the nation, the American Red Cross has recruited almost 300 nurses from all sections of the country for special infantile paralysis service in a dozen states hardest hit by the disease.

MIXUP ON BACK PAY CLARIFIED

Opposition by the CIO, the Railway Brotherhoods and the Dept. of Labor has successfully defeated a Congressional measure designed to nullify all back pay grievances for reinstated older employes who had suffered demotion due to seniority preference for war veterans.

Though the Supreme Court invalidated super-seniority for veterans in the Fishgold case, many companies refused to pay back wages to employes reinstated as a result of the decision. The refusal was made on the grounds that bills were pending in Congress which would nullify all back pay adjustments.

Unions are advised to press for full settlement to compensate older employes for wages lost, according to Meyer Bernstein, of the CIO Veterans Committee.

HOGS LEAD WAY

Newspapers reported last week that hog prices, up an average of 75% over old OPA ceilings, hit new highs in at least two major markets and stayed at near record levels in all other markets. The old ceiling was $14.85, while the average price last week was over $23.

Wage Stabilization

LABOR cannot continue to participate in a stabilization program in which wages are rolled back while at the same time increases in cost of living become a daily occurrence. A stabilization program which means curbs on wage increases and soaring price increases is not a stabilization program but a fraud.

If the wage stabilization program is to continue, it must be revised to take account of the vast increase in prices and the increase in the cost of living which have occurred during the past six months. It must be made responsive to the runaway prices which now confront us.

The stabilization program as it is presently constituted is a noose around the neck of labor. It is unfair and inequitable.

LABOR'S acceptance of any form of wage stabilization is possible only if there is an immediate roll back of food prices and an administration of the present Price Control Act which will produce a maximum control of all prices.

The future of wage stabilization will be decided in the next 30 days. If prices continue to rise, the pressure of rising prices will sweep away the entire wage stabilization program. We cannot accept a situation in which wages are frozen while the cost of living soars.

On July 18, the CIO Executive Board urged the President of the U. S. to call before him in immediate conference, representatives of American labor and industry to the end that the demand and need for immediate wage increases may be given full and official recognition and to the end that the crisis created by the drive to cripple and destroy price control may be met quickly through adequate guarantees for a stabilized national economy.

Resolutions adopted unanimously at the special, enlarged conference of representatives of CIO international unions and state and city CIO councils, held in Washington, D. C., Aug. 15.

This was not an idle gesture. The necessity for such a conference at this time is even greater than it was a month ago. The necessity for a joint conference to curb rising prices and to protect the wage and living standards of the American people is imperative if the crisis which now threatens to engulf the nation is to be solved.

Background of Inflation—Threat to America

THE American people are being made increasingly aware of a wide-spread and sinister conspiracy on the part of organized employers in this country to depress real wages, to establish speed-ups, to pyramid profits, and to torpedo the living standards of all the people.

When American labor, led by the CIO, obtained during the early months of this year modest wage increases which only partially compensated for the loss in take-home pay resulting from reconversion, this sinister organized group in industry proceeded promptly and effectively to demolish the new wage levels.

This was done by seeking and obtaining from OPA fabulous price increases wholly out of proportion to the wage increases which had been granted. In industry after industry, automobile, grain, electrical, textile and others, huge increases were authorized. In addition decontrols were obtained from OPA on a wholesale basis.

The result of this greedy foray against wage and living standards became apparent long before the passage of the new Price Control Act.

AS part of this campaign to depress real wage levels, industry then proceeded to launch a ferocious attack against the retention of any form of price control.

Still dissatisfied with the fabulous profits made possible by lax enforcement of the OPA pricing standards, American industrial monopoly sought an entirely free hand in its movement against wage and living standards.

This attack was based upon the argument and the threat that only high prices would remedy existing shortages of goods and materials.

Profit-hungry lobbies sought to blackmail the housewife hunting desperately for meat, the veteran in search of a home, the starving peoples of the world looking to America for food upon the argument that only with rising prices can full production be obtained.

This attempt to glamorize excessive profits will not bear examination. Even Civilian Production Administrator Small, who has demonstrated himself to be no friend of price control, has publicly admitted that high prices will not bring goods into the market.

During the recent war we achieved the greatest production in our history, more than double 1929 and two and one-half times that of 1935-1939. We did it with and through price control. Nor did profits suffer. Gross profits rose from $5.3 billion annually in 1936-1939 to $22.7 billion in 1942-1945. Profit after taxes more thna doubled, keeping pace with production.

Price control assured an orderly flow of material into production and stability in labor relations. It is no less essential now to insure the orderly transition to the full production-full employment economy pledged by the Administration.

The facts in our present ominous situation demonstrate the selfish and greedy role which large scale American monopoly is playing. Today there is "full production." While prices skyrocket, shortages of goods and materials nevertheless persist. Warehouses and stockpiles are bulging with shirts, refrigerators, building materials and other vitally needed goods. Profits continue to soar.

Only the worker's real income and the living standards of the people as a whole have become increasingly undermined and depressed. The cry that high prices will bring an abundance of goods into the market has proved to be false.

IN the face of their effective assault upon real wages and their growing profits, American monopoly employers continue to remain unappeased. They continue their attack upon wage and living standards and their quest for further profits.

There is a concerted and sinister campaign to attribute continuing shortages to labor disputes and to continue to make American labor the scapegoat for a still unappeased hunger for profits. But the record shows that the present shortages are merely the impact of a long series of shortages artificially created by employers for the sake of profits.

In the Fall of 1945 a major section of American industry staged a mass sitdown strike in order to forestall wage movements and to obtain the benefits of the repeal of the excess profits tax.

During the early part of 1946 these same powerful employers persisted in their campaign against American wage standards by denying pleas for wage adjustments to restore cuts in take-home pay and resorted to the iniquitous carry-back provisions of the tax law which subsidized their conspiracy against the public welfare and which permitted them to blackmail labor and the public without financial loss.

During the past six months, powerful forces in the textile and machine tools and mining industries and, most recently, the leather industry, have dealt our economy a Pearl Harbor by refusing to produce until their greed for profits was fully satisfied.

Thousands of producers of vitally needed capital and consumer goods have trampled upon the needs of the public welfare in jockeying for foreign markets and for a post-war competitive position. There has been flagrant discrimination against goods and materials required by the mass of the people in favor of specialized and limited markets which offer an opportunity for increased profit margins.

The plain fact is that big industry in this country has deliberately created scarcities and hoarded goods for the purpose of generating consumer pressure against OPA and in pursuance of a conspiracy to depress the wage and living standards of the American people.

These repeated strikes on the part of industry have threatened and continue to threaten to engulf our economy in a ruinous inflation. No one will be deceived by the shameless efforts of big industry to ascribe its ominous course of conduct to American labor.

IN an effort further to multiply profits and to conceal the fact that existing shortages are a result of a single-minded quest for higher profits, large scale American industry now hypocritically raises the cry of "production."

Parroting the same phrases and acting concertedly these large scale industrialists now resort to demagogic and false accusations that the ills of our economy result from the fact that American workers are not producing adequately.

These employer groups now seek additional profits by an attack upon American wage and living standards through the

Price Control

1. Consumer Resistance. Because of the inadequate legislation which Congress has enacted for the extension of price control, and in view of the present trend to lenient administrative policies, organized labor in its fight against inflation must put chief reliance in the development of wide-spread resistance to rising prices in the form of buyers' strikes, organized protests against price increases, and against any surrender by government agencies to the inflationary demands of big business and organized industrial power.

Committees representing consumer organizations of all kinds are already active in many cities. They are developing mass pressure against the purchase of goods at inflated prices and are protesting unjustifiable price increases. All CIO International Unions should participate in the work of these committees, and every practicable assistance to their efforts will be rendered to them by CIO.

Aided by the reports on the administration of the new price control law which the CIO will provide, the International Unions should undertake to give full information to their numbers on the trend of price control and to encourage vigorous demands upon the price control agencies of government to exercise their administrative discretion for the possible price control.

2. Administration of Price Control. The intent of Congress to require relaxation of price controls and to institute progressive liquidation of these safeguards is made clear by the law which it has enacted.

Three administrative agencies—OPA, Department of Agriculture, and the Price Decontrol Board—have been given, however, considerable latitude of maximum participation by its Cost of Living Committee as an advisory body in the making of the administrative decisions and will demand the most rigorous policy permissible under the new law to retain controls upon prices and to hold prices down.

Throughout the war, labor placed major reliance upon government powers for the control of prices. While the terms of the new law remove much of the basis for reliance upon government action henceforth, the CIO will continue to press for the maximum protection possible against rising prices.

It will take pains to keep the record clear on the administrative policy of the government agencies charged with the enforcement of price controls, and it has directed its Cost of Living Committee to report regularly upon all significant decisions that are made to remove commodities from price control, to increase their prices, or to enhance the swollen profits of industry.

The full story must be related as it unfolds. At all times we must guard against the possibility that the membership of our unions be misled into believing that they have a protection in this price control law which they do not have.

3. Subsidies. Contrary to the impression which the public has received from press accounts, the use of subsidies to hold food prices down may be continued under the new law without significant impairment. Congress has directed that these subsidies be terminated April 1, 1947, but it has provided funds for continuing them substantially at the June 30 rates until that date.

While insisting that the food items temporarily decontrolled by Congress be restored to control on August 21, as the law permits, the CIO will also insist that food subsidies be restored at the maximum rates permitted.

Particularly it will demand that subsidies be paid to roll back the cost of milk to consumers two and three cents a quart, thus reversing the increase which occurred when subsidies were suspended on July 1.

It will demand that prices of the major items of fats and oils be held down through subsidy payments so that all families may have some opportunity to buy these foods of which a severe scarcity is now in sight.

4. Monetary and Fiscal Policy. The price control law directs the President to recommend monetary and fiscal policies to supplement price and wage controls, such recommendations to be sent to Congress as soon as practicable and not later than January 15, 1947.

The CIO is studying the possibilities of restraining inflation by these means with a view to making an early recommendation to the President on behalf of its affiliated organizations.

It is not open to doubt that if the Congress is prepared, by a firm policy of taxing speculative profits, to remove the incentives that exist for the hoarding of goods and the manipulation of prices, inflation can and will be substantially checked.

These and other measures of fiscal or monetary control will be fully explored with a view to shaping proposals which the President might recommend and the Congress enact for the protection of our membership and all other consumers from the intolerable and avoidable robbery by inflation to which they are now exposed.

CIO Meet Hits Wage Freeze While Prices Run Wild

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

BITTER and angered by recent soaring price increases and tremendous rises in the cost of living, 300 union officials attending a special CIO emergency conference in Washington last week "went on the warpath" against profiteers and their stooges in government and in the press.

In an action-crammed, four-hour session, the delegates debated and voted resolutions to:

1. Fight the trend of rising prices by consumer action and demands for a strengthening of government enforcement.

2. Refuse to accept a situation where wages are stabilized and "frozen" while prices and profits run wild.

3. Attack the concept that speed-up working practices aimed at producing more work from fewer employes at less pay will bring real production and end the inflationary danger.

Called by Pres. Murray, the delegates came from every section of the country. They included national officers of almost every affiliated union, state and city council officials, and regional directors of the CIO.

They heard the CIO president sound a sober warning of a big business effort to rob the workers of their living standards while corporate nests are feathered with super-profits.

In the steel industry alone, Murray said, the real earnings of the average worker have dropped $11.04 a week about 20% —in the year since May 1945. About $5.62 of that amount is represented by a loss in actual cash, due to a shorter work week, and the balance comes from an estimated 12% increase in the cost of living during the 14-month period.

"That happened," Murray said, "despite the 18½ cent increase we won early this year."

In the automobile industry, according to a statement presented to the conference, gross weekly earnings have dropped by 15% since April 1945.

THE statement, approved at a meeting of the CIO vice-presidents a day before the emergency conference, recalled government's efforts to keep wage increases down on the promise that it would also keep the lid on prices and the cost of living. That promise, the CIO statement said, has not been kept.

"The cold and unsympathetic treatment which labor received at the Wage Stabilization Board contrasts sharply with the enthusiastic price rises which were initiated at the request of employers by OPA," the report pointed out. "It soon became apparent, when the ink of the wage-price regulations (of Feb. 15, 1946) was scarcely dry, that the policy was to be extraordinarily liberal with respect to prices."

OPA leaned over backwards to be nice to industry, the statement charged, and ordered price increases on the flimsiest excuses of big corporations—often on "fictitious" wage increases.

"In a frantic effort to appease Congress, OPA permitted a profit-hungry raid by thousands of American producers upon the income of millions of American workers," it added.

In this situation, "the worker remains a victim of the squeeze between shrinking earnings and rising prices . . . The wage stabilization program is presently being administered on the basis of a situation which is now non-existent."

Wage boosts, the statement pointed out, are being held in line with a cost-of-living rise fixed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics at 33%, although recent changes have brought the index up to at least a 43% jump.

"IF the wage stabilization program is to continue, it must be revised to take account of the vast increase in prices and the increase in the cost of living which have occurred during the past six months. It must be made responsive to the runaway prices which now confront us," the CIO said.

"The stabilization program as it is presently constituted is a noose around the neck of labor. It is unfair and inequitable."

The conference renewed the demand of the CIO Executive Board for a government meeting of labor and industry to effect a "stabilized national economy." No indication of any action has been noted in the White House since the demand, in mid-July.

In calling again for the conference, the CIO delegates pointed out that this is "not an idle gesture . . . The necessity for a joint conference to curb rising prices and to protect the wages and living standards of the American people is imperative if the crisis which now threatens to engulf the nation is to be solved."

PLAIN TALK

From the CIO Resolution on a wage and price program:

"Labor cannot continue to participate in a stabilization program in which wages are rolled back while at the same time increases in the cost of living become a daily occurrence. A stabilization program which means curbs on wage increases and permits soaring price increases is not a stabilization program, but a fraud.

"If the wage stabilization program is to continue, it must be revised to take account of the vast increase in prices and the increase in the cost of living which have occurred during the past six months. . .

"The future of wage stabilization will be decided in the next 30 days. If prices continue to rise, the pressure of rising prices will sweep away the entire wage stabilization program. We cannot accept a situation in which wages are frozen while the cost of living soars."

PHILIP MURRAY

SPEEDUP, LOW PAY NO CURES FOR ECONOMIC ILLS, SAYS CIO

THE CIO struck out this week at the fantastic notion that all the world's economic ills will be cured by workers toiling harder for less pay.

It was an idea that gained growing support from the organs of big business, which had hopped on the word "productivity" as the key to the future.

In confidential news letters and private business messages, the story was spread that the CIO had passed out the word to all its members to work harder and harder, for the glory of the good old boss.

CIO's answer came in clear-cut phrases from the special emergency conference in Washington.

"The CIO repudiates any suggestion that the answer to our economic ills lies in the speedup or in the widespread deterioration of terms and conditions of employment for which many employers in American industry are increasingly responsible," the statement pointed out.

"Twice in the past 25 years, America suffered a depression as a result of the false prophecies of those who offered the American workers a system of speedups and low wages as the cure for their economic ills. The acceptance of such a theory at this time offers only the promise of a new depression to the American people."

The speedup propaganda drive originates among employing groups who are not yet satisfied with the super-profits they have reaped from soaring prices and cuts in take-home pay.

AMERICAN monopoly is playing an unprecedentedly "selfish and greedy role," the CIO statement charged.

"While prices sky-rocket, shortages of goods and materials nevertheless persist," it said. "Warehouses and stockpiles are bulging with shirts, refrigerators, building materials, and other vitally needed goods . . . The cry that high prices will bring an abundance of goods into the market has proved to be false."

The effort of the profiteers to pass along price rises to consumers and the blame for price rises to workers constitutes a "sinister and concerted campaign," CIO declared. Pointing to the record, it charged that the shortages of goods were "artificially created by employers for the sake of profits."

In the last few months, the statement said, "powerful forces in the textile, machine tools and mining industries and, most recently, in the leather industry have dealt our economy a 'Pearl Harbor' by refusing to produce until their greed for profits was fully satisfied."

Industry's cry for greater "productivity" by labor is merely a false alarm to conceal the fact that current shortages of goods stem from the all-out quest for bigger and better profits.

"Parroting the same phrases and acting concertedly, these large-scale industrialists now resort to demagogic and false accusations that the ills of our economy result from the fact that American workers are not producing adequately.

"These employer groups now seek additional profits by an attack upon American wage and living standards through the speedup and other devices."

'Living Costs Must Drop'

A FOUR-POINT program, aimed at keeping prices from "breaking the top of the thermometer" was approved at the CIO's special Washington conference last week as delegates from every part of the nation emphasized the serious need for real price control.

The CIO program rests on four major points—consumer resistance, militant enforcement of OPA laws, continued payment of government food subsidies, and a progressive tax policy to siphon off the superprofits of the rich.

In the latter connection, Pres. Murray announced that CIO is retaining the services of outstanding tax experts to develop a program for submission to Pres. Truman and Congress.

"If Congress is prepared, by a firm policy of taxing speculative profits, to remove the incentives that exist for the hoarding of goods and the manipulation of prices, inflation can and will be substantially checked," the CIO statement predicted.

Of more immediate importance, however, was the strong ratification of the move to form consumer groups in every community. These consumer defense committees, the CIO resolution said, are "developing mass pressure" against the buying of goods at inflated prices.

All CIO international unions were called upon to assist in the work of the committees, and "every practicable assistance to their efforts" was promised by CIO itself.

The resolution made clear that CIO has no romantic illusions about the ability of OPA to woo prices back in line because of the haphazard structure of the new price control bill.

THE reliance which unions placed on the government to enforce price controls throughout the war is now impossible, but "CIO will continue to press for the maximum protection against rising prices," the statement said. "It will take pains to keep the record clear on the administrative policy of the government agencies charged with the enforcement of price controls," and will report regularly to the membership.

But it warned affiliated unions to "be on guard at all times" against the possibility that the membership may be misled into believing that OPA can give true protection against increases.

In its final action on the subject, CIO issued a demand for the immediate re-institution of subsidies "at the maximum rates permitted" to hold down food prices. Appropriations are sufficient to maintain these subsidies at full rates until April 1, 1947, and CIO will insist that the funds be expended without stint until that time.

FOUR-ALARM FIRE

OUR house is on fire. And because it's a big house—occupied by all the American people—it's a big blaze. The flames of sky-rocketing prices, the smoke of burning wages and savings, the heat of popular discontent can be seen or felt by all.

The living standards of our people have already been sharply cut by the lowered value of the dollar. Their purchasing power has been reduced. Suffering is increasing among all with low or fixed incomes.

Our hoped-for postwar prosperity is burning up in a blaze of inflation. Our house must be saved now, if we are not to be left with the slow and painful task of rebuilding it later from the smoldering embers of depression and unemployment.

★ ★ ★

THE CIO's emergency conference was called to sound the alarm, to arouse labor and all the people, to bring out the fire-engines, to turn on the hose.

Labor has been the first to suffer from the present inflation.

Conservative government estimates show that the take-home pay of all manufacturing workers is now 8½% below what it was in April 1945. In durable goods industries, it has declined more than 13%.

Even the Bureau of Labor Statistics index, which understates the rise in living costs, shows an increase of nearly 10½% in the same period. So, including this increase in cost of living, the real income of all factory workers has dropped more than 18% since April 1945, and that of durable goods workers by more than 22%.

★ ★ ★

TO hold in check the fire started by the wrecking of the Price Control Act, the CIO conference called for "widespread resistance to rising prices in the form of buyers' strikes, organized protests against price increases, and against any surrender by government agencies to the inflationary demands of big business."

It noted that considerable discretion has been left to the administrators of the new laws, called for labor participation in their decisions, and demanded that the law be so administered as to insure maximum protection against rising prices.

The conference further noted that subsidies may still be used to hold food prices down. It insisted they be restored to roll back the cost of food. It also demanded that all food items temporarily decontrolled by Congress be restored to control.

★ ★ ★

THE CIO denounced the present wage stabilization program, which curbs wage increases while prices are allowed to soar, as a fraud and a noose around the neck of labor.

It renewed its demand for a government-labor-industry conference, to adjust wages to increased living costs, to curb prices and to guarantee a stabilized national economy.

At the same time, the CIO served notice it was preparing a tax program through which Congress might check inflation "by a firm policy of taxing speculative profits, to remove the incentives that exist for the hoarding of goods and the manipulation of prices."

★ ★ ★

BUT while we rush out all our fire-fighting apparatus, we must not forget the firebugs who started the conflagration—the members of Congress who voted to wreck price control.

Through the PAC, the CIO is launching a great election campaign to prevent inflationary fire-bugs from returning to Congress, and to elect a new Congress that will take effective action to end inflation and prevent its recurrence in the future.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

A FAST TALKER can talk a lot of folks out of their money. But if they catch him red-handed picking their pockets, he'll need more than fast-talk.

The American people have been kidded plenty by fast talkers. The present composition of Congress is witness to that fact.

But opinion polls show that very few Americans have been kidded about price control and inflation, despite some of the most expert and extensive fast-talk on record.

People who have found their money vanishing and seen the hands that are taking it aren't inclined to believe the pickpocket when he says, "I didn't do it. It's that fellow over there."

★ ★ ★

When Congress, stooging for big business, virtually destroyed price control, a terrific propaganda campaign was launched to "alibi" this unpopular action and its inflationary results.

This propaganda claimed that prices wouldn't go up much, or if they did, would soon go down again as supply caught up with demand; and that the present inflation was caused by labor's wage increases.

In other words, the pickpocket caught red-handed tried to talk himself out of it by saying no money had been stolen and, "Anyhow I didn't take it; it was that fellow over there."

★ ★ ★

THE ANSWER of the American people to this line of fast-talk is "Nuts"—judging from subsequent opinion polls.

A recent Gallup poll shows that 92% of the people questioned expect prices will go up still further in the next six months.

For this inflation, 20% blamed Congress and 12% big business. Only 5% fell for the pickpockets' propaganda by blaming labor unions and strikes.

A Washington Post poll of District of Columbia residents—the folks closest to the scene of the crime—is even more emphatic.

It shows 65% of the people—and 76% of those with family incomes under $3,000 a year—saying OPA should have been kept unchanged.

For inflationary price raises, 41% blamed Congress, 13% business and only 9% labor.

★ ★ ★

BUT STILL the fast-talk goes on. It gets even faster and louder, as suffering increases from soaring prices.

A crime has been committed and, just as in detective fiction, the authors of the current propaganda are using every possible device to divert suspicion to the innocent and away from the real criminal.

But we don't have to wait till the end of the story—wading through pages of inflation, depression and human suffering—to find out "who done it."

★ ★ ★

THE WAGE increases won by the CIO only partially compensated for the loss in post-war take-home pay. Take-home pay is now lower than it was at the close of the war, quite apart from the much greater loss in real wages, due to higher prices.

But, with or without this wage excuse, big business at once set about extorting outrageous profits through price increases out of all proportion to the small increases in labor costs.

As a result, in the second quarter of 1946—after these wage increases, and even before the wrecking of price control—profits of 300 major corporations, according to the National City Bank, were "almost double those of the preceding quarter, and 12% higher than in the second quarter of 1945."

★ ★ ★

BIG BUSINESS monopolists caused the present inflation, not only by these price increases, not only by wrecking price control, but also by creating a long series of of shortages.

In the fall of 1945, industry held up production awaiting repeal of the excess profits tax. Early in 1946, it took advantage of carry-back tax subsidies for not producing, by forcing stoppages to hold up labor and the country for low wages and high prices.

Similar production hold-ups and hoarding of goods are still going on in many industries, for the purpose of extracting still higher prices and profits.

In a word, we're being robbed right and left by monopolists who want inflationary prices, ballooning profits and low real wages. But, at least, we don't have to be kidded by their fast-talk.

SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT PREPARED BY CIO & CIO POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE

BREAK REACTION'S GRIP

WHAT THE SENATE DID

"This last Congress did a bum job. I'm here to say that the next one had better be better!"

A Note of Explanation...

THIS is a record of the 79th Congress that failed to act on many of the most important issues affecting the welfare of the people. Congress mangled price control. It looked the other way on housing. It buried health and minimum wage legislation. It refused even to debate the question of an extended Fair Employment Practices Committee, to abolish racial discrimination. It failed to act on the anti-polltax bill. It watered down the full employment bill.

The 79th Congress was pleasing to the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. Congress adopted 11 bills which NAM supported; Congress defeated 10 bills which the NAM opposed.

The American people fared less well at the hands of the law makers than did the powerful NAM. Between now and November the people must rally their forces. Labor, farmers, consumers, small businessmen, professional people—all must turn to political action to make sure that the next session of Congress will heed their plight and act in their behalf.

This special supplement was prepared by the CIO Legislative and Publicity Depts. and the CIO-Political Action Committee, as a weapon in the coming battle of ballots. On the following pages, you can find how your Congressman and Senators voted on 12 issues of major importance to the American people.

This voting guide does not constitute a "black list" or a list of endorsed candidates. Political action comes from the people at home, in the state or the Congressional district. PAC endorsement of a candidate is based on many factors. This voting record attempts to turn the spotlight on only one factor—the formal votes on the floor of House and Senate.

A voting record must be read with an understanding of its limitations. It does show the black-and-white record of votes. It does not show how a Congressman or Senator voted in committee or how he talked in debate. It does not show whether he fought aggressively for or against a particular issue, or whether he merely went along. Your Representatives and Senators know that. Frequently they play for the record in the same way that a ball player "plays for the grandstand."

Nevertheless, the voting record shows—in general—how your Congressmen acted during the past session. If you want further details, contact the PAC committee of your local or international union; or write to your union's legislative representative in Washington; or to Nathan Cowan, CIO Legislative Director, 718 Jackson Pl. N. W., Washington 6, D. C.; or to CIO-PAC, 205 East 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

ISSUES IN THE SENATE*

Here's an explanation of the issues selected for the voting record on the next page. Read these summaries to understand the signficance of the major votes—then see how your Senators stand up.

1. CASE BILL—HOBBS "ANTI-RACKET" AMENDMENT. This was one of several amendments added to the Case Bill by anti-labor Senators. It wrote into the Case Bill all the provisions of the Hobbs Bill, which would hamstring labor in the courts. (After the Case Bill was vetoed, the Hobbs Bill was passed separately by Congress and signed by Pres. Truman). It gives anti-union employers a chance to shout "racketeer" when they fight labor. Opposed by CIO. Passed 59-22 on May 25, 1946.

2. CASE ANTI-UNION BILL. This was the measure which "threw the book" at labor with a spicey brew of restrictions. It would have watered down the Wagner Act, repealed the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act, permitted widespread suits against unions in Federal courts. Opposed by CIO. Passed, 49-29, on May 25, 1946, but President's veto was sustained in the House.

3. TRUMAN ANTI-LABOR BILL. This measure, outlawing strikes in plants seized by the government, was a blow at civil rights. It provided for drafting of strikers into army, sweeping penalties against strikers and union leaders. Opposed by CIO. Passed 61-20 on May 31, 1946; but House failed to act and the bill never became law.

4. PATMAN VETERANS' HOUSING BILL—REVERCOMB AMENDMENT. This removed price ceilings from existing homes; it was a blow at price control and at the federal home-building program. Opposed by CIO. Amendment passed by 41-33 on April 10, 1946. Patman bill, in weakened form, was eventually passed and became law; but Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill, badly needed to spur homes program, failed to come up for vote in House. It had been approved by voice vote in the Senate.

5. FEPC—CLOTURE RULE. This was the Senate's key test on racial discrimination. Supporters of the Fair Employment Practices Commission sought a cloture rule, which would have limited debate and avoided a polltaxers' filibuster. Supported by CIO. With a two-thirds vote needed, results were 36-48 against, on February 9, 1946. As a result, the FEPC bill never came up for a vote.

6. 65c MINIMUM WAGE BILL—RUSSELL AMENDMENT. The 65c Wage Bill would have lifted base pay for workers from 40c-an-hour starvation level to 65c and more. Unable to defeat it, opponents of the bill tacked on the Russell amendment to give big price bonuses to farm commodity speculators. Amendment brought a warning from Pres. Truman that he would be forced to veto. Senators voting for the Russell amendment knew they were voting to kill the Minimum Wage Bill. Amendment opposed by CIO. Passed by Senate, 43-31, on March 29, 1946.

7. BRITISH LOAN—McFARLAND AMENDMENT. This would have given U. S. an option on British strategic bases; it would have made loan impossible for Great Britain to accept without humiliation. Loan was necessary to spur international trade and recovery from war. Amendment opposed by CIO. Amendment passed 43-31 March 29, 1946; subsequently Senate reconsidered and without a record vote defeated the crippling amendment and approved the loan.

8. PRICE CONTROL—TAFT AMENDMENT. This would have guaranteed price mark-ups to manufacturers and distributors of goods, without regard to their present profits, by basing ceilings on "average" increase of production costs since October, 1941. Would have destroyed effective OPA. Opposed by CIO. Amendment passed, 44-29 on June 12, 1946.

9. PRICE CONTROL—WHERRY AMENDMENT No. 1. This amendment would have lifted all price ceilings and controls from livestock, poultry, eggs and their by-products. Opposed by CIO. Passed by 49-26 vote on July 9, 1946.

10. PRICE CONTROL—WHERRY AMENDMENT No. 2. This would have lifted all controls and price ceilings from milk and such by-products as cream, butter, cheese, ice cream, etc. Opposed by CIO. Passed by 51-27 vote on July 10, 1946.

11. PRICE CONTROL—PEPPER "AS IS" AMENDMENT. This would have substituted a simple extension of the old price control act for the amendment-ridden bill then under consideration. Strongly supported by CIO. Defeated by 52-23 vote, on July 12, 1946.

12. ANTI-POLLTAX BILL—CLOTURE RULE. This was an effort to limit debate and forestall filibuster on the bill to remove the polltax in federal elections in seven southern states. Cloture rule was only method possible of avoiding filibuster and bringing the issue up for a vote before Congress adjourned. Cloture was strongly supported by CIO. With two-thirds vote necessary, cloture was defeated, though its supporters mustered a majority, 39-33, on July 31, 1946.

WHAT THE HOUSE DID

"Sure I've tried to find a decent house to live in. I like my mother-in-law, but not enough to live with her all the time. But housing is scarcer around here than a blonde in Tokyo.

"I wrote my Congressman about it. It didn't seem to do any good.

"Frankly, mister, I'm sore that Congress missed the boat on the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill. They'd better do something about it next time — or I'll know the reason why."

ISSUES IN THE HOUSE*

Scores of bills were acted upon by the House of Representatives. On these pages are the record of how your Congressmen voted on 12 key issues involving the people's welfare. Here's a quick look at the highly significant issues chosen for this record. After reading them over, see how your Congressman stacks up.

1. HOBBS BILL—RULE. The House passed the Hobbs "anti-racket" bill without a record vote—but the votes were noted on the rule by which the measure was brought to the floor for debate. A vote for the rule was a vote for the bill; the bill is a vicious instrument to tie labor up in the courts and to interfere with bona fide picketing and strike activities. Opposed by CIO. Rule was approved by House 259-108, Dec. 11, 1945; bill became law after Senate vote and Presidential signature on July 3, 1946.

2. CASE ANTI-UNION BILL. This would have cut Wagner Act protection to the bone, practically repealed the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction law, severely restricted labor's rights to organize and strike. Opposed by CIO. Passed by House 257-155, Feb. 7, 1946.

3. CASE BILL—PRESIDENT'S VETO. The Case Bill, passed by House and Senate, was vetoed by Pres. Truman because of its loose language, sweeping attack on unions. Veto supported by CIO. House sustained the veto, 255-135—insufficient for the necessary two-thirds to over-ride the President's action, on June 11, 1946.

4. U.S.E.S.—DIRKSEN AMENDMENT. The Dirksen Amendment was intended to return the United States Employment Service to the states on June 30, 1946. This would have tied service up in knots of varying state rules and regulations, hindered the task of placing war workers and vets in new jobs. Opposed by CIO. Passed by House, Jan. 29, 1946.

5. PATMAN HOUSING BILL—PRICE CEILINGS ON EXISTING HOMES. The Patman Housing Bill was intended to help finance homes for vets—a program badly hampered by Congress' failure to pass the long-range Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing Bill. A key section of the Patman Bill provided for price ceilings on existing homes, which would have helped keep down prices on new ones, too. Supported by CIO. This provision was defeated 246-134 on March 6, 1946. The Patman Bill, without this feature, became law May 22, 1946.

6. NLRB—ELLIOTT RIDER. The Elliott Rider was a back-door amendment to the Wagner Act, which took the form of limiting the Labor Board's appropriation. It barred the NLRB from acting in all cases involving hundreds of thousands of food processing workers. It was opposed in the Senate, finally adopted in the form of a limitation only on workers employed on farms. The Elliott Rider was opposed by CIO. Passed by the House 213-136 on July 16, 1946.

7. ATOMIC ENERGY BILL—MOVE TO RECOMMIT. The key issue on the atomic energy bill was whether our greatest potential "powerhouse" would be controlled by civilian government or by the armed forces. With popular and Congressional sentiment favoring civilian control, the Representatives favoring military supervision sought to recommit the bill rather than have any action at all. The move to recommit was opposed by CIO. It was defeated in the House 195-146 on July 20, 1946. The bill subsequently passed.

8. UN-AMERICAN COMMITTEE—APPROPRIATION. Involved in this vote was the question of protecting civil liberties of majority and minority groups from the unprincipled and irresponsible staff of the Wood-Rankin Committee. CIO opposed granting the committee its request for an additional $75,000. House voted the appropriation, 240-81.

9. OPA-WOLCOTT AMDT. No. 1. This proposal would have guaranteed "cost plus" prices on all products controlled by OPA, and would have led to across-the-board increases. This was the strongest amendment offered by price control foes in Congress. Strongly opposed by CIO. Adopted by House, 259-137 on April 17, 1946. Subsequently eliminated from compromise OPA bill.

10. OPA—WOLCOTT AMDT. No. 2. This would have drastically reduced all government subsidies on food commodities and forced an immediate rise in prices. Opposed by CIO. Adopted by House, 245-150 on April 17, 1946.

11. OPA—FLANNAGAN AMDT. This called for ending immediately all government subsidies aimed at keeping down the retail price of meat. Opposed by CIO. Adopted by House, 214-182, on April 17, 1946.

12. OPA—GOSSETT AMDT. This called for removing price ceilings on all commodities when their 12-month production was greater than in 1940-41. It ignored growing population, increased demands, changes in buying habits—and would have "taken the lid off" many products. Opposed by CIO. Approved by House, 228-166, on April 17, 1946.

"Sidney Hillman was a crusader for justice and all the principles of democracy.

"I speak these sentiments in behalf of the millions of organized workers in the United States, and I am sure, the organized workers all over the world.

"We of the CIO pledge ourselves to carry forward the attainment of our political emancipation and our true political freedom, both in the CIO and in all matters pertaining to the activities of the Political Action Committee."

—PHILIP MURRAY

"We want a better America, giving its citizens a higher and higher standard of living, so that no child will cry for food in the midst of plenty. An America where the inventions of science will be at the disposal of every American family, for all groups regardless of race, creed or color to live in friendship.

"We want an America carrying forward its great mission of helping other countries to help themselves—not exploiting but creating plenty for all everywhere."

—SIDNEY HILLMAN

IOMIC BILL OF RIGHTS

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

OF THE UNION, January 11, 1944

hs have become accepted as

All of these rights spell security. And after this war is won, we must be prepared to move forward, in the implementation of these rights, to new goals of human happiness and well-being.

America's own rightful place in the world depends in large part upon how fully these and similar rights have been carried into practice for our citizens. For unless there is security here at home there cannot be lasting peace in the world.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

THE LAST CONGRESS didn't do much for the people. There's a big pile of unfinished business awaiting the representatives you elect in November.

It's your job, as a citizen and voter, to know exactly what the issues are. It's your job, to elect Congressmen who will fight and vote for you. You've got to keep your eye on Congress 365 days of the year, or you'll wind up in trouble.

A majority of the 79th Congress was elected to office on the basis of supporting the progressive people's program of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. You know how many of your Congressmen and Senators forgot their pledges during the past two years.

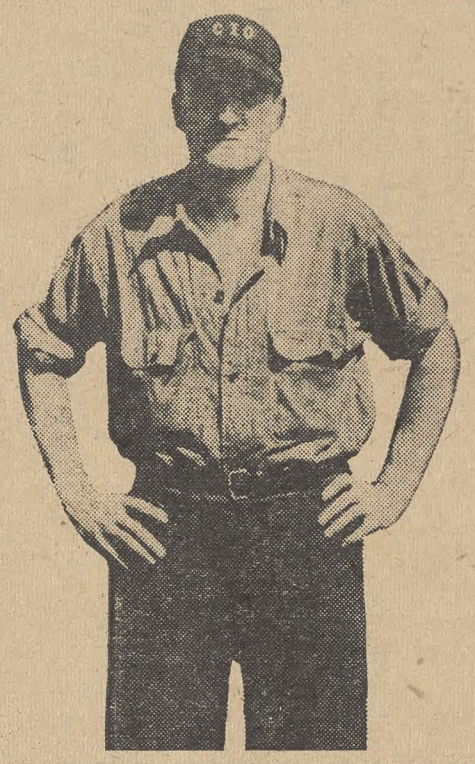
In 1944, under the leadership of a great American, our nation was forging ahead in the world-wide battle against fascism. We looked forward to great social advances at home when our war was won. The 79th Congress failed to live up to that program.

America, in these fluid postwar years, has a golden opportunity to prove to itself and to the world that we can match our great industrial techniques with imaginative programs to help the people.

When the 80th Congress convenes in January, its agenda will be heavy with unfinished business. This is the time to learn the issues— and even more important, to get your future Congressman firmly committed to supporting labor's demands.

"So this bird says, 'Well, what about free enterprise, huh?' That burns me up. Here's Congress giving big business everything but the kitchen sink; but when I want some public health insurance or better social security, they say that's socialism. I say it's baloney.

"I'm for enterprise—but I want protection for my family, too. That next Congress needs to be told to get on the ball and do something for me once in a while."



WHAT ARE those issues?

1. THE STANDARD OF LIVING of the American people. The 79th Congress wrecked the possibility of effective price control. The cost of living is up; up at least 5.5% on a national average since mid-June, up considerably more in many industrial centers. Conservative economists estimate it may be up 20% or 25% by the middle of 1947; OPA spokesmen have said it may jump 35% or 40%.

Obviously the cost of living is problem number one for the next session of Congress. Get your Representatives pledged now to fight for more effective price control, to reinstitute subsidies on foods.

Full employment, at decent wages, under conditions where prices are not excessive, is a "must". The 80th Congress must act for the people, as the 79th Congress acted for the big corporations.

2. HOUSING. ..America needs millions of homes. The Wagner-Ellenden-Taft housing bill died in committee during the 79th Congress. It was the one measure that would have cleared the way for big-scale building of homes at prices that workers and vets can afford. The W-E-T bill was passed by the Senate; but it was stalled in the House Banking & Currency Committee.

Such inaction at a time of crisis is inexcusable—it can't be allowed to happen again.

3. 65c Minimum Wage. Millions of Americans are living on close- to-starvation wages. The present minimum pay set by the Wage-Hour Act is only 40c an hour—$16 a week for 40 hours. No family can live on that sum. But a combination of northern Republicans and southern Democrats fought like caged tigers to prevent passage of the 65c Bill.

They succeeded—through the device of the Pace-Russell amendments. These provided for huge government payments to farm commodity speculators, which would only have helped intensify the inflation. Because of the amendments, the bill was not passed.

Get your Congressman committed to a 65c Minimum Wage Bill and to resisting every effort to load it down with defeatist amendments.

4. THE PEOPLE'S WELFARE. The country's social security system is beginning to look as old-fashioned as an old Model T. Congress had spent $50,000 to study the situation, and had a report recommending improvements and streamlining. But the advice of the people and of the experts went unheeded—with the result that changes, although good in themselves, were just a drop in the bucket.

The Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill lumps all the needed improvements under one title. CIO and progressive organizations have supported it, and they're going to demand its passage at the next session.

The same thing goes for the Wagner-Murray-Dingell health insurance bill. It would set up a nationwide system of payments to finance a real program for the sick and ailing. It doesn't call for charity—each employee would pay for it, just as he does for social security. It wouldn't be "socialized medicine" either.

But it would make possible real medical attention for the millions who need it and can't afford to pay big doctor's bills.

5. ANTI-POLLTAX BILL. If you live in seven southern states, you've got to pay for the right to vote. HR 7, which would have ended that tax on the right to choose your representatives, was stalled in the Senate during the final days of the session.

The fight is going on—and you'd better get your Congressman signed on the dotted line to support the anti-polltax bill and to fight the filibuster bloc from the solid south.

6. LABOR EDUCATION BILL This bill was introduced late in the session, too late for action. It calls for the establishment of an education service in the Dept. of Labor to promote classes for workers, to finance workers' schools and university extension courses. It's long overdue, and badly needed.

THERE ARE LOTS of other good bills that need to pass. And there are lots of bills to rob the people of their progressive gains and civil rights which Congressional reactionaries are sure to push.

The Case bill and other anti-union measures will be in the hopper as soon as Congress reconvenes. There'll be new efforts to cut down the Wagner Act and the Wage-Hour Act. A lot of reactionaries are playing around with schemes to get out from under the tax burden and soak the poor instead. And in the background will be powerful forces trying to move this country into another deadly war.

You've got to be on the alert against them. And you've got to be sure that the Congressmen you elect will be on guard, too.

You can help protect your rights by political action.

Contribute your dollars today. Study the voting record. Get together with your union and help its political action campaign to influence all the voters in your community.

And be sure to register and vote in November for a progressive Congress committed to cleaning up all the unfinished business.

The future is in your hands on election day.

JACK KROLL

Director, CIO Political Action Committee

"Whether or not labor and the people will meet the challenge and realize the opportunity that this Labor Day holds out depends in large measure upon what they do in the short two months remaining before the national elections on November 5, 1946.

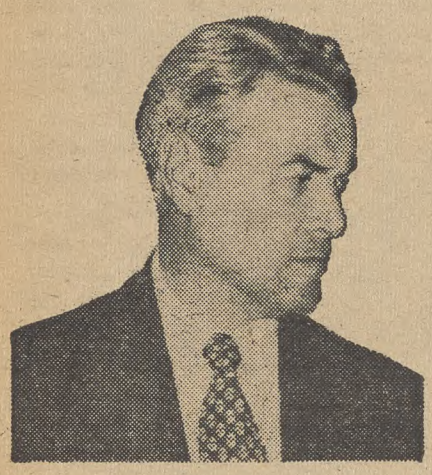
"Labor and the common people have the power to reverse the course chartered by the unlamented 79th Congress. They demonstrated that power in 1944 when they showed that, firmly organized and solidly united, they represent the decisive political force in our nation. The success already achieved in the 1946 primary campaigns re-affirms this basic political truth.

"Labor's 1946 political tasks are clear.

"A militant group of fighting progressives in the House and Senate carried on a consistent and courageous fight for the people's program. America needs them in Washington, and we must spare no effort to assure their re-election.

"Other Congressmen and Senators have spearheaded the reactionary onslaught in brazen violation of the mandate which the people gave them in 1944. They must be repudiated by their electorate and retired to private life.

"The CIO Political Action Committee, its national office, its state and local organizations, and the whole membership of CIO in every shop, mine, mill and factory, must dedicate themselves to these key tasks during the coming two months."



DAVID J. McDONALD

Sec.-Treas., CIO Steelworkers

"After winning a conclusive victory in a long war, America today is facing the problems of peace. They are no less difficult than those of war.

"The United Steelworkers of America are concious of their responsibility to lead in the campaign for effective political action in steel centers throughout the nation. We realize it will be the active participation of every member of our union in cooperation with other CIO groups, in the effort to elect men and women truly representative of the people, which will elect a Congress this year committed to a program of peace, prosperity and progress.

"At our recent international convention, political action was one of the vital subjects to come before the delegates. At that time we resolved to give all-out support to the CIO Political Action Comittee and to carry out our solemn duty and obligation—for the protection of our nation to strive for the complete political unity of all labor and progressive forces to the end that the common people throughout America can attain and enjoy the heritage which is rightfully theirs.

"On this Labor Day, our political action program is clear. To achieve our ends, we are continually striving to strengthen our political action set-up on a local, district and national scale."

GEORGE ADDES

Sec.-Treas., CIO Auto Workers

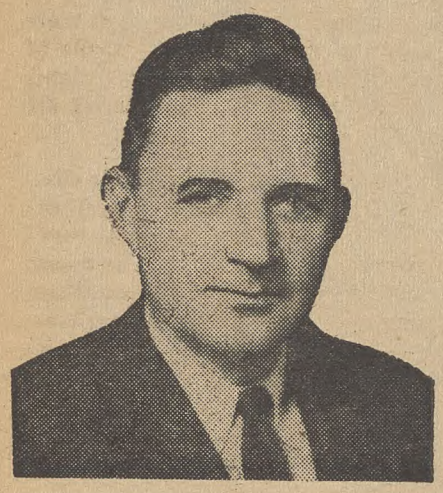
"The events of the 12 months from Labor Day 1945, to Labor Day 1946, have forced the workers of the U. S. to the conclusion that the brave new world of peace, prosperity, and equality—which had been promised by the war leaders of our nation and others—is in grave jeopardy.

"The reactionary monopolists of Wall Street married the reactionary politicians of Capitol Hill during the past year, and already that marriage has produced such misbegotten offspring as the Case Bill, the monstrous Price Control Act, the Lea Act, and the Hobbs Act. Reaction is on the rampage. FEPC is scuttled; the Full Employment Bill is emasculated; social security legislation is blocked; housing legislation is stymied; anti-polltax legislation is shelved 'by an agreement among gentlemen'; talk of new wars fills the air.

Why? Because an unholy axis of reactionary Republicans and polltax Democrats has succeeded in taking control over Congress.

"This reactionary attack against the welfare of the people must be broken, it can be broken, but only if American labor takes the lead in mobilizing the American people for effective political action during the elections of 1946.

"The job will be tough; it will be long. But it will be done, because the peace and security of the people depend upon it."



JULIUS EMSPAK

Sec.-Treas., CIO Electrical Workers

"During the past few months our membership has seen how an anti-labor Congress acted as the accomplice of the corporations in stealing from the people the benefits of wage increases won through the determined fight of the unions of the CIO.

"We have found that it is necessary for labor to organize its struggle for a better standard of living against the political accomplices of big business, as well as against the corporations themselves.

"The 1946 congressional elections, which will have an important bearing upon the outcome of the 1948 national elections, offer to the ordinary people of America an opportunity to loosen the grip of the corporations upon Congress and to check the drive of American big business against the living standards and liberties of the American people as a preliminary to a new war for domination of world markets.

"The Political Action Committee of the CIO is the instrument through which the working people can most effectively carry forward the political side of their fight for a decent living in a peaceful world.

"Our future standards of living, our security and the peace of our country and the rest of the world will be greatly influenced for better or worse by the amount of effort and support that we throw into the PAC campaign.

"We must register, canvass, vote and contribute financially to the workers' political battle against the corporations with the same energy, determination and unity that we showed on our picket lines."

WILLIAM POLLOCK

Sec.-Treas., CIO Textile Workers

"Our Labor Day celebration comes at a most opportune moment, at a time when out of the chaos of a world struggling for full permanent peace and security there rises as never before the unified spirit of working people throughout America, dedicated unswervingly to the basic rights of man.

"We are the people who have not forgotten these rights and on this 64th observance of Labor Day we take time out to review the progress labor has made during the past generation, to mirror our achievements against the job that is yet to be done, and to renew our determination to achieve our ends.

"We know now that economic and political action are indivisible. We know today that we cannot sit idly by while uncontrolled prices, prices legislated by Congress, devour the wage gains won on the picket line.

"Textile workers, who have just won the largest wage increases in their history, are as determined in their new and enthusiastic flowering of political activity as are all workers of CIO to correct this situation.

"American labor speaks out today with one voice for peace, equality and security by bringing to the American people the vital isues of the 1946 elections, by accelerating its drive to register every eligible voter and get them to the polls on Election Day, November 5 in support of progressive candidates.

"This is American labor's answer to enemies in the Congress who seek to destroy it."

"I've seen the record. It's punk, rotten.

"Plenty of other CIO guys feel the same way.

"What are we going to do about it, brother? Plenty!

"I'm going to give a buck to PAC.

"I'm going to be sure to register, and get my family and friends to register.

"And I'm going to vote, me and the millions of other guys like me, we're going to vote to change that Congress."

President Murray addressed the conference as did Director Jack Kroll. Regional Directors were placed in charge of coordinating this all-important work of raising funds for political activity. They will call the International representatives in their respective areas and heads of councils into meetings and collectively map out strategy to bring the message to local representatives.

This is a MUST task. This is a case of striking at the ballot box in behalf of the bread box. Every CIO member should contribute to this fund. It is the only way the workers have of organizing to protect their rights in the halls of Congress. The Congress, just adjourned, will go down in history as the big profit Congress. WE MUST elect a liberal Congress next time!

7000 PHONE WORKERS JOIN CIO

THE TELEPHONE Traffic Employees Organization voted this week by a 2½ to 1 majority in a membership referendum to switch its affiliation from the Natl. Federation of Telephone Workers to the CIO American Communications Assn.

The vote on ACA-CIO affiliation was: 2492 for and 1024 against. The vote on withdrawal from NFTW was: 2590 for and 953 against. A total of 3907 ballots were cast out of 7,088 eligibles.

The TTEO has a contract with the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. covering the 11,000 telephone operators and traffic clerks in northern California and Nevada.

This new affiliation makes ACA the dominant telephone union on the West Coast.

TTEO officers recommended ACA-CIO affiliation May 21, after joint negotiations of all West Coast telephone unions with Pacific Telephone & Telegraph resulted in ACA-CIO getting the best contract, and a $1 per week larger raise and 3 months more back pay than TTEO members got, Marie DeMartini, TTEO general chairman, stated.

SHIP OWNERS FORCE STRIKE

GREAT LAKES shipping was fast coming to a standstill this week-end as members of CIO Natl. Maritime Union on vessels operating in the nation's largest inland waterway were driven to strike by the adamant and arrogant stand of the ship owners.

The ship owners are banded together in the Lake Carriers Assn., maritime counterpart of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. The carriers association includes shipping concerns owned or controlled by U. S. Steel, the Ford Motor Co., International Harvester, Jones & Laughlin Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Inland Steel and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

During negotiations held with U. S. conciliators in Washington earlier this week to avert the tie-up, a representative of the Bethlehem Transportation Co., Bethlehem Steel subsidiary, reiterated the 36-year-old principle of the Lake Carriers Assn. that "the open shop principle be adopted and adhered to on our ships."

Such conversations as were held were between one ship owner and minor representatives, the carriers refusing to meet jointly with the NMU despite a request for such action by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, brought to them by Labor Sec. Schwellenbach.

NMU Pres. Joseph Curran stayed in Washington until three hours after the strike deadline in an effort to work out a settlement and then flew to Cleveland to direct the walkout.

Seeking to avert the strike, the NMU four times modified its demands. After the strike began Curran served notice that the NMU was reverting to its original demands. The key issue was the reduction of the 56-hour week to 40 hours, the standard in auto, steel and other industries which are operated in many cases by the same companies that run the ships.

Original demands included sick leave with pay, guaranteed annual wage, severance pay in event of layoff and high penalty rates to prevent many abuses. The union is also demanding hiring through union halls, increases of from 10 to 18c an hour and overtime payments after eight hours a day and 40 hours a week.

CIO'S DIXIE SCORE: SEVEN TO ONE

CIO unions have won collective bargaining rights for 71 Southern employe groups since the CIO Organizing Committee began its campaign late in May, Committee Director Van A. Bittner reported this week.

"These 71 collective bargaining units, all of which have been certified by the Natl. Labor Relations Board, consist of between 10,000 and 11,000 workers," Bittner said.

"Only two or three of these units contained more than 1,000 workers. The big elections are still ahead of us. The largest scheduled for the near future will be at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Aug. 20-22, where about 11,000 atomic workers are expected to cast ballots.

"We have 98 petitions for certification now pending with the NLRB. Our membership drive in a large number of plants is nearing completion and petitions for certification should roll in to NLRB during the coming month."

"Our state directors have reported 10 elections lost since the campaign began, which makes the score slightly better than seven to one in our favor."

OIL WORKERS MAP INFLATION FIGHT

By HARVEY O'CONNOR

THE seventeenth convention of the CIO Oil Workers Union this week hammered out an eight-point program to guide the organization through inflation perils. More than 200 delegates unanimously backed a program headed by a defeat-inflation plank.

Immediate wage increases to counterbalance a 25% increase in the cost of living will be sought, as the convention approved its officers' plan of strategy, and the union will seek also a guaranteed annual wage as well as health, welfare and pension funds.

The eight-point program emphasized the need for adequate research and education departments, the building of the defense fund and continued full support of the CIO and PAC.

A special session heard Robert Burns and Palmer Webber of the Natl. PAC staff drive home the need for a progressive Congress to safeguard wage and living standards, and named a special PAC committee to spur Oil Workers' participation in the fall campaign.

Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO's Southern Organizing Committee, prophesied that at the end of the southern campaign northern workers would be seeking wages as high as those paid in the South, and praised the OWIU for wiping out the southern wage differential.

The convention upheld appointment of district directors instead of their election, decided against election of officers by the convention and retained the annual convention in preference to biennial meetings.

ATTEMPT TO GAG MURRAY FAILS

By C. W. FOWLER

A sharp roar of protest went up in San Francisco and throughout California when radio station KGO, owned by the American Broadcasting Co., attempted to prevent Cannery Workers in the Bay area from hearing a radio speech by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

The gag, which was frustrated by the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers securing time for the Murray speech on station KYA, was attempted by a Mr. Searle, western vice-president of ABC apparently in charge of keeping labor off the air.

Said Searle to FTA Pres. Donald Henderson: "I do not propose to inflict Philip Murray on the people of the Bay area."

Murray's speech, which is a highlight of FTA-CIO's drive to win a majority of 50,000 cannery workers in an NLRB election, was subsequently broadcast at least six times—once over KYA in San Francisco itself, and after that in cannery towns throughout the northern and central part of the state.

Indicative of the general public's amazement at Searle's action was an eight column, banner headline in the biggest type the San Francisco Chronicle could find saying, "MURRAY PLEA FOR CIO CANNERS IN NLRB VOTE RULED OFF AIR." Similarly large headlines were in other papers, with the exception of the Hearst morning paper, which for some reason totally ignored the news.

Denouncing the attempted gag on free speech by ABC, Henderson said:

"This happens to be the largest election ever to be held west of the Mississippi, and the largest NLRB election held since the Ford Motor Co. vote in 1941.

"To try to pretend, as Searle and ABC pretend, that this is not of general interest is a brazen attempt to cover up the real reasons for trying to rob the cannery workers of their right to hear the voice of the great leader of the CIO, Philip Murray."

Paper Workers Win 30c Raise

GENERAL wage increase totalling 28½ to 30c an hour since V-J Day have been won by locals of the CIO United Paperworkers in Michigan, Illinois and New Jersey.

Over-all conditions now prevailing in the mills and plants covered by the new agreements are unsurpassed in the entire paper industry. More than 3,000 paperworkers are involved in these gains.

New agreements with the Clifton Paper Co., Whippany Paper Board Co., Continental Paper Co. and National Gypsum Co. mills in New Jersey provide for an 18½c general wage boost, exclusive of gains last fall of from 10c to 12c an hour.

A 9c general wage boost in addition to other gains was included in the new UPA-CIO agreement with the Consolidated Paper Co. covering its mills and carton plants at Monroe, Mich. and Aurora, Ill.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

CALLING ALL PARENTS

Whether or not your child will live his life happily or unhappily will be very largely determined by his way of life during his first six years. If you don't want your child to feel anxious and forlorn like this one, give him love and attention and plenty of it. Give him good physical care, friendly handling, the feeling he can depend on you. Lack of care and affection are apt to make children cruel, rebellious, destructive. Such children often steal—perhaps they hope to get something in place of the love they miss.

IT'S A LIE!

By MARTY SOLOW

ONCE UPON A TIME, in 1939, the NAM told the American people that they were the "real owners" of American business and industry. They did it in a handsomely colored red, white and blue booklet.

Since then major portions of the press which hew religiously to the NAM line have told American workers that they did indeed own American business.

LATEST to let the workers in on the secret of their corporate ownership is NEWSWEEK magazine which quotes approvingly from a Guaranty Trust and National City Bank study which attempts to show that the diffusion of stock holdings is steadily on the increase, that the last few years have "turned many a laborer into a capitalist."

IT'S A LIE! Statistics published in the recent Senate report on ECONOMIC CONCENTRATION AND WORLD WAR II demonstrate that concentration of corporate ownership is becoming tighter and tighter.

The report showed that only 75,000 out of America's 140,000,000 people owned FIFTY PER CENT of ALL the corporate stock in this country. Only 61,000 individuals received FIFTY PER CENT of ALL the dividends.

★ ★ ★

TIME MAGAZINE, August 12, talks glibly of our "economic fractures" knitting "in the open air of free enterprise."

WHAT FREE ENTERPRISE? If the TIME scribe who penned the above nonsense will descend from the skyscraper reaches of TIME and LIFE's gilded tower in New York's Rockefeller Plaza, and breathe of the fresh air of reality he'll find:

"The relatively few giant corporations of the country which have come to dominate our economy are themselves largely owned by a few thousand stockholders and by a mere handful of huge financial interests."

Eight groups of bankers control 106 of the 250 largest corporations.

One-tenth of 1% of all corporations owned 52% of the total corporate assets in 1939.

These facts and others are set forth in the Senate report cited above.

TIME, AUGUST 12, says that "supplier strikes" are "still crippling auto production."

IT'S A LIE! Pres. Walter Reuther of CIO Auto Workers pointed out August 4 that "auto suppliers" strikes are not a significant factor in retarding production. If the few suppliers' strikes now in progress were settled, the industry would still fall far short of capacity production because of material shortages and mal-distribution of basic materials.

THREE FLAWS IN VET LAW

THE CIO Veterans Committee this week declared most of S. 2477 is excellent, but pointed to "three jokers," which it will seek to eliminate at the next session of Congress.

The bill, which was signed by President Truman, authorizes the Veterans Administration to reimburse state and local agencies for expenses of administering certain training programs for veterans and provides standards for on-the-job and apprenticeship training.

Until S. 2477 became law, veterans taking apprenticeship and on-the-job training were eligible to receive $65 a month subsistence without dependents and $90 a month with dependents. The new law sets up a ceiling of $175 a month on pay and subsistence for veterans without dependents and $200 a month for those with dependents.

"If ceilings at $175 and $200 are established, many servicemen are relegated to inferior living standards," Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the committee, declared. "It is true that there has been considerable abuse in the matter of wages, but the abuse does not justify remedy which would err far on the other extreme and would adversely affect thousands of legitimate veteran employes.

"Furthermore, the bill places high wage employers at a disadvantage with respect to those with low wage scales. And surely a veteran is entitled to more than $175 a month for full-time employment."

The committee also objected to the law because it limits on-the-job training to two years, even though many courses approved by the Federal Committee on Apprenticeship require from four to six years.

The third flaw, the committee points out, is that S. 2477 is that no penalty is placed on the employer who sought to mulch the Federal government out of money by establishing phony on-the-job training programs, but instead cancels subsistence to the veteran.

CIO POLICY

speed-up and other devices.

The CIO repudiates any suggestion that the answer to our economic ills lies in the speed-up or in the wide-spread deterioration of terms and conditions of employment for which many employers in American industry are increasingly responsible.

Harsh changes in terms and conditions of employment have been unilaterally effected by large groups of American employers in violation of outstanding contracts and of the collective bargaining mandate of the Wagner Act.

Twice in the past 25 years America suffered a depression as a result of the false prophecies of those who offered the American workers a system of speed-ups and low wages as the cure for their economic ills. The acceptance of such a theory at this time offers only the promise of a new depression to the American people.

Only a sustained purchasing power and a high wage economy accompanied by a prompt curb on the increasing inflationary tendencies which now confront us can avert swift economic tragedy.

UNIONS CRUSHED IN CHINA, CIO TOLD

FREE trade unionism is entirely crushed in China under the Chiang Kai-shek dictatorship, CIO Pres. Philip Murray was informed this week by Chu Hsueh-fan, president of the Chinese Assn. of Labor and a vice-president of the World Federation of Trade Unions.

Chu appealed by cable for world-wide support against the central Chinese government following police seizure of the CAL's Chungking offices, a hospital for workers and two welfare centers, together with the arrest of 20 staff members.

The seized places were built with $250,000 contributed by CIO and AFL, which have given most of the $2,500,000 that has been sent to China for labor projects since 1942.

Meanwhile, a U. S. State Dept. investigation of the situation was called for by Irving Abramson, chairman of the Natl CIO Community Services Committee. Abramson asked that the CSC be allowed to send a representative to China on an inspection tour of labor hospitals and welfare centers.

The seizure of the labor centers came as Chiang was professing democracy and an "end to one party rule" in China. But, Chu charged, the arrests and seizures were carried out by uniformed and plain clothes policemen "representing the very people who have given their solemn promise to initiate China into an era of democracy and reform."

"In Hankow and Kwangsi we have suffered a similar fate," Chu declared. "Our existence is in danger, and free trade unionism is the object of attack everywhere.

"Liberal meetings are broken up, liberal leaders go in fear of their lives, and those who voice opposition do so at grave risks.

"The forces of reaction are turned against us. This is indeed a sickly democracy—democracy being starved until it is nothing but a bag of bones," Chu said.

Murray's Warning

CUT PRICES OR FACE CRASH

By FRED d'AVILA

SHAKING his hand in solemn warning, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week confronted the U. S. Price De-Control Board with concrete evidence that the nation will be headed straight for another big depression unless price controls are restored on basic necessities.

Testifying in the huge, marble-panneled majority caucus hall of the Senate Office Bldg., Murray told the three-man board:

"The ever-widening chasm which separates the real wages of the American worker from the paper wage adjustments embodied in contracts cannot be bridged by theories or abstractions. American workers, caught in a desperate squeeze created by unchecked profiteering, look to their government for some form of prompt and effective action."

Even as Murray bitterly commented that the Administration seems to have one policy for holding down wages and another policy for "de-controlling" prices, the chairman, vice-chairman and public members of the U. S. Natl. Wage Stabilization Board warned that the Board could not hold the line on wages unless the prices of essential foods were rolled back to levels as close to those of June 30 as the new OPA law would allow.

How difficult this was going to be was demonstrated by new price increases granted for food and other essential products by OPA, acting under the new, "sky's the limit" price policy established by Congress (see voting record—center pages).

Just after the largest single increase in prices (5½%) in one month since 1913, OPA was forced under the new law to grant this week:

- Raises of from 3% on radios to 9% on kitchen electric stoves, including a total of 20 classes of consumer durable goods, and calculated to cost the public $150 million a year.
- An $82 average retail price rise for passenger automobiles.
- A 10-13c rise per pound in the price of coffee.

The situation was aptly described by a headline in a trade paper, the Daily News Record, which said: "OPA Seen Too Busy Raising Prices to Check Evasions."

Meanwhile, the argument that price rises are "necessary" to boost production was knocked on the head by the Civilian Production Administration, which reported in its July publication that "rising prices cannot be expected to bring a flood of goods into the market."

Stocks of many commodities, Murray told the De-Control are being manipulated by monopolistic practices to create scarcity situations and force up prices.

WARNING the Board of its tremendous responsibility to act in the interests of stabilizing the wage-price relationship, Murray urged that controls be immediately reestablished on livestock, grains, cottonseed, soybean and dairy products.

"Prices must be rolled back to June 30 levels and subsidies existing on that date must be restored," he declared. "Not to do this would be an invitation to speculators and profiteers to make the sky the limit on how high prices will go."

Murray pointed out that funds are available for the payment of subsidies, which, he said, could cut the cost of milk 2 to 3c a quart, bread 1c a loaf, butter 10c a pound, margarine 4c a pound, tomatoes 2c a can, beef 6 to 12c a pound, pork 6 to 8c, plus reductions on other dairy products, bakery goods, fats, canned goods and sugar.

Comparing rising profits with falling wages, he cited:

- A Natl City Bank report showing profits for the second quarter of 1946 "almost double that of the preceding quarter, and 12% higher than in the second quarter of 1945."
- Government statistics showing that take-home pay for all employes in manufacturing industry is 8.5% below the level of April 1945.

"Add to this cut in money earnings the rise in the cost of living, and you find an overall cut of 18% in factory workers' real earnings since April, 1945," Murray said.

"It now appears that in addition to the loss of earnings suffered by millions of American workers under the Administration stabilization program, further wage cuts may be imposed upon them in the form of increased prices on food and other consumer goods which absorb the bulk of their income.

"Frankly, gentlemen, I think you will agree that this state of affairs cannot persist."

PAC Campaign

ALL-OUT FOR NOV. 5!

CIO's Political Action Committee met this week in Washington with regional directors and field representatives to outline major themes for the coming campaign, map plans for a $1,000,000 "war chest" and work out a program for mobilization of CIO membership through a series of 45 meetings in key areas throughout the country.

Leading off with an August 26 meeting in Milwaukee, PAC groups will also gather in New Haven, Providence, Springfield, Mass; Boston, Albany, Buffalo, N. Y. City, Newark, N. J., Trenton, Allentown, Pa.; Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore, Janesville, Wis.; Chicago, Gary, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland, Detroit, Harrisburg, Pa.; Cumberland, Md.; Charleston, West Va.; Pittsburgh, Youngstown, O.; Mason City, Iowa.; Des Moines, Sioux City, Springfield, Ill.; East St. Louis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo.; Eau Claire, Wis.; Minneapolis-St. Paul, Duluth, Butte, Seattle, Portland, Ore.; San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Dallas, Houston, New Orleans, Birmingham, and Atlanta, up till election time.

Commenting on the fund drive, National PAC Director Jack Kroll stated that CIO members could "kick in one buck or five bucks just as they pleased."

Aiming at a Congress which will "best serve the interests of the people" the PAC Executive Board composed of Director Kroll, and David J. McDonald, George Addes, Julius Emspak and William Pollack, respectively secretary-treasurer of the CIO Steelworkers, Auto Workers, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and Textile Workers, approved a list of campaign publicity materials which will deal with such issues as inflation, housing, anti-discrimination, security and foreign policy.

The security theme will be divided, the Board said, to cover Congress' attitude toward anti-labor legislation, minimum wage and federal health and welfare legislation.

Topped by its inflation leaflet, drawing attention to Congress' butchering of effective price-control, PAC will distribute 25,000,000 leaflets in all. Eight million of this total will include the inflation leaflet.

In addition 10 thousand posters will be produced for display in union halls and other places where people congregate, and approximately 200,000 PAC pamphlets covering the official PAC program and the best methods of using radio will be available.

An ambitious radio program has been planned to include spot announcements on registration, voting and specific issues. The programs will include records made by Hollywood stars.

A special PAC song album will be made available for campaign purposes and there will be increased coverage of labor, Negro, and the foreign language press.

HOW'D YOU LIKE A TAX REFUND TOO?

People are just as good as corporations, declared Sen. Glenn H. Taylor (D. Idaho), in effect, as he introduced a bill in Congress last week to provide workers with the same tax refund privileges now available for corporations.

Taylor, a strong fighter for progressive legislation, pointed out that General Motors, in spite of an operating loss, had been able "to declare a net profit of $16 million for the second quarter of 1946" due to tax refunds.

He contrasted this with the GM workers, who despite cuts in real wages still paid the same income tax as in previous years.

The senator's bill urged that the Dept. of Labor advise the commissioner of Internal Revenue each year "of the income level necessary for maintenance of a health and decency standard of living." Tax refunds would then be made in accordance with this figure and a worker's income.

16 WINS FOR PAC

SIXTEEN enemies of the American people will not return to Congress this winter due to defeats in recent primaries which the CIO Political Action Committee helped administer.

Most recent PAC victory was that of Edmund Bobrowicz, a CIO organizer, over anti-labor Rep. Thad Wasielewski in the Wisconsin primaries.

In Vermont, PAC-supported Republican Ralph E. Flanders won the race for the Senatorial seat vacated by Warren R. Austin, now U. S. representative to the United Nations.

Pointing out that PAC had a record to date of 16 wins and one loss among Congressional incumbents, Jack Kroll, national PAC director, declared this week at an Executive Board meeting of the organization in Washington that he was "very well satisfied with the results" of the primaries so far.

The 1946 primaries, now approaching the finish line with only seven more states to be heard from, have been marked by a decided trend towards domestic liberalism and internationalism, PAC officials noted.

They pointed to the defeats of Senate reactionaries Gossett of Idaho and Radcliffe of Maryland, and of isolationists Wheeler of Montana and Shipstead of Minnesota, all PAC-opposed candidates, as indicative of this trend.

The trend was even more marked in the House where 12 anti-labor representatives bit the political dust against PAC-backed opponents. These included Cannon, Fla.; Peterson, Tarver and Gibson, Ga.; Slaughter, Mo.; Weaver, N. C.; Johnson, Boren and Wickersham, Okla.; Rogers, Pa.; Daughton, Va.; Winters, Kan.; and Wasielewski, Wis. Luther Patrick of Alabama was the sole PAC-backed house incumbent who lost.

PAC leaders also said that an over-all total thus far of 44 reactionaries will not occupy places in the 80th Congress, either by virtue of defeat or refusal to run.

In Wisconsin, the GOP machine which had favored R. M. Immel was rebuffed sharply by the voters when Gov. W. S. Goodland was renominated for a third term. Main contest will come in November however, when Goodland faces the popular former Mayor of Milwaukee, D. W. Hoan, PAC choice for Governor.

Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, who ran for renomination on the Republican ticket, was defeated by ex-serviceman J. R. McCarthy.

Praise for Kroll

Extolling Jack Kroll, Ohio CIO Council president for "his devotion to the cause of the workers," the Council this week adopted a resolution praising his appointment as director of the Natl. CIO Political Action Committee.

NO CEILINGS ON 50% OF FOOD!

FOOD UP 31% IN 4 WEEKS!

THE price you pay for food has jumped 31.3% since June 30—in less than one month—and has risen more than 40% since V-J Day!

Harbinger of what's to come, with 50% of the daily purchases of food stuffs out from under OPA ceilings, was a report this week from Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., that the general level of wholesale food prices hit a record high in the week ending Aug. 20.

The increases will be passed on to the retail markets shortly.

The D&B index of 31 basic food commodities was compiled from prices recorded up to Aug. 20, and does not reflect the action taken by the Price Decontrol Board in restoring ceilings on meat and livestock, and on soy beans and cottonseed and their products.

The wholesale food price index stood at an all-time peak of $5.34 against $5.30 in the previous week and $4.08 a year ago.

Commodities advancing during the week were rye, coffee, beans, eggs, steers and sheep. Declines were shown for wheat, corn, oats, barley, butter, potatoes, hogs and lambs.

MEAT PACKERS WAILING

BIG meat packers who held up deliveries to retail outlets, while they awaited the lapsing of OPA controls and higher prices, this week were publicly unhappy about renewed ceilings ordered by the Price Decontrol Board.

Meat prices, according to the OPA, will return to approximately June 30 levels on Sept. 9. The time interval will allow slaughterers, wholesalers and retailers time to unload meat they have already bought, at sky-high rates.

The packers, represented by the American Meat Institute, complained that the ceilings will stimulate black market trading, but hastily added that "the legitimate meat industry will do everything it can to make restored price controls work."

But—and it's a big one—reports from union and OPA sources show that meat shortages under OPA were caused by refusal of the big packers to buy livestock.

Profiteers Get Free Hand, Says Murray

By FRED d'AVILA

See Full Murray Statement—Page 4

- Fifty per cent of the daily purchases of food stuffs made by the average worker are free to rise sky-high in price.
- Speculators greedy for profits are permitted a free hand to push prices up and thus increase the cost of living.
- Retail food prices have risen more than 31% in less than a month, and wholesale food prices are at their highest level in history.

These points were made by CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week in bitterly criticizing the U. S. Price Decontrol Board which failed to re-establish ceilings on milk and dairy products, flour and bread.

"The Board," said Murray, "has failed in its responsibility to the American people."

The board re-controlled prices of cottonseed and soybeans and their products, and of livestock and meat. But OPA sources said that new beef prices will be 2c a pound higher than they were on the June 30 rollback date, and lamb prices will be boosted 5c a pound.

Still up for a decision by the Board are controls over poultry, eggs, tobacco and petroleum products, which will remain uncontrolled unless the Board rules otherwise.

Murray said that the action of the Board members (two bankers and a manufacturer) "indicates a lack of understanding of the seriousness of the inflationary price rises that have occurred since the demise of OPA on June 30."

"Failure to re-establish price control on milk and dairy products, flour and bread places hardships upon workers' families," he declared. "Prices of 50% of the daily purchases of food stuffs are still left free to rise.

"CIO was warned that 'when American workers are squeezed between rising prices and declining take-home pay, something must be done to protect their living standards.' The Board's decision does not establish a hold-the-line policy."

Murray pointed out that:

- In all manufacturing industries, take-home pay declined 8.5% between April 1945 and June 1946.
- This is a reduction from $47.12 a week to $43.10.
- During this period wage increases ranging up to 18½c an hour were earned, but despite this, take-home pay is now $4.02 less— an 8.5% drop—than it was in the month preceeding V-J Day.
- During the same period, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported a 10.4% rise in retail prices paid by low income families.
- Even by using the BLS consumer price index, which understates the rise in living costs, real income in June 1946 was 18.1% below the April 1945 level.
- The take-home pay in durable goods industries, including autos, iron steel, and in electrical machinery industries, has declined 13.1% during this same period.
- If the increase in the cost of living is included, the overall decline in real income as a result of reduced hours and increased prices is 22.2%.

THREE BIG CIO UNIONS FRAMING NEW WAGE DEMANDS

THREE CIO unions—the Auto Workers, Rubber Workers and Oil Workers—this week prepared to seek wage increases if prices are not rolled back and the headlong rush to inflation halted.

Implementing the CIO wage-price policy formulated at the CIO emergency conference last weekend, the Auto Workers Executive Board, meeting at the same time in Washington, D. C., authorized new wage demands on Chrysler and other auto companies which have contracts with clauses allowing wage negotiations. Within a week the union served notice on Chrysler that it wanted to reopen its contract.

Committees of top officials of the CIO and its affiliates carried the fight against soaring prices to director John R. Steelman of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, OPA Administrator Paul A. Porter and Agricultural Sec. Clinton P. Anderson.

CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood, who was on the committee that visited Steelman, declared:

"We gave him a very frank warning that our unions will have to insist on new wage increases as soon as our contracts permit unless prices are placed under a much firmer control.

"We told him we would have to seek redress if the Government continues to let living costs go up. We insisted on real price control instead of just fooling the people with what we now have."

The UAW Board declared:

"If the Price Decontrol Board, OPA and the Sec. of Agriculture, have not taken vigorous steps to restore effective price control on food, clothing and other basic necessities, we shall demand adjustments in our wage-price structure necessary to compensate for increases in the cost of living."

Pres. L. S. Buckmaster of the Rubber Workers, this week called a meeting of the union's Wage Policy Conference to be held simultaneously with its 11th annual convention at San Francisco, opening Sept. 16.

Buckmaster said that the conference was being called because requests had been received from seven locals urging wage increases.

A 24-man policy committee of the Oil Workers, set up last week at its convention in Fort Worth, Tex., will meet in Fort Worth Oct. 21 to carry out the convention's proposals for wage increase to counterbalance the increase in the cost of living, for guaranteed annual wages, and for adequate health and welfare funds.

FOR CORPORATIONS, LIFE'S LOVELY

Congress may ignore the people's welfare by wrecking OPA, but it certainly takes care of the corporations.

Proof this week was contained in financial reports of two of America's biggest businesses—General Motors and Chrysler—both of which benefited from refunds under the carry-back, carry-forward provisions of the tax law.

(Briefly, the law guarantees corporations, involved in war work, profits for the first two postwar years that are equal to their 1936-39 averages.)

General Motors reported a $12,145,427 loss in the second quarter of 1946. But—after crediting itself with a $28,466,000 tax reduction—GM dished out $16,320,573 in dividends to preferred and common stockholders.

Chrysler lost $5,210,214 in the first half of 1946. But the taxpayers (that's us) came to the rescue again. A tax adjustment of $8,600,000 replenished the Chrysler coffers, and the company disbursed $6,526,698 in dividends, the UAW-CIO reported.

What I'd like to know, Bud....is where ya got the barrel....?

THE FACTS OF LIFE ON $43.10 A WEEK

PUT AWAY your yacht. Park that new Cadillac in the garage and listen to the story of what $43.10 a week means for a family of four. (That's what the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics says is the average weekly pay of workers in manufacturing industries.)

A CIO NEWS reporter ventured this week on a survey of Washington housewives to determine how far $43.10 could carry four people. He reported that "it could take them as far as a car without wheels."

Every time prices rise, the budget has to be cut or else the family goes more deeply into debt or draws on savings.

The first cut is recreation. That's $1 a week. Medical and dental care must be overlooked. Cheaper foods and clothing must be purchased.

Wage earners' wives queried by the CIO NEWS declared that meat prices have gone so high that fish and starchy foods must be used instead. Fresh vegetables and fruit prices have skyrocketed.

When furniture or household equipment wears out, there is no money to replace it. All repairs must be made at home or not at all

And with only $3 allotted each week for clothing, most of the children's garments must be improvised from old clothes.

One housewife said that she had to remake her husband's old suits to fit the children. But where, she wanted to know, is the money for new shoes which the kids must have before they return to school.

ANY savings which have been accumulated must be used and are soon exhausted. If prices rise much higher, the very staples of existence—food and fuel—will be unpurchaseable in adequate amounts.

Life insurance is the only security the family has in case of death, and even the $1.77 per week for that will have to be used for food if prices continue climbing.

Here's a statistical breakdown on what a family of four earning $43.10 per week spends for each item of living. The figures are based on current price levels, on figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics and on interviews with the Washington housewives.

GROSS SALARY PER WEEK		$43.10
Witholding tax	"	.00
Social Security	"	.43
Food	"	20.50

Total expenses		$46.73

Yet 50% of the nation's families receive less than $43.10 each week, according to government statistics.

CAUGHT IN THE WRINGER

CIO President Murray this week said that the price Decontrol Board's failure to control living costs has given speculators, greedy for profits, a free hand to push up prices. His statement follows.

By PHILIP MURRAY

THE Price Decontrol Board has failed in its responsibility to the American people. The action of the Board members indicates a lack of understanding of the seriousness of the inflationary price rises that have occurred since the demise of OPA on June 30.

Failure to re-establish Price Control on milk and dairy products, flour and bread places great hardships upon workers' families. Prices of fifty percent of the daily purchases of food stuffs are still left free to rise.

The CIO deplores this action of the Decontrol Board for its failure to keep faith with the American workers. The Board accepts the price increases that occurred in the past six weeks and does nothing to prevent further increases. On the contrary, speculators greedy for profits are permitted a free hand to push prices up and thus increase the cost of living of the American Workers.

CIO has warned that "when American Workers are squeezed between rising prices and declining take-home pay, something must be done to protect their living standards." The Board's decision does not establish a hold-the-line policy.

RE-CONTROLLING of meats means very little when livestock and poultry feed products are left free of controls. Grain prices will soar, pulling along with them all the feed products made from grains. A full and adequate price program therefore calls for controls to be replaced on all grains and dairy products as well as meats, fats and oils as long as any of these major food items continue in short supply.

Pressures will make it difficult if not impossible for adequate controls to be maintained. To assure that price ceilings which are reinstated on meats, fats and oils are enforced, we strongly urge every effort be made to prevent the reestablishment of the Black Market.

The CIO will urge the Decontrol Board to reconsider its decision and reinstitute ceilings on all items which it failed to control. We shall urge the OPA, the Department of Agriculture and the Decontrol Board to enforce the most vigorous policy permissable under the new OPA Statute.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

In the absence of Len De Caux, The CIO NEWS substitutes for his column timely comment on farm-labor cooperation, by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers.

BY the very nature of the commodities its members produce, our Union is in a unique position to develop friendly and cooperative relations with the people who use farm equipment and the products of our metal-working plants. They, like the workers in the plants, are the victims of the monopoly dominating the entire industry.

★ ★ ★

For this reason our Union established a farm relations department to develop the relations of our members with farmers on a friendly and helpful basis, through a broad educational program, thus breaking down the multi-million dollar anti-labor propaganda campaign carried out by such monopolists as the Pews (Sun Oil) of Pennsylvania, through their own farm press.

★ ★ ★

AGRICULTURE HAS now reached the place in history where modern farm machinery is bringing about drastic changes in the countryside. The whole process has been greatly speeded up, whereby the large farm units grow and destroy the small, family type farm, with little capital reserves, that cannot afford expensive labor-saving equipment.

Two-thirds of the American farmers now account for only 15 per cent of the total salable farm output.

★ ★ ★

Already many of the workers in our farm equipment plants are former farmers or people with small acreage. Still attached to the soil, these workers form a natural connecting link with farm people who, spokesmen for the large monopolies declare, should be eliminated from production and their acreage taken over by large or corporation farms

★ ★ ★

In addition to the impact of modern machinery on the farm population, inflation now fans the flame of the natural disintegration of the family-type farm. When farm prices fail to keep pace with monopoly-produced products, farmers need more capital with which to operate.

SINCE OUR Union has set up a farm relations department with a director, the pattern has been made for the entire labor movement of the United States to follow.

Winning over a substantial section of the farm families for an anti-monopoly program for peace and democracy is the Number One public relations job for all labor today.

★ ★ ★

WE PROPOSE, therefore, long-time government aid and loans to individuals or cooperatives for the purchase of farm and home equipment—this equipment to be cooperative when possible to aid the family-type farm to compete with large and corporate farms, and to ease the toil for farm families who pit their strength against the corporate and large machine-equipped acreage.

We propose further, government-sponsored aid that will bring better education, roads, electricity, housing and health activities to the rural sections which are behind their urban neighbors.

★ ★ ★

We propose to aid the progessive farmers' fight against inflation of operating cost and land values by linking up the fight of city labor for fair control of prices.

We will give full support to any farm organizations which, through their cooperative and legislative programs fight the battles for family-type farms against corporations.

★ ★ ★

Therefore, the United Farm Equipment & Metal Workers pledges full support to the Farmers Union that cooperated 100 per cent, both morally and financially, during our current strikes and wage struggles.

We feel that closer relationship with the Farmers Union will tend to bring about greater understanding between those who work in industry and those who till the soil with an ultimate result that the strength of the farmer and the worker shall be pooled to achieve our mutual needs.

Jim White, a member of the CIO Shoe Workers, is a disabled vet learning a trade at the Prudential Shoe Co. Jim came to the Greater N. Y. Council's CIO Veterans Committee when he was erroneously told the union was apposed to hiring Negroes, and especially disabled ones. Jim White now has the job he wanted, thanks to the efforts of the N. Y. CIO Veterans Committee.

CIO UNIONS SET PACE IN VETS' TRAINING

CIO unions are "on the ball" in the on-the-job training field. This is true from the top level leadership to the local unions.

The Natl. CIO Veterans Committee has worked closely with the Veterans Administration and the Labor Dept. in developing standards for on-the-job training, and many of the internationals and locals have followed through to see that the boys who sweated it out at Okinawa and in the Battle of the Bulge get the best possible break when they go to work.

For the past six months the Greater N. Y. CIO Veterans Committee has fought chiseling employers and faulty administration of veterans affairs in N. Y. State. But the committee with the aid of affiliated unions has succeeded in placing several hundred veterans including a number of disabled ex-servicemen as on on-the-job trainees in the shoe, furniture, electrical, metal products, die casting and clothing industries, as well as in wholesale and retail stores.

The committee reports that disabled ex-GIs were unable to obtain on-the-job training in most industries until the unions and the committee made a fight to win recognition from employers of the right of war wounded to a livelihood. Local 65, Wholesale and Warehouse Workers, has received commendation from the Veterans Administration for its efforts in behalf of disabled veterans, and Local 76, CIO Upholstery Workers, has limited its training program almost entirely to wounded ex-servicemen.

The Greater N. Y. CIO Veterans Committee from the very outset six months ago made it its business to point out to veterans there is little hope of much training in industries where there is large unemployment of skilled workers.

The committee was also critical of private and public schools and governmental agencies which encourage the workers to invest time, energy and money in class room study of trades which are in surplus in the N. Y. labor market.

A good share of criticism was directed against poor staffs of State agencies and disagreement between the State Apprenticeship Council and the State Division of Veterans Affairs.

As a result of this criticism, Charles Klare, veterans director of the Greater N. Y. CIO Council, held a series of meetings with N. Y. State officials, and was able to obtain some improvements.

Space prohibits the recital of the accomplishments of all CIO affiliates in on-the-job training, but an outsanding example is the CIO Clothing Workers Union, which is doing outstanding work in Philadelphia, the Scranton - Wilkes-Barre district, and in Rochester, N. Y.

In Rochester alone, almost 1,000 World War II veterans have been put on the job in the clothing industry through the initiative of the union, which enlisted the support of the manufacturers.

These trainees received not only their wages but subsistance pay under the GI Bill of Rights. Veterans previously employed in the industry in many cases hold better jobs than they held before, and some of the men who have been in the services for a long time are given an opportunity for readjustment and for learning their old skills while receiving a readjustment allowance which permits them to receive their full wage for the job until they regain their former aptitude.

In one Scranton factory alone, 125 veterans are earning while learning, and the union and the employers have approved the on-the-job training plans for three other factories in the Scranton-Wilkes Barre district.

An ambitious program has been worked out in the Philadelphia area by the Clothing Workers in cooperation with employers, the public schools and various other groups. The program, under which it is expected that 2,500 will be put on jobs, provides that:

- The public schools will inaugurate short term practical courses to train applicants in the necessary skills.
- The ACW will delay payment of union dues until the workers exceed the minimum rate of pay and will distribute new workers among clothing factories.
- The manufacturers will pay each new worker, in addition to the regular wage a bonus of 40c an hour for time spent in preparatory courses.
- The Veterans Administration will establish preparatory and on-the-job training programs in conjunction with the Philadelphia schools to prepare veterans, including the physically handicapped, for machine operation jobs.

All on-the-job training programs are seriously threatened by the new veteran job training law S. 2477 which establishes ceilings of $175 a month for veterans without dependents, and $200 for those with dependents.

Prior to this law, on-the-job trainees were eligible to receive $65 a month subsistence without dependents, and $90 a month with dependents, irrespective of the amount of their salaries.

Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the Natl. CIO Veterans Committee, attacked the law not only because it will reduce many servicemen to "inferior living standards", but also because it limits on-the-job training to two years and places no penalty on employers who sought to cheat the federal government out of money by establishing phony training programs. He served notice that while the law on the whole is good, the Natl. CIO Veterans Committee will seek the elimination of these objectionable features at the next session of Congress.

Golden's stand was supported by the Greater N. Y. CIO Veterans Committee which this week declared "a great disservice to the living standards of thousands of veterans in industries has been rendered by Congress as a result of the changes it made in the Veterans Job-Training Law during the final hours of its last session."

Veteran Director Klare, Assailed the ceiling provisions in the new law. These set a limit of $41 a week for single veterans and $46.30 a week for married vets as the top figure a veteran may earn and still be eligible for substence benefits.

After hearing Klare explain further that thousands of veterans faced immediate drastic cuts in take home pay, ranging from $6 to $22 a week, the CIO Veterans Committee unanimously passed a resolution directed to Veterans Administrator General Omar Bradley, demanding that no programs initiated prior to August 8 be affected by the provisions of the new law, and that Congress act to repeal the pay limitation clause at its next session.

AVC Demands:

HOUSING ACTION

"THE housing crisis in the U. S. has become both a shame and a disgrace," Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., natl. housing chairman of the American Veterans Committee, declared this week.

"The homeless and desperate veteran has been the victim of one of the greatest run-arounds and smoke screens in the nation's history. While veterans literally plead for a place to live the nation is engaged in an orgy of building which includes honky-tonks, race tracks, and swimming pools—but not homes.

"When the veteran has turned to Congress for help he has gotten syrupy words while the subsidies for the Wyatt program were cut by one-third and the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing Bill was blocked completely.

"To get the veteran action AVC will ask the President to do two things.

"First, to order the allocation of all building materials under priority regulations and provide that 90 per cent of these materials be alloted for home building.

"Second, to call a special session of Congress in November to pass the Wagner-Ellender-Taft long range housing bill, to implement the Veterans Emergency Housing Program which AVC has consistently backed.

UAW SUES FOR VETS' VACATIONS

Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers this week asked John C. Lehr, U. S. District Attorney for the Southern District of Michigan, to institute suit in Federal Court on behalf of H. E. Neal, General Motors worker and war veteran, for vacation pay.

In his letter to U. S. Attorney Lehr, Reuther stated that the Neal case ". . . can serve as a test case to determine the rights of all General Motors veterans." Neal has an overseas record and has received the Victory Medal and two Battle Stars. General Motors sent him a check for exactly two cents for his 1946 vacation pay.

"It was the UAW union which insisted upon insertion of language in the General Motors contract providing for the accumulation of seniority rights by employes while serving in the Armed Forces, even before the Selective Service Act became law," Reuther said. "It is the union which insists today on equal rights under the law for the veterans whom General Motors has refused to grant vacation pay."

LEAVE PAY AID

The CIO Veterans Committee this week distributed to affiliated unions the instructions of the Treasury, War and Navy Depts. on procedures to be followed in applying for terminal leave pay for former enlisted personnel.

The committee is seeking to learn whether terminal leave application blanks may be made available for distribution at union offices. Local unions are urged by the committee to assist ex-GIs in filling out the forms and to establish a service for photostating discharge certificates, which must accompany the terminal leave applications.

PLACE ON ILO IS 'MUST' FOR CIO

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week reiterated CIO's position that representation at Intl. Labor Organization functions on an equal basis with the AFL is "correct both from the legal and practical point of view."

Murray pointed out that Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach's recommendation that representation be alternated between CIO and AFL is "a long delayed act of justice." The recommendation has been made to President Truman, who has power to make a decision.

"We sincerely believe," Murray declared, "that the ILO has suffered in the past because the CIO and its affiliated unions from our basic industries were not able to participate fully. I know that the belief was shared by other national union bodies at ILO conferences."

At a press conference where Murray's statement was released, Michael Ross, director of CIO's International Dept., explained that the ILO constitution provides for representation from "organizations . . . which are most representative of employers or working people . . . in their respective countries." Ross emphasized the plural.

"The CIO's standing in the basic industries — steel, automobile, rubber, textile, electrical products, shipping—entitles it to at least equal consideration with the AFL," he declared.

"In relation to import and export and international affairs in general, these industries are much more directly concerned than are such important industries as building and trucking," he pointed out.

"The ILO has recently undertaken to constitute a number of international industrial committees. This development merely highlights the need for adequate CIO participation in ILO work in general, since the work of these committees is referred o other ILO bodies.

"The CIO cannot work in the committees without equality in the ILO conferences."

ASK CHIANG PROBE UNION ARRESTS

CIO President Philip Murray this week cabled President Chiang Kai-shek of China, asking for "immediate personal intervention" in the reported arrests of staff members of the Chinese Assn. of Labor and the seizure of a hospital and two welfare centers operated by the CAL.

Pointing out that the seized institutions were built with funds contributed by American labor for the welfare of the Chinese people, Murray said:

"This seizure violates the United States' interests and would discourage further donations and alienate opinion of the American people at large.

"American workers, like the American people in general, all hope for a unified, democratic China in which all basic rights and freedoms of man including the freedom of labor organization are guaranteed."

WORLD LABOR ROUNDUP

THE FRANCO dictatorship in Spain reportedly asked the U. S. for a $500 million loan to bolster it against the growing movement for a democratic government.

Allied Labor News said that an important motive behind the loan probably is that the U. S. State Dept. believes it is necessary to prevent collapse of the Franco regime.

Franco is said to be grooming a new "front" man who will be more publicly acceptable—Alejandro Lerroux, a conservative Republican, who is particularly hated by Spanish trade unionists because of his anti-labor role during the Austrian miners' strike in 1934, when several thousand miners were slaughtered.

A BILL of goods on the fascist Greek government is being sold to some Americans by five "representatives" of Greek unions touring the U. S.

The delegates—D. Theocharidis, D. Hadjidimitriou, G. Volotas, J. Rentzis and A. Tsakos—are described by the Greek American Council, in a letter to CIO President Murray, as "notorious collaborators and quislings."

The National Herald, a N. Y. City Greek-language daily, says that the Greek government "has appointed its own 'labor leaders,' thus fulfilling its program, the purpose of which, it is clear by now, is the establishment of a purely fascist regime in Greece."

FROM FRANCE, Leon Jouhaux, a vice-president of the World Federation of Trade Unions, reports that the Greek government is using fascist methods to keep power despite popular opposition.

Jouhaux, who has just returned from a visit to Greece, said that the government could not exist without British protection.

The French General Confederation of Labor has unanimously called on the French government to break relations with Greece, ALN reports.

ANOTHER PROTEST against AFL activities in Latin America was issued this week by the Costa Rican Federation of Labor. The Federation charged that the Mexican Confederation of Workers and Farmers has been accepting bribes from the AFL to lure unions into the new Latin American labor body, as part of the AFL's campaign to split the Latin American Federation of Labor.

FILIPINO PEASANTS won a big victory in their fight for a fair share of their produce and ownership of the land they work. President Roxas, in a meeting with peasant leaders, signed a new crop-sharing agreement giving 70% to the peasant and 30% to the landlord, and acknowledged the ultimate right of peasants to their own land.

QUISLINGS AND FASCISTS are the "superior people of the world," according to Argentine Director of Migration Santiago Peralta. The Argentine government is inviting several thousand such people to migrate from Europe and build Argentina's population.

Asked if any of the hundreds of thousands of homeless European refugees would be invited, Peralta exclaimed: "Argentina cannot put up with that useless human wreckage."

OPERAT

1 Local 371 of the CIO Textile Workers Union has the answer to the housing shortage. Here are four homes in the union development in Front Royal, Va., ready for their new owners. The development, known as the "Stonewall Heights" project, was started in June 1945, and all 50 dwellings were sold to local union members prior to completion. Houses in the development sold for $6,050.

Stove and icebox are included in the sale price of the house, but the linoleum on the floor and walls as well as the floor cabinets around the sink are the handiwork of Mr. Irwin.

Then a private builder was given priorities for 300 FHA-financed individual houses. Local 371 protested the building of these homes on the grounds that they were too small, poorly planned, and too expensive for the workers.

LATE in 1944 Local 371 took matters in its own hands, forming a housing committee and ultimately setting up the Old Dominion Housing Corporation as the legal owner of the property.

One sample house was erected to determine what the building program would cost the union. Soon thereafter a beautiful 57-acre site on a hillside overlooking the town of Front Royal was purchased for $25,000. This sum was raised from individuals, a great part coming from the savings of union members. Other locals as well as the National union loaned working capital for the construction work.

Unable to secure the services of a construction firm at the prices set by the housing corporation, the union decided to undertake the construction work as its own contractor and builder. Tommy Kerns, local union member and manager of the housing project, provided for a special mill to prefabricate whole sections of the new houses.

ON August 1 several of the dwellings were ready for occupancy with only grading and landscaping of the sizeable plots remaining incomplete. One of the first arrivals at the project was Mrs. Luther Giles, a union member who told of her previous living conditions in a four-family apartment with only a paper-thin wall to separate the crowded occupants. Mrs. Giles was particularly pleased with the extra closet and storage space in the new houses. "I am far better satisfied with the project than I dreamed I would be," she said. "When they finish grading, it certainly will be a fine place to live."

Early occupants were the I. W. Irwin's and their five children, settling in their new home, with furniture and curtains already in place. Irwin has tiled the bathroom, covered the kitchen floor with linoleum, and is now planning to build two additional bed rooms on the unfinished second floor as soon as materials are available.

Local 371, in providing the textile workers of Front Royal with homes which they can purchase at a monthly rate of less than $34, has proven that properly planned and managed non-profit cooperation can furnish excellent housing at costs far below real estate dealers' prices.

The Old Dominion Housing Corporation believes the principal lesson to be gained from the experience at Front Royal is that "only through cooperative action and through various forms of non-profit housing organizations created by the people themselves, can wage earners today hope to get a better break in obtaining good, durable homes."

TWO OF BIGGEST LAKE CARRIERS SETTLE

THE CIO Natl. Maritime Union late this week reached an agreement with Standard Oil of Indiana and Bethlehem Transportation Co., two of the biggest Great Lakes shop owners, reducing the work week in port to 44 hours with overtime starting at noon Saturday. Prevalent work week while in port is now 56 hours.

The hours at sea were reduced from 56 to 48 hours, and during layups and fitouts from 44 to 40.

The union also won the following increased wages from Standard, $1.15 an hour for beginners; $1.20 an hour for intermediate ratings, and $1.25 for skilled ratings.

The agreement with Bethlehem Transportation provides increased wages of five cents less in all of these classifications, but under the old scale Standard was five cents higher for all these classes of seamen.

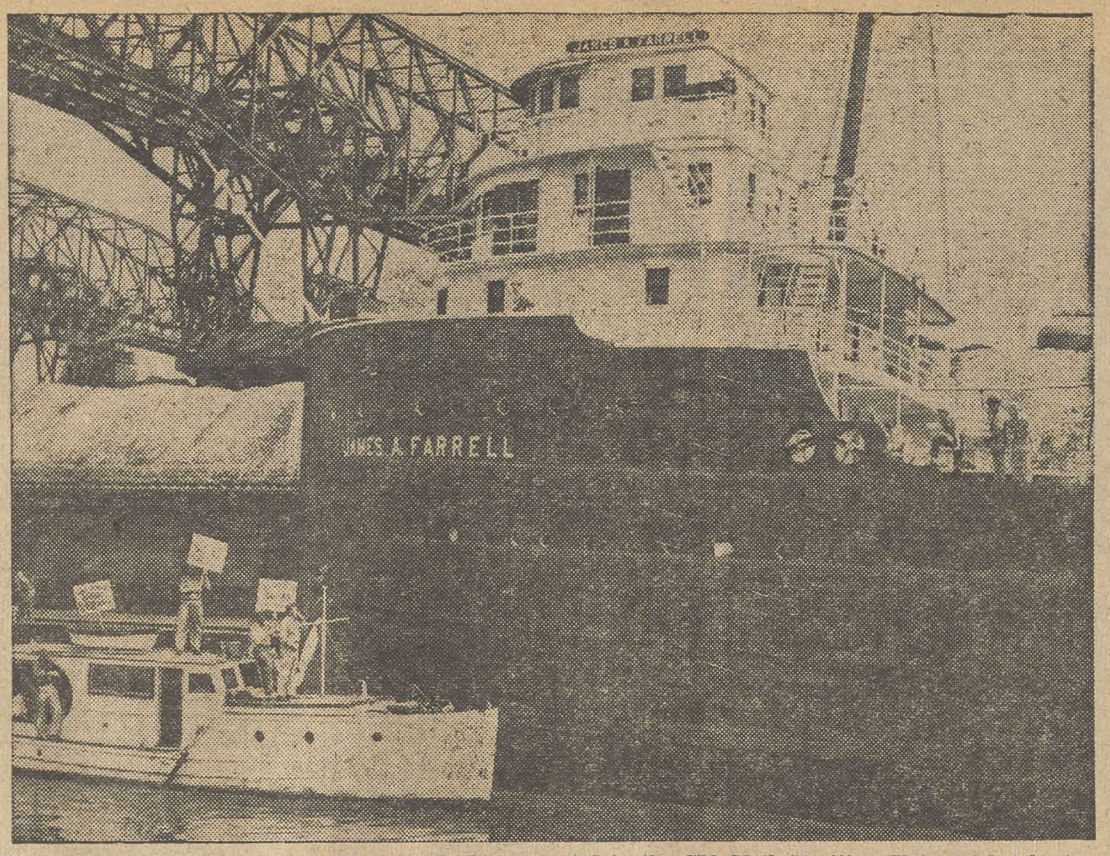
As the CIO News went to press, the agreement with Standard had been ratified by NMU members in the majority of the lake ports, and the international officers had sent the agreement with Bethlehem to the affected ports with the recommendation that the membership approve it.

NMU Pres. Joseph Curran said that these agreements "set the pattern for the settlement" of the general Great Lakes strike which was entering its second week.

"If the ship owners have the interests of the public at heart they will settle in good faith with the seamen on the basis of these agreements. In the interest of the welfare of the seamen and the public we have sharply modified our original 40-hour week demand."

Effectiveness of the strike was shown by a police attack on NMU pickets at Duluth, which the union charged was inspired by the corporations comprising the Lake Carriers' Assn. The frantic efforts of the carriers to convince the public that the strike is effective, to herd scabs, and to hamper the union through damage suits also proved the striker's success.

Duluth police attacked 80 pickets with clubs and tear gas, injuring 20 and arresting eight. NMU Vice-Pres. Joseph Stack demanded the removal of the police chief.



The men on the big vessel should not only be interested in the CIO Natl. Maritime Union picket boat—as they evidently are—but perhaps like thousands of other seamen they later hit the bricks to gain better pay and shorter hours.

THIRD ACW LEADER DIES

MRS. Dorothy Bellanca, 53, vice president and one of the founders of the CIO Clothing Workers, died Aug. 16 at Memorial Hospital, N. Y. City.

Mrs. Bellanca had been ill for several months. At her bedside were her husband August Bellanca, director of the Amalgamated's Italian Division and a sister, Miss Reba Jacobs. Private funeral services were conducted at Riverside Chapel, N. Y., Aug. 19, at 11:30 a. m., after which the body was cremated and buried in Woodlawn Cemetery in Westchester.

Mrs. Bellanca's death is the third in the Amalgamated's official family within the past month. Sidney Hillman, its president, passed away July 10 and vice president Joseph Catalanotti died on July 15.

DOROTHY BELLANCA

Recognized as one of America's outstanding women leaders, Mrs. Bellanca assisted in the organization of Amalgamated locals throughout the country from the union's inception and held several important national, state and local government posts.

OAK RIDGE RUN-OFF PLANNED

WORKERS in the three atomic plants in Oak Ridge, Tenn., will have to vote in a run-off election, the NLRB announced this week after the three-day polling session failed to give a majority in favor of CIO, AFL or no union representation. The date for the run-off is yet to be announced.

The NLRB listed the voting results as follows:

Monsanto Chemical Co., 676 voters eligible: AFL, 289 votes; no union, 176; and CIO, 121. Four votes were void.

Carbon and Carbine Co., 4,500 eligible voters: AFL, 1,612; CIO, 1,429; and no union, 1373. Nineteen votes were void. The runoff is between CIO and AFL.

Tennessee Eastman, 6,200 eligible voters: no union 2,579; AFL, 1,721; CIO, 1531. Eleven ballots were void. The runoff will be between "no union" and the AFL.

Under the NLRB rules there will be a runoff election at the Monsanto, and the Carbon and Carbide plants with CIO and AFL on the ballots. CIO organizers at Oak Ridge said that there will be a strong organizing campaign to enlist those who voted for no union.

HIT CASE, A-C

THE CIO Auto Workers Executive Board struck out sharply last week-end at the J. I. Case and Allis-Chalmers farm machinery companies, Chrysler of Canada and the Mack Truck Company for their "arrogant and unreasonable" refusals to "accept the established industry wage pattern."

The report pointed out that the resistance of these firms to "their employe's reasonable demands is being subsidized by generous Government tax rebates." The board called for "an early end to the penalties and sacrifices the companies are forcing upon the workers and the community."

UE COVERS 1375 PLANTS

AN all-time high in the number of plants covered by union contracts in the electrical and radio manufacturing industry was announced this week by the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers as the union prepared for its 11th international convention scheduled Sept. 9-14 in Milwaukee, Wisc.

Julius Emspak, general secretary-treasurer, revealed that at the end of the union's fiscal year, July 31, 1,375 plants were under contract with the union and over 500,000 workers. This figure represented an increase over 1,082 plants in 1944 and 1,137 plants in 1945.

Reporting for a two-year period since the UE-CIO held no convention in 1945 because of government travel restrictions, Emspak also announced that UE had won 450 National Labor Relations Board elections covering 99,850 workers, and that a total of 323,522 workers joined the union in the two years.

HARVESTER GRANTS 18c

By FORREST EMERSON

A STRIKE of eight office and technical locals in the International Harvester chain, all affiliates of the CIO Farm Equipment was averted at the eleventh hour when the company met the union demands this week.

Two thousand office and technical workers thereby scored the greatest white-collar win in the industry's history, winning an 18c general raise retroactive to February 5 and a straight ten percent raise retroactive from that date back to October, 1945.

A $30 minimum white-collar rate was also won, as well as automatic progression on the job and greatly improved classification, with precedent-setting recognition of the factor of skill. Elimination of inequities gave hundreds of workers raises far over the 18c hourly figure.

PRESS WIRELESS STRIKERS WIN

THE CIO American Communications Assn. won a two-week-old strike against Press Wireless, Inc., N. Y. City this week following the decision of a special arbitrator, Arthur S. Meyer, that the company must reinstate 46 workers pending arbitration of the merits of their discharge.

Meyer, in handing down the initial decision after the union and the company agreed to arbitrate the dispute, declared that "neither side" had the right to unilateral action in the matter of layoffs.

The decision provided that the workers must be reinstated with retroactive pay to Aug. 7, the day the strike began.

The embargo on international communications resulting from the strike was attacked in the newspapers as a violation of "freedom of the press." However, Meyer's decision made it evident that the strike was fully justified in the dispute over the layoff.

The CIO Food & Tobacco Workers are confident of victory in the NLRB election among 70,000 northern California cannery workers, which opens Aug. 26. The two attractive guitarists, Janey McHarg (left) and Mara Alexander, are using music as an organizational weapon outside one of the big plants in San Jose, greatest cannery center in the district.

IT'S MELODY THAT DOES IT!

By HERBERT A. KLEIN

YOU'D have thought, maybe, you were at a Welsh Eisteddfod, or a song-tourney of trade union troubadors if you'd chanced into the CIO's United Nations Hall at 160 Grand Ave., Oakland, Calif.

But it was really the final pre-election meeting of the CIO Cannery Council, and the singing organizers were given the delegates a sample of how they were going to win thousands upon thousands of additional votes among northern California cannery workers—votes for the CIO Food and Tobacco Workers.

At the council meeting there was a record-breaking attendance of some 200 delegates from 10 FTA locals. FTA-CIO is the way it will appear on ballots which will be waiting for the votes of some 45,000 cannery workers in the Labor Board election to be held August 26-30. This woll be the biggest NLRB election ever held west of the Mississippi—and the biggest in the country since 1941

Opponent of FTA on the ballot is the company union chartered by the AFL Teamsters and handed a closed shop pact by organized managements representing most of the 77-some canneries that will vote.

In spite of the illegal conditions prevailing in the canneries, FTA-CIO is going to win by a big margin, Pres. Donald Henderson predicted when he spoke during a pause amidst the rounds of songs.

The songs are going to do a lot to make that victory bigger than it would be otherwise, FTA delegates agreed as they cheered, applauded, whistled, and stamped for Vern Partlow with his guitar, Mara Alexander and Janet McHarg with theirs, Stanley Wilson of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union with his ukelele, Jose Speziale of San Jose canneries with his accordion—and lots more.

Vern Partlow was donated to the FTA drive for 10 days by the Newspaper Guild's Los Angeles local. He came north on leave from his newspaper job, bearing his secret weapon (guitar to you).

Partlow wowed the cannery council delegates with four special cannery songs he had written, full of wisecracks that whacked the very stuffings out of the company-Teamsters combine—"Round and Round the Canneries," "Cannery Bill", the "Cannery Talking Blues", and the "Fertilizer Song".

Brunet Mara and blond Janet twanged their guitars to their own organizing songs, "The CIO's a Workers Union," "We'll Get the FTA," and "The Teamsters Don't Give a Hang About Me".

The Spanish-speaking and English-speaking delegates lifted the roof with applause when Abigail, lovely Mexican chanteuse and guitarist, gave with the south-of-the-border favorites.

"Guadalajara", "Celito Lindo", "Jalisoco"—she did them all in a warm throaty voice and the zest of a performer who knows her audience is with her all the way.

Abigail, a successful night club entertainer in San Francisco, is giving her time to the FTA-CIO campaign too.

When she goes out on the sound trucks, everybody stops to listen—foremen, bosses, AFL stooges, and all. When she isn't singing, she pitches in organizing Spanish-speaking workers.

A high point of fun at the cannery council meeting was the selection of the prize-winners of the organizing song contest conducted by FTA regional office.

First prize was won by a quiet little girl who works in the big Hunt Bros. cannery at Hayward, near Oakland. She has to remain nameless, for fear of company-Teamster reprisals.

In all, FTA Regional Director Luisa Moreno figures at least 25 first-rate organizing songs have been written already, especially for the current cannery campaign—and more are being born every day.

"We don't call it entertainment—we call it organizing with music," she explained.

The song-organizing technique is so basic in this historic cannery election, that a special part of the publicity budget and staff is assigned to the "cultural" and "entertainment" work.

A big red-painted truck is even now travelling from plant to plant among the northern California canneries where about a third of the nation's fruits and vegetables are packed in cans.

It bears the sign "FTA VICTORY SPECIAL"—and on its flat bed that used to haul bales, bundles, and boxes stands lean Lincoln-like Vern Partlow, petit sloe-eyed Mara Alexander, tall blond Janet McHarg, compact Stanley Wilson—all or some of them. They are giving with the guitars—and of their very best.

Around the truck at noon hour stand attentive, smiling cannery workers, smiling through the strain and weariness of the ill-paid speed-up inside the plant.

Laughter rises above the sound of the music on the loud-speakers. Frantic Teamster goons and dues-collectors run around the edges of the crowd yelling "Red"! "Phonies", "Heil Hitler", or whatever insult comes to mind.

But the workers pay no attention to the company agents. They are having too much fun listening to the truth set to music.

Teamsters, with $10 to spend for every $1 of FTA money, are worried sick these days. They'd like to see the whole election called off, postponed, anything. They are shrieking "Unfair", "Gyp", even before it's held.

The biggest labor election in Western history is showing, again and again a couple of comforting facts:

Company unions can fool some of the workers some of the time, but not many nor for long.

Company collusion with company union agents can keep some of the workers scared for some of the time, or even for a lot of time.

But there's no phony contract, nor collusive dues-collecting racket that can stand up against the blows of a gal with a guitar or a guy who sings 'em straight and simple, because where the laughs are set to music the walls of reaction just have to come a-tumbling down!

THE TRUTH HURTS

The extent to which big business will go to keep workers from learning the truth about unions was again demonstrated this week when station KGO, San Francisco, and the American Broadcasting Co., barred CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey from broadcasting an appeal to workers in Northern California canneries to vote for the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers. An election will be held Aug. 26-30 between FTA and the AFL Teamsters-backed Cannery Union.

A week before KGO and ABC barred CIO Pres. Philip Murray from broadcasting over the San Francisco station, but the other stations carried his address.

FTA Pres. Donald Henderson linked the ABC gag with the California Processors and Growers Assn. and the Bank of America.

As a result FTA this week filed a $100,000 damage suit against KGO and ABC. The suit claimed that the network and radio station violated a contract by cancelling the Murray and Carey broadcasts.

The union also filed a complaint against the station and the broadcasting system with the Federal Communications Commission.

CIO FORGES AHEAD IN DIXIE

CIO Organizing Committee has filed 261 certification petitions with the National Labor Relations Board since its Southern membership drive began late in May, Committee Director Van A. Bittner reported this week.

"We have won collective bargaining rights in 77 plants since the campaign started," Bittner said.

"We have now pending with the NLB 171 petitions for certification.

"We have lost a total of 13 elections."

Bittner said 11,267 persons are employed in the units for which bargaining rights already have been won.

"The 171 petitions now on file are for plants employing approximately 37,000 production workers," Bittner said. "Add these together and you see that the elections won and those pending cover some 48,000 workers."

Steelworkers were named the collective bargaining agency in 17 of the elections won, Woodworkers in 10, Auto Workers in seven and Textile Workers in six.

Furniture Workers, Paper Workers, Packing-house Workers, Food and Tobacco Workers and Stone Workers were selected in four plants each.

Oil Workers, United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Workers and Fur Workers were chosen bargaining agency for three groups each.

Clothing Workers, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and American Federation of Hosiery Workers were selected in two plants each. Rubber Workers and Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers won one election each.

A movie premiere high in the clouds! Stewardess Romayne Cahoon, of the CIO Transport Workers, readies the projector for the first showing of the Universal Picture, "So Goes My Love", in this Pan American Clipper while flying over the Atlantic at 300 miles an hour. FTA CONTRACT ROUTS AFL

The CIO Food and Tobacco Workers last week won an agreement from Campbell Soup Co. to abide by its contract giving $130,000 in retroactive pay increases to the workers in its Camden and Chicago plants and improved conditions for workers in the Salisbury, Md., plant.

The agreement reached before U. S. Conciliators in Washington was flashed to the picket line in Camden, set up five minutes earlier, and ended the strike.

Campbell further agreed to end all agreements recruiting labor for Salisbury with the National Farm Labor Union and the AFL. About two month's ago FTA Pres. Donold Henderson charged that the AFL Cannery Workers and Campbell had entered a conspiracy to destroy the union at Camden and Chicago.

FTA won an extension of a modified Camden agreement to the Salisbury plant. Provisions granted the workers in Salisbury were hitherto unheard of on the notorious open shop Eastern Shore and included a 65c an hour minimum wage, time and a half pay overtime and vacations with pay. FTA officials hailed the agreement as bridgehead to the entire area.

A Tale Of Two Towns: No. 1

PUBLIC BACKS UFWA STRIKE

COMMUNITY support for 1200 strikers at the Thomasville, (N. C.) Chair Company is mounting steadily, CIO Furniture Workers officials reported this week, as the strike went into its fifth week.

The 1200 workers, one-third of them Negroes, have been striking against the largest furniture company in the South for a fifteen-cent-an-hour increase, union security, overtime pay and vacations with pay.

The company offered a five-cent an hour raise and a flat "no" to the other demands. It has also rejected an arbitration offer made by the union.

Merchants in the town as well as doctors continue to extend credit to the strikers, despite the fact that Doak Finch, company president, controls the town's bank.

UFWA Local 286, which is conducting the strike, won community backing when it pointed out clearly in a full-page advertisement in the "Thomasville News Times" that the "whole community has suffered by the company's low wages," as low as $18.00 a week.

"With such low rates of pay", the advertisement asks, "how can we afford homes to live in—buy the minimum necessities of food and life—put aside a little for a rainy day and old age—raise our children to be healthy and educated—provide for decent recreation—support our churches, schools and community organizations—in other words, live like decent, free-born Americans should live and hold our heads high before our God and our fellow citizens?

"How can our community prosper—the merchants, the doctors, the gas stations, the town treasury, etc.—with such low wages and insecurity?"

The local waited a week after negotiations had completely broken down July 19 before it called a strike. A leading newspaper in the state capital, the Raleigh News Observer has found "the demand of the furniture workers for a 60 cent minimum wage . . . not unreasonable" and editorially its asked the company to "agree to arbitration."

A Tale Of Two Towns: No. 2

70% OF WOODWORKERS UNION

ABOUT 70 per cent of all woodworkers in Laurel, Miss., are now represented by the CIO.

Three months ago none of them were.

Two CIO organizers went to Laurel early in May and began contacting prospective members.

Late in June the employes of the Masonite Corporation, largest industrial plant in Mississippi, voted in favor of CIO Woodworkers. The election was held during a strike called by the AFL, which represented Masonite's 2200 employes under a closed shop contract for four years.

The CIO obtained a pay increase of 13 cents an hour and other contract benefits—and the strike ended.

The Woodworkers now represent employes of three other Laurel plants — Green Lumber Co., which has approximately 526 production workers, Bailey Lumber Co., and Continental Turpentine & Wood Products Co., with about 65 employes each.

Woodworkers are now the bargaining agency for employes of 18 Mississippi plants — six in Natchez, five in Vicksburg, four in Laurel, one in Bolton, one in Harriston and one in Port Gibson.

CIO Regional Directors are now faced with the responsibility of bringing International Union representatives together for the purpose of activating our local representatives in the drive for voluntary contributions to PAC, which is all-important this year. With the gouge of American people going on today, blessed by Congress, it is time for a change.

Immediate action on this is expected everywhere.

Again we repeat it is a fight for the bread box through the ballot box.

The writer has called a conference in the City of Chicago for Wednesday, August 28, of all national and international representatives on PAC. The time is NOW for unity of all our forces. To that end the Organization Department will strive.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

Timmy seems to be eating pretty well, but the table looks bare—bare of company, bare of effort to make food and table attractive. Meals are more than feeding times. They are the time for enjoyment of friendly conversation and for pleasure in food and drink appetizingly served: Courteous table manners and stimulating interests can be given children better by example than by nagging. Nagging spoils meal hours. Appetizing meals enjoyed together nourish body and soul.

PERFUME ADVERTISING SMELLS

WHERE does your perfume come from? Does the advertising tell you from the romantic isles of the South Pacific, from the shores of beautiful Hawaii? Well, don't believe all that you read in advertisements.

Last week the Federal Trade Commission revealed that perfumes represented as coming from "the famous gardens of Miahati in Hawaii, where the exotic vari-colored hibiscus and jasmine mingle with honeysuckle and orange blossoms in riotous fragrance." were actually manufactured in New York.

The Federal Trade Commission discovered that all of the perfumes involved are made in New York, and none of the ingredients used come from the "exotic" island of Hawaii. In fact the FTC found that there is no such place as the "Gardens of Miahati" in Hawaii.

DON'T PAY HIGH PRICES!

By ESTHER PETERSON
Legislative Representative, CIO Clothing Workers

IS THE BUYERS' strike an effective weapon against rising prices? This question has come up before many union and consumer groups wanting to take positive action in the fight against inflation. They know Congress opened the door to high prices when it passed a weak Price Control Act. They believe they must now take steps to keep prices from getting completely out of line.

Unquestionably the buyers' strike is dramatic and points up the issue. However, a one-or-two-day strike will not bring prices down permanently. It is only by refusing day after day to buy over-priced items that consumers can be effective.

The law of supply and demand still holds. If supply is high and demand low, prices drop. That is why consumers were able to force the prices of butter and meat down in many communities.

The resistance to the high price of butter and meats was of two kinds—involuntary resistance to buying was caused by the fact that many people just didn't have enough money to pay the high prices. There was no question as to whether they should or should not buy. They simply did not have the money and no decision had to be made.

On the other hand, voluntary resistance to buying was effective through organized pressure and by individual consumers. Many individuals who had the money simply decided that they would not pay exorbitant prices and they turned to other foods.

In some communities—Detroit, St. Louis, Washington, D. C., and many others—organized labor and cooperating consumer-interest organizations sponsored calls to action directed particularly at those who could afford to pay the high prices, urging them to refrain from buying. They used press, radio, and other outlets to attract public attention to the problem. The buyers struck— and prices fell!

But it must be pointed out, that prices fell in all communities where there was decreased demand regardless of whether a public demonstration had taken place.

Does this mean that a buyers' strike is useless? Absolutely not. It means that demand must be lessened drastically and continuously on high-priced items. It means that the strike, instead of being a one-day or one-week affair, must be a matter of everyday practice. It means that over the nation every individual must consistently refuse to pay high prices. Some retailers have taken the same stand. They refuse to pay overly-high prices charged by their profiteering wholesalers. They do not carry over-priced mechandise.

It is obvious that you can do without meat for a few weeks or even a month if you must, but you cannot abstain from buying meat indefinitely. You can refuse to buy shoes up to the point where your children go barefoot, but when that point is reached you must buy shoes regardless of the price. You cannot hold out on all things. You must buy the necessities. However, you can limit your buying to only those things you need.

Auxiliaries Stress OPA Battle

CIO Women's Auxiliaries were urged this week "to fight inflation by widespread resistance to rising prices" in a letter from Faye Stephenson, president of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries and Helen Blanchard, director of organization.

The letter came as the result of the special meeting convened August 15, by Pres. Philip Murray to discuss price control and CIO policy on the new OPA incasure.

"The job of fighting the unbelieveable rise in the cost of living for the nation falls on the CIO and its organization," the letter said. "We Auxiliary members realize this means that the wives of all CIO members must become the spearhead of that all important fight."

Take as your slogan, "BUY ONLY WHAT YOU NEED!"

This is what you as an individual and your organization can do to fight high prices:

(1) LIMIT your buying to necessities.

(2) SET UP a committee to receive complaints by telephone on out-of-line prices. The committee should check these complaints and should issue from time to time a black list containing the names of local stores that are charging out-of-line prices. Circulate the list widely and give it publicity so that unscrupulous merchants will feel the effect of your organization.

(3) A VARIATION of the buyers' strike has been successfully used in large communities where there are numerous stores. A group of women go into a store where it is known that meat prices, for example, are too high. One woman asks for meat—then, on hearing the price, says "That's too high!" Other women repeat this procedure. Such tactics impress both the storekeeper and other customers with the fact prices are out-of-line and resistance is building up.

(4) IF YOUR COMMUNITY can be organized, set up a demonstration calling in all consumer-interest organizations. On the appointed day set up booths on the main streets, distribute buttons or tags saying, "DON'T PAY HIGH PRICES!"—and circulate petitions saying, "I promise to buy only in stores where prices are in line, etc."

(5) USE the press and radio as much as possible to give publicity to your action. Union leaders should obtain time over the air to explain why workers cannot afford high prices.

Let them point out that the lowest 40 per cent of the families of our nation have savings amounting to only a total of $40. That this 40 per cent is not able to withstand the floodwaters of inflation. This 40 per-cent that has practically no savings, needs the security of a stable economy—needs the security of fair prices for all.

IT'S A LIE!

By MARTY SOLOW

GEORGE SOKOLSKY, syndicated columnist and onetime paid propagandist for the NAM asserted boldly in a recent column that in America's "free press . . . every point of view is represented . . . every side is given."

★ ★ ★

IT'S A LIE! If every side is given let Mr. Sokolsky insert these facts into his own column.

1. "It is a matter of concern that citizens in so many communities can buy only one daily paper . . . that in . . . many cases these single dailies present the point of view of the same newspaper chain."

2. "Very few communities have more than one version of the news. . ."

3. In 1910 chains controlled about two-fifths of the entire daily circulation and one-half of Sundays.

4. In 1940 only 181 cities in the US still had competing papers.

5. Eighty-eight percent of all communities in 1940 had either one daily paper or else all were under the ownership of a single individual.

Facts are from Senate report on "Economic Development and World War II".

Paste that in your "free" column, George.

★ ★ ★

WASHINGTON's respectable newspaper, the Washington Post, doesn't like the recent CIO-PAC Voting Supplement. Says the Post editorially: "It is overloaded with labor issues and does not include enough votes on questions affecting the general public welfare."

★ ★ ★

For the information of the POST editorial writer we list the following facts.

1. More than 55,000,000 people in America work. Therefore what affects labor affects the welfare of the majority of the people in America.

2. In CIO's tabulation, eight of the issues used as a yardstick to measure members of the House—four OPA amendments, Atomic Energy Bill, USES, Housing, Wood-Rankin Committee appropriation— all directly affected the "general public welfare".

3 Nine issues on the Senate Chart—Housing, FEPC, 65 Cent wage, British loan, four OPA amendments and the rule for cloture on taking up anti-polltax bill—directly affected the "general public welfare."

★ ★ ★

HITLER taught the use of the colossal lie to destroy your enemy. The NAM has been an apt pupil. On May 25 the US press played up a statement by NAM President R. R. Wason made at a meeting of the Chicago Industrial Conference.

Mr. Wason thundered that "nine hundred strikes . . . have government clearance to start within the next thirty days."

★ ★ ★

IT WAS A LIE! Bureau of Labor Statistics records for June—the 30 days to which Mr. Wason referred—pointed out that only 350 work stoppages, involving loss of 65/100's of 1% of working time—took place.

Mr. Wason lied in order to stampede Congress into anti-labor legislative action.

IN A CLIPSHEET distributed to thousands of newspapers, the Conference of Small Business Organizations charges that CIO-PAC has "brazenly announced through the public press a drive to collect $6,000,000 by assessing its members $1.00 per head. . . ."

★ ★ ★

IT'S A LIE! CIO-PAC never announced through the public press a drive to collect $6,000,000. Last week it did announce a drive to collect a $1,000,000 "war chest".

PAC did not announce it was "assessing" members $1.00. Contributions to PAC are voluntary and PAC chairman Jack Kroll pointed out last week that CIO members could "kick in one buck or five bucks if they pleased."

POLITICAL 'KNOW-HOW' MANUAL

A comprehensive manual on "Practical Political Action" will be published early in September by the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee. It will be a guide to the highly specialized business of building a political organization and conducting it throughout the year's activities.

It will adapt and greatly expand the material brought together by leading political action and trade union experts at the recent school of Political Action Technique in Washington.

The book, which will be profusely illustrated with concrete examples of successful political action techniques, is divided into sections on organization, personnel, finance, research, publicity, advertising, literature and issues.

One outstanding feature is that it will be a looseleaf manual. As new techniques are developed, supplements will be issued to keep it a constantly growing technical guide. The Manual will be priced at $3, the price to include supplements covering a year's services.

EBY ON U. S. STATE DEPT. ADVISORY COMMISSION

Kermit Eby, national CIO director of education and research, was designated this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray to represent CIO on an advisory commission formed by the U. S. State Dept.

The commission, composed of representatives of "principal national voluntary organizations," was formed in conjunction with U. S. participation in the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

It is expected that the commission, which will advise the government and serve as a link with national private organizations in matters relating to UNESCO, will meet at least once and perhaps twice yearly.

Labor Educator Joins Government Mission

Lawrence Rogin, educational director for the CIO Textile Workers, will represent the CIO on a commission of 10 educators who leave for Germany this week under State and War Dept. auspices to observe and evaluate the educational program of the American Military Government in that country.

Rogin has been educational director of the Textile union since 1941 and active in the field of labor education in America since 1933.

CIO LEADERS SUPPORT URBAN LEAGUE DRIVE

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Willard Townsend, president of the CIO Transport Service Workers, are among the sponsors of the Natl. Urban League's 1946 appeal for $231,000 for an extended program of industrial housing, health, welfare and interracial planning services.

A LOOK AT THE BOOKS

JOHN Peter Altgeld, onetime governor of Illinois, was not a knight in shining armor all his life. He was a self-made millionaire of the 1870's. He was a lawyer of German peasant stock who had fought in the Civil War and he was a man who could and did meet with the politicos of his day in the traditional "smoke-filled" rooms to engineer political deals.

But "Pete" Altgeld was also a man who could be awakened by the call of conscience and by his responsibilities to society. In Howard Fast's new book, THE AMERICAN, he emerges finally as a man from whom all honest men who believe in the democratic way, can draw inspiration.

"Pete" Altgeld's memory is cherished by American labor for his defiance of President Cleveland when the latter called out federal troops to crush the Pullman strike. He is best remembered however, as the ex-governor of Illinois who pardoned the Haymarket "bomb-throwers" against the force of public pressure and public hysteria, because he was firmly convinced of their complete innocence.

Fast's story takes up these critical events in his hero's life —with the events leading up to the pardon, with Altgeld's defiance of President Cleveland, and finally with his bold and victorious fight in capturing control of the Democratic Party —to make it truly democratic— from Cleveland.

In words that are warm with respect for "Pete" Altgeld, in words that glow with the strength of Altgeld's idealism and love for the people, Howard Fast has told a fine story of one of the giants in the history of American liberalism, the story of a man who rose from humble working—class origin, but who did not betray that origin.

History textbooks give us the dry substance of a time. Howard Fast's works give us its living spirit. His work is not intended in this instance to be a definitive biography of Altgeld. It is a novel which aims at presenting the dramatic highlights in the life of a great man, a man who fulfilled in public life the tradition of American democracy born with Tom Paine, Thomas Jefferson and the struggles of the American Revolution.

THE AMERICAN, by Howard Fast. Published by Duell Sloan & Pearce. Price: $3.

OPERATING behind a smokescreen of deliberately created confusion, radio and news monopoly interests have grabbed virtually complete control of the new FM (frequency modulation) broadcasting mediums from the people.

This startling expose of how the big companies obtained a stranglehold on FM is contained in a heavily-documented 48-page booklet, MONOPOLY STEALS FM FROM THE PEOPLE, by Eugene Konecky, chairman of the Provisional Committee for Democracy in Radio.

A program for restoring broadcasting to the people is offered by Konecky and the committee. It calls for anti-monopoly legislation directed at radio, a shakeup in FCC, cooperative FM stations by labor and community groups. It also calls for labor, veterans and small businessmen to be given equal opportunities by the FCC to enter the FM field.

'BIG BIZ' MAKES EYES AT THE GRASS ROOTS

As the November elections approach with organized labor grimly resolved to sweep the tories out of Congress, big business is stepping up its own political counter-drive through use of groups with phony grass-roots appeal.

Two latest organizations attempting to do a slick anti-labor job among groups that would be suspicious of straight Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers propaganda are the Peoples Committee to Defend Life Insurance & Savings and the Tool Owners Union. Programs of both groups call for nationwide activity to promote union-busting legislation and oppose labor's political work.

Plans to set up political federations in 16 western states under rural leadership were detailed in a fund-raising letter sent out by Peoples Committee Chairman Robert E. Smith, a copy of which was obtained by Federated Press. Headquarters of the committee are at 116 Nassau St., N. Y. City. An office has also been opened in St. Paul, Minn., to direct the western organization work.

State organizations have already formed in Minnesota and Illinois and preliminary organizations in Iowa, Indiana, Missouri and Oklahoma are well advanced, Smith said. Star speakers at the Elgin, Ill., conference which set up the Illinois Peoples Political Federation were Rep. Francis Case (R,N.D.), author of the Case anti-labor bill, Rep. Alvin E. O'Konski (R,Wis.), and Judge Joseph Montague, general counsel of the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Assn.

While the People's Committee campaign is slanted mainly at farmers, the Tool Owners Union is out to form a nationwide mass organization Exposed by In Fact, weekly newsletter, the Tool Owners Union was founded early in 1946 at Lexington, Mass., as a purely local group.

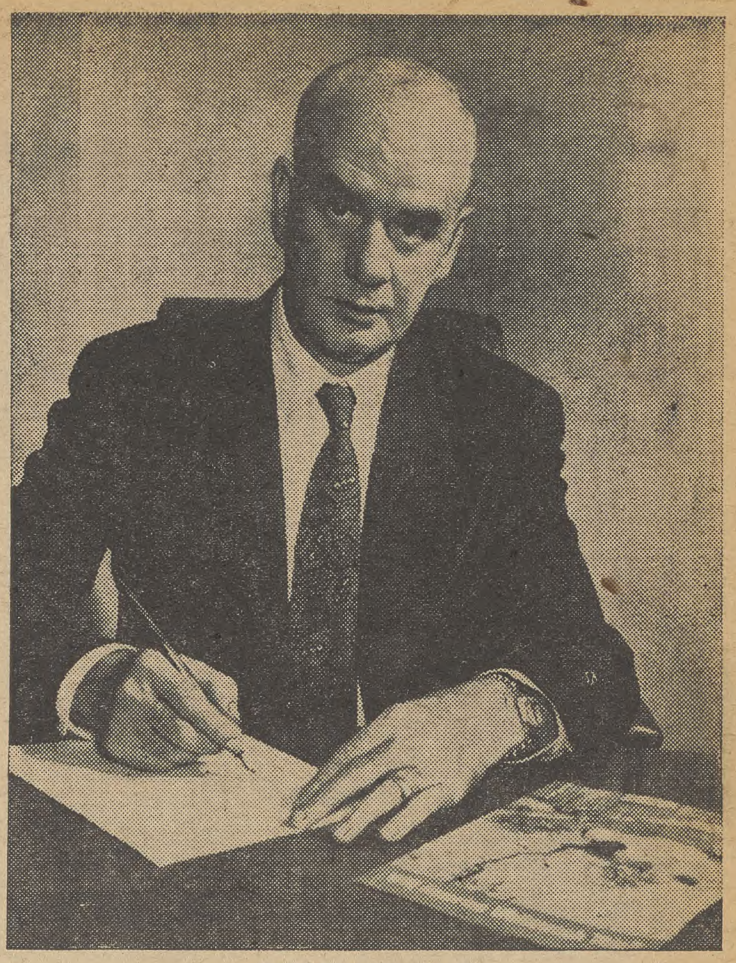
"Since obtaining NAM and big business approval, it has begun a national advertising campaign throughout the country to recruit millions of members," In Fact disclosed.

"Its advantage to the NAM is that its directors are little known and are not identified with any pro-fascist groups, thereby making them less vulnerable to attack and criticism. . . Present plans call for the big business manipulators to remain hidden in the background while the active organizers front for them."

The big business campaign to form a new mass organization was broached to NAM and U. S. Chamber of Commerce leaders shortly after Pres. Roosevelt died by Hector Lazo, public relations director for the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co. In one of its letters, Lazo wrote:

"I am completely and thoroughly convinced that this job cannot be done by either the C of C or the NAM. . . It must be done through a new organization, of course, backed by business. It must be adequately staffed and adequately financed to do an educational job. CIO, through its PAC, has so far outstripped us."

When In Fact queried Lazo on what had become of his project for big business, he replied: "The Tool Owners Union is doing the job I suggested."



PHILIP MURRAY

Petition Protests "Whitewash" of Tennessee Race Riot

HITS TENNESSEE WHITEWASH

CIO Pres. Philip Murray charged this week that the federal government's "whitewash" of the police raid on Columbia, Tenn., has contributed to the increasing mob attacks on the Negro people. At the same time he signed a Civil Rights Congress petition for a new federal grand jury investigation of the raid.

"Whether the mobs are uniformed, as in the police raid on the Negro community of Columbia, Tenn.; whether they are unmasked civilians, as were those who murdered four Negroes in Monroe, Georgia; or whether they wear the robes of the Klan, they destroy the rights and freedoms which our federal government must be made to protect," he declared.

WALLACE BLASTS USES RACE BIAS

The CIO Public Workers' repeated charge that the U. S. Employment Service office in Washington, D. C., has been guilty of discriminatory practices against Negroes was voiced this week in a letter from Sec. of Commerce Henry A. Wallace to Labor Secretary Schwellenbach.

Wallace declared that Negroes formerly employed by the Dept. of Commerce found that "the USES offices in the District operated on a basis of racial segregation, including separate lines for interview purposes and separate application files, which serves to reduce the scope of their employment opportunities."

Schewellenbach said he is investigating the situation.

Primaries

2 UP, 3 MORE LOOK GOOD

LABOR-backed Sen. James M. Tunnell and Rep.-at-large Philip A. Traynor, both constant in their support of New Deal Legislation, were handed an enthusiastic vote of confidence when the Delaware State Democratic convention renominated each by acclamation this week.

Both Delaware legislators have remained in the front lines on the fight for a living wage for all workers as well as for effective price controls. Sen. Tunnell sponsored the 65-cents minimum wage bill.

Further north, three American Labor Party candidates—Reps. Vito Marcantonio, Adam C. Powell and Donald O'Toole—won nominations by the Democratic party in New York City's hotly-contested primaries, which were prefaced by campaigns of indiscriminate red-baiting. Chances for the re-election of each of the three are considered bright, as the Democrats are predominat and the ALP strong in these districts.

There was indication of a sharp swing to the right in GOP ranks, however, as Republican voters withdrew the support they had given Reps. Powell, Marcantonio and Joseph Clark Baldwin two years ago.

Conservative newspapers and Republican Party spokesmen made much of their defeat, hopefully interpreting it as a decline in ALP power, conveniently forgetting that in the districts of the first two Republicans command only a small percentage of the vote.

With the victory of state Sen. Fredric R. Coudert, Jr., over Rep. Baldwin, the issues in the N. Y. gubernatorial race became more sharply defined.

Recognized as Gov. Thomas Dewey's errand boy in the state Senate, Coudert became notorious as co-chairman of the Rapp-coudert committee of the state's Upper chamber, which ranked with the Wood-Rankin Committee on Un-American Affairs in its statewide witchhunts.

"HE'S TRYING TO PROVE THAT THE COST OF LIVING IS GOING DOWN."

'OPEN SEASON'

Campaign expenditures and "white supremacy" arguments of Sen. Bilbo (D. Miss.) are due for an investigation if four members of two Senate committees on elections have their way.

The four—Senators Bridges, Ferguson, Ellender and Hickenlooper—promised the probe.

Meanwhile, Rep. Rankin (D. Miss.) declared that as acting chairman of the House Committee on un-American activities he would investigate the CIO Political Action Committee.

It apparently was "open season."

NO LABOR ON LABOR DAY

American labor is going to celebrate on Monday, September 2—Labor Day.

In Indiana, the Lake County CIO Council and the Railroad Brotherhoods will hold an all-day picnic at Hammond featuring addresses by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Carey will read CIO Pres. Philip Murray's Labor Day message.

The Ohio CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods and AFL are staging a joint Labor Day celebration at Steubenville, Ohio.

Plans for a parade, sports program and memorial services for the union war dead have been announced.

Readers who received the "Break Reaction's Grip" voting record with last week's CIO NEWS are asked to make three corrections.

Democratic Senators Murdock and Thomas of Utah should be listed as voting plus (+) on Issue No. 2, the Case Anti-Union Bill.

Democratic Rep. Madden of Indiana should be listed as voting plus (+) on Issue No. 3, the President's Veto of the Case Bill.

Additional copies of the voting supplement will list the correct votes.

The CIO NEWS regrets the error, which did not originate with the paper.

PRIMARY WINDUP ★ ★ ★ NOVEMBER NEXT

PRIMARY elections in Colorado, Louisiana and Nevada and nominating conventions in Connecticut and Rhode Island September 1 through 15 will wind up preliminary skirmishes in the 1946 Congressional campaigns, following which all eyes will focus on the home stretch leading to Election Day November 5.

"Guns" of the Louisiana CIO Political Action Committee will be trained on Rep. F. Edward Hebert in the Sept. 10 Democratic primary. Hebert's unbroken negative record includes support of all union-busting, price-control-wrecking legislation. Sidney J. Massicot is favored by PAC, the AFL and independent unions in the district to succeed Hebert.

Principal attention in the Colorado primaries on the same day will center around the fight in the Democratic primary in the first district, now represented by reactionary Rep. Dean M. Gillespie, a Republican. Vying for the Democratic designation are John Carroll and Thomas W. Nevin. Candidates for the governorship and the remaining three Congressional seats are unopposed in the primaries.

In the Nevada primaries Sept. 3 Rep. Berkeley L. Bunker, with a perfect voting record chalked up in two years in the Senate, and a term in the House as Representative-at-large, will attempt to wrest the Democratic nomination for the Senate from the incumbent Sen. Edward P. Carville. Carville's support of all measures designed to kill OPA is understood to have lost him considerable backing.

Speculation as to who will emerge with the gubernatorial and senatorial designations in Connecticut is expected to run high right up until the Republican nominating convention September 9-10 and the Democratic convention September 16-17.

Former OPA Administrator Chester Bowles has been mentioned as the certain Democratic choice for one of the two top places on the ballot, while Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin is recognized as a leading contender for the GOP Senatorial candidacy.

The role of Rep. Clare B. Luce is still a matter for high betting among politicos, who wonder if the lady who announced that she is not a candidate will exercise her prerogative to change her mind.

Recent primaries in N. Y. City, where the American Labor Party holds the balance of power between the Democrats and Republicans, were distinguished by "the degree of independent political action demonstrated by voters in both the Democratic and Republican parties," as Hyman Blumberg, state chairman of the ALP, commented.

Since there is no cross-voting in New York, the extent of the ALP vote will not be known until November; however, it is significant that ALP-endorsed candidates drew large totals in both Democratic and Republican ranks.

Despite violent opposition and indiscriminate red-baiting on the part of the GOP machine, ALP Rep. Vito Marcantonio drew 2,760 Republican votes, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell attracted 1,598, and Rep. Joseph Clark Baldwin enrolled the support of 2,004 independent Republican voters.

Endorsed by the laborites, Reps. Marcantonio, Powell and Donald O'Toole won the Democratic nominations. Chances for the reelection of each of the three are considered bright, as the Democrats are predominant and the Labor Party strong in these districts.

NO. 1 JOB—REGISTER!

CIO Political Action Committee Director Jack Kroll this week placed the responsibility for 100% registration of CIO members squarely on the shoulders of state and city CIO-PAC and CIO Council heads.

Kroll, in a letter, stressed the emergency of the November Congressional elections and the urgency of a deluge of votes this year. He warned against the possibility of a new Congress which would destroy labor's gains and "attack our very existence."

Citing a recent Gallup report which showed America lagging in the number of citizens who take advantage of their right to vote in comparison with European voters, Kroll stated:

"This will be our first general election since the War. Eighty-nine percent of the eligible voters in Italy voted in June; 81% of the French and 79% of the British cast ballots. With relatively light turnouts in America's first postwar primaries, it is easy to see that we must increase our efforts to surpass the 55% voting mark set in 1944. There is no reason why America, the symbol of democracy throughout the world, should lag behind in the number of citizens participating in their government."

Kroll pointed out that because voting is particularly sluggish in a non-presidential election year, special efforts will be required to achieve a large show of ballots.

"There is one black alternative facing labor if our people are not registered," the letter read. "If they don't register, we'll have a reactionary, anti-union Congress which will destroy our gains and attack our very existence. For the sake of yourself and your members, you must get 100% registration before registration deadline in your area."

The PAC chieftain urged that PAC units act immediately to take the registration message into the plants and the communities through various publicity media. The cooperation of newspapers, radio and other public information outlets should be enlisted, he added.

CALLING ALL CITIZENS!

PRODUCTION of 19 "register-vote" spot announcement transcriptions, for radio use by local union and civic groups, was announced by the CIO Political Action Committee this week.

PAC launched its air battle for a large vote turnout in November with a letter to CIO Councils which urged local acquisition of free radio time.

Naming radio as the most effective means of reaching millions daily, the PAC advised, "if the station balks at putting these announcements on the air . . . your reply should be that radio stations under the Federal Communications Commission are licensed to serve in the public interest."

This announcement is in the public interest, said PAC, pointing out that urging people to register and vote, is a good American tradition on which our democracy is based.

Refusal of station managers to grant radio time should be made the subject of vigorous protest to the FCC, the letter pointed out.

AN example of censorship methods used by radio stations was released this week by PAC, which reported refusal of radio station WMT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to grant paid air time to the local CIO-PAC on the grounds that the proposed broadcasts were controversial.

The Cedar Rapids CIO Council has filed a complaint with the FCC, accusing the station of unfairness. The station was willing to permit scripts, which berated the Republican incumbent, Rep. Henry O. Talle, for his isolationist and anti-OPA stands, to be aired under auspices of the Bernhart for Congress Club (Democratic party) but not under those of the CIO-PAC.

PAC instructions for use of the "spots" suggest that six, concerned with voting, be played close to Election Day, while the other 13 on registration are for immediate use.

The five musical announcements are recorded by nationally-known ballad singers Tom Glazer and Peter Seeger in cooperation with People's Songs, Inc., while the dramatic sketches were produced by a Hollywood cast.

The PAC letter disclosed that a second series of "spots" is in production which will deal with specific issues of the campaign such as inflation, housing, security and anti-discrimination, which will provide room for insertion by the local group of a "plug" for endorsed candidates.

PRICE GRAB IN COPPER

WHILE fabricators of copper and brass goods are literally crying for copper and Mr. and Mrs. Consumer are waiting for those promised postwar appliances, the giant corporations which control production of raw copper have added 22,038 tons to their private stockpile during July.

Rather than sell the refined copper, the copper trust is piling it up in reserve as part of its never-ending campaign to force prices up to higher and more profitable levels.

As a result many sections of the fabricating industry have been forced to close down production facilities for lack of metal. Production schedules in other copper-consuming industries have been curtailed sharply and also face occasional shutdown.

Here's how the price-grab works.

Users of copper (the fabricating, electrical and appliance industries) are in desperate need of the metal. But, since they can't get it from the refiners, they must get what they can from the government stockpiles.

When these government stockpiles are depleted—and they will be soon, at the present rate of use—the manufacturers will be forced to turn to the refiners. At that time the copper trust will be in a position to force new higher prices from OPA.

And when the government's stockpiles are depleted, it too will have to replenish its supplies—by buying from the trust at the new prices.

That the government will be blackjacked into allowing price increases for copper is a foregone conclusion. The groundwork has already been laid for the extortion under terms of the OPA bill now in effect.

What price increases mean to the trust can most easily be seen on a cent-per-pound basis. It has been estimated, for instance, that each cent-per-pound of price increase would increase the yearly income of Kennecott Copper Corp. by $10 million.

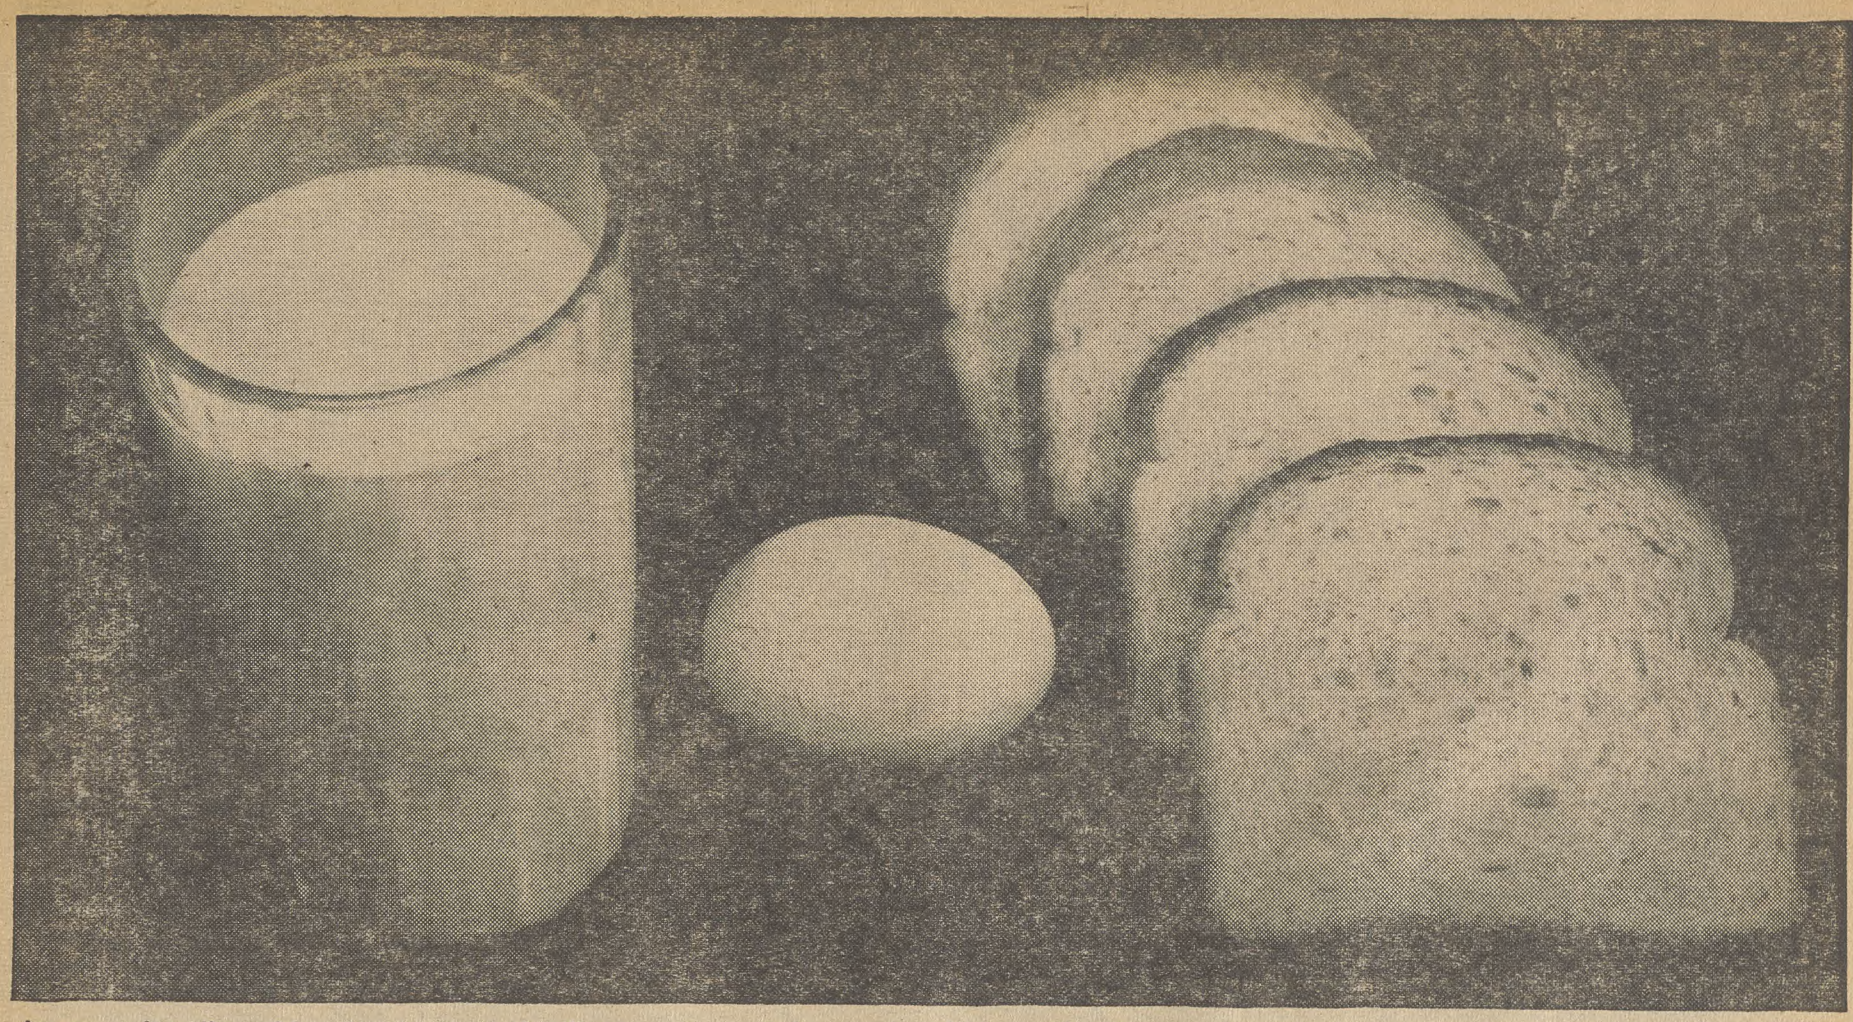
When the copper industry wrested an increase of 2.375c a pound from OPA late this spring to cover increased production costs, less than one-fourth of the amount represented the cost of an 18½c wage increase won by union strike action.

CORRECTION

The recently-published CIO voting supplement erroneously recorded Rep. Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) as having voted wrong on the Hobbs Bill, on the move to sustain the President's veto of the Case Bill and on the Dirksen Amendment to the bill to return the U. S. Employment Service to the states (issues No. 1, 3 and 4).

Those who have already received the supplement are asked to make the corrections. The three votes should be marked plus (+). Future copies, to be printed, will carry the voting record correctly.

The CIO NEWS regrets the error, which did not originate with the paper.



An egg, a few slices of bread and a quart of milk ar e not enough for growing children. But Congress, b y rejecting strong price-control legislation, insured that would be all the 26c per day allowance for depen dent children from the Washington D. C. Board of W elfare could buy.

ONE DAY'S EATING, CREDIT TO CONGRESS

REPUBLICANS and their southern Democratic allies who teamed up to kill strong OPA price regulations literally stole the bread out of the mouths of babes.

The facts show that while big business profits in the food industries soared to new heights, these Congressmen were insuring that people who lived on public assistance—such as dependent children—would be put on a virtual starvation diet.

Study the stark simplicity of the picture above. Look at the few slices of bread, the egg, the glass of milk. That's not much for one meal. But that's all that the Washington, D. C. Board of Public Welfare budget allows for dependent children for THREE meals.

It's 26 cents a day! Twenty-six cents to buy life and health and vigor for our less privileged children.

Figures are even lower in various Southern states, and even in the "richer" cities of New York, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, dependent children in comparable age groups must eat on 36 cents a day. That won't buy much more than what you see above.

The data on Washington, D. C., was brought to light last week in the first of a series of reports sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies. In the report, which covered the activities of the Washington Board of Public Welfare, strong criticism was directed at the $8 monthly allotment for under-12-year-old dependent youngsters in Washington. Said the report:

"Most striking inadequacy in assistance to the poor is the amount of food budgeted for children between 7 and 12. In spite of spiraling living costs, no change in basic budgeting has been made since 1944—except that during the last half of fiscal year 1945 and 1946 there was a 10% cut in assistance grants by the district government which resulted in actual reduction in amounts for individual families.

"The 10 per cent cut reduced still further the possibility for families dependent on public assistance in Washington to manage in a way that will insure their continued health and well-being."

But the report didn't place the blame on a major source of this crime—on a Congress which threw price controls out the window.

WHILE Congress was legislating to take the milk off your table, the Natl. Dairy Products Corp., largest of the dairy companies, was doubling its profit-take this year over that of 1945.

While Congress was guaranteeing that you'd have less clothes to wear, the American Viscose Co., which controls 44% of the rayon-producing capacity of this country, more than doubled its profits for the first quarter of 1946 over the first quarter of 1945.

And while Congressmen listened to tales of woe from the meat-packers to insure that you'd get less meat, Armour & Co., one of the "Big Four" packing houses, in the first six months of 1946 MADE MORE THAN IN THE WHOLE YEAR OF 1945.

Life, Liberty And The Pursuit Of Happiness!

'UNFIT FOR OFFICE'

"UNFIT for office" was the label pinned on Secretary of Agriculture Anderson this week by the CIO Cost of Living Committee following his announcement that ceiling price boosts for meat will increase the cost per pound from 3 to 6c above the June 30 levels.

OPA Director Porter said that the new price "control" law passed by Congress makes the increases announced by Anderson mandatory.

The CIO statement, released by Chairman John Thornton of the Cost of Living Committee, declared:

"Secretary Anderson's concession to the pressure of the livestock interests and the meat packers is a new and disastrous blow to the living standards of the American people.

"We believe Anderson's reckless step demonstrates his unfitness for office. It climaxes a long series of incidents in which Anderson acted as mouthpiece for profiteers."

REPORTS TO THE PEOPLE

THE CIO in the next few months will issue a series of "Reports to the People" on wages and prices, profits and productivity, savings and taxes, and related subjects.

A CIO wage meeting, called by Research & Education Director Kermit Eby, initiated a program aimed to gather and to present facts dealing with the real causes of the present inflation and the plight of the common people.

LABOR DAY GOALS

IT may seem trite to say that peace and plenty are the goals to which the CIO dedicates its efforts on Labor Day, 1946.

Why call these CIO or labor goals? Aren't they what everyone wants? Aren't they just to be taken for granted?

But this is precisely the point which labor's critics can't get through their heads, that what is good for everyone is good for labor, that what the CIO wants most is the common good.

As to such goals being taken for granted, that too brings up a point which labor has to emphasize again and again.

Progress cannot be made toward these goals without organization, a clear-cut program and constant effort and struggle.

It can never be taken for granted that we are "on our way," just because everyone wishes it so.

★ ★ ★

OUR late President Roosevelt charted a course for postwar progress toward an economy of plenty.

He drew up an "Economic Bill of Rights" for all the common people. He called for progressive social legislation for full employment, for the health and housing of the people, for a decent minimum wage, for expanded social security and to abolish job discriminations.

The American people voted for such a program when they re-elected him.

But, looking back over the year since last Labor Day, we find that little progress has been made toward this goal of plenty, not just for the rich, but for all the people.

Congress blocked or defeated nearly all this legislation. By wrecking price control, it opened the door to inflation, thus lowering labor's and the people's living standards.

Even those business interests that had their way with Congress are not too happy with the results of their greed, as shown by the recent stock market slump.

ROOSEVELT also charted a course for lasting peace, through the unity of the Big Three and international collaboration in the United Nations.

Toward this goal too, the progress since last Labor Day has been meager, if not in reverse, as any glance at newspaper headlines and editorials will indicate.

World labor, which can do so much to promote international understanding and peaceful, friendly relations between all peoples, has not been allowed to play its full part, as shown by the denial of adequate representation in the United Nations to the World Federation of Trade Unions.

★ ★ ★

WHEN the CIO, on this Labor Day, rededicates its efforts to the goals of peace and plenty, it means something very definite.

It means it will strengthen its unions to achieve decent living standards for all workers.

It means it will combat inflation by every means at its disposal.

It means it will work for all the social legislation needed for the people's welfare and security, for freedom from want and fear.

It means it will strive for closer understanding and cooperation between the labor movements and peoples of all countries.

Examples of how the CIO is working toward these goals may be seen in its increasingly successful Southern organizing drive; in the nationwide election campaign of its Political Action Committee; and in the wholehearted support it accords to the World Federation of Trade Unions.

The CIO has a clear-cut program for peace and plenty—a program which all public-spirited Americans can support. On this Labor Day, it calls for increased organization and renewed effort to place this program into effect.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

ALL THE decontrolling and ceiling-raising now going on in the name of "price control" remind me of the youngster I was teaching to ride a bicycle.

At long last, I could remove my stabilizing hand, and he wobbled off triumphantly on his own.

"Do you feel you've got the bike under control now?" I asked.

"I sure do," he answered—"just so I don't try to stop."

●

THE 1946 Congressional model of price control is a streamlined machine, complete with engine and accelerator to speed along the road of inflation.

All it lacks is a brake—and a bumper to take up some of the shock when we crash.

●

OR, TO PUT it yet another way, perhaps the Decontrol Board and other alleged administrators of alleged price control could use the sign I once saw on the elevator of a little Berlin hotel:

"This elevator only goes up."

●

OF COURSE, they may answer like the English, who call an elevator a "lift" and object to the American word: "It's true you can elevate something up, but how can you 'elevate' it down?"

Nevertheless, we have known elevators that go down. And when the American people are pressing the "Down" button like mad, it makes them plenty sore to see the price-control elevator shoot upward again and again, all loaded up with big fat men.

●

HERE'S ANOTHER tip on elevators and prices. The elevators in the Senate Office Building in Washington will accommodate anyone. But when a Senator gets in, regardless of where any other passengers may be headed, the elevator is immediately shot in the direction the Senator wants to go.

The 79th Congress pressed the "Up" button, and up went our living costs. If we put the right Senators and Representatives into the next Congress, they can press the "Down " button and get immediate results.

●

ONE FINAL word about price (control) elevators. If you can't get the elevator to take you and your living costs down, it isn't so satisfactory, but you can try going down the stairs on your own motion—by refusing to pay high prices and buying only essentials.

And if the elevator persists in going only up, we'll have to squeeze wages aboard along with the upgoing price-profiteers.

●

NOT TO CHANGE the subject, a recent Elmo Roper opinion poll reveals an appalling ignorance of Congress among the people questioned.

More than 56% of them were unable to name anyone they considered "a good Senator," and more than 76% could think of no example of a "good Representative."

But wipe off that cynical grin, brother. Even larger percentages couldn't think of the names of any "not so good" Senators or Representatives.

Many named Representatives as Senators, and vice versa, or named persons who were never in Congress. And the proportion of "don't know" answers generally was unusally high for an opinion poll.

●

IF THAT poll is representative of the citizens of our democracy, it is small wonder so many members of Congress voted prices up when the people were hollering "down."

Why should they worry about folks who don't even know their names, or who haven't followed their activities in Congress sufficiently to know whether their records are good or bad?

●

SMALL WONDER too that these price-raising members of Congress regard the CIO-PAC as their worst enemy.

For one of PAC's main aims is to make all voters aware, not only of the names, but also of the voting records of their representatives in Congress.

●

IF YOU don't want to be caught with only a vacant look or some bad guesses, when one of those opinion-poll boys knocks at your door, just get hold of the special CIO NEWS supplement giving the voting record of your and all other members of Congress.

And, what's more important, when the only conclusive poll rolls around in November, this will help you to know some good members of the next Congress, because you will have helped to put them there.

TO VETS, NO FRIEND

By IRVING RICHTER

National Legislative Representative, CIO Auto Workers

REP. JOHN RANKIN, Miss. polltaxer, has made a record for himself not only as our all-American witch-hunter; he also claims to be the veterans' best friend. Whenever he is challenged on his work as the chairman of the House veterans' committee, Rankin points to the number of bills which bear his name.

Here is how he gets his name on the bills: Let's take the case of the Rogers bill, which provides specially built cars for amputees and paraplegics (men who have lost the use of their lower limbs through spinal wounds). Congresswoman Rogers (R. Mass.), introduced her bill in April, 1946. She worked hard for its passage. The amputees organized a national committee to push the bill. They sent representatives to conventions of the Auto Workers, the Steelworkers, the Clothing Workers and other CIO Unions, asking and getting support.

But the bill didn't move. So the boys went to Capitol Hill, to lobby The answer was the same as it has been on hundred of other veterans bills: Rankin, committee chairman, refused to call his committee for a meeting on the bill. But the lobbying grew.

Dozens of amputees buttonholed Rankin and other committee members. They enlisted the support of a few veterans organizations, and very active support from the CIO.

Atfer many weeks had passed, a hearing was called. No member seemed hostile, but the committee didn't report out the bill. Finally, in July, Rep. Marcantonio(ALP. N. Y.), after consulting with the amputees' committee and Mrs. Rogers, circulated a discharge petition to take the bill away from Rankin and bring it to the floor for a vote. A total of 175 members of the required 218 soon signed the petition.

Rankin was annoyed, but the other members of his committee pressed for action. On July 26, three months after its introduction, the committee met on the bill. After a long argument, Rep. Pickett (D. Tex.), introduced a compromise—to limit the cars to those amputees who had lost their legs at or above the knee. The committee, accepted the compromise, with Rankin still showing opposition.

Rankin was instructed, however, as committee chairman, to introduce the revised bill. He had it printed with his own name on the revised bill, but added the words "on request" after his name.

Rankin then went to the floor with the bill, asking unanimous consent, in accordance with the wishes of the committee. The session was about to close, and unanimous consent was the only way in which the bill could be brought up without having to go through the rules committee.

There was one exception, by Rep. Whittington (D., Miss.), a close associate of Rankin. Never before, in the memory of old Capitol hands, did he buck the master.

This objection made it necessary to go to the rules committee. Rankin asked this committee in a half-hearted fashion for a rule permitting the Rogers bill to come up. He also asked for rules on six other bills. No rule was given.

Why? the amputees asked various members. The answer, even from some friends of Rankin, was that one man held it up—Rankin.

The veterans weren't ready to give up. We all went to see someone in the Senate, who will have to remain anonymous—a man who isn't a member but who works intimately with the leading Senators. He got Sen. Magnusson (D., Wash.) to tack the bill onto the appropriations measure. It passed the Senate and the House, and was signed by the President.

Amputees at Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C., and their associates from all parts of the country know who helped them, and who sabotaged their fight. They are burned up at Rankin.

Above all, they are grateful for what the CIO and the Auto Workers did for them.

Veterans Protest

PAY CUT PAY-OFF

PROTESTS mounted this week against the ceilings on wages that veterans can receive during on-the-job training and still receive Government subsistence allowances.

So widspread were the threats of veterans that they would quit apprentice-training that the U. S. Labor Dept. feared a shortage of skilled craftsmen. When ex-GIs learn that they may have to return some of their subsistence allowance a new wave of protests is expected.

Under the GI Bill amendment (S2477) enacted during the closing moments of the 79th Congress, GI on-the-job trainees are limited to $175 a month without dependents, and $200 a month with dependents including subsistence allowances.

Pres. Jacob W. Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers this week protested the effect of the law on "thousands of veterans who responded to the invitation of our late Pres. Sidney Hillman to enter the industry" where the new law cut their salaries $25 to $50 monthly.

"It is grossly unfair to ask a veteran with a family to live on a maximum wage of $200 a month, including government subsistence, as a penalty for spending his youth and risking his life in the service of his country," Potofsky said.

The ACW head appealed to members of the union to urge their Senators and Congressmen to amend the law.

The St. Louis CIO, through its executive secretary, Oscar A. Ehrhardt, voiced objections not only to the pay limitation imposed by the GI Bill amendment, but also to the limitation of job training to two years and the failure to impose penalties on employers offering phony on-the-job training.

Thomas A. Andert, chairman and director of organization (CIO Optical Workers Organizing Committee), estimated that 6,000 veterans are affected by the law in the St. Louis area alone. Andert also wrote a letter to President Truman, inviting him to explain to ex-GIs "how much they can benefit by the bill Congress eagerly passed and you just as eagerly signed."

Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the Natl. CIO, Veterans Committee, immediately following enactment of the law announced the intention of the CIO to seek elimination of its objectionable provisions."

At least three months will be required to cut or increase subsistence allowances to veterans in education and training, necessitated by the changes in the GI Bill, the Veterans Administration announced this week.

Veterans can arrange adjustments sooner by making special requests to VA regional offices handling their training.

The limitation applies to veterans whether they are earning money outside while going to school or earning wages in apprentice or on-the-job training.

VA has set up procedures for making necessary changes without delaying the mailing of subsistence checks to veterans.

For at least three months, perhaps longer, veterans will get the same amount they have been getting in the past.

Enclosed in the Aug. 31, Sept. 30 and Oct. 31 checks mailed to veterans will be a notice from VA describing the changes in the GI Bill and warning each veteran that he may later have to return some of the money he is receiving in subsistence allowance during this interim period.

The same notice asks each veteran to give his training officer or regional office, not later than Nov. 5, a statement of his earnings during August, September and October. Veterans are warned that further checks will be delayed until this notice is received, so they should be sure to meet the Nov. 5 date.

After veterans have turned in this notice, VA will start making adjustments in any subsistence allowances that require changes. If the veteran need to refund to the government any money they have received in August, September and October checks they will be notified of the amount, but no time limit will be set for returning this money.

LOW-WAGE JOBS GO BEGGING

PREDICTING that there will be three million unemployed veterans by December, the Veterans Administration in its current monthly analysis this week called for a positive placement program for veterans offering jobs paying more than 65c an hour.

The VA Research Service in the analysis estimated that there are 1.67 million unemployed veterans and that the unemployment rate for veterans, as measured by the ratio of unemployed veterans to all veterans in the labor force, is about three times the non-veteran rate. The VA blamed the low pay offered veterans as one of the reasons for the high unemployment rate.

Statistics in the VA survey bolstered the need for the 65-cent minimum wage law are:

The lower limit of jobs listed by the U. S. Employment Service during July for unskilled or trainee men workers was less than 65c an hour in more than one-half of the 92 major labor market areas. The pay in these jobs, the survey pointed out, is "approximately equivalent on a weekly basis to the readjustment allowance ($20 a week for 52 weeks) plus 'the cost of going to work'."

"In eight areas, most of which are in the South, the highest wage offered for such labor (unskilled) did not exceed 65c an hour," the survey declared.

VA statisticians also showed that 28% of all jobs listed for men by the USES in April in all skilled classifications paid less than 65c an hour, and that in the retail and wholesale trade one-third of the jobs offered by USES paid less than 65c an hour.

VACATION PAY WON

Two more firms, the Sharon, Pa., Works of the Natl. Malleable & Steel Casting Co. and the Moltrop Steel Products Co., Beaver Falls, Pa., this week agreed to give veterans their vacation pay during the year they return to work. Both firms are covered by contracts with the CIO Steelworkers.

It took a decision by an arbitrator, Judge John P. Egan of the Allegheny County, Pa., Courts, to get vacation time at the Sharon Works, while a written agreement did the trick at the Beaver Falls concern.

Among other firms that have agreed to give vacation pay to veterans are Crucible Steel with plants in Syracuse, N. Y., Harrison, N. J., and Pittsburgh, Pa., and the Florence Stove Co., Gardner, Mass.

CIO GIVES LOWDOWN BY RADIO

QUESTIONS of three veterans about on-the-job training were answered last Sunday by Meyer Bernstein, representative of the CIO Veterans Committee, in a Mutual network broadcast.

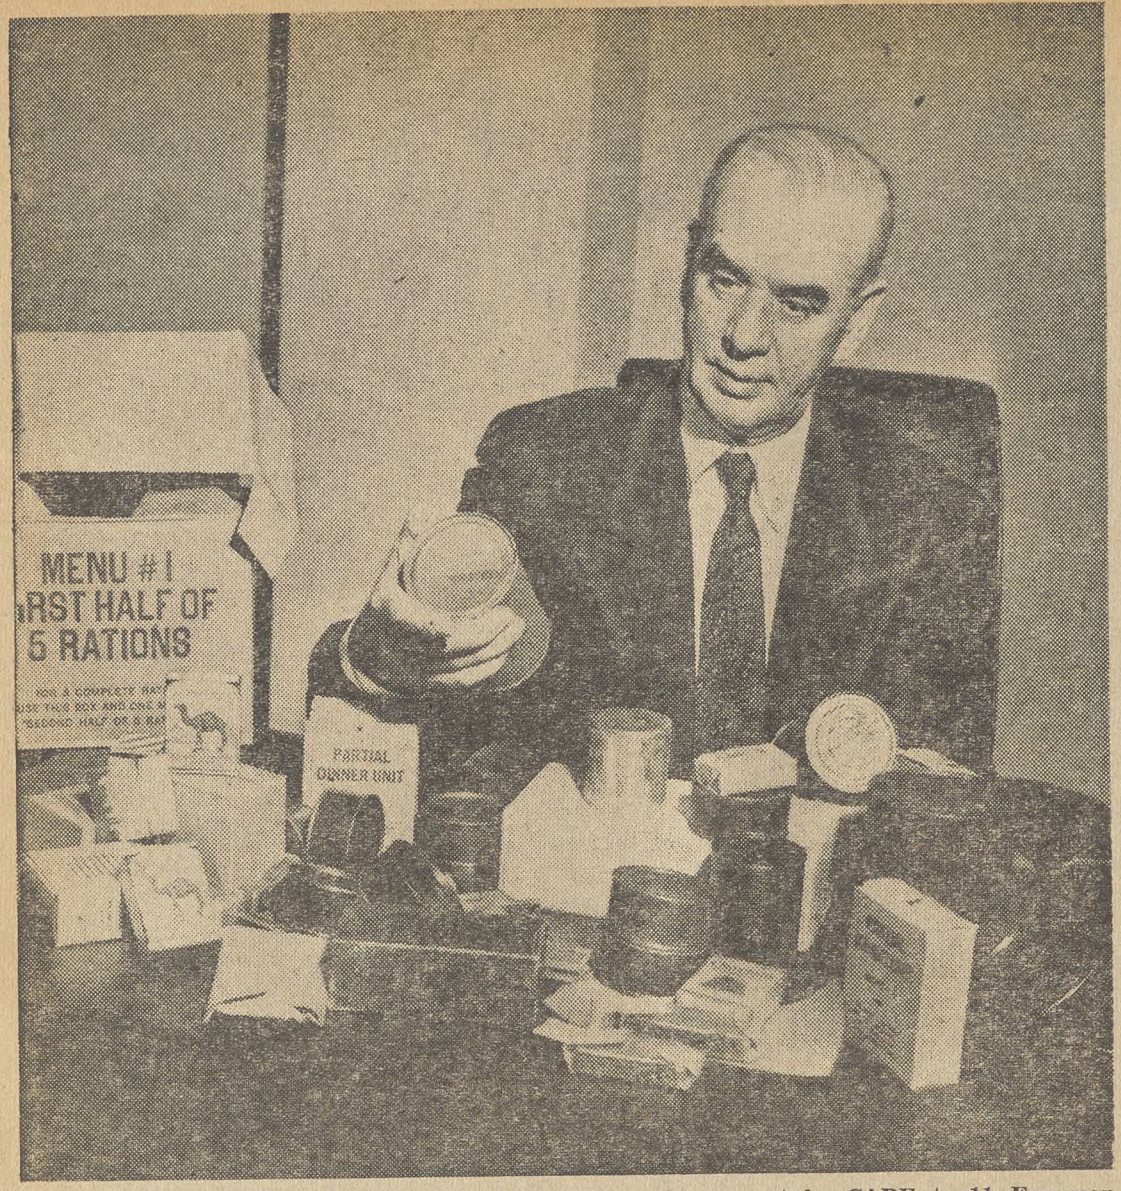
Replying to a veteran who feared that he would not have a job anyway if business conditions are not good when he finishes his on-the-job training program, Bernstein declared the "very training for a job is better assurance for a firm to be able to allay future business set-backs."

Bernstein warned veterans against phony on-the-job training, telling them that if employers refused to put the training on a legitimate basis they should quit because the VA will cut off their subsistence allowances as soon as they learn about the racket.

The CIO veterans' representative expressed faith that the new amendments to the GI Bill would eliminate most of the rackets, but struck out strongly against the provision limiting income to $175 a month for veterans without dependents and $200 to veterans with dependents, including subsistence allowances.

VA'S LABOR POLICY

The Veterans Administration this week advised its employes that they have the right to join unions of their own choosing, and invited representatives of several unions to advise VA in solving personnel problems. The CIO United Public Workers was among the unions consulted by VA personnel officers before the circular was prepared.



1 CIO President Murray examines one of the food packages sent by CARE to 11 European countries, with delivery guaranteed. Murray placed an order for 11 packages, to needy trade unionists in each of the 11 nations.

2 CARE packages contain 29 pounds of food and other needed items. This Austrian longshoreman lends a hand at CARE headquarters, in Vienna.

3 Children of St. Mary's Orphanage in Pudy, near Warsaw, Poland, get only 1,200 calories worth of food a day. CARE packages contain 40,000 calories. Included are: pre-cooked meats, preserved butter, evaporated milk, sugar, cocoa and coffee beverage powders, candy bars—and soap and cigarettes.

SO THE HUNGRY SHALL BE FED

STARVATION and undernourishment in Europe are problems for all the world. For $15 you can guarantee that some family in one of 11 European countries will get 40,000 calories of food.

The $15 will buy a 49-pound package containing 29 pounds of food, a bit of soap and a few cigarettes. It will be provided by the Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe Inc. (CARE), a non-profit, government approved organization formed by 25 labor, religious, cooperative and welfare agencies. CIO is a member through participation of the CIO Community Services Commtitee.

LABOR DAY — 1946

Labor Day Message

By PHILIP MURRAY
President, Congress of Industrial Organizations

ON this second Labor Day since the ending of war hostilities, American labor recognizes the meager progress made toward the attainment of our nation's post-war goals.

The American people, in recognition of this fact, must prepare to secure that lasting peace and international cooperation envisaged by our war president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and buttress their efforts to secure, through progressive social legislation, an expanding economy that will attain the goals which the people have been consistently endeavoring to achieve.

Labor, through the World Federation of Trade Unions, must exercise its influence against aggressive imperialism in foreign affairs wherever it is found to be practiced by any country.

Labor has noted the derelictions of Congress in failing to measure up to its responsibilities, and the favors which it has extended profiteers at the expense of the common people. The take-home pay of American workers was drastically cut following the conclusion of hostilities.

The CIO took the lead in the fight to obtain American living standards and the mass purchasing power necessary for a stabilized and expanding economy. But since that time profiteers have destroyed the balance sought by the CIO between wages and prices by securing unjustified price increases to swell already spectacular earnings.

Congress loaned its support to profiteers by almost completely wrecking the Price Control Act. The resulting inflation has cut equally into the real wages of the American workers and into the savings and purchasing power of all sections of our people. It threatens still worse disaster to our national welfare.

It is also true that the reactionary majority of Congress has defeated or sidetracked nearly all progressive social measures urgently needed for the welfare and prosperity of the American people.

It has failed to pass legislation for housing, health, a permanent FEPC, an adequate minimum wage, expanded social security, and a real full employment program, and it has allowed the poll tax to continue to mock our democracy by denying the right to vote to ten million American Citizens.

On this Labor Day the labor movement must resolve to rise to its full responsibilities, taking the lead to bring our country back to the true path of progress.

The CIO, for its part, has engaged in a great organizing campaign to bring the benefits of unionism to unorganized workers in the South and other parts of the country.

It will use its rapidly growing strength to combat inflation by mobilizing consumers to resist higher prices; by demanding the vigorous enforcement of remaining controls, and by calling for government, industry and labor to plan joint measures to meet the growing need of the people.

The Political Action Committee of the CIO will also mobilize the efforts of its members, and seek the cooperation of all forward-looking Americans, to educate the public on the vital issues of the day and the voting records of their representatives; to encourage all eligible voters to go to the polls and vote; and to secure the election of members of Congress who will enact progressive legislation to meet the people's needs.

The CIO will intensify its efforts to secure a voice for labor in the councils of the United Nations, and to promote ever closer friendship, understanding and cooperation between the people of all nations.

FUTURE GOOD --TRUMAN

CITING the fact that "the largest part of reconversion has been accomplished, and much of the credit for the job done goes to the workers of this great Union . . .," President Harry S. Truman told American workers in his Labor Day Message that "we can look into the future today with confidence, but not with tranquility.

"We still have a big job to do, and a long way to go, to assure the domestic prosperity and international understanding necessary to prevent depressions and war. But we can do it . . ."

The President went on to say that "Labor, perhaps more than any other group, has consistently supported the objectives set forth in Franklin D. Roosevelt's memorable "Economic Bill of Rights." We must now move forward to full achievement of those objectives: useful and remunerative jobs for all; incomes high enough to provide adequate food, clothing and recreation; freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopoly; adequate health protection; more effective social security measures; and educational opportunity for all.

"Labor too has been in the forefront of the battle to end intolerance and wipe out bigotries of race, creed and color.

"I salute the hosts of labor for their magnificent job in wartime and in the beginnings of peace, and urge them on to further efforts in behalf of the rights and dignity of mankind."

KROLL URGES LABOR P-ACTION

CIO-PAC Director Jack Kroll, in his Labor Day message told America's workers that "On this Labor Day, 1946, American labor has the greatest opportunity and yet is confronted with the most serious challenge in its history."

Pointing out that "the deepest desire of the workers, together with all the comon men and women of our land is for a stable peace in the world and a secure and plentiful America," Kroll warned that "against the people's program are arrayed the powerful forces of reaction, who today are battling to maintain the privileges of the few at the expense of the many.

"They must be defeated," he continued, "or our nation will take the path that inevitably leads from false prosperity to unemployment and want, economic crisis, international conflict, and a third and more terrible war.

"Labor's 1946 political tasks are clear.

FROM OVERSEAS

To PHILIP MURRAY

On the occasion of Labor Day, the Central Committee of the Polish trade unions as representative of the United Trade Movement sends to you on behalf of two million members its brotherly greetings and thanks for American trade unions' help to the Polish people and working class.

PRESIDENT KAZIMIERZ WITASZEWSKI,
GEN. SEC. KAZIMIERZ RUSINEK.

On occasion of American Labor Day extend on behalf of the Chinese Association of Labor our admiration toward your magnificent contribution for fighting for world peace and protecting human rights and our expectation of a thorough realization of democratic international labor movement and free trade unionism.

CHU HSUEH-FAN, PRES. CAL.

GOVT. OFFICIALS LAUD LABOR

GOVERNMENT officials in their Labor Day messages this week, hailed the growth and contributions of the American labor movement and set out the tasks which face labor in the coming year.

SEC. OF COMMERCE, HENRY A. WALLACE, declared that "the American people can be proud of the great achievements of the working people of this country in helping to win the war and in bringing us so far along the road to full peacetime production.

"However," said Wallace, "we must look ahead to the difficult problems that face us. We need—and must have—a Congress that will cooperate with the President's Economic Advisory Council in doing whatever is necessary to maintain full employment and avert disastrous depressions. We must have a Congress that will extend social security provisions to all American workers and provide for job security at a decent annual wage.

"The world is on the march toward a real democracy that will make the good life possible for all men. At this critical point in history the working people of America must make sure that our country . . . chooses the road to abundance and shows the world what dynamic democracy can do."

Pointing to the "disputes" and "disagreements" during the reconversion period, LABOR SEC. SCHWELLENBACH declared that "It is good for all of us that labor has preserved its strength through this trying year."

Lashing out at labor's critics who "say that organized labor's motives are selfish, that its aims are not directed toward the common good," Schwellenbach asserted that if he believed that charge he "would not be Secretary of Labor."

The Secretary reminded American labor that it will be "called upon to help meet the threat of spiraling prices. Make your answer an open invitation," he said, "to a period of industrial stability and peak production — with adequate price and rent controls. Such a policy will permit no sacrifice of gains already won and no abandonment of future claims."

Florida's liberal SENATOR CLAUDE PEPPER told American labor that "it must be on guard against the same forces which we conquered in World War II. For you can be sure," the Senator continued, "they will keep on trying until the democratic groups, including our labor organizations, have whipped them thoroughly and finally."

Striking sharply at the 79th Congress which "fed crumbs to labor at the table of legislation," the fighting Congressman warned labor that "These . . . are hard times. With legalized inflation, rising prices, many workers with substandard wages, inadequate social security and assistance, scarcity of housing, manufacturers' strikes, the threat of an impending depression, international peace problems, labor has its task cut out.

"I am sure that labor, when put to the test will win out in the long run. I have faith," concluded the Senator, "in the democratic and freedom-loving forces of American labor."

CHURCHES BACK LABOR AIMS

"A GREATER sense of world fellowship and a passion for freedom which will embrace all men" was called for by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in its annual Labor Day message.

The message asserted that an "annual income adequate for a worthy standard of living, the provision of decent housing and assured medical care . . . the wider distribution of property, and income and power . . . is indispensable to the realization of the common good."

Saluting the progress of unions, the Council told American labor that "the Social Ideals of the Churches have affirmed since the early years of this century the right of workers to organize freely into unions of their own choosing.

"There still are millions of workers to whom the benefits of trade unionism have never been extended," said the church group, and it urged that workers, particularly in agriculture, be extended the protections of organized labor.

"Strong encouragement is due labor organizations" concluded the Council, "in their efforts to improve the general welfare of their members through such activities as workers' education, child-care programs, family case work and personal counseling; also in their activities reflecting a social concern beyond labor's immediate interest."

'BIG DITCH' WORKERS GO CIO

A spectacular organizing drive in the Panama Canal Zone has brought over 17,000 U. S. Government employes who work for the Panama Canal into the ranks of the CIO Public Workers. The new "Big Ditch" local is the largest in the union.

Spearheaded by Len Goldsmith, Director of Education, the campaign resulted in an agreement with the government providing for bargaining rights, grievance machinery, economic improvements, dues collection machinery and many other benefits.

For the first time in 40 years, the workers in the Canal Zone, who have been the victims of outrageous racial and economic discrimination, have a voice in determining their own working conditions.

The newly established local voted unanimously to support the policies of the CIO union, including the policy of not asserting the right to strike against the government.

Organization was first started on May 2, under the leadership of Edward Cheresh, an American pharmacist employed in the Zone. It grew rapidly and on July 4 the union held a stimulating rally of over 4,000 workers which was addressed by the President of the Republic of Panama, Enrique Jimanez.

An application for a Public Workers' charter was made and Goldsmith flew down to Panama to assist in setting up the new local.

On July 28, the union was chartered as Local 713 and over 10,000 members on the Pacific side attended a mass rally at the largest stadium in Panama to witness the ceremonies. The following night the charter was presented on the Atlantic side where 6,000 members turned out.

Membership in the newly chartered local includes such diverse groups as teachers, hotel and restaurant workers, locomotive engineers, nurses, doctors, salesgirls, painters, machinists, street cleaners, power plant workers, truck drivers, bookkeepers, etc.

There is no private industry in the Canal Zone and as a result all workers came under the jurisdiction of the Public Workers.

Important gains have been secured for the workers thus far in negotiations with Joseph H. Mahaffey, Governor of the Canal Zone. The governor has indicated that he is sympathetic towards eliminating the terms "silver" and "gold," used as a local form of "jimcrowism."

The governor opposed a 40c minimum wage but agreed that a committee of department heads would study and revise all wage scales in the Zone in light of the union's proposals. He did accede to the principle of equal pay for equal work, to establish wage scales with automatic progressions and to curtail the power of foremen over wages.

A compromise settlement over the voluntary check-off of union dues was worked out whereby the Union would establish dues collection tables on pay day at the pay windows. In addition, union stewards would be given time off with pay to collect dues.

Although past practice has been to limit tenancy in the Canal Zone to government agencies only, the governor agreed to lease for a token rental three buildings, strategically located, for union headquarters. He further granted permission for all employes who are designated as international representatives or business agents to be given leaves of absence from government service without pay and be permitted to live in government quarters on the Zone and to patronize the government commissaries where Canal Zone employes buy all necessary supplies.

Finally the governor agreed to the setting up of a retirement system and the establishment of a labor-management housing committee which would present a program of priority for housing, such a program to be the subject of collective bargaining between the union's housing committee and the Chief Quartermaster of the Canal Zone.

Public Workers' president, Abram Flaxer, named Edward Cheresh as Regional Director for the union in the Canal Zone and also designated Joseph G. Milwood and Guillermo Rojas as Field Representatives. The Local has elected four business agents and plans to add eight more to the staff within the next few weeks.

At present the local has over 1,600 stewards who have formed a steward's council which meets weekly on a chapter basis.

WORLD LABOR ROUNDUP

THE GREEK government is terrorizing workers by repressive measures which "keep alive the constant danger of civil war," it was charged this week by the World Federation of Trade Unions.

In a memorandum to all Peace Conference delegates in Paris, the WFTU asked them to send a commission to intervene against reported Greek government activities designed to promote the vote for return of King George in a referendum scheduled for Sept. 1.

THE WFTU Executive Bureau meeting, set for Sept. 16 at Washington, D. C., has been postponed until Sept. 20 to allow several members to attend the Intl. Labor Organization's Montreal parley, CIO Pres. Philip Murray was informed this week by Louis Saillant, WFTU secretary.

Four WFTU leaders involved in both meetings are: Leon Jouhaux, Lombardo Toledano, Chu Hsueh Fan and E. Kupers.

THE REASON for fighting in China is "very simple," reports Allied Labor News from Yenan. "Chiang insists on sending his troops and secret police to rule by armed dictatorship. The local peasants all over North China and Manchuria resist this, demanding the right to elect their local and provincial governments and appoint their local police—rights similar to those in America.

"The reason that Chiang objects to these demands is also simple. Government in China has always been a game of graft and looting. Chiang wants the right to loot these areas, to put it bluntly. He wants to send soldiers to take the crops at will. He wants to appoint all the local officials and take the graft."

A NEW appeal to American workers to help halt intervention by "American reactionaries" in the Chinese civil war was sent this week by trade union leaders of the Shansi-Chahar-Hopei border region, ALN reports. The appeal was similar to those already sent by Shanghai workers and by leaders of the Chinese Assn. of Labor.

IN TOKYO, the Congress of Japanese Industrial Unions, representing a reported 1,600,000 workers, held its first constitutional convention. The constitution, adopted unanimously by 1,049 delegates, sets forth as aims the 40-hour week, unemployment insurance and the elimination of "colonial" working conditions.

The CIU is opposing a labor bill before the Japanese Diet, chiefly because it provides for a compulsory 30-day "cooling-off" period before strikes and prohibits strikes by government and utility workers.

New sound film strip, "The Man in a Cage," opens with scenes of cave men practicing intolerance.

The film shows how Columbus, an Italian sailor, with a crew of many nationalities discovered America.

The United States contains all races, religions and nationalities. This has helped to make us great.

We still have some people with prehistoric attitudes who are suspicious of those who are different.

George T. Guernsey, Assistant Director of Education, CIO, (left) teaches two CIO students at Antioch College how to run a sound, film-strip machine. Adual speed motor on this machine makes it possible to play regular phonograph records as well as radio transcriptions.

LOOK 'N LEARN WITH CIO

"MAN in the Cage," a new two-color sound film strip which is being distributed by the CIO Dept. of Research & Education, indicates what can be done in using visual techniques to fight discrimination.

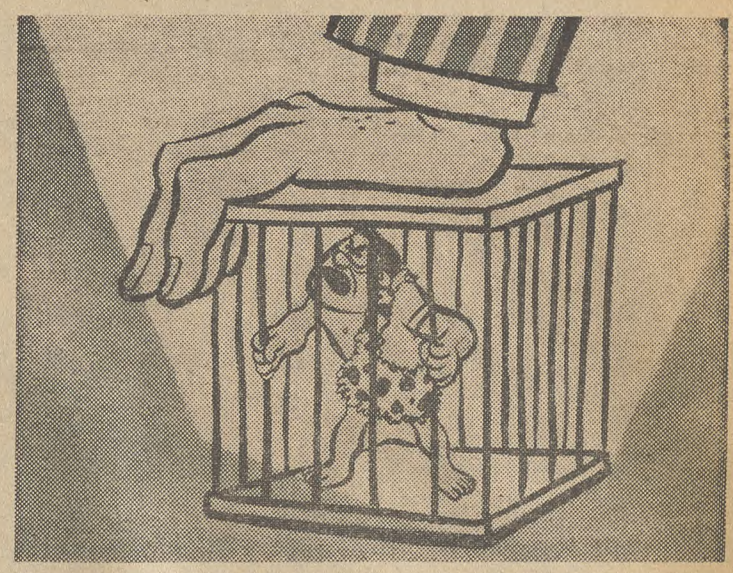
The film strip, made by United Film Productions, Hollywood, has been highly praised by George L. P. Weaver of the CIO Anti-Discrimination Committee. "I hope that the 'Man in the Cage' will be used widely by CIO locals and that it will be followed by a full discussion of the problem," he said.

This is one of the six sound film strips available on a rental or a purchase basis from the Film Division, CIO Dept. of Research & Education. In order to promote the use of sound film strips in CIO, the Education Dept. is making available to CIO locals for $200 a kit of materials including a new sound film strip machine which can handle an audience of 500 people, six new sound film strips, a PAC recording on the minimum wage featuring Gregory Peck, and two albums of union songs.

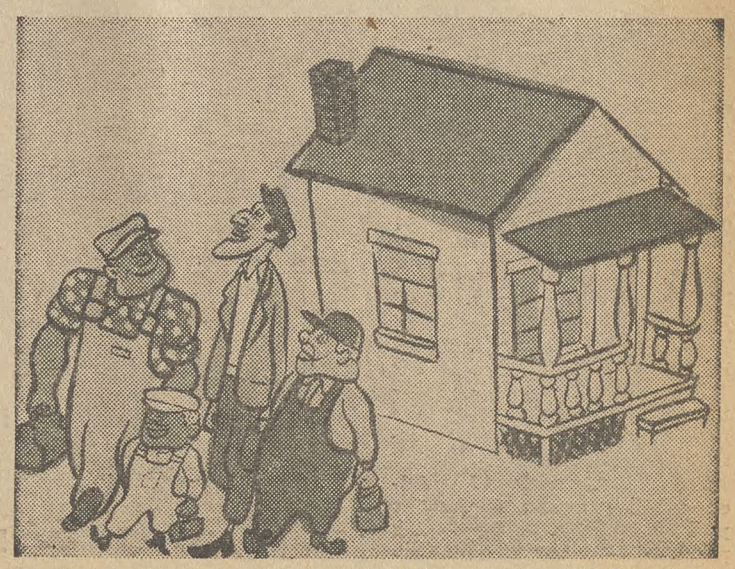
The film strip machine will play both victrola speed and transcription speed, which makes it extremely useful for union educational work. The film strips included in the kit of materials are as follows: "Man in the Cage," "Guaranteed Wages the Year Round," (the new annual wage CIO film strip), "Saga of 666" and "Svenson's Seniority," both made by the CIO Auto Workers; "X Marks the Spot," a film strip on political action work, and "Up and Atom," a film strip emphasizing the need for civilian control of atomic energy.

CIO discussion guides are being prepared for each film strip and will be mailed to those purchasing the kit.

"Sound film strips, professionally produced, can be as valuable in union education work as sound movies and are much cheaper to produce," Kermit Eby, director of CIO Research & Education, pointed out.



During the war President Roosevelt established the FEPC by executive order and put "prejudice in a cage."



Workers today support the passage of a permanent FEPC—one step in building a better world.

BIGGEST NLRB POLL ON

FIFTY thousand Northern Calif., cannery workers were voting in the biggest NLRB election ever held west of the Mississippi and the biggest in the U. S. since 1941 as the CIO NEWS went to press.

The contest was between the CIO Food and Tobacco Workers, the AFL Teamster-backed Cannery Workers and no union.

Several months ago FTA won a large majority over the AFL in an NLRB election, but failed by 63 votes to win a majority over the AFL and "independent." The Teamsters took that as a signal to sign back-door agreements with the canners.

The power of the Northern Calif. Processors and Growers Assn. and the Bank of America was shown during the later stages of the FTA campaign when the Station KGO and the American Broadcasting Co. barred CIO Pres. Murray and CIO Sec.-Treas. Carey from speaking over the San Francisco station.

Contract demands for a 15c hourly wage increase, time and one-half pay for overtime work, and other cannery wage demands were raised this week a few days before the election by FTA Pres. Donald Henderson.

In a letter to the Calif. Processors & Growers, Henderson asked for immediate negotiations following the NLRB elections in the northern California canneries.

Wage demands, in addition to the 15c raise and overtime pay, after 40 hours, included a 20% increase in piece rates, with a minimum of 98.5c an hour guaranteed; a night shift bonus; changes in the bracket system, and establishment of grievance machinery.

BITTNER HAILS LABOR DAY

Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee this week urged working people to observe Labor Day by pledging to "devote all their strength and intelligence to those things that will bring economic justice to every section of our land."

Bittner said in a pre-Labor Day statement that the CIO "is proud of its wonderful record in behalf of humanity in 1946. Never in the history of any labor organization in this or any other country has so much genuine progress been made . . . ."

SELLY REELECTED

Pres. Joseph Selly of the CIO American Communications Assn. was reelected over his opponent, former Vice Pres. Harold Taylor, by a vote of 3,371 to 2,817, according to results of a referendum made public this week. Organization Dir. Joseph Kehoe defeated incumbent Josephine Timms in the race for secretary-treasurer by a vote of 3,056 to 2,978.

CIO-BAITERS EXPOSED

DIRECTOR Van A. Bittner of the CIO Southern Organizing Committee this week declared that charges by employers and the AFL that the CIO is a communistic organization are "manufactured out of the whole cloth."

"This campaign," Bittner said in Atlanta, "is used solely for the purpose of confusing real Americans regarding the purpose of the CIO in organizing the unorganized workers of the South and other sections of our country."

Declaring his personal opposition to communism, Bittner pointed out that CIO takes into membership all workers in an industry, and "if the employers have hired a few communists they naturally are apt to become members of the CIO."

"Everybody who wants to treat this question fairly," Bittner said, "knows full well that the CIO is an American institution made up of millions of common people who are just folks like the rest of Americans.

"The overwhelming majority of CIO members belong to the Methodist, Baptist, Catholic, Lutheran, Jewish and other faiths, yet none of our enemies would say the CIO is a Methodist, Baptist, Catholic, Lutheran or Jewish organization."

Bittner accused the AFL of joining with "non-union employers who are enemies of organized labor" in a campaign of red-baiting, and pointed out that the CIO, in contrast, is devoting its energies to organizing the unorganized.

FOR UNITED ACTION

Support to the Sailors Union of the Pacific and the Seafarers International Union and recommendation for a concerted national program of action by all maritime unions to set aside the recent ruling of the Wage Stabilization Board against SUP, SIU and Marine Firemen wage increases was voted this week by the CIO Committee for Maritime Unity.

BLUMBERG ADVANCED

Hyman Blumberg, state chairman of the American Labor Party and a vice-president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, this week was elected executive vice-president of the clothing union in a series of changes in the union's executive board made necessary by recent deaths among the top leadership of the organization.

August Bellanca, head of the Amalgamated's Italian department, was elected a vice-president by the board as were Mrs. Bessie Hillman of New York, widow of the late Sidney Hillman, ACW president, and Anthony Froise of Passaic, N. J.

Blumberg, an ACW founder, has participated in the struggles and achievements in the clothing industry for more than 45 years.

PACKINGHOUSE STRIKE LOOMS

After two weeks of negotiations without progress, the United Packinghouse Workers-CIO announced this week that it had filed 30-day strike notices against the Big Four packers, Swift, Armour, Wilson and Cudahy.

UPW Pres. Ralph Helstein, in announcing the action, declared that filing of the notices did not necessarily mean a strike will occur, but if the packers continue to refuse proper consideration to union demands, the workers will have no other alternative.

"To date," Helstein said, "the packers' proposals would deprive the union of all forms of security while at the same time imposing penalties designed to destroy the union. These proposals, in addition to taking away many benefits previously enjoyed, actually reduce the workers' income."

Packinghouse workers, he pointed out, are among the lowest paid in industry. A fact-finding panel last February found the average wage in the Big Four packing plants to be 96c hourly.

Similar conferences will be held in Cleveland. The foundation is being laid in Chicago for further cooperation, based upon mutual understanding and trust.

LABOR DAY, 1946! Labor, on this day, should be aware of its enemies; we should endeavor to follow the policies enunciated by President Murray. Unity at this time is particularly essential if CIO is to continue to be the leading, progressive movement in America and if we are to continue to expand our membership and bring to the workers we have the honor to represent, the things to which they are rightfully entitled, but which in the main is denied them to which they are rightfully entitled, but which in the main is denied them because of the present reactionary Congress.

CIO is strong only when its membership is strong and it is our duty to rededicate ourselves to the principles of preserving and expanding our great movement. Remember political action is a part of the program of CIO. Can you say to yourself on this Labor Day, 1946, that you are making your contribution to the principles of CIO?

LEONARD ON LABOR DEPT. BOARD

Vice Pres. Richard T. Leonard, of the CIO Auto Workers, was appointed this week to the Labor Dept.'s Labor-Management Advisory Committee. Leonard replaces former Vice Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen of the Auto Workers. The committee, composed of eight members, was formed a year ago to study and recommend means of strengthening the Conciliation Service.

NMU SIGNS SIX CARRIERS

RESISTANCE of the Great Lake carriers was definitely broken this week by the CIO Natl. Maritime Union when it signed agreements with four more ship owners, bringing the total number of agreements to six.

These pacts fulfilled the objective of the strike by ending the 56-hour work week through providing a 48-hour week at sea, 44 hours when in port and 40 during layups and fitouts.

Companies that signed up this week are Cleveland Tankers, Great Lakes Tankers, Lake Tankers, Inc., and Gulf Oil Co. Standard Oil Co. and Bethlehem Transportation Co. entered into agreements last week.

Negotiations also were held this week with Ford Motor Co., Nicholson Transit Co. and Texas Oil, and more than half of the 17 struck companies have asked for reopening of negotiations.

Violence flared in Detroit and Cleveland, where NMU officials say two ships officers fired on strikers. Police in both cities shrugged off the incidents, saying that no harm was meant even though at Detroit police found a gun after the NMU had brought charges against the officer.

Duluth where a score of pick ets were injured by police last week was silent this week after unions had warned that a recurrence of violence would result in a city-wide strike. A CIO-AFL coordinating committee has demanded that city officials call an open meeting to place responsibility for the attack on the picket line.

Meanwhile, a sworn affidavit by Nicholas Romano supported the contention of NMU officials that the AFL Seamen's International Union was engaging in scab herding. Romano told how he and 14 others, under the impression they were going to work on an organized ship, were flown from N. Y. City to Detroit, where they were taken to the SIU Hall, and later were transferred to Toledo where they were escorted by police through picket lines to the S.S.W. Pollock. When he realized that the ship was struck, Romano left it, he declared.

STRIKE 8½ MONTHS OLD

By SYLVIA COHEN

THE eight and one-half months in which Phelps-Dodge fabricating plants have stood idle in Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Elizabeth, N. J., have not loosened the company's hand on its fat pocketbook.

This notorious corporation, which focused the attention of the entire nation on the brutal methods employed by industry to beat down the demands of its workers for decent working conditions has carried its vicious anti-union position into the conference room.

Phelps-Dodge was forced to begin talks with the CIO Electrical and Machine Workers when the entire labor movement of New Jersey was aroused at the wounding of a UE war veteran and father of four children by one of the Murder Inc. gunmen employed as a scab by Phelps-Dodge. The company had previously refused all offers of government mediation.

Basic demands of the strikers include an 18½ cent increase, settlement of contract issues on paid holidays, vacations, overtime and union shop which has been pending for two years.

Phelps-Dodge method of stalling negotiations has been to take a stand on NAM "principles"—the same greedy principles which netted the Phelps-Dodge corporation over 140 million dollars in war profits.

Wylie Brown, president of the copper products division of the company, revealed recently how Phelps-Dodge "principle" works.

When UE members of the negotiating committee raised the demand for paid holidays and pointed out that nearly 90% of all UE workers in the New York area already receive six paid holidays and better, Brown replied that he would close down the plant before granting this demand.

Although Brown paid out over $250 weekly to the scabs he employed to attack the UE picketline, he protested that his "principles" would not permit him to pay workers for holidays.

Phelps-Dodge "principles" did not prevent the company from trying to duck out of the $500,000 it owed the Elizabeth strikers in back pay and settlement of old WLB rulings. Brown proposed to the negotiating committee that the debt be wiped out by giving the committee $250,000 to distribute "in any manner it chose."

CIO DIXIE TALLY 88 VICTORIES

CIO unions have been chosen the collective bargaining agencies of 11 more groups of Southern industrial workers, Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee reported this week.

"These 11 victories bring to 88 the number we have won since our campaign to organize Southern workers started," Bittner said. "We now have pending with the National Labor Relations Board 185 petitions for certification."

Following are CIO victories not previously reported:

Dierks Lumber & Coal Co., Mountain Pine, Ark., won by Woodworkers; Arkansas Fertilizer Co., Little Rock, Ark.; Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co., electrical department, Bessmer, Ala., Steelworkers; Texas Cooperage Co., Sondheimer, La., Woodworkers.

Sondheimer Lumber Co., Sondheimer, La., Woodworkers; Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer Co., Charleston, S. C., Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Noble Manufacturing Co., Textile Paper Products Co., both of Cedartown, Ga.; Carling Tile Co., Gulf Atlantic Warehouse, both of Macon, Ga., and International Wood and Metal Products Co., Memphis, Tenn., Furniture Workers.

SIX-WEEK STRIKE

After six weeks of strike, the management of the Thomasville Chair Co., of Thomasville, N. C., still refuses to arbitrate the issues in dispute before an impartial arbitrator.

Twelve hundred members of the CIO Furniture Workers maintain a militant picket line in front of the eight shops. In view of the high cost of living, and the slender resources of the strikers, a Strike Fund Committee has been organized in New York at the offices of the United Furniture Workers of America, 261 Fifth Avenue. The committee is appealing to all organized labor unions for contributions of food and money to keep the picket line moving

BOSSES' TALKS RULED UNFAIR

THE NLRB established an important precedent in pre-collective bargaining election activity this week when it ruled that an employer who forced his workers to attend anti-union speeches on working time committed an unfair labor practice.

The case on which the ruling was based involved Clark Bros. Co., Olean, N. Y., the CIO Auto Workers, and Employes Assn., Inc., of Clark Bros. Co., an affiliate of the Confederated Unions of America. Board Member Reilly dissented from Chairman Herzog and John Houston in their finding that the company carried on illegal activities to prevent the UAW from winning a plant election.

In forcing the workers to listen to an anti-union address one hour before the voting, the NLRB majority said: "The employer's purpose was not merely to express its views, but rather to engage in an organized, intensive and aggressive campaign forming part of a general course of conduct aimed at achieving objectives forbidden by the Wagner act."

Previously the workers had been addressed in the plant on the community chest, Red Cross and bond drives—but only during the lunch hour.

IOWA-NEBRASKA IUC CONVENES

The Iowa-Nebraska IUC convention in Mason City, Iowa, last weekend elected Hubert Lockhart president and reelected Sec.-Treas. Orvel T. Champ. The convention was the first since 1943.

John Brophy, of CIO IUC director, stated that "the CIO is interested in all the problems affecting the American people." Referring to plans for a Missouri Valley Authority similar to the TVA development, Brophy said "an increasing number of people sees the need for such an integrated program for the 10 states involved."

He declared that the present rapid inflation is a danger to the economy of the nation as a whole, and called for an end of avoidable purchases, reinstatement of price control over all foods, and a labor-management conference to stabilize the national economy.

IS THERE A HEALTH PROGRAM NEAR YOUR HOME?

You pay taxes. You have a right to expect that your child and all children will be protected by an adequate health program. If thorough physical examinations given by a public health agency are not available, if proper precautions such as vaccinations against small pox, immunization against diphtheria are not provided, we suggest that you write your State Dept. of Health and the U. S. Public Health Service, Washington, D. C., to find out what can be done for your child, for all children in this great wealthy U. S. A.

Take It From 'Mom':

IT'S THE PRECINCTS THAT COUNT

By RUTH ROEMER,

Washington Staff Member, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers

"THREE GENERATIONS of my family are members of the UE," a grey-haired, dynamic grandmother proudly told me at a leadership training school the UE-CIO was holding in a beautiful wind-swept spot on Lake Michigan.

"I'm a spot-welder, steward of my department. When I was elected to the steward's job, people told me I'd have my troubles —I'd never be able to settle grievances because when the foreman gets mad he has an awful temper. I told those folks that the foreman couldn't get any madder than I do. I've got a temper too," she added with a knowing smile.

This fighting UE member uses her temper—and her good sense—not only to settly grievances and to handle the day to day problems on the job of the people in her department.

She also feels that union members and their families must help settle the problems outside the shop that affect every working family so seriously. They must help to keep prices down, to see to it that there are jobs, not unemployment, to get a national health insurance program, to ensure Big Three unity and a firm peace.

"Our first job is to get our own CIO members and their families sold on political action. We must see to it that they are registered and ready to vote. Then all of us can go to our neighbors, our friends, and the whole community on a door-to-door basis, through organizations, by means of the radio, the papers, and leaflets. But we can do the job only with thorough and careful work long in advance."

This UE steward whom the workers in the shop fondly call "Mom" had hit the nail on the head. Political action is like organizing an unorganized shop.

First off you don't get in to the boss and lay a contract on the table. You begin by standing outside the gate, handing out leaflets, talking to the workers, getting an organizing committee started.

You hold department meetings, shop gate meetings, talk things over. You build an organization, and then you're ready for an election and finally for contract negotiation.

So with political action. You don't just defeat an anti-labor candidate or elect a fighter for the people. First you build an organization in your congressional district that you can get the people registered, explain the issues, get the vote out.

Only when you have workers in every ward and precinct, only when your ward and precinct captains are coordinating the work on registration and explaining the issues, can you begin to feel you're ready for the election.

One large part of a successful campaign is money. The big corporations pour millions into getting their representatives into Congress. We can elect representatives responsive to the majority of the American people less because we have rights on our side.

But we need money to print leaflets, to send out speakers, to do radio shows, for the countless ways of getting the story to the people. The importance of the $1 campaign for CIO-PAC cannot be overemphasized. The money is needed, and for every worker who contributes his dollar we have one more active participant in the fight for a descent Congress.

In this big job, our women trade unionists and wives of union members must play a leading part. Women were approximately 51% of the total vote in the 1944 campaign. And since the major campaign issue this year is price control vs. inflation, an issue which the women voters know inside out, the responsibility rests even more seriously on the shoulders of our CIO women.

In the words of "Mom," our steward, "We're all busy, but we've got to make time for political action. No one is going to defeat my anti-labor congressman except the union and other progressive people in my congressional district."

CHILDREN HAVE A BILL OF RIGHTS

A great American several years ago formulated what he termed "a bill of rights for the American child."

One of these was "the right to be born healthy" He might have added another; for instance:

Every American child has the right to grow up under the protection of adequate life insurance covering the person whose income provides for his proper care and training.

Many fathers have turned to life insurance to provide educations for their sons and daughters and in some instance sound protection has helped to launch a successful business career.

COUNT THE UNITS, FORGET THE VOTES!

Although admitting that the county unit voting system causes "glaring inequalities" among Georgia voters, a three-judge federal court this week at Atlanta refused to invalidate the recent primaries under which Eugene Talmadge won nomination as governor despite a popular majority of about 14,000 for his opponent, James V. Carmichael.

The court contended that the voting system violates no constitutional guarantees of equal rights and said the system should be changed by changing the state law instead of appealing to the courts.

Under the unit system, the candidate carrying the county wins the unit vote for the whole county. A majority of unit votes determines the winner. However, Fulton county, seat of the state capital and possessing a population of more than 400,000 has only six unit votes while Chattahoochee, with fewer than 1,500, has two votes.

A candidate winning three rural counties with a total population of less than 5,000 could off set the vote of the almost half-million people of Atlanta.

ASKS RAIL PROBE

Sen. Glen Taylor (D. Ida.) has his teeth sunk deeply into the pants of some U. S. Treasury robbers and is asking why the Bureau of the Budget, traditional Treasury watchdogs isn't on the job.

Taylor announced this week that he was asking the Mead committee to discover what railroad men, if any, are responsible for Budget Bureau policies with respect to railroad freight rates. At the same time he made public an exchange of letters with Budget Director James Webb, in which he said he was "shocked by the extreme solicitude with which you (Webb) are handling the railroad corporations."

Taylor had earlier demanded that the bureau act against roads which overcharged the government for freight carrying during the war, through connivance of executives in uniform assigned to duty as freight rate experts.

Wartime net profits of Class I railroads during the war years 1941-45 totaled $3,390 million—a 700% gain over the years 1936-40.

SEDITION TRIAL

Reacting sharply to reports that the charges of sedition against 26 American citizens may be dropped, the N. Y. State chairman of the American Labor Party, Hyman Blumberg, declared in a letter to Atty. Gen. Tom C. Clark that such action "would . . . be a confession that the U. S. government lacks the will and the resources to punish open conspiracy in America."

The 26, which include Elizabeth Dilling, William Dudley Pelley, Gerald B. Winrod and Lawrence Dennis, escaped a verdict in 1944 when the death of Justice Edward Eicher, presiding judge, halted their mass sedition trial.

"If this case is dropped" said Mr. Blumberg, who is also executive vice-president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, "it is an almost statistical certainty that production in the field of manufactured race hatred, anti-labor attacks and lynch terror will show a quick spurt. That is not the kind of production America wants or will tolerate."

SLAV CONGRESS PARLEY

Mobilization of all Slavic Americans, behind the policies the late President Roosevelt as the cornerstones to lasting peace, is the chief aim of the Third American Slav Congress, scheduled for N. Y. City, September 20-22.

Leo Krzycki, vice-president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, is president of the National Committee of the American Slav Congress.

IT'S A LIE!

By MARTY SOLOW

REP. DONDERO (R., Mich.) shrieked recently that the recent PAC school on Political Action Techniques held in Washington, D. C., was actually an "attempt to establish in Washington a branch of the chain of Communist schools to be founded throughout this country."

IT'S A LIE! A huge lie! Among the speakers at school sessions were such noted "communists" as Nat'l Democratic Party chairman Robert Hannegan, Republican Senator Wayne Morse, Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace and Democratic Senator Claude Pepper. In addition, if it will quiet the Hon. Congressman's fears, the school was only a three day session, not a permanent school.

★ ★ ★

THE HON. JOHN RANKIN, Congressman from Mississippi, referring to the recent discharge of five War Department employes, at Aberdeen, Maryland, (CR 9578) called them "five civilian spies."

IT'S A LIE! Neither the five employes, all members of the CIO Public Workers, nor Congressman Rankin know the reason for their discharge.

IN A LETTER to the Secretary of War this week, CIO President Philip Murray wrote, "It is my understanding that these five workers . . . have been separated from the service without hearings at which they could defend themselves and without being furnished with any statement of the specific matters charged against them."

★ ★ ★

CREDIT SENATOR SMITH (R., N. J.) with adding a new twist to the run of Congressional inaccuracies. During the late-lamented debate on OPA, the good Senator cited (CR Pg. 8507) what he called en "editorial" which "appeared in the New York Herald Tribune of Tuesday, June 25, a page editorial . . ." The Senator asked that "this editorial" be printed in the Congressional Record.

THE "EDITORIAL" was NOT an editorial! It was a paid advertisement placed in the paper by a businessman. By calling it an "editorial" Smith invested it with a worth it did not possess.

FRANK KENT, columnist, whose sense of contact with the realities of life grows dimmer and dimmer beats the drums lustily on August 23 in the Washington Evening Star, for Virginia Senator Harry Flood Byrd. Waxing lyrical, Kent declares that "every waster of public funds, every spender of the taxpayer's money, every unnecessary bureaucrat . . . hates" Senator Byrd. "In the past 13 years," says Kent, Byrd has "opposed all of these more consistently, determinedly and effectively than anyone else."

IT'S A LIE! And the Senator's own backyard, Virginia, proves it. There, with the state under control of the Byrd machine, columnist Marquis Childs reported on August 5 that "Virginia has by far the greatest number of State employes in proportion to population of any State in the group of the 19 most populous."

Citing figures from a Virginia paper, Childs went on to show that "when the figures are stated in terms of the number of employes per individual citizen they are even more startling. Virginia has one State employe for every 164 citizens. New York has one for every 241 citizens; Illinois, 376; Texas, 327; Michigan, 300; Massachusetts, 225. Virginia led them all . . . the number of State jobs (in Virginia) had been increasing at a rate three times as high as in the Federal Government when war activity was excluded."

"UNCLE, YOUR GET-TOUGH POLICY DOESN'T WORK."

THREE R'S PLUS CIO

ALREADY acknowledged the leaders in the field of workers education, CIO unions during the past summer have been building an even more impressive record in this field.

The CIO Steelworkers, under the direction of Vin Sweeney, instituted a new program this summer at Pennsylvania State College where approximately 400 steelworkers took a one-week course. The Steelworkers also sponsored a special course at Antioch College.

According to Education Director Victor Reuther, the CIO Auto Workers hope to reach more than 2,000 members in their one-week schools being held in Canada, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, New York and the new Franklin Delano Roosevelt Camp at Port Huron, Michigan.

Attendance at the one-week courses at Port Huron has been running between 150 and 200 students. Here UAW members are taking specialized courses in educational leadership, collective bargaining, union counselling and other trade union subjects.

The CIO Textile Workers, under Education Director Larry Rogin, expanded their summer program to include institutes at the University of North Carolina, the University of Wisconsin, Hudson Shore Labor School, Rhode Island State University and schools in the New England and southern areas. This program reached between three and four hundred of the TWUA membership.

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers has had four schools, recently, including one at Highlander Folk School. The Food and Tobacco Workers ran a special school at Waukegan, Ill., and one in New York.

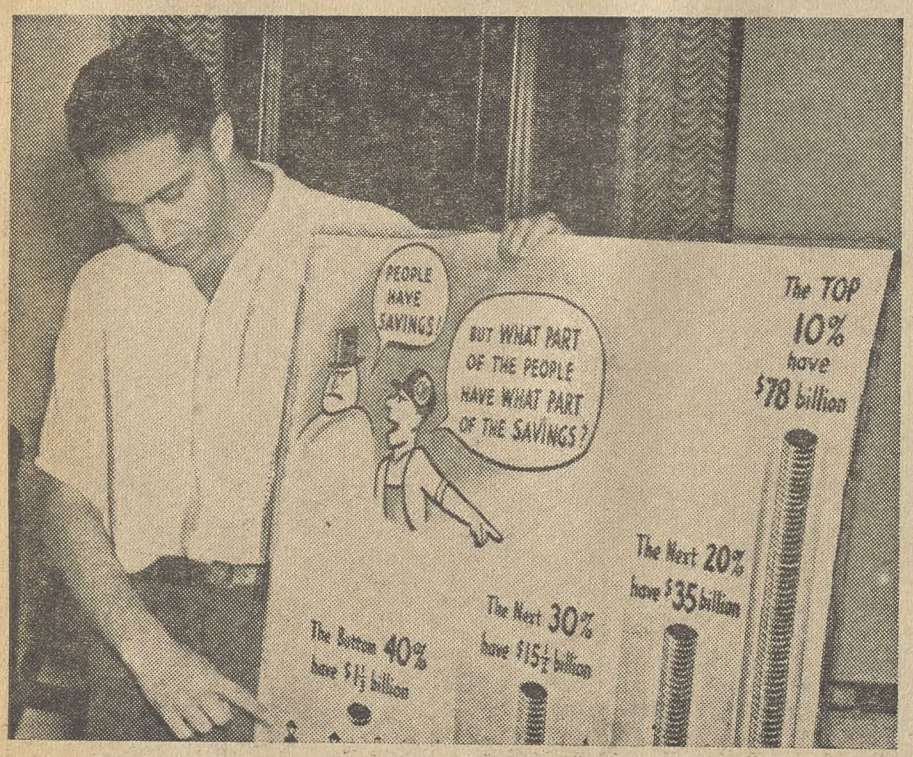
The southern CIO regions sponsored a one-month term at the Highlander Folk School last May. The United Electrical Workers, District 9, ran a special district school near Benton Harbor, Michigan.

The Michigan CIO is jointly sponsoring a one-month school at Port Huron, Michigan. The Ohio CIO was successful in reaching approximately 100 of its members at a special one-week session at Antioch College.

Between six and seven thousand CIO members will go back to their locals this fall better prepared to build a stronger CIO.

UAW summer school students attending the new FDR Camp at Port Huron, Mich., learned how to prepare union hall displays from Mary Speer, U. S. Dept. of Labor, Chan Montgomery and George T. Guernsey, CIO Education Department. Total cost of the above display was $5.

At the Ohio CIO School at Antioch College, Tom Downs, assistant PAC director (right), shows George DeNucci, Regional CIO director (left), a new chart on voting records of Ohio legislators. A member of the CIO Fur Workers who attended school looks on.



Joe Glaser, TWUA Education Dept., teaches textile workers at the University of Wisconsin some of the facts about distribution of savings in the U. S.

I. W. Abel, director of USA-CIO in Canton, O., shows Ohio CIO students some of the material for the course in collective bargaining.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

'BILLION DOLLAR CLUB' GRIPS 1/4 OF U.S. ASSETS

CONCENTRATION of wealth and power in the United States has mounted to the point where 43 corporations — each with more than a billion dollars in assets — account for more than one-fourth the total assets of all industrial concerns, banks and insurance companies!

The 43 "billion dollar babies" have total combined assets of more than 101 billion dollars!

The evidence on corporate wealth was brought to light by a United Press report, which pointed out that the number of billion dollar business enterprises, which expanded steadily during the war years, has remained unchanged since the end of World War II despite huge cutbacks and cancellation of military contracts.

Total assets of all industrial concerns, banks and insurance companies in 1942 were only 371 billion. In 1939, they were 319 billion. Government officials say that it is a safe assumption that the growth from 1939 to 1942 was greater than from 1942 to 1946, and that total assets today amount to an estimated 400 billion dollars.

The 43 billion dollar businesses have gained rapidly since Dec. 31, 1944. Their assets then totaled 97 billion dollars. One year later they were more than 101 billion.

Six of the "billion dollar babies" were among a list of 12 giant corporations listed in 1939 by the Sub-Committee of the Senate Committee on Education & Labor as belonging to a "Special Conference Committee" set up to coordinate the fight against labor unions. Representatives of these firms—American Telephone & Telegraph, duPont, General Motors, Irving Trust, Standard Oil and U. S. Steel—met secretly with representatives of Bethlehem Steel, General Electric, Goodyear Rubber, Intl. Harvester, U. S. Rubber and Westinghouse Electric to cook up schemes against progressive legislation and labor's fight for better wages. The last six, although giant in size, did not "make" the billion dollar list this year.

The current members of the Billion Dollar Club and their latest known assets, compared with resources on Dec. 31, 1944, follow:

Col. James A. Kilian, former commander of the Lichfield, Eng., "horror camp" for the U. S. soldier-prisoners, who got off with a $500 fine and reprimand after witnesses testified that prisoners were beaten with fists and clubs and kicked in the body.

BRASS-HAT JUSTICE

IT took a seven-man military court only two hours to convict Col. James A. Kilian, former commander of the notorious U. S. Army replacement depot at Lichfield, Eng., of having permitted cruel and unusual punishment of American soldier-prisoners.

The court decided during its two-hour deliberation that the punishment consisted of striking prisoners with fists and clubs, kicking them in the body, and forcing them to stand with nose and toes pressed against the wall or in other strained positions for extended periods.

But the punishment hardly fit the crime, for Kilian was fined $500 and reprimanded, receiving no prison sentence such as six-months in jail which was meted out to eight witnesses against him and other defendants in the Lichfield trials.

These witnesses were found guilty of offenses while they were in Bad Nauheim, Germany, where the trials had been transferred from England. The latest of these witnesses to be sentenced is Pvt. Fred C. Moore, who was given not only six months at hard labor but also fined $180 for assaulting a German youth.

Moore declared that the youth was rifling his room.

Lt. Granville Cubage, one of the officers at the camp, who was fined $250 and reprimanded for cruelty, testified that Kilian advised taking a "prisoner down to the rifle range and work him over."

He quoted his superior as saying, "Take him down where no one can see him....Just don't break too many bones."

One witness testified that he drew a sentence of seven weeks in the Lichfield guardhouse for overstaying his leave four hours.

During his imprisonment, the witness said, he was made to stand with his nose and toes against a wall for 45 minutes on one occasion, and for three hours at another time.

For laughing when a particularly tough guard tripped over a wire, Sgt. Judson Smith beat him over the back with a billy, the witnesses testified at Bad Nauheim. Sgt. Smith was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, a dishonorable dis charge and forfeiture of all pay allowances, but the entire sentence was later suspended.

Despite such testimony concerning brutality at the camp which was under the direction of Kilian, the seven-man court acquitted him of "aiding and authorizing and abetting" cruelties for which others were convicted and cleared him of "knowingly permitting them"—apparently accepting Kilian's claim that he knew nothing about mistreatment of prisoners.

Kilian's evasion of responsibility caused Maj. Joseph S. Robinson, who summed up the case for the prosecution, to declare:

"It is an outrage when a high ranking officer to protect his own skin blames such events on others. In all honor this accused man should accept his responsibility as a man and an officer and not seek to welsh wrongdoing onto his successors and subordinates as he is attempting to do."

Major Robinson asserted that "the military justice system itself is in balance unless the earlier Lichfield sentences can be justified on the theory that others were only subordinated to the will of this accused."

The failure to punish Kilian sufficiently drew sharp criticism in the U. S., where the American Veterans Committee declared:

"There is no doubt that at Lichfield treatment accorded American prisoners was sub-human beyond all concepts of justice, whether civilian or military. The sentence of Col. Kilian is extremely mild and can only be interpreted as a whitewash of the horrors of Lichfield, which have shocked all thinking Americans."

AVC demanded a full Congressional investigation of the Army's court-martial system.

The Washington Post was even more caustic, declaring:

"Although there are differences in the charges brought, there is an interesting parallel between the case of Col. Kilian and the trials of the late Japanese generals, Homma and Yamashita. Among the charges against the Japanese generals, they were indicted for permitting men under their command to commit atrocities in the Philippines.

"In the trials American prosecutors enunciated the doctrine that military commanders are responsible for the action of their subordinates even though —as Yamashita and Homma asserted in their defense — they may not have had knowledge of specific acts. Gens. Yamashita and Homma were convicted and executed. Is the principle of a commander's responsibility for Japanese only?"

Staff Sgt. James H. Jones, of the Lichfield camp staff, who was given a six-month sentence which was later suspended. Both Ennis (r.) and Jones were subordinates of Col. James A. Kilian, who pushed responsibility for conditions at the camp on them and others under him.

DISABLED GOOD WORKERS — VA

DISABLED workers experience one-third fewer serious accidents than able bodied workers exposed to identical work hazards and their production records are slightly better than those of unhandicapped employes, according to a survey made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics at the request of Veterans Administion.

The study placed the accident frequency rate for impaired workers at 8.3 injuries per 1,000,000 man-hours worked, compared with 11.8 injuries for unimpaired workers.

Time lost because of disabling injuries was the same for impaired and unimpaired employes, 0.1 day per 100 scheduled work days.

During the six months covered by the survey, none of the injuries sustained by disabled workers resulted in additional permanent impairments. Furthermore, no instances were reported of handicapped workers causing injuries to able-bodied fellow employes.

The survey, conducted between Jan. 1 and July 1, 1946, studied the performances of 4,000 physically handicapped and 6,400 able-bodied employes in 47 manufacturing plants.

The study matched handicapped and non-handicapped workers as to sex, age, experience on the job, and kind of work performed.

The plants, located in seven highly industrialized states, were classified with machinery, aircraft and aircraft parts, electrical machinery, steel works, and other industries (such as food products, photographic equipment, glassware, etc.).

Records of both veterans and non-veterans were included in the study. However, only 14 of the 47 plants had comprehensive, formalized plans for training returning servicemen.

The survey arrived at three further conclusions:

The production efficiency record of impaired workers was slightly superior to that of unimpaired workers. The efficiency relative to impaired workers was 102, compared with 100 for the unimpaired. BLS officials said that the high productivity record of the disabled might be due to more careful placements, more earnest attitudes on their part, or a combination of both.

Absentee rates for impaired and unimpaired workers were identical, 3.8 days off per 100 scheduled work days. Industry records failed to state reasons for absence in about half the cases. In the remaining half, most common causes given were "illness" and "personal business."

Non-disabling injury rates were slightly higher for impaired than for unimpaired workers. Impaired employes suffered 1,227.5 minor accidents per 1,000,000 man-hours worked, while unimpaired workers had 1,206.1 such accidents. Analysis of minor accident records revealed that some plants do not insist upon immediate use of medical facilities; dispensaries are inconveniently located in others; and records of medical visits are kept haphazardly in others.

VFW TOLD JOBS BEST DEFENSE

CIO Sec. Treas. James B. Carey this week told the convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, one of the largest U. S. veterans organizations, that the nation's most important defense and its greatest strength is full employment without discrimination as to race, creed or color.

He said that at present there are 58 million persons employed in the U. S. and there will be no unemployment problems if the line is held through increasing the purchasing power of present workers.

Carey called for mass participation of the nation's people in international affairs to prevent future wars. He also stressed importance of higher wages, improved working conditions, reasonable hours of work; full employment, and the participation of the American people in economic and political decisions.

The delegates, however, got other advice from a number of military leaders, including Gen. Eisenhower, who called for a powerful military security force and joined with Selective Service Director Hershey in praise of universal military training. Maj. Gen. Del Valle of the Marines, said the "only defense against the third World War over American soil is men and steel."

There was at least one representative of the U. S. government who did not beat the war drums —Housing Administrator Wyatt, who declared that "new homes cost more than the great majority of the American people—the people who work in a bank or in a shoe factory—can afford."

He placed final responsibility for success of the veterans' housing program on citizens in local communities. He urged retention of Government controls and added that the one essential piece of legislation missing to insure success of the program is the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill.

Lt. Leonard Ennis, one of the officers at the Lichfield camp, who was fined $350 and reprimanded by a military court for cruel treatment of prisoners at the camp. One soldier-witness said he saw blood-like stains in Ennis after the officer took a prisoner into a building.

UNITY RALLY IN CHICAGO

THE organized weight of eight of America's leading organizations, including the CIO and its Political Action Committee, will be thrown behind a mighty election effort to make the 80th Congress a truly progressive one, it was announced this week. The drive will be touched off by a two-day meeting in Chicago on September 28-29, "where common ground for joining . . . strength and redefining a program that will fulfill the needs of the people" will be arrived at.

The call was signed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, CIO Political Action Director Jack Kroll, Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman of the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee; Harold Ickes and Jo Davidson of the Independent Committee of the Arts, Sciences & Professions; A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Walter White, secretary of the Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People; James Patton, president of the Natl. Farmers Union; and Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Fully cognizant of the need for unity among progressive forces if the tide of reaction is to be turned back at the polls on November 5, the conference call plainly stated that "the November elections will decide the nation's future."

The meeting will refurbish the progressive coalition established in 1944 to spark the re-election push for Franklin D. Roosevelt, in addition to initiating a more influential role for the NAACP and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in the national political limelight.

The eight organizations reminded America that the independent voters, for the last 12 years, have always been the key factor on election day and when "they rallied around liberal candidates, democratic leadership grew strong."

Aware that the progressive movement faces its most severe crisis, they asserted that "only through the active cooperation of independent groups and organized labor can the progressive movement survive."

BIG VOTE IS GOOD VOTE

UNDERSCORING the CIO Political Action Committee's premise that "a big vote is a good vote," PAC Director Jack Kroll this week emphasized the urgency of a large registration and reminded CIO members that the size of the voter turnout in November would determine the fate of some of labor's staunchest Congressional friends.

"Let us not forget what happened in 1942 when we stayed home from the polls," Kroll warned. "Reaction enjoyed a heydey. But the tide was reversed the next election when voters made their wishes known.

"I could cite at least a score of conspicuous examples of districts in which a great increase in the 1944 balloting resulted in a decisive switch from the Old Guard to the progressive."

Most conspicuous of the examples in the House, the PAC head said, are the areas now represented by Reps. Frank Havenner, California; Melvin Price, Illinois; Philip Traynor, Delaware (at large); Frank Starkey, Minnesota; Walter Huber, Ohio; James Geelan, Chase Going Woodhouse and Joseph F. Ryter, Connecticut—all of whom succeeded reactionaries in 1944 as a result of heavy increases in the vote.

The margin of victory in each of these instances was 1.8% or less, which indicates that a shift in the 1944 vote of this number or a decrease in the total turnout could mean defeat.

Voting in 1944 in many instances almost doubled the 1942 off-election figure. For instance, in the election of Rep. Starkey, Democratic Farmer-Labor candidate in Minnesota in 1944, the vote cast was 124,428 in comparison with the 1942 figure of 70,562 which had placed Richard Gale, a reactionary, in office.

In Delaware, 125,440 people voted in the election which swept Rep. Traynor into office, while only 84,726 voted the previous election year. A record vote of 146,949 in 1944, resulting in the election of Rep. Havenner in California, more than doubled the previous figure of 63,890 which had sent Thomas Rolph, Republican, to Congress.

PAC AT 'GARDEN' SEPT. 12

CIO Political Action Committee Director Jack Kroll will join with other leading New Deal exponents at a giant election rally at Madison Square Garden in N. Y. City Sept. 12, dedicated to revamping the 79th Congress by the election of more progressive representatives.

Sponsored by the National Campaign Committee of the Arts, Sciences Professions and the Nat. Citizens Political Action Committee, Kroll, Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace, Sen. Claude Pepper, Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman of the NCPAC, and Paul Robeson, noted singer and actor, will address the meeting.

Wallace and Pepper, recognized as the best-known defenders of the New Deal philosophy, will be appearing on the same platform for the first time and their remarks are scheduled to touch off the drive to elect men who will fulfill the goals President Roosevelt set for post-war America.

Dumped with Dewey in '44, John W. Bricker, former Governor of Ohio, is making a new try for Washington power—this time a seat in the U. S. Senate. Bricker (left) is a pal of Republican cohort R. A. Taft, U. S. Senator, long-time reactionary, and boss of Cincinnati from the courthouse to the kitchen gas.

THAT MAN IS HERE AGAIN

By GLORIA CAPLAN

REMEMBER John W. Bricker, the "new — Harding of the Old Guard Republicans" who was Thomas E. Dewey's running mate in 1944, and who hit an all-time low for fanning race hatred, smearing Roosevelt with red paint, and spreading "tall stories" about a labor Utopia under a GOP administration?

Bricker has been out of the public limelight for two years, but he's trying again—for a seat in the U. S. Senate. And those two years have changed neither his tactics nor those of the Ohio gang in back of him.

"The people of Ohio," the late Sidney Hillman said in 1944, "and the people of New York . . . each owe the nation an apology—you for producing John Bricker and we for producing Thomas Dewey. When John Bricker talks, he leaves no doubt in anyone's mind that he is an old fashioned Hoover reactionary and a whole-hearted isolationist."

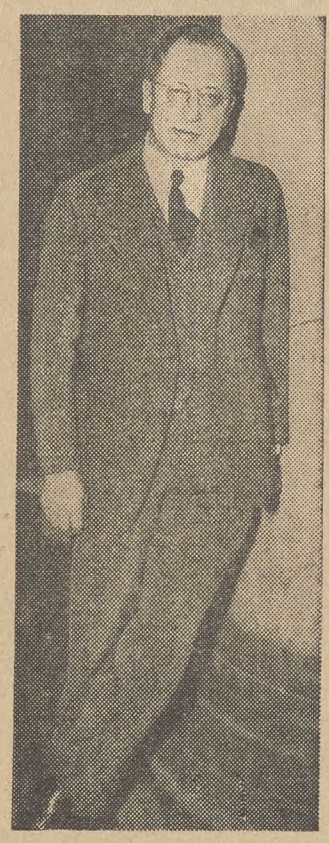
A glance at the impressive list of political bosses, Nat. Assn. of Manufacturers heads and giant corporations in back of the former Ohio governor sheds additional light on this Senatorial contender to divest him of all the shadows his party has attempted to cloak him with.

Behind Bricker stand men who still are arch isolationists and thrive on racial discontent, who have fought price control, social security and labor savagely.

In top position is the almighty Taft family, whose complete control of Cincinnati—from the court house to the kitchen gas—has brought the city the dubious distinctions of leading the nation in sex crimes and in tuberculosis, and in trailing most of the nation in family income. Sen. Robert Taft's father firmly held that no worker was worth more than two dollars a day and the Taft line hasn't deviated a single degree from that policy.

Friend Bricker says, "Me too." Symbolic of his concern for the workers was the famous instance in 1939, at the height of the depression when Cleveland ran out of relief funds. An appeal to Gov. Bricker brought the stony reply that cities should solve their problems without state aid.

The Taft family assets total $75-100 million. The family controls a newspaper, radio station, bank, gas company, street car company and telephone company—as well as the mayor of Cincinnati, the courts and the board of education.



GEORGE S. VIERECK
A Friend of Taft?

Gerald L. K. Smith, of America First Committee repute, terms Robert Taft one of the "few statesmen" in Congress. The Senator was so friendly with the Nazis in this country during the war that he wrote Attorney General Francis Biddle in behalf of the 28 men indicted for sedition in 1943 and was accused of holding secret meetings with the convicted Nazi agent, George S. Viereck.

Add to the Taft resources the enormous fortunes of the Wolfe family, which holds two Ohio newspapers, the Wolfe Wear-U-Well Shoe Corp., a chain of 18 banks and the BancOhio Corp., a holding company.

Leading the lengthy list of giant corporations in back of Bricker is the "Cleveland Gang composed of:

1. The Cliffs Corp., and its affiliate, the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co., which own stocks in Republic Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Wheeling Steel Corp., and Inland Steel Co. Board Chairman William Mather is also director of Republic Steel Corp.

2. The M. A. Hanna Co.

3. Pickands, Mather and Co., also large stockholders in Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.

4. Thompson Products, whose Board chairman, Frederick Crawford, is also a director of the NAM and was president of it in 1943.

Bricker won't run short of finances—and it's a safe bet that he won't run short of red paint. The question is will the man who has been described as the most backward-looking of the entire Republican Old Guard, lack for votes?

Labor and its progresive allies hold the answer.

THE BIG SQUEEZE

MR. BIG is going to town with a vengeance. The Smaller War Plants Corporation recently reported on the appalling increase of monopoly control over the American economy during the world war. But this trend did not stop with the end of the war. It has continued and become accentuated since then.

A United Press report shows there has been no decrease in the war-swollen number of billion-dollar corporations, and that the 43 members of this "billionaires' club" have now increased their total assets from 97.7 billion dollars, as of Dec. 31, 1944, to 101.8 billions.

This means that something like one-fourth of America's corporate wealth is concentrated in only 43 giant monopolies.

★ ★ ★

OWNERSHIP of American corporations is also concentrated in the hands of a comparatively few wealthy stockholders.

Figures of the Temporary National Economic Committee, a few years ago, showed that only 10 thousand persons owned one-fourth, and 75 thousand persons owned one-half, of all the corporate stock in the country.

The 1,000 largest dividend recipients received 10.4% of all dividends paid, while 61 thousand persons received one-half.

Further emphasizing this maldistribution of wealth, government figures show that in July of this year 10% of American families held 60% of the country's savings, while 30% had no savings at all.

★ ★ ★

BIG BUSINESS and its millionaire owners not only monopolize American finance and industry, but their controlling influence is felt in nearly every phase of our economic and political life.

Particularly noteworthy is the increasing big-business monopoly over newspaper publishing, radio and other media for forming and controlling public opinion.

Though newspaper circulation has more than doubled since 1909, the number of daily papers has almost been cut in half. Big-business newspaper chains, by 1940, controlled about two-fifths of the country's entire daily circulation and one-half of the Sunday circulation.

The extent of big business' influence in politics was clearly demonstrated by the 79th Congress, which speedily granted its demands for increased prices, profits and privileges, while blocking or defeating all progressive social legislation which big business opposed.

★ ★ ★

IN its constant drive for more monopoly and greater profits, big business has been responsible for the wrecking of price control and the present inflation.

The results of its rule are felt in decreasing opportunities for small business, in lower real wages for labor, and in higher prices and devalued savings for all.

Big business is also pushing for an aggressive and belligerent foreign policy, to further its aims of monopolizing world markets and to suppress the democratic forces that might threaten its profits.

★ ★ ★

THE recent stock-market slump is one of many indications that the big squeeze of greedy and increasing monopoly is creating an unholy mess.

Although profits and dividends have been increasing, there was the most sweeping recession in stocks since October, 1937.

By forcing up prices and profits at the expense of wages and the people's purchasing power, big business has raised the specter of a declining domestic market, while foreign market prospects are also shrinking due to international uncertainties.

The American people face lower living standards, depression, unemployment and possibly another war unless they curb the power and greed of the big-business monopolists.

The power to do this rests in the strength of the labor movement and in the progressive political activity to which the CIO is trying to arouse all Americans.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

A RECORD number of sightseers visited the New York Stock Exchange on the day when stocks were dropping to a record low for the year.

In sheep-raising country too, it's quite an occasion when the shearing starts. But there the wool is clipped from full-grown sheep and turned to useful purposes.

In Wall Street, it's the lambs that get shorn, and what they lose serves only to create depression by going to those who already have too much.

★ ★ ★

MOST OF the country's corporate stock is owned by less than 1% of the population. So sightseeing is as close as the ordinary American ever gets to the stock market. But that does not save him from being shorn.

The same principle—"to them that have shall be given, and from them that have not shall be taken even that which they have"— operates all the way from the lowest-paid job to Wall Street.

★ ★ ★

IF YOU belong to the 40% of American families with average savings of only $40, you not only give of the fruits of your labor to them that have, but your money buys less than that of the more well-to-do.

Industrial insurance costs you more per dollar than if you could afford to pay a yearly premium. Housing costs you more in rent than it would if you could buy your home.

Everything you can only buy by "easy payments" costs you more than if you could pay the full price at once.

And every increase in the basic living costs takes a larger proportion of your income than it takes from those who are better off.

★ ★ ★

IF YOU are in the next 30% of families, with assets averaging $700, your money will be worth a little more to you. You will be able to buy a little insurance more cheaply, and generally do less installment-buying.

You may even be able to draw a very small percentage of interest on a little savings account or a few bonds.

★ ★ ★

THE NEXT 20% of families, with savings averaging $2,350, get just a wee bit of the "to them that have shall be given."

They can start buying their homes—though still less cheaply than if they could buy them outright mortgage-free — and avoid most installment-buying.

They may even be able to make a few dollars from the labor of others, without labor on their part, by buying a few shares paying around 4%.

★ ★ ★

BUT ONLY if you get into the top 10% of families, with assets averaging $10,500, will you really be able to start clipping the coupons of unearned income to amount to anything.

Even in this class, however, if you're in its lower brackets, you're still only a small stockholder, one of the lambs that may lose your wool when the big-money boys get out their shears.

★ ★ ★

ON THIS same day of the stock-market slump, a United Press report revealed how the bulk of the country's industrial and financial wealth is concentrated in 43 billion-dollar corporations. (Even million-dollar concerns are small fry nowadays.)

The number of these billionaire trusts, which expanded steadily during the war, has not decreased since then. On the contrary, their total assets have increased to almost $102 billion, compared with less than $98 billion on Dec. 31, 1944.

★ ★ ★

THESE GREAT monopolies are the real "super-government" in America', constantly driving for more and more power and profit at the expense of labor, farmers, smaller businessmen and the consuming public.

Even the stock-market slump serves their purposes, by fleecing the little fellows for the benefit of the big-money insiders.

But this slump also reflects the disastrous results of their greedy monopolistic rule.

For as the process goes on of taking from those that have not to give to those that have—through inflationary price increases, lower real wages and higher profits—the purchasing power of the people is sapped, and even Wall Street gets the jitters at the prospect of an insufficient domestic market for profitable production.

Pepper's Warning

PEACE OR EXTERMINATION

PEACE or extermination. That is the choice facing the human race.

"Whether we can pursue our daily tasks in undisturbed quiet or whether we are torn from our normal ways and thrust into the anguish of desperate combat with all of man's weapons of terror and death; whether we dwell in our several places of comfort and safety or whether we cringe in the slimy mud, or crouch in dark cellars, or hide like hunted beasts in holes; whether we are torn to pieces, choked by strangling gas or stricken down by raging virus—all this depends on whether we live in a world of peace or war."

This was the solemn warning sounded by Senator Claude Pepper at a huge Labor Day rally held in Los Angeles' Hollywood Bowl.

The Florida Democrat, speaking under the auspices of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of Arts & Science, declared that another world war would "threaten the survival of the human race."

Pepper warned that the American people need to "Tell the military dreamers and new emperors that they are expected to carry out their orders and not to lead us into an ideological, world-shaking war which would not only destroy our very democracy but, which threatens the survival of the human race. itself.

"The unity painfully achieved by President Roosevelt in war and victory has been lost in peace." Pepper declared. "The foundations he so bravely laid have been overturned and shattered and the structure he so bravely built has crumbled.

"Our voice, which in its natural role is the voice of the rights of man—the voice of the American and French Revolutions—has taken on harsh overtones of repression.

"Our duty to avoid isolation like a plague does not lead us into fraternal association with any powers to exploit jointly with them the oil of the Middle East; to preserve for them their old mastery of subject peoples; to share with them exclusive control and domination of the Mediterranean; to perpetuate Western European domination of the Balkans or the Danube; to construct another Cordon Sanitaire around the Soviet Union; to retain for our joint selves supreme mastery over every passageway between every ocean and sea, over every strategic base on the face of the globe.

"Let the people demand that we, the melting pot of all races and all lands, be the understanding leader through which all peoples and nations can work together for peace and well being.

"Let the people demand that international confidence be restored, that faith and trust be revived so that the atomic bomb shall no longer be a Damoclean Sword held over heads of any people, so that their leaders laying aside all lesser demands, shall assemble together and remain together until, in a spirit of Christianity and Democracy, they can rebuild those enduring foundations of peace which FDR laid with his own trowel and hand."

"AND LET the people be no less certain that Democracy prevail in our own land!

"How much longer shall we deny to the laborer, wherever he works, his just hire? How much longer shall we let the aged sicken and die in destitution? How much longer shall we let the breadwinner, disabled, remain destitute?

"How much longer shall we daily pay a tragic toll in life, in health and in achievement for our neglect to make a doctor, a hospital, a nurse, a laboratory, a dentist available to every ill man, woman and child?

"How much longer shall the family altars of the nation be by the roadside, in the park, in crowded rooms or in hovels?

"How much longer shall we deny Democracy in any part of America because of race or sex?

How much longer snall the ballot be conditioned upon the money you have, and civil liberties live under the threat of the mob?

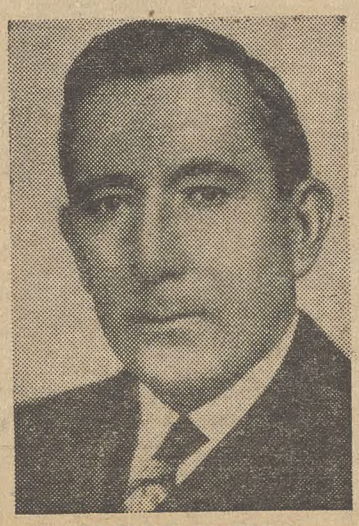
"We have a choice to make today. We can make the world the best world man has ever known with all science its obedient servant, or the lag of our spirit behind our minds will make our creation our masters to destroy us.

We can lift our leaders out of the garment of petty politics and enrobe them with raiment of political and social generalship.

"Or, spurning this choice, we can deepen the chasms which divide us; fatten the monsters of selfishness and hate. We can let the blessings of science become our curse and eventually be our destroyer.

"We can waste wealth which is ours—prosperity which we enjoy, and sink back into morass of depression and despair. All as we choose our course.

"Our dead look down upon us and remind us of all they have paid for this right of choice which we possess. An immeasurable future beckons us on. Let us make the right choice, and God helping us, our leaders not failing us, enter into the rich green valleys of peace and plenty for ourselves and for mankind."



CLAUDE PEPPER

The same Filipino guerrillas of Central Luzon who fought so valiantly during the war are now struggling against the absentee landlords, in a battle to secure democracy and decent living conditions.

Unrest In The Philippines

ONLY FASCISTS NEED FEAR IT

IN THE HOMES of the hacenderos (absentee landlords) in Manila, and from the columns of the large daily papers we learn that the plain of Central Luzon is a land of danger.

We hear tales of armed bandits that roam at large menacing all "decent" people. We hear of "peasant and agricultural unrest" which threatens return on property investment. We are warned not to travel into the land of the PKM (The National Peasant's Union) and the Hukbalahap (the Anti-Japanese People's Army), for our lives may be forfeit.

In the homes of the "little people" of the great city, the working man and his family, the small shop-keeper, we hear a different story. Here we learn of the heroism of a Filipino people, which fought for three years against the Japanese. From them we learn that the peasants of Central Luzon are the real voices of freedom for the Islands.

TO SEE for ourselves, four American trade unionists, now in uniform, set out for a weekend journey. Traveling north from Manila one passes thru an exceedingly beautiful and peaceful countryside. In the immediate foreground stretches the brilliant green of the rice paddies. A green which symbolizes the wealth of this land; a green which can mean life and happiness to the people who stoop all day in the planting and cultivating of the crop.

Along the streams and on the edges of the fields stand the banana trees, and the thickets of acacia. In the background the darker green of the mountains, gives a solid atmosphere, a feeling of strength to this land.

We pass thru the native barrios (villages) and are greeted by the swarms of children. Women look out of the glassless windows of the nipa huts and smile. The men wave at us as we pass, stopping their labor momentarily. If we should stop, they surround our car selling bananas, or just being friendly.

Just at dusk we arrive at our destination, Cabanatuan, the capital of the province of Nueva Ecija, Central Luzon. We are taken to the largest and most imposing building in town and the only one with a flashing neon light.

Inside we meet peasant leaders, and many young people, sons and daughters of peasants. We are greeted very warmly, as they are glad to meet American friends.

This is a story of the people of the Philippines —told by four GIs who visited the Island of Luzon. The struggles of the peasants for land and of the little people in the cities for decent wages are the "unrest" featured in the employer press. Only the fascists in the Philippines need fear it.

Within a short time a native party has been arranged in our honor and we are really shown some Central Luzon hospitality. At the party we are entertained by a mixed chorus, the Nueva Ecija Cultural and Dramatic Association, singing some of the songs of freedom which inspired the people in their struggles against oppression.

BETWEEN the songs and the dances we learn from the leaders of the people of Nueva Ecija some of the facts about the "agricultural unrest." The first speaker is Juan Feleo, affectionally introduced as the real Governor of the province. He is a gray-haired, rotund man, and smiling all the time.

This man, who is proud to be a peasant and lets everyone know it, was democratically elected Governor by the Barrio Councils during the occupation.

He saw to it that the people of the province were taken care of as well as possible, despite the presence of the enemy. He is deeply loved by young and old alike, and as he walked forward to speak some of the children followed him.

Feleo was deposed by the Collaborationist Government in Manila and an ex-traitor put in his place, but the people are outspoken in letting us know who the real Governor is, and who will be elected to that position when elections are held next spring.

For decades these people have lived in poverty and insecurity. As landless tenants they have tilled the fields so that others may eat, receiving at best only 50 per cent of the crop they produced. Their children cannot go to school because they must pay for their education, and food and clothing of necessity come first.

They must live in grass and bamboo huts, together with their animals, or not live at all.

When the Japanese came the wealthy landowner stayed in his Manila or Baguio mansion and offered his services to the new master. The landlord became the rice collection agent for the Japanese Army; and the peasant joined the guerrillas to fight the Japanese Army.

The peasants now feel they have a right to live a more decent life. They do not ask to be given the land for which they fought, but merely a more equitable distribution of the crop.

The agricultural "unrest" is caused by atrocious living conditions and unsolved social and economic problems, for which an enforced return to the old way of life is not the answer.

The speakers hope that we will understand, and will tell their story to the people of America, disproving the cries of "banditry".

On our way home we say to ourselves, we have found out what we came to find out. We have met the real people of the Philippine Islands, we have experienced the warmth one can find in the homes of the poor.

We know that only the fascists, the enslavers of the people, need have fear of Central Luzon. We know that these people are our allies and our friends.

The film goes on to show that while trade unionism is vital to enable the workers to stand up against monopolies, it is not enough. Bill Turner finds that out. His struggles on the picket-line are successful but his victory is short-lived.

With the cooperation of a reactionary Congress, Big Business takes back the wage increases through skyrocketing prices. Bill Turner learns then that he must win victories at the ballot box as well as the picket-line.

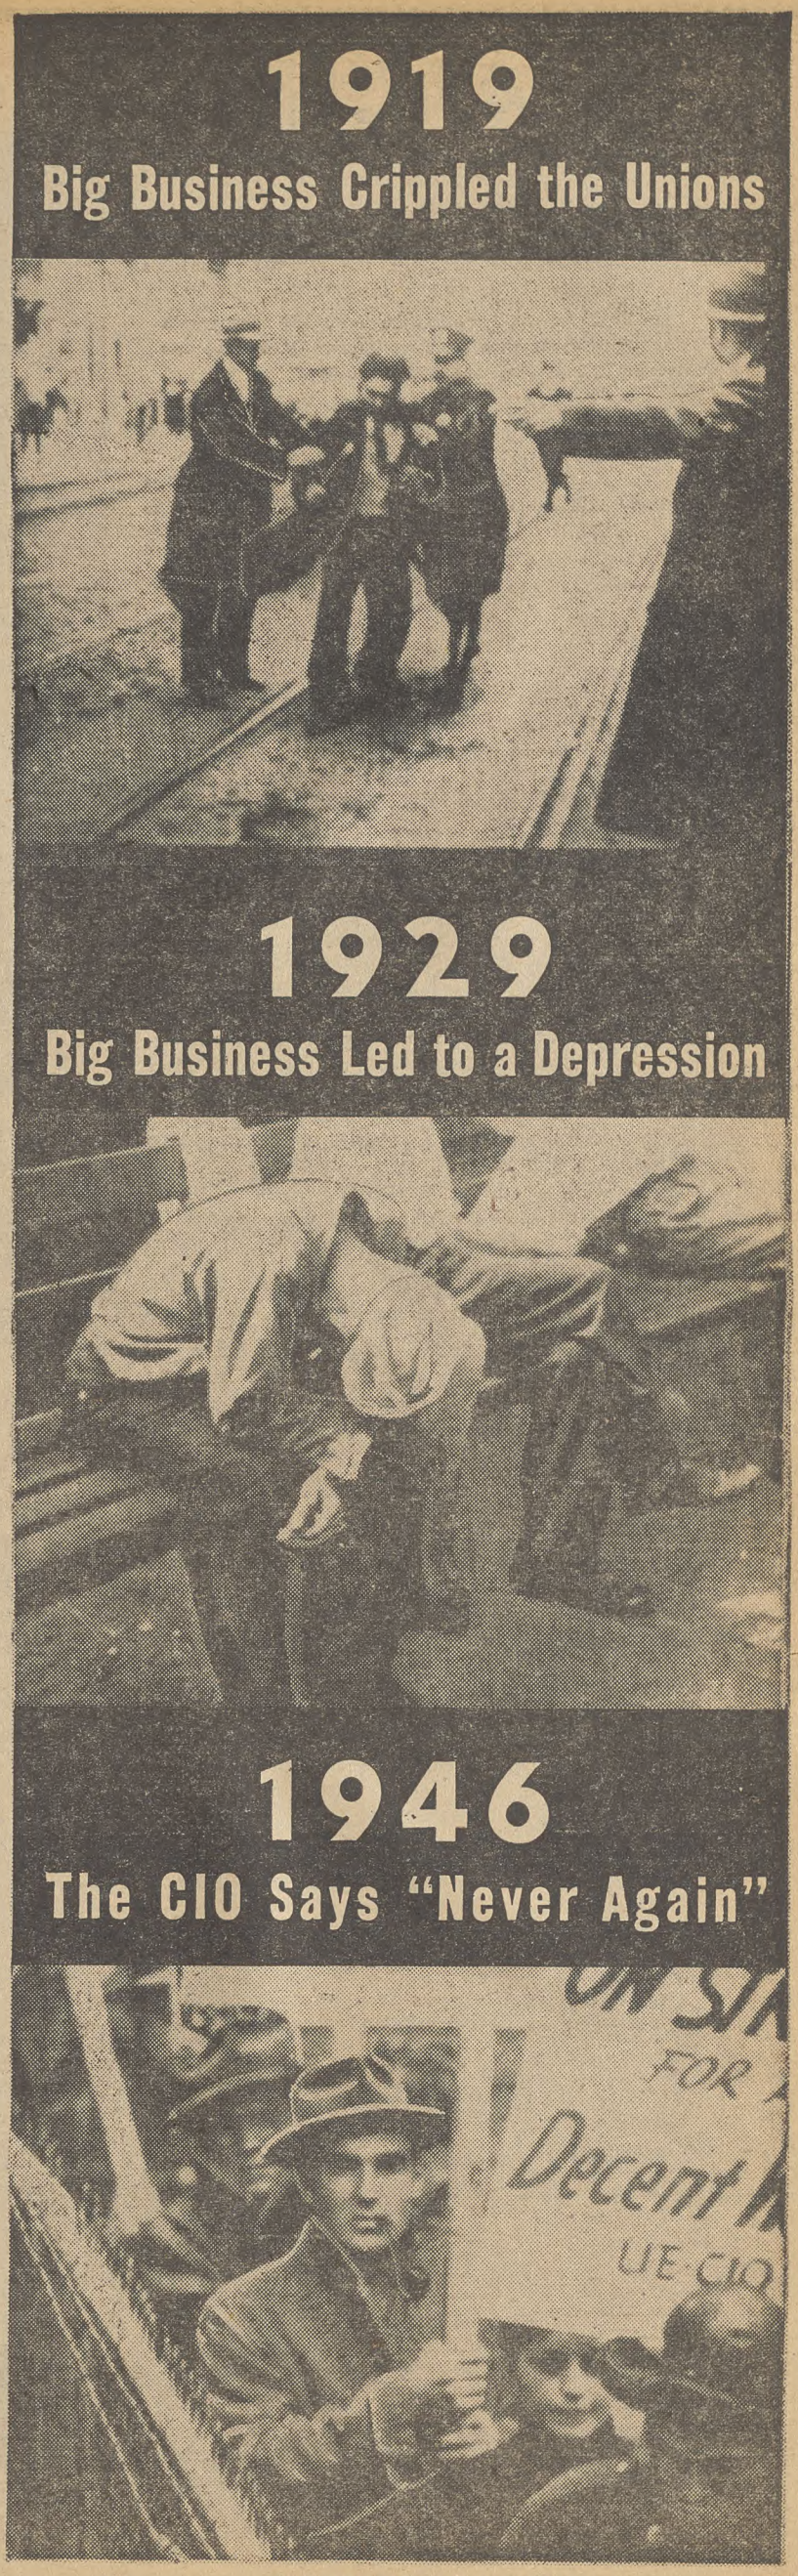
"Vote and vote right," warns the film. "Canvassing, registering, voting . . . sustained organized effort by every local in every community . . . will hold the gains of the picket lines."

DEADLINE FOR ACTION was produced by a new documentary group, Union Films, a cooperative venture made up of men and women who worked together during the war and produced some of its outstanding documentaries.

The writing, directing, animation and production rank with the best that Hollywood has made. DEADLINE FOR ACTION is 40 solid minutes of tense and power-packed film.

Union locals may purchase this movie on 16mm film for $65. One print can be used for an unlimited number of showings and makes an effective weapon in this election year. The film may be rented for $10 a showing.

To add to the film's value a trailer can be made and attached giving the record of local Congressional candidates using the CIO yardstick printed in The CIO NEWS supplement for August 19. The trailer sells for $15 and can be produced in three days. Union Film's address is 1507 M St. N. W., Washington, D. C.



IT'S A LIE!

By MARTY SOLOW

THOUSANDS of newspaper editors are deluged periodically with a slick-paper clip-sheet entitled Industrial Press Service. . Distributed gratis by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the clip-sheet contains many cleverly worded half-truths as well as outright lies.

In the August 19 clip-sheet, for example, the NAM propaganda service wails that "profits of U. S. corporations in 1945 were the LOWEST in five years and they are still declining."

THE STATEMENT CONTAINS BOTH A HALF-TRUTH AND A FLAGRANT LIE! Sure, profits did decline from a high of 9.9 billion in 1943 to 9.1 billion in 1945 BUT the decline was due to the war's end, to the end of fat cost-plus contracts, to the end of exorbitant prices which manufacturers could exact from the government. The decline was natural and inevitable.

HOWEVER, NAM figures do not show that in pre-war years (1936-1939) average profits were only 3.8 billion according to Dept. of Commerce statistics.

The NAM lies when it says that profits are "still declining."

BARRON'S (business weekly) reports that second-quarter net profits of 120 industrial companies were "nearly 37% better than in the corresponding three months of 1945."

Standard & Poor's "Outlook" (August 19) says: "Corporate earnings should be generally high for the current half year and we expect the composite for both industrial and utility companies to be up for the full year."

A Dept. of Commerce report indicates that "over-all corporate profits for 1946 will be equal to any previous year."

Reports for the second quarter of 1946, according to the Natl. City Bank, show that profits are almost double those of the first quarter.

NAManufacturers are still doing fine.

ON August 30, the Milk Industry Foundation, spokesman for America's dairy interests, hailed the removal of milk from price controls and asked for "consumer cooperation and understanding." The Foundation wept that, "Milk distribution costs have skyrocketed."

BUT THE MILK INDUSTRY FOUNDATION SAID NOTHING ABOUT SKYROCKETING PROFITS IN THE DAIRY INDUSTRY!

The N. Y. Times reported on August 23 that the net earnings of the National Dairy Products Corp., largest of the dairy companies were "$11,802,554, after taxes and all charges, compared with $6,977,276 in the corresponding period a year ago."

Shed a tear for the dairy industry while you pay over 20c for a quart of milk.

IN AN INTERVIEW on August 26, Herbert Hoover, onetime U. S. president and engineer of America's greatest depression, stated: "One thing that can be said for the Yugoslav people: the fact that we contributed anything to UNRRA or to them is unknown to anyone in Yugoslavia."

IT'S A LIE! An official UNRRA release reported that after one year of UNRRA in Yugoslavia, Tito cabled Director LaGuardia thanking him for supplies. The text of his telegram "was also published in full on the first page of all Belgrade papers and was read on the Belgrade radio," says the release.

Randolph Churchill, son of Winston, no friend of the Yugoslav regime, wrote in 1945, "The Yugoslav people realize what UNRRA has done for them and there is no doubt of their attitude."

UNRRA releases dated March 15, June 20, June 28, July 11, July 17 and August 5 all contain information on knowledge that Yugoslav people have of America's contributions to UNRRA and welfare of Yugoslav people.

SAVE TREES--WOODWORKERS

By ELLERY FOSTER

Delegates from Florida to Alaska will gather in Portland, Oreg., on Sept. 10 for the tenth constitutional convention of the CIO Woodworkers.

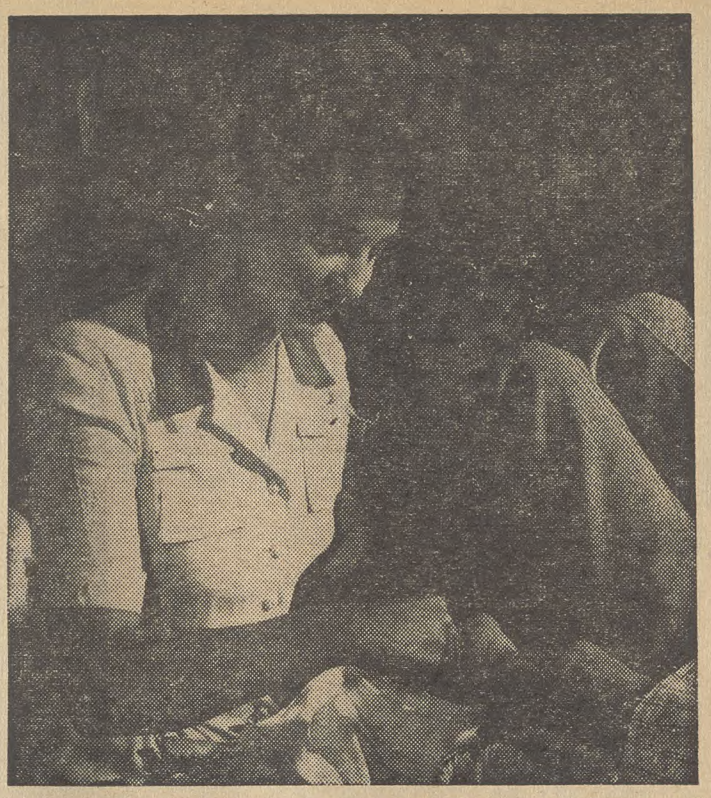
High on the agenda of this convention which represents logging, sawmill and related industries workers are organization of the huge Southern lumber industry as part of CIO's Southern Organizing Drive, action on price inflation which has robbed the workers of recent wage gains, and next steps in the union's plan to stabilize and expand the wood industries through scientific forest management.

IWA Pres. James E. Fadling declared, "One of the big undertakings of the past year has been the work on a special legislative program designed to stop the ruthless destruction of forests and to obtain the government assistance which many of the industry's small operators need if they are to practice scientific forestry, employ efficient production methods and eliminate the present excessive waste of valuable wood.

"Woodworkers want to live in good permanent communities like anyone else. They won't be able to do that until there is government regulation of logging to curb the over-eager profit seeker who often finds it more to his advantage to clear-cut the forest and move on than to practice scientific, sustained yield management. Our convention will address itself to the problem of how to get such a program passed in the next Congress."

Several representatives of the CIO Furniture Workers will also be present to discuss further the possibility of amalgamation of the UFWA and the IWA.

25,000 STRIKE IN HAWAII



As members of New York's Local 1, CIO Barbers and Beauty Culturists, prepare to strike for higher wages on Sept. 15, Beatrice Cochrane, former wife of middleweight champion Red Cochrane, plans to walk out, too. One of the manicurists' major demands is for owners to pay for the supplies used in polishing the nails of tired business men.

By MORRIS WATSON

HAWAIIAN sugar strike, which began Sept. 1, is 100% effective with picket lines around 33 plantations and mills of the territory's largest industry.

Twenty-five thousand members of the CIO Longshoremen's Union walked out at deadline set 30 days previously when negotiations bogged down with the largest and most powerful industry of big five sugar companies dominating territory's economy. The union has four basic demands: 65c minimum wage, 40-hour week, union shop, joint administration of prerequisites; housing, medical attention, fuel and water furnished as part of plantation wages—but is willing to compromise and negotiate until agreement is reached.

ILWU Sec.-Treas. Louis Goldblatt charged the industry is deliberately refusing to negotiate realistically and is attempting to smash the union, and said workers are ready to stay on strike indefinitely.

A few hours after the strike deadline passed without settlement strike machinery perfected weeks in advance was set in motion. Pickets reported to assigned posts and a showdown with sugar barons shaped up. Previous strikes conducted by single unorganized racial groups failed, but this strike is directed by a well-organized union with all races determined to maintain unity until victory.

Workers refuse to leave company-owned houses, living as usual except for picket duty.

UE MARKS TENTH YEAR

By BILL CAHN

MARKING the tenth anniversary of the founding of their union, 900 delegates of the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers will start a week-long convention Sept. 9 in Milwaukee, Wis.

The union's general executive board met in Milwaukee on Sept. 7 to make preparations for convention business, among it the discussion of 250 resolutions which local unions have drafted dealing with the pressing problems of the day.

From an initial membership of less than 30,000 workers whose representatives met in March, 1936, in Buffalo, N. Y., UE has grown until today it represents approximately 600,000 men and women in the electrical, radio and machine manufacturing industries, a union statement reported.

Plants under contract increased from 578 in pre-war 1941 to 1,375 at the present time. Between 1936 and 1946, UE increased the average rate in the electrical industry by 63 cents an hour, winning an 18½c an hour increase early in 1946 throughout the entire industry.

The union revealed that workers enjoying paid vacations increased from 289,000 in 1941 to 547,000 in 1946. In 1941, 250,000 received night bonuses, while in 1946 the number had risen to 515,000. For call-in pay, the number rose from 158,000 in 1941 to 531,000 in 1946.

UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald will be the presiding officer at the convention, whose sessions will be held in Milwaukee's Civic Auditorium. The Schroeder Hotel will be convention headquarters. The other UE general officers are Sec.-Treas. Julius Emsphak and Director of Organization James J. Matles.

AIR ABERDEEN FIRINGS--MURRAY

CIO Pres. Philip Muray this week was joined by the American Civil Liberties Union in demanding of War Sec. Patterson a hearing for five War Dept. employes at Aberdeen, Md., who were recently dismissed. The five were officials of the CIO United Public Workers.

"It is my understanding," Murray said, "that these five workers, who are officials of a union affiliated with the CIO have been separated from the service without any hearings at which they could defend themselves, and without being furnished with any statement of the specific matters charged against them."

The CIO President said it was not his belief "That a man who is disloyal to his country should be continued as a public servant," but added, "surely it should be possible to substantiate the truth or falsehood of such a charge at a fair hearing, with the presentation of witnesses and evidence, before an impartial tribunal."

CIO UNIONS BACK AFL SEA STRIKE

Both the Natl. Maritime Union and the Longshoremen's Union, both of CIO, are supporting the strike of the Seafarers' Intl. Union and the Sailors Union of the Pacific, both AFL, against a Wage Stabilization Board decision denying wage increases won by these unions in collective bargaining.

The CIO Committee for Maritime Unity had earlier called for a concerted national program of action to set aside the WSB ruling.

"This strike is clearly a trade union issue and we are in full support of the issues in the strike," NMU Pres. Joseph Curran said in a statement to the membership. "If the SIP, SUP set up picket lines on the docks where our ships may be docked, all our members are called upon to respect these picket lines and support the strike and keep in touch with the Union Hall, should any confusion occur."

$3 MILLION FOR 7,000

By CHARLES SILVERMAN

WAGE increases amounting to 3 million dollars a year were recommended for some 7,000 Western Union workers in the N. Y. metropolitan area by a fact-finding board appointed by Labor Sec. Schwellenbach in the dispute between the CIO American Communications Assn. and Western Union.

The report and recommendations issued Aug. 29 proposed a 12½ cents an hour across the board increase for 5,700 non-messenger employes, establishment of a fund based on an average of 4 cents an hour for all these employes, which will be distributed to about 2,000 workers denied substantial increases by the company's interpretation of the War Labor Board order in last winter's strike, and a 10 cents an hour increase for 1,300 messengers.

Coincident with the issuance of the recommendations, ACA Pres. Joseph P. Selly announced receipts of an arbitration decision awarding a half-million dollars in retroactive pay to employes who would have been denied a portion of their back pay under a company interpretation of an existing contract.

As requested by Schwellenbach the ACA and management negotiators are scheduled to meet Sept. 11 to "resume negotiations immediately using the board's report as a basis for solution of the wage dispute."

The funniest thing we heard on the air Labor Day was Wee Willie Papa Green speaking from Oklahoma City. Willie, in trying to work up his audience, got worked up himself and became a victim of hallucinations. He saw a number of CIO organizations clamoring to get back into his fold. He believed the boastful, braggadocio statements of his representative in the South, George Googe. Willie says they have recently organized 100,000 members in the South—George says 200,000.

In this column you will note how the AFL is faring as against the CIO. The atomic plant election—that's not decided yet.

Willie boldly proclaimed they are going to organize the South. It has taken them over 20 years to wake up to the realization that the Southern worker needs organization, only after CIO has usually led and will continue to do so.

No, Mr. Green, there is no stampede to get back in the AFL by CIO unions. On the contrary, CIO has now affiliated with it three which were heretofore AFL unions; but enough of this, let Willie rest in peace. Willie's organizing possibilities will be best amongst those AFL business agents that are living on the taxpayers' expense in such places as Sing, Sing, etc.

Continue organizing the unorganized—that's the best answer to all the AFL's claims and slimy slanders. Keep up the good work for voluntary contributions. Make the workers fight with workers' money. Other money is used to fight the workers and the big interests have plenty of it.

SET OAK RIDGE RUN-OFFS

Run-off elections at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic plant will be held Sept. 10-12, the Natl. Labor Relations Board announced this weekend.

The run-off elections are necessary as neither the CIO, the AFL nor no union won a majority in the elections held last week

Under the board rules, CIO and AFL will be on the ballots at Monsanto Chemical Co. and Carbide and Carbon Chemical Co. At Tennessee Eastman the workers decide between AFL and no union.

ANNUAL WAGE, CANADIAN ISSUE

LEADERS of the Canadian Congress of Labor have asked Prime Minister McKenzie King to intervene in current discussions between the Labor Dept. and the CIO Steelworkers for settlement of the Dominion's eight-week-old steel strike.

More than 15 thousand CIO Steelworkers, striking against the "Big Three" of the Canadian steel industry have virtually paralyzed all iron and steel production in the country.

The workers are out in the Algoma Steel Co., Dominion Steel & Coal Corp. and plants of the Steel Co. of Canada, including two in Hamilton and one in Montreal.

The Montreal strike took place as the result of a shipment by boat of "scab" steel now being produced within the Hamilton works and the Steel Co. by less than 1000 non-strikers and over one thousand foremen and supervisors and imported university students, all receiving triple pay.

This triple pay, which has cost the company more than the original demands of the union is in defiance of government wage control provisions but no action to stop its payment has yet been taken by the government.

Demands of the striking workers include national recognition of their union, a minimum guaranteed annual wage of $1750, a 40-hour work-week "as soon as sufficient man-power becomes available," two weeks vacation with pay and union security.

One of the most startling developments of the strike took place when thousands of veterans marched to the Hamilton picket lines to protest against the projected use of force by the government in an attempt to break the strike.

In addition, several other Hamilton steel plants ceased operations while workers in scores of other firms together with public utility employes notified their employers that work will cease at once should police attack the lines. Similar sympathy action has been threatened by Nova Scotia coal miners and by unionists in many centers.

Five hundred Royal Canadian Mounted Police have been in Hamilton for over a week but due to the obvious public resentment they have not yet left their barracks.

Discusions with the government which now controls the mills started last week. To date the only offer made over and above the 10c an hour limit supported by both the government and the company is an 11c increase. This has been rejected by the union.

MACK CO. STILL SAYS NO!

THREE weks ago the U. S. Conciliation Service proposed arbitration to the Mack Truck Co., whose workers have been on strike in three cities. The union agreed. The company said "NO!"

Last week the Labor Dept. proposed that the union and management meet with department officials in Washington, D. C., on Sept. 11, 12, 13. The union agreed. The company said "NO!"

That's the story in brief of the little-publicized 17-week-old strike of 8,000 CIO Auto Workers against the Mack Truck plants in New Brunswick and Plainfield, N. J., and Allentown, Pa.

The union seeks an 18½c per hour increase in accordance with the previously established national wage pattern. It is also asking for a union shop with check-off, seven holidays with pay, an improved vacation plan, top classification rates for returned veterans, vacations for veterans and several other demands relating to working conditions.

Thus far, in the face of the steadily mounting cost of living, management has offered an increase of 12c per hour to non-production workers alone. The increase would go to approximately 20% of the company's employes.

The stubborn refusal of the company to grant any of the union's demands has resulted in an increasing firmness and strength in the ranks of the union. An Auto Worker spokesman pointed out that a large majority of Mack Truck employes had found work elsewhere and that the strike can continue indefinitely unless the corporation drops its arrogant attitude and bargains in good faith.

ANNUAL WAGE URGED FOR DIXIE

DIRECTOR Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee this week urged that Southern industrial and labor leaders study the possibility of putting the guaranteed annual wage into effect as soon as possible.

"I can think of nothing that would do more to stabilize our economy than for industrial workers to be assured of steady work and steady pay," Bittner said.

"Industry has long followed the practice of setting aside funds with which to maintain its machinery and other properties on a year-around basis.

"Industry pays its officials and its so-called white-collar workers on an annual basis. The next logical step is for industry to maintain its production force on a yearly basis.

"In the early days of industrial development in this country management kept its employes on the payroll the year around. Later, as manufacturing plants grew larger, this practice was changed and production workers were subjected to periodic layoffs.

"This resulted in heavy personnel turnover and costly job training programs. . . ."

GREAT LAKES STRIKE WON

THE short, snappy two-week strike of the CIO Maritime Union on the Great Lakes was all but over this week when the powerful anti-union Lake Carriers Assn. matched the terms won by the union from other shipping companies both as to working hours and overtime rates.

Hours were reduced from 56 a week to 48 while at sea, to 44 a week in port and to 40 hours for the layup and outfitting season. All time put in beyond those limits will be paid at overtime rates, which vary on different ships in accordance with previous union scales.

"When the Lake Carriers Assn. found it expedient to bring their conditions up to the new union levels," said an NMU port agent, "they really paved the way for a tremendous organizing drive. The non-union seamen know who got them their reduced hours and increased overtime pay. They know where to go to get more of the same."

About 9,000 of the 15,000 seamen on the lakes are employed by the Lake Carriers Assn., Monroe estimates. If they all join the union it will more than quadruple the NMU membership on lake boats.

Settlements are expected shortly on the 18 union ships that are still tied up out of the 135 that originally went on strike.

CIO TALLY IN CANNERIES 50%

By C. W. FOWLER

DESPITE an unparallelled campaign of terror in the plants, the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers, rolled up a vote of close to 15,000—nearly 50%—against the AFL's 16,000 votes in the northern Calif. cannery elections this week.

The CIO union failed of a majority, as did the AFL, and the issue of union membership for 60,000 cannery workers in the state remains undecided.

Over 2,000 votes were challenged in the week's biggest NLRB election, while charges of company-AFL collusion and intimidation still remain before the Board.

The AFL Teamsters union, which was working under an illegal, backdoor contract signed with the employers last March, used every trick in the bag to confuse and frighten the voters.

Red-baiting was one of the principal weapons used, and reached such an extent that the FTA filed a libel suit for $500,000 against the AFL. The suit is based on a forged photograph purporting to show FTA and Communist party leaders together, and on a leaflet alleging that the FTA and the CIO were "controlled by Moscow."

Teamster-employer tactics against the workers reached their highest point in a few days before the election, in which workers were threatened with loss of jobs, loss of seniority, and a complete shutdown of all canneries voting CIO. Special threats were made to minority groups, including large numbers of Negro, Mexican and Japanese workers.

The CIO campaign, which had the aid of state and national CIO leaders and rank and file, was one of the liveliest and hardest fought in the history of labor.

Both Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey gave full support to the FTA-CIO drive, as did California leaders and scores of rank and file organizers and members.

The AFL Teamsters, aided by the entire AFL officialdom and by the employers, spent unlimited money on their anti-union drive, brought in hundreds of goons, bullied, threatened and fired thousands of cannery workers—but still failed to get a majority.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS By Rose H. Alschuler

WHAT HAVE NURSERY SCHOOLS TO OFFER?

Well-run nursery schools offer children a chance to play with other children their own age, as well as play materials and equipment that help all-round development, a good health program, sound counsel as to the child's home and school needs. It is almost impossible for mothers to meet all of children's needs 24 hours a day without relief. Nursery schools offer needed relief to parents who, with the help given, can take better care of their children when they are at home.

LOOK TO YOUR HEALTH!

Revealing the serious need for a national health program, Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), chairman of the Senate Health subcommittee, this week presented the final committee report advocating congressional action to improve the health of the nation.

Among the committee findings during its three-year activity were:

1. "The shocking truth about the inadequacies of our medical care system and about our generally low level of health compared to what we could achieve."

2. Drastic insufficiency of expenditures for medical and health research.

3. Serious deficiencies in dental care throughout the nation.

4. Need for concerted educational, police, medical and local authorities' efforts to curb venereal disease.

5. Need for special maternal and child health legislation.

6. Importance of promoting international cooperation to discover the means of curing and preventing cancer.

IT'S YOUR CONGRESS — VOTE!

By EDITH PRATT

Legislative Asst., United Steelworkers of America, CIO

ELECTION time is a time for questions. Big questions like "What candidate shall I vote for?" Which in turn leads to such questions as "How did the opposing candidates vote on issues which affect me?" And from that, "What are the important issues on which to judge these candidates?"

But in early fall before the election campaigns really heat up, there are some little questions which should be asked by every woman (and every man for that matter) in the trade union movement or sympathetic with its goals. Because if these questions aren't answered correctly now, there can't be any right answers to the big questions later.

The first little question is, "Are you registered?" Now that isn't as impertinent and unnecessary as a lot of us might think. The fact of the matter is that a great many people—members of trade unions, yes, even officers in trade unions—are not registered today. So before you ask yourself any more questions make sure you can answer, "Yes, I am," to the question, "Are you registered?"

After registration, what then? The next question if you're a union member is, "Have you volunteered with your local political action committee to do registration work in your neighborhood?" But you protest, "I work all day and don't have the time and am just too tired to knock on doors and talk politics with my neighbors." Talk politics with just one neighbor — some neighbor who doesn't work and has a little more time to get around during the day. Get her to agree to get every woman on the street or in the block registered.

That's where knowing the answer to some of the big questions comes in handy. Because talking politics is talking about the things that are bothering all of us—high prices, lack of housing, no decent place for our children to play, fear for sickness and not being able to afford a doctor, and fear of another war.

Once your neighbors see that the Congressmen and Senators they elect can do something about the things that are bothering them, if they're the right Congressmen and Senators, the rest is just a matter of showing them when and how to register and vote. So volunteer with your political action committee and spend a little time with just one person in your neighborhood, and you'll have the beginning of a neighborhood organization.

If you don't work and aren't a trade union member yourself, don't think you have no place in political action. Yours can be the most important job to get your neighborhood organized to register and vote.

First you have to know when and where to register, and that means finding out if your city is going to have special registration days in the neighborhoods, and if so when and where.

Or where you have to go in the city or county to register.

Then you have to find out which of your neighbors aren't registered. If you can get the street list from the election commission you can check the registered voters on that. If that's not possible, talk to them invidually and ask them to check themselves if there is any doubt.

You should try to get those who are already registered to work with you when the time comes for the others to register—some of them to do a telephone check, others to be baby watchers for an hour or so. You can save yourself and others a lot of trouble too, if you check in advance as to what hours are the least busy, and try to schedule your neighborhood accordingly.

Too often, people turn away and decide not to bother about registration if they have to wait in a long line. You can make it easier for yourself, and for the people who work and have to register after hours, by getting your neighborhood registered and back home before the rush.

Once you've got your neighborhood registered, you can go on from there to discuss candidates and issues, and you'll be well on the way to having an organization ready to get out the vote on Election Day. Right now the answer to the little question of who and how many are registered can decide the answer to the big question of who will win the November election.

AUXILIARY LOCAL FIGHTS PROFITEERS

For concerted action in opposition to present price rises women's Auxiliary Local 335 of Red Wing, Minnesota, has set the pace. Besides inviting a buyer's strike in the community, the housewives organized a community-wide protest to all price increases in the form of committees who made weekly reports on price increases.

The reports of these committees were widely circulated and housewives informed of outlying districts where prices are lower. With the entire community mobilized behind the buyers' strikes, merchants have been forced to hold prices down.

Not Enough To Eat For Half Of World!

More than half the people in the world were seriously undernourished during the prewar era, according to an article in the Sept. 7 issue of Foreign Commerce Weekly, a publication of the Dept. of Commerce.

The article, which summarized the findings of a World Food Survey conducted by the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations, states that tremendous increases in the supply of food will be necesary to provide everone in the world with enough to eat to maintain normal health.

Murray Calls For Crusade

PROFIT-HUNGRY WRECKERS HIT

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in a Labor Day speech over the ABC network, called on the people to defeat the legislative wreckers of OPA and the "malefactors of great wealth who are bent upon despoiling our economy."

"Workers today are threatened by a bitter squeeze between rising prices and reduced earnings," Murray said. "Our living standards are in danger of being seriously depressed. The economic liberty of all of us is threatened by greed and profiteering.

"Those malefactors of great wealth who are bent upon despoiling our economy and appropriating its fruits must be checked. The legislative spokesmen for the NAM and its satellites who wrecked OPA and who have further designs upon the living standards of America must be rebuffed at the polls.

"All of our people must join in a crusade—the worker, the housewife, the veteran—all of those whose modest needs for a decent life are being thwarted by profit-hungry lobbies must band together in a people's movement to restore our economic liberty, in a movement for a better America.

"We must raise again the banner of that great crusader, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and rededicate ourselves to his ideals."

Recalling CIO's contributions to the welfare of the people, Murray said:

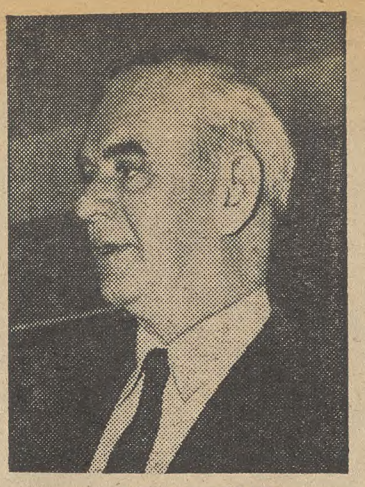
"I need not spell out the long list of legislative strides we have made in the direction of a better economy. Laws such as the Social Security Act, Federal Employers' Liability Act, Wage and Hour Act, and the Workmen's Compensation Acts in the various states, are now considered a minimum of protection for all of our people.

"Labor is proud that these legislative advances of the Twentieth Century are forever identified with its struggle and its progress just as it is proud of its role in the creation of a free public school syetem in the 19th Century.

"It is without a spirit of boastfulness that I say that we in the CIO are particularly proud of our contribution to the welfare of all our people. I say all our people advisedly, for only the zealots and the fanatical labor baiters can deny the contributions of the CIO to the public welfare.

"Advance toward our goals of peace and security is not easy. The enemies of the people are not all vanquished. The forces of special privilege are flushed with power, arrogant in their wealth, convinced that now the war is ended, they can return to profiteering and exploitation.

"We need only recall the fate of President Truman's program in the 79th Congress—what happened to minimum wages, social security, housing, FEPC, and OPA—to understand the renewed aggression of Big Business and the NAM against the living standards of the people."



PHILIP MURRAY

"Those malefactors of great wealth who are bent upon despoiling our economy must be checked."

LONGSHOREMEN MAY STRIKE

"It looks like a strike Oct. 1," was the reaction of the CIO Longshoremen to the turndown of all their contract demands, except reopening of wage scales, by the Waterfront Employers Assn. of the Pacific. The WEA again proposed extension of the present contract to June 15, 1947, with two wage conferences meanwhile —a proposal which the union had already rejected.

The WEA specifically refused an ILWU demand that the coast master contract include 8,000 ship clerks, checkers, car-loaders and dock foremen as well as the 12,000 longshoremen already covered.

National Trend

D. C. PRICES SET NEW RECORD

PRICES in the nation's capital have soared past the last reported record high, the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported this week. Top figure for June 1920 was 141.9 as compared with the 1935-39 base of 100. New record of 142.1 was set during mid-July to mid-August, 1946.

While no figures were available at press time for price rises during this period over the nation, BLS officials said that the D. C. trend may "possibly" be reflected over the entire country.

Biggest hike during the summer month period was in food—3.1%—with meat rising 8%. Washingtonians had to pay $2.25 for meat that cost only $1 during August, 1939, a rise of 125%.

Over the nation, durable consumer goods also have made startling price advances since Congress virtually emasculated OPA. Price rises granted by OPA under the new price "control" law since July 25, 1946, include the following percentage increases:

Bicycles	3.5%
Box springs	12%
Chinaware—ordinary household	7%
Clocks and non-jeweled watches	6%
Coal, oil and wood stoves	5%
Dry batteries	8%
Eectric ranges	9%
Gas ranges	5%
Household aluminum cooking utensils	5%
Metal bed springs	4%
Metal cots and double-deck beds	3%
Metal office equipment	4%
Portable typewriters	5%
Radios and electric phonographs	3%
Small electrical appliances, such as toasters, electric irons, small space heaters, coffee makers and shavers	4%
Vacuum cleaners	7%
Washing machines	7%
Window shades	10%
Refrigerators, household	6%

TAYLOR URGES PROBE OF COST-PLUS PATRIOTISM

ASSAILING "cost-plus patriotism" of big industrialists during the war, Sen. Glen H. Taylor (D. Ida.) this week called for a full dress investigation of war profiteering. Writing in the Washington Merry-Go-Round column, Taylor said:

"I am not particularly interested in unearthing evidence of champagne parties or of the more dramatic examples of disloyalty. I am much more anxious to learn the nature of the loyalties of the military and industrial figures who negotiated our war contracts and who determined procurement policy.

"It became clear, very early in the war, that the large corporate giants were in the saddle. Their officials donned uniforms and sat down with their erstwhile colleagues to negotiate contracts. It was all very clubby.

"Recently, I accused the railroads of overcharging the Government on military freight during the war, and named the men who were supposed to serve as the Army's watchdogs in making railroad freight rates. Four of the five were railroad officials before the war. They have since returned to their roads at substantial promotions.

"No War Dept. employe could request a rate reduction for the Government without clearing the proposal with these railroad men.

"Other industries, too, sent brave sons to the Pentagon and the WPB, where they ran the procurement and production programs. Never were buyer and seller so completely agreeable.

"The procession of excessive war profits skipped in blissful harmony under an archway of gleaming sabers.

"Before the war the investigation by the Temporary National Economic Commission did a great deal to reveal tendencies toward monopoly control.

"It was called off as we entered upon war preparations. For, as Roosevelt organized the defenses of the U. S. to meet the Nazi-Fascist aggression, he learned that a high price would be exacted by the big-business boys for cooperation in the defense of the Nation: Enormous war profits, plus a still greater control of the national economy.

"It was apparent that President Roosevelt could not fight a two-front war against the Axis abroad and the big-business lobby at home.

"The monopolies refused to accept war production orders until accelerated tax amortization laws were enacted. In several instances they refused contracts until they were paid their own prices; their patriotism was cost-plus.

"Soon the familiar NAM faces were seen at the helm of America's war production efforts.

"President Roosevelt's proposal for a $25,000 salary limitation was immediately junked by Congress.

"We need a thorough investigation that will show us how we can restore a real competitive economy which will make it possible for small business to survive, and which will avoid another depression.

"That can be accomplished only by uncovering the whole story of war profits and of wartime trends toward concentration of wealth and elimination of competition."

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

FOR WORLD PEACE!

FIFTEEN thousand people vigorously committeed to FDR's policy of "Big Three" unity to preserve world peace this week jammed Madison Square Garden in N. Y. City to protest talk of war and to demand a special session of Congress for consideration of important domestic issues, including price control and housing.

The rally heard Sen. Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) warn that the plan of "conservative Democrats and reactionary Republicans" to "get tough" with Russia will not work.

"It is not so far from 'get tough' to 'get rough'," Pepper declared. "I think we ought to remember, however, that the last two fellows who tried to get rough with the Russians—you may remember them from their first names, Napolean and Adolf— did not fare so well.

"You and I know that today the reason we have got so much Republican unity behind the foreign policy is because there is so much McKinley imperialism in our foreign policy. What do you expect in a foreign policy which really meets the approval of Senator Vandenberg and John Foster Dulles?"

THE MEETING, which was called by the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences & Professions, also heard Sec. of Commerce Henry Wallace declare that the people must organize for peace.

"We who look on this war-with-Russia talk as criminal foolishness must carry our message direct to the people," Wallace declared.

While Wallace berated the Republicans for leading the hysterical drive toward possible war, Pepper lambasted reactionary forces in both parties. But the Florida Senator declared:

"If we go on, as we are now going, appeasing the imperialists in the Republican Party, there can be no end but war. There can be no alternative but the division of the world into two armed camps, one headed by the Soviet Union and the other headed by the U. S., which will rob us of our riches and eventually devastate our earth."

Both Pepper and Wallace emphasized that the U. S. can "get along" with Russia. But, Pepper declared, if the people turn out the Democrats and put Republican reactionaries wholly in power in Congress and in the White House, they would get us into war with Russia.

"The people are uneasy," Pepper said. "They want to know why armed American forces become a symbol of royalty and reaction in the skies over Europe and Asia. They want to know why American diplomacy orders an American fleet to pull the British chestnuts out of the fire in Palestine, in the Bosporus and in the Suez Canal at the grave risk of shattering the peace.

SENATOR CLAUDE PEPPER

"The people not only want prosperity but peace."

"For the people not only want prosperity but peace. It is the people's sons and daughters who die. In the next atomic bomb rocket war, it would be the people themselves who would be blasted from their homes and businesses, strangled by gas or writhing in the agony of atomic virus. It is the people who will pay for this war with Russia that the Roosevelt haters as well as the Russia haters are trying to get us into."

WALLACE called for U. S. industrial and technical aid to undeveloped nations in the cause of world peace and progress.

'To prevent war," he said, "it is essential that we look abroad through our own American eyes and not through the eyes of either the British Foreign Office or a pro-British or anti-Russia press.

"Throughout the world," the Secretary of Commerce declared, "there are numerous reactionary elements which had hoped for Axis victory— and now profess great friendship for the U. S. Yet, these enemies of yesterday and false friends of today continually try to provoke war between the U. S. and Russia. They have no real love of the U. S. They only hope for the day when the U. S. and Russia will destroy each other."

Wallace said that he believes we can get peaceful cooperation with Russia when she "understands that our primary objective is neither saving the British Em-

For Aid to Mexico: Sec. of Commerce Henry A. Wallace (l.) on a trip to Mexico last week urged U. S. industrial and technical aid to help develop Mexican productive capacity. He was greeted by Lombardo Toledano (r.), head of the Latin American Federation of Labor, and by Walter Thurston, U. S. Ambassador to Mexico.

CHARGES WALL ST. SPLITTING TRY

Wall St. gold is flowing through Mexico to bolster efforts to split the Latin American Federation of Labor (CTAL), it was charged by Lombardo Toledano in a speech to the national council of the Mexican labor movement.

Toledano, head of the CTAL and a member of the executive bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions, accused representatives of the AFL of playing ball with falangists and other reactionaries in an effort to crack the CTAL. CIO and CTAL have maintained close relationships throughout the past several years.

Answering smear attacks of half a dozen varieties, the Mexican union leader set forth the principles of CTAL:

"The CTAL is democratic, because it demands the destruction of surviving feudal customs. It is anti-fascist because it demands the destruction of fascist doctrines which are based on corporative regimes imposed on Latin America during the colonial period. It is anti-imperialist because monopoly hinders and is fighting Latin America's economic emancipation."

The AFL, Toledano declared, has followed a policy of discrimination against Negroes and Mexicans, and has refused to help constitute any western hemisphere labor organization in which it would not play the role of czar.

WFTU MEET SEPT. 20

THE World Federation of Trade Unions' nine-man executive bureau—top group in the global labor group—is scheduled to meet in Washington starting Sept. 20.

Purpose of the meeting, which was scheduled during the WFTU's get-together in Moscow early this summer, is to elect a president to succeed Sir Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress, and to discuss ways and means for winning a more adequate voice for labor in the United Nations Economic & Social Council.

CIO will be represented on the bureau by an alternate pending election of a U. S. successor to the vice-presidency held by the late Sidney Hillman. Other members are V. V. Kuznetsov, USSR; L. Jouhaux, France; Lombardo Toledano, Latin America; H. F. Chu, China; G. Di Vittorio, Italy, and E. Kupers, Netherlands.

Following the WFTU session, the American-Soviet Trade Union Committee, composed of representatives of CIO and the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, will meet in Washington. Five Soviet members of the committee are scheduled to come to the U. S. for the sessions.

CIO DROPS ILO

CIO is planning to withdraw completely from all activities of the Intl. Labor Organization, Pres. Philip Murray announced last week following the government's decision to stand pat with the AFL as its choice for labor representative in ILO affairs.

The government action, believed to have come from the White House, reversed an earlier decision of Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach to alternate the labor delegate between the two labor bodies.

Murray, speaking to a district steel union convention in Chicago, said CIO would send no advisors to the AFL labor delegate since it rejects any "second class" status.

WORLD LABOR ROUNDUP

FRANCISCO FRANCO, the Spanish dictator, is about as popular as a case of measles with every major segment of the population in this country, according to a report of the Natl. Opinion Research Center of the University of Denver.

A poll of leaders in six groups—agriculture, labor, management, Negroes, press-radio and veterans—showed big anti-Franco majorities in every group except management. Questions were:

"Do you believe that Franco's regime in Spain should be a subject for discussion by the United Nations?"

"Do you wish to see concrete action taken if necessary to lend weight to the outcome of any such discussions?"

Here's the breakdown on the answers

	Yes	No	Undecided
DISCUSSION
Agriculture	64%	13%	23%
Labor	84	9	7
Management	46	33	21
Negro	91	9	.....

DISCUSSION IS VERBOTEN in Franco's Spain, but plenty of Spaniards are showing they can act against the dictator. Allied Labor News, reporting from Madrid, tells of widespread Republican guerilla activities throughout the country.

Here's a report for the last week of August:

Near Teruel, guerillas drove guards off a 15-car freight train and emptied it of supplies. In the Asturias mining district, Republicans ambushed detachments of the notorious civil guard. At Ciudad Real, a guerilla detachment entered a village, requisitioned food and fought its way back to its base despite the arrival of reinforcements to the civil guard.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK'S soldiers and cops are feeling their oats—to the point where they forced a strike of Shanghai streetcar men. The drivers and conductors walked out to protest constant manhandling by the soldiers and police. Uniformed officials of the Kuomintang government — who several weeks ago seized trade union relief centers financed by contributors of CIO and AFL members in the U. S.—are reported increasingly autocratic.

A WARNING that the U. S. is supporting a "fascist" government in China was sounded, meanwhile, by Brig. General Evans Carlson, USMC (retired) who served for many years in the Far East and commanded a special task force.

Carlson emphasized that he used the word "fascist" advisedly, and in the "same sense that I would in speaking of the Hitler and Mussolini governments." Chiang's government exists not by the will of the people but by the strength of American armed forces, material and support, he said.

DEPORTATION BATTLE

THE Dept. of Justice is performing a service for anti-labor employers in its deportation proceedings against Humberto Silex, representative of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, the union charged this week.

Silex, a 25-year resident of the U. S., has been active as a MMSW member and official in winning unprecedented gains for the Spanish-speaking workers of the Southwest, including those achieved in strikes this year.

After 25 years' residence in the U. S., a half-hour's visit across the border into Mexico by Silex was interpreted by the Dept. of Justice as a new entry into the country.

With this as a starting point, the Department picked up the record of a fight between Silex and an anti-union stooge who had been instrumental in getting Silex fired. As a result of the fight, the union organizer had been held on an "assault" charge in 1944 and fined $35.

To the Department, this became a crime involving "moral turpitude" prior to entry into the U. S.!

Deportation proceedings against the MMSW representative were begun after he had filed his second naturalization papers and just before he would have been eligible for U. S. citizenship.

YOU CAN HELP. Write to the Hon. Ugo Carusi, commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, Philadelphia 2, Pa., protesting this attempt to deport Silex. Ask Carusi to call off deportation proceedings as an unwarranted attack upon an individual because of his trade union activities.

To Aid Consumers

REPORT HOARDERS, CIO ASKS

CIO, through its Cost of Living Committee, this week requested all its affiliated local unions to report excess inventories of consumer goods in a campaign to reduce hoarding in anticipation of higher prices.

In a telegram to its international unions, the CIO said that "government statistics show a tremendous increase of goods 'in inventory' by wholesalers and manufacturers." In order to secure the release of these goods in the consumer market, local unions have been asked to report on the location, quantity and types of goods being hoarded.

The Cost of Living Committee then plans to take steps to secure the release of these goods to the consumer market as soon as possible.

John Thornton, chairman of the Committee, said in the telegram: "The hoarding of consumer goods by the greedy profiteers is a major factor forcing price increases. If all of the goods being made in America's factories were released in the consumer market there would be fewer shortages, less pressure for price increases and less of a hazard of a coming depression."

Meanwhile, consumers learned this week that:

1. A Washington, D. C., poll showed that the average family in the nation's capital is paying 33% more for food than it did last December. It now costs $20.63 a week to buy what $15.48 used to.

2. 110 real estate boards from 39 states have urged abolition of rent and all other wartime price controls by March 31. The real estate men also asked for an immediate 15% minimum increase in residential rents, and prompt elimination of all price ceilings and rent controls on new residential construction.

NO THANKS!

A new "white man's movement to save first the South and then the nation" was launched recently in Georgia when an organization known as Columbians, Inc., received a charter from the Georgia state government.

LYNCH PROTEST

Plan for a gigantic rally to mark the opening of a 100 day "Crusade to End Lynching" on Sept. 23 were outlined in Washington, D. C. this week by Paul Robeson, noted singer and actor.

The 100-day period from Sept. 23 to Jan. 1 coincides with the interval between the signing of the first and second emancipation proclamations by Pres. Abraham Lincoln 84 years ago.

Objects of the Crusade are: apprehension and punishment of every lyncher, passage of a federal anti-lynching bill and barring the seating of Sen. Bilbo when Congress reconvenes.

Signing the call for the crusade along with Robeson are Orson Wells, Albert Einstein, Quentin Reynolds, Artie Shaw, Joseph curran, Bartley C. Crum, Bishop B. G. Shaw, Margaret Webster and Dr. Max Yergan.

UE RE-ELECTS ALL OFFICERS; HITS ATOM BOMB POWER POLITICS

CIO's third largest union, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, reviewed a record of successful struggle and substantial gains since the conclusion of the war, at its constitutional convention in Milwaukee last week.

Despite the challenge of an anti-administration slate, the 668 delegates expressed their satisfaction with the conduct of the union's affairs by re-electing the international officers by more than five-to-one majorities.

Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald was re-elected with 3,029 votes, as against 525 votes for Harry Block of Philadelphia. Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak defeated James W. Click of St. Louis, by 2,994 to 554. And Director of Organization James J. Matles drew 2,997 votes, as against 556 for Bartholomew Enright of Jersey City, N. J.

The anti-administration group, which had caucused earlier at Pittsburgh to form a "Committee for Democratic Action" within the union, met equally overwhelming defeat when it opposed a majority report reaffirming the union's stand for "rank and file control, regardless of craft, age, sex, nationality, race, creed or political belief," and sought to substitute for it a minority report condemning "Nazi, Communist and Fascist dictatorships" and rejecting "consideration of any policy emanating from totalitarian dictatorship and foreign ideology."

The majority report, adopted by a roll-call vote of 2,827 to 679 after extensive and hard-hitting debate, declared in part:

"There are forces who urge us to substitute for the principle of unity and democracy within our ranks, divisions, witch-hunts and purges. They urge us to discard our established prinicple of aggressive struggle to improve our conditions, and in its place substitute aggressive struggles by one section of our membership against another . . .

"This membership controls this union and will continue, as in the past, to defeat every effort to bring it under the domination of any group, whether it be political, religious, fraternal or any other.

"This union guarantees to every member all rights and privileges of membership, including the right to hold any position in the union. It is this principle of democracy, unity and equality in our union which is now under attack, that has made the UE outstanding in its services to the membership and to the American people.

"Again, as in the past, we repudiate and condemn any effort to divide our ranks, in whatever guise it is presented or from whatever source it comes."

The UE officers' report noted that, in its ten years of existence, the union had grown from an initial membership of less than 30,000 until today it represents some 600,000 workers.

It has raised average wages in the electrical industry by 63c an hour in the same period, winning an 18½c-an-hour increase this year throughout the entire industry. Paid vacations have been won for 547,000 workers.

The UE now has 1,375 plants under contract, which represents the high peak of plants organized. During the past two years, since its last convention, the UE won 450 NLRB elections covering 99,890 workers, and 323,572 workers joined its ranks.

The officers, in their report, deplored the changes in government policy, both domestic and foreign, since President Roosevelt's death, declaring that we now confront "a situation of strengthened reaction."

They noted the growth of big-business monopoly and control; huge war profits as contrasted with reduced real income and savings for most of the people; refusal of Congress to pass progressive legislation, and anti-labor proposals of the Truman administration, and declared:

"Today the chief concern of the American government is the nourishment of profiteers . . . (and) world peace is being played with by power politics diplomacy based on the underlying threat of our atom bombs."

The report further stated that "Byrnes, Vandenberg, Connally, Taft and many others in government have been lifelong servants for the special interests of big business. They see no other interests than those of big business.

"They see Germany through the eyes of corporation executives who are eager to re-establish relations with their Nazi counterparts. They see China and the Far East through the eyes of oil, rubber, mining, sugar and hemp interests."

Featured speakers at the UE convention were CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Senator Claude Pepper and Director Jack Kroll of the CIO Political Action Committee.

Murray praised the UE as "a proud union, a big union, a responsible union, that has made many magnificent contributions to the well-being of its members and of the American people.

"No one could be more pleased, or more deeply appreciative, than I am," he said, "of the splendid support given me by your organization, and of its support of the policies of the national organization (CIO)."

Murray declared that the CIO "lives with the people, fights for the people and has improved the conditions of the people," and that no enemy should get the notion "that he can destroy a movement like this."

Asserting that the CIO is fundamentally "trade unionist" and "fundamentally American," he said: "We're not going to be bothered—too much at least— with the ideological mumblings of groups that are hell-bent on destroying it.

"We're going to have our fights, our bickerings, our disagreements—they're never too serious. But there is no disagreement, by any one of CIO's unions, on the fundamentals of trade unionism."

Hitting at the rejection of the seamen's wage increase by the Wage Stabilization Board, Murray warned that the next CIO Vice-Presidents or Executive Board meeting "will probably ask the WSB to resign—for the good of the community, the good of the nation."

He declared that the CIO "is not going to accept second-class status in the Intl. Labor Organization," noting that President Truman, in denying the CIO equal representation with the AFL, had departed from the position taken by President Roosevelt in the spring of 1944.

Murray said that the CIO would "pull out of the ILO, have nothing to do with it, not participate in its industry meetings, just forget about it, because it serves no useful purpose." (See Page Four for further quotes from Murray's speech).

Senator Pepper, in a vigorous and loudly applauded speech, denounced the reversal of President Roosevelt's domestic and foreign policies, since his death.

"The American people don't want to fight anybody. They don't want to drop atomic bombs on anybody. But we've drifted too far back to the imperialist policy of McKinley," he said.

"If Roosevelt were alive, we'd be getting on better with Russia," Pepper declared, objecting to the policy of alliance with Great Britain against the Soviet Union and calling for a return to the Big Three unity, advocated by Roosevelt.

"The liberal wing of the Democratic party is scarcely, if ever, consulted on our foreign policy," he said. "If President Truman is going to remain free from responsibility for what may happen to this country and his generation, he's got to take a personal responsibility to see that what I believe are his liberal ideas, in his heart, are reflected in the policies of his administration."

Referring to Greece, Pepper said he didn't favor using American warships "to even give the impression we're trying to put an old broken-down king back on the throne.

"It is not our duty to join any old Western European power to say Russia can't get into the Mediterranean," he declared, saying that the Soviet Union has more right than England to defend the Dardanelles and as much right as England to be in the Mediterranean sea, and that the U. S. should not become "a guarantor of Western European im-

MEMOS FROM MURRAY

PRESIDENT PHILIP MURRAY of the CIO had some pertinent comments to make, in his recent speech to the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, which are worth passing on:

TO CALUMNISTS and other labor-split dopesters: "CIO lives with the people and fights for the people. CIO has improved the conditions of the people. It is one of those bread-and-butter organizations. That is the simple trade union fundamental, the rock on which this structure has been built.

"That is why CIO is going to live, endure and prosper. It is the only labor movement in America that lives that kind of life. It is not beset with racketeers. So let no enemies of CIO imagine they are going to be able to destroy an organization like this.

"The CIO is fundamentally trade unionist. It is also fundamentally American. We have our quarrels, our bickerings, our disagreements—they're never too serious. But there's never any disagreement—by any one of CIO's unions—on the fundamentals of trade unionism."

★ ★ ★

TO THE WSB: "I don't believe in a policy of wage-making like a dog running around in circles trying to catch its own tail—a policy of giving a man a dime and taking 20 cents away."

The Wage Stabilization Board made "a grave mistake in denying the seamen's wage increase, Murray said. "When the CIO's Vice-Presidents or Executive Board meet, they will probably ask the Wage Stabilization Board to resign, for the good of the nation."

★ ★ ★

TO CONGRESS: "The last Congress has gone down in history as perhaps one of the most reactionary Congresses that has ever met in Washington. It engaged in reprehensible action to defeat the aims of the people.

"We must defeat every enemy of the people, every enemy of labor that is running for office this fall. We must elect men who will represent the will of the people."

★ ★ ★

TO TRUMAN AND ILO: "In the spring of 1944, President Roosevelt addressed a communication to William Green, with a copy to me, saying he had concluded that the CIO and the AFL should be accorded the same voting strength in the International Labor Organization.

"President Truman has decided the CIO is not entitled to representation in the ILO—that is, equality of representation. The CIO is not going to accept second-class status in the ILO. It is going to pull out of it, have nothing to do with it, not participate in any of its industry meetings—just forget about it, because it serves no useful purpose.

"So while the impression may be created that Truman has again kicked the CIO in the face, he hasn't—he has done us a favor. For the ILO is dead from the chin up, and who in hell wants to associate with it?

"The ILO has never rendered a contribution to the welfare of the people. The AFL has had its tentacles into it—a lot of pensioners working for it, who have outlived their usefulness and been pushed into the ILO in their decrepit state."

TO PROFITEERS: "In my opinion, the best way to stop the profiteer is for the government to take it out in taxes.

"If he understands that profiteering will result in his extra profits going into the Treasury of the United States, there will be no incentive for profiteering."

TO SOUTHERNERS: "The CIO is making splendid, if not miraculous, progress in its Southern organizing campaign.

"We didn't go in to finish the job in a few months. We went in to stay with the job until it was done."

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

AS THE Swede said when he saw two trains in a head-on collision: "That bane hell of a way to run a railroad."

Anyone who knows the signals can see we're heading for a smash-up on the U. S. Railroad.

But let's get wise to the way the Wall Street monopolists are running our economy—and do something about it—before the crash occurs.

★ ★ ★

THE TREND toward greater monopoly has long marked the American economy.

In its early stages, the growth of big business made a contribution to industrial efficiency, mass production and lower prices.

But once effective monopoly is established, lower prices are no longer necessary to stifle competition. The monopolist then tends to restrict production for the purpose of raising prices and increasing profits.

And as he sees limits to profit-making possibilities in his own country, he looks abroad for new worlds to conquer and exploit, thus sowing the seeds of imperialist war.

★ ★ ★

IN THE United States, big-business monopoly extended its control enormously during the war.

With eight financial groups controlling 106 of the 250 largest corporations, 51% of all prime war contracts went to the top 33 corporations.

The monopolists' power was further swollen by huge war profits. Corporate profits jumped from 26 billion dollars in the six peacetime years of 1934-39 to 117 billions in the six war years of 1940-45.

The monopoly trend has increased since the war, through a sharp increase in corporate mergers and acquisition of small firms by larger ones.

Today 43 billion-dollar corporations directly monopolize one-fourth of the country's corporate assets.

★ ★ ★

HOW HAVE the big-business monopolists used their increased power since the war?

They have used it to squeeze ever higher profits out of labor and the public.

They have used it to cut wages—first resisting union demands for restoration of take-home pay, then raising prices out of all proportion to small increases in labor costs.

They have used it to restrict production and keep goods from the market, in order to raise prices still further.

They have used it to expand their political control, to make Congress wreck price control and block social legislation; and to press for an aggressive foreign policy to corner world markets.

And through their control of press and radio, they have tried to dodge the blame for inflation; to breed domestic and international ill-will and division; and to hide from the people the real facts of the smash-up toward which they are heading us.

★ ★ ★

WHAT ARE some signs of the coming smash?

While prices and profits continue to soar, the real wages of American factory workers have been cut 18% in little over a year.

Inflation has also cut the savings and purchasing power of the people generally. A few wealthy families have most of the country's savings, while most of the people have little more than a bare living.

Goods have been withheld from sale, or priced too high to sell, to a point where manufacturing inventories have risen to nearly $18 billion—which means $500 worth of goods in stock for each American family of four.

So stocks have crashed, as Wall Street gets jittery about insufficient mass purchasing power to buy goods at present prices, and at the prospects of a real smash when the domestic market collapses.

★ ★ ★

THIS SMASH will bring depression, unemployment and lower living standards to the American people. It will also spur big-business demands for a belligerent foreign policy to recoup domestic losses abroad, or through the still greater smash-up of another war.

It is therefore of the first importance to our people to check and reverse the present trends, before they reach the smash-up stage.

The CIO has long been pointing to the signs of dangers ahead. It calls for labor action to resist the exploitation of the monopolies, and for political activity to take control of the country from their hands and restore it to the people.

CIO SEES CONTROL OR OWNERSHIP

GOVERNMENT action to halt the domination of American life by giant business monopolies was demanded this week by the Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the CIO Research & Education Dept.

Serious consideration of public control either through more regulation or ownership may be necessary, the Outlook warned.

The Outlook lashed out at policies of the War Assets Administraton, which it said has turned over on a priority system large quantities of surplus goods and facilities to the largest corporations and helped bring about a situation where economic concentration has been "carried almost to the ultimate."

Regulation or ownership by the government is needed to curb monopoly power, the magazine said, in indorsing recent suggestions by Sen. Murray (D., Mont.) and Sen. Morse (R., Ore.). It declared:

"In the light of present economic tendencies, it may become necessary to give serious consideration to this suggestion that 'public control either through regulation or ownership' be explored as a means of curbing monopoly practices."

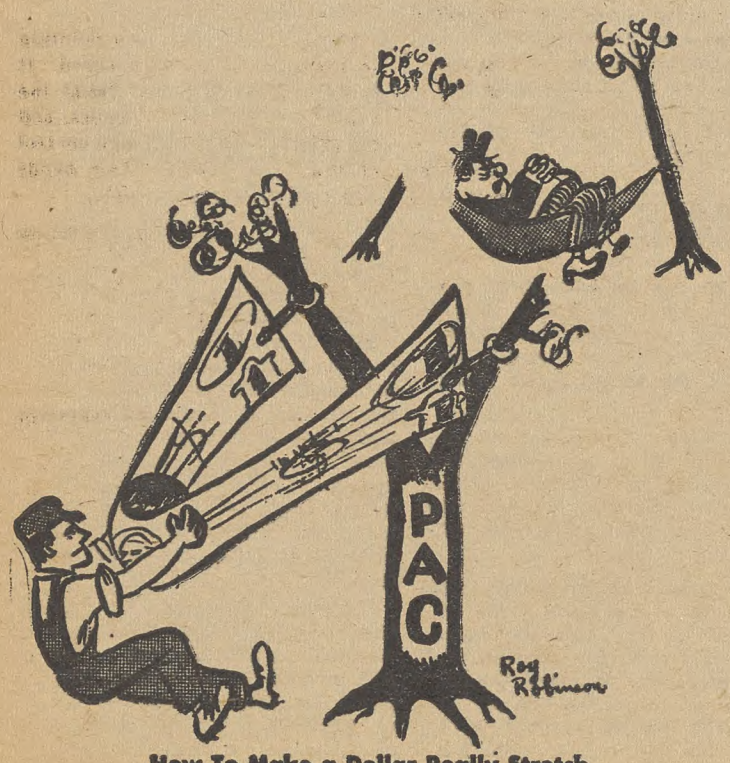
The "Big Five" which have gained overwhelming control of American industry, the Outlook charged, are the financial aggregations of the Morgan, Mellon, Rockefeller and duPont families, and the Cleveland banks. These, together with three other "money blocs"—the Kuhn-Loeb banking firm and Boston and Chicago banks, controlled 106 of the 250 largest manufacturing corporation in 1943-44, the publication said.

The Outlook, in its discussion of possible controls, warned that a government program "must contain specific steps to enable the nation to employ fully all of its labor force, utilize all of its productive facilities, and permit a great and more equitable distribution of our national income.

"Such steps should include: (1) more effective enforcement of our anti-trust laws; (2) financial and technical assistance for small business, including aid in scientific research; (3) elimination of cartels from the national and international scene, and (4) universal use of patent rights."

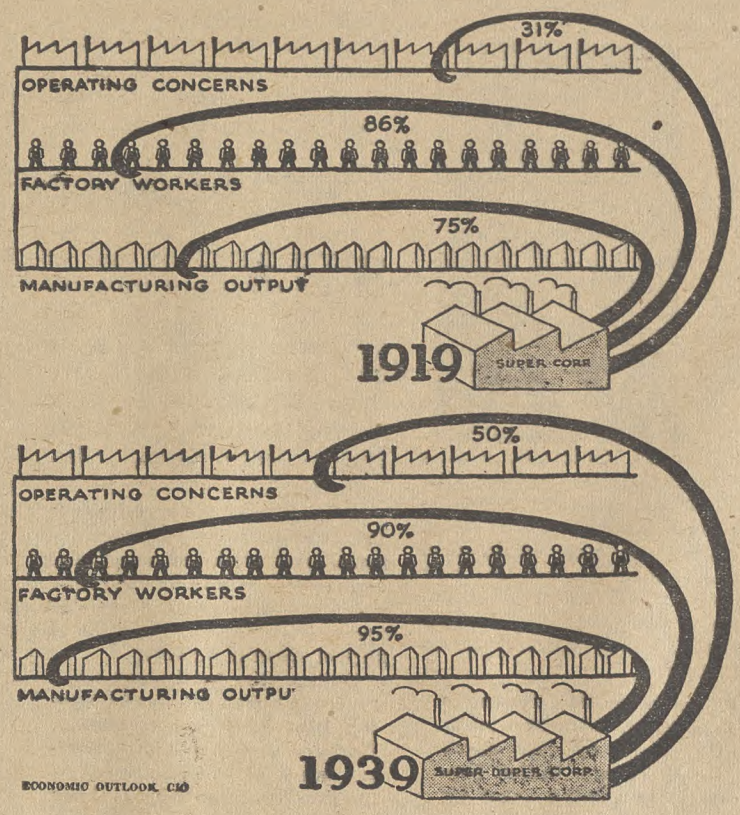
The CIO publication traced the course of the government's wartime contract-letting policies, through which 33 corporations received 51% of the values of all contracts, and charged that the biggest corporations are faring best in acquiring government surplus stocks and industrial facilities from the War Assets Administration.

"There is little doubt that the wartime operators are purchasing all of the government facilities which are worthwhile," the Outlook commented. "The independent producers have second and sometimes third choices. Government policy gives Big Business every advantage to buy, and Big Business is grabbing off the cream of the crop. The Senate Small Business Committee describes this economic concentration in the hands of the giants as 'alarming'."



How To Make a Dollar Really Stretch

THE GROWTH OF BIG BUSINESS



BANK PROFITS TOP 75-YEAR RECORD

By FEDERATED PRESS

CAPITALISM's most conservative helmsman, the U. S. banker, guided his streamlined craft through the financial seas in 1945 with enough skill to make a thumping profit in the race with other, more risky and speculative business entries.

Although national banks hoisted the championship banner with the highest net profit rate in 75 years, the men who control the banks on boards of directors were unwilling to cut in their shareholders. Cash dividends in 1945 were the lowest in proportion to net profit of any year in three quarters of a century.

Throughout the U. S. in 1945, not a single bank failure was recorded for the first time in many generations.

These facts were garnered Sept. 16 from the 162-page report of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. covering operations for the last calendar year.

A total of 13,494 of 14,725 banks in the U. S. were covered by FDIC during the year. The report covers only those banks that are insured.

The FDIC found that total current operating earnings of insured banks in 1945 was $2,482,000,000 or 12% more than in 1944, and 67% higher than 1935, which represented the low mark as the New Deal worked out of Hoover's depression.

Net earnings, the report observed, were also 12% above 1944, but exceeded the 1935 figure by a resounding 135%. Profits after taxes were $906 million or 21% above 1944.

Despite a decline in World War II of high income producing loans, such as consumer-installment loans and an increase in low-income producing loans such as U. S. government obligations, bank profits have swelled from income on securities. Whereas before the war with the Nazis, bankers got a third or less of their earnings from securities, this type of investment increased in significance throughout the period. In 1945 security income accounted for over half of total operating earnings for the first time.

FDIC found that for the period 1870-1945 national banks reported a net rate of profits of 7% of net worth. Throughout most of that time net profits fluctuated between 6 and 9% of net worth.

Net profits exceeded 9% in only 11 years prior to the current war period and four of these were in the years 1870-73. The only other period of sustained banking profits came in 1917-20, during and after World War I.

But in 1945, more than 55% of the FDIC insured banks reported over 10% net profit after taxes, compared to 51% in 1944 and 23% in 1938. Profits of 20% or more on total capital accounts were reported in 1945 by 6.5% of all insured banks, while profits of 15% to 19.9% were made by 14.2% of the banks, and 34.6% reported a profit range from 10 to 14.99% for the year.

GM Lyrics GOP Tune

VICE-PRES. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers this week said that a recent statement by C. E. Wilson, General Motors Corp. president, "sounded the opening gun in the Republican Party campaign to win the elections in November and turn the country over to the profit-hungry wolves of Wall Street."

"Wilson's ridiculous statement that sole and exclusive blame for low automobile production and low weekly wages for auto workers rests on the shoulders of the Administration," Thomas said, "is simply part of Old Guard Republican strategy to saddle the Administration with the responsibility for economic disruption when that responsibility rests with the NAM-Republican Party clique which dominates the economic and political life of the country."

Wilson's assertion that government controls have sabotaged auto production, Thomas said, is a complete distortion of the facts. "The fact is," Thomas stated, "that only ten months ago the leaders of the auto industry—including Mr. Wilson, himself—were telling us that the industry would be operating at full production by the middle of 1946 if only the government would keep its hands off reconversion.

"Well, the government caved in before the pressure of industry and did keep its hands off. Free Enterprise has had everything its own way—prices shot out of sight, controls were lifted, millions of dollars were taken from the U. S. Treasury in tax rebates. And still auto production is down.

"Mr. Wilson seems to be suffering from that peculiar disease which sooner or later seems to overcome all Republican leaders, the unfortunate habit of speaking out of both sides of the mouth at once. He cannot now blame the government for policies for which his own and other monopolies that dangle Congressmen like puppets from a string are responsible. They asked for the elimination of all controls, and they got their wish."

Thomas said that the decision to lift production controls resulted in a chaotic situation in the automobile industry.

C I O WINS BIG ATOM PLANT

WORKERS at the second largest atomic plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.—the Carbide & Chemical Corp.—this week voted for the CIO as its collective bargaining agent in a NLRB run - off election, despite the frenzied efforts of the AFL to paint the CIO red.

The vote was CIO 1918; AFL 1893. In the run-off the CIO picked up 489 additional votes, the AFL only 281. No union was also on the ballot in the first election late last month.

Employes at the largest Oak Ridge atomic plant preferred no union to the AFL in the run-off at Tennessee Eastman. The vote was no union 3120, an increase of 541; AFL 2503, an increase of 782. The CIO received 1531 votes in the August election, but under the rules of the board was not listed in the run-off ballots.

In the run-off the AFL won only the smallest plant — Monsanto Chemical—by 331 to CIO's 136.

PHELPS-DODGE STRIKE WON

SETTLEMENT of one of the oldest and most bitter strikes since V-J Day was announced this week by the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The strike involved 2,000 workers of the Phelps - Dodge Corp., Elizabeth, N. J.

Ratification of the agreement by the Phelps-Dodge workers climaxed five weeks of negotiating and ended a nine-month strike which was marked by large-scale use of strike-breakers and the injury of several strikers,

Hailing the settlement as a "smashing victory", James Lustig, Dist. 4 UE representative, disclosed that one of the principal terms of the agreement is the granting of an 18½c an hour general increase to all Phelps-Dodge workers.

In addition to the immediate increases, the union announced that the new contract gives the union an opportunity to reopen the wage question during the term of contract to preserve the wage level of workers against the rising tide of inflation.

Other gains won included retroactive pay averaging more than $150 for each employe, maintenance of membership and compulsory dues check off.

Phelps-Dodge veterans receive a special benefit under the new agreement which provides that all ex-servicemen returning to the shop before January 1947 will be entitled to full vacation pay for the 1946 season.

A thousand Phelps-Dodge workers in Fort Wayne, Ind; were also scheduled to meet this week to ratify terms of a similar agreement. Signing of the contracts for both plants will end the last UE strikes in the copper industry.

VERMONT CIO IUC MEETS

JOHN C. LAWSON, secretary-treasurer of the Vermont CIO Council, was elected president at the organization's fourth annual convention at Barre this week. Lawson's name was greeted with applause as it was placed in nomination by the retiring president, Anthony Jenkins.

Other officers elected are: Fred Hendy, first executive vice-president; Thomas Nealson, second executive vice-president, and Albert Burton, secretary-treasurer. Thirteen district vice-presidents also were elected. Officers were installed by John Brophy, national director of CIO Councils.

The 100 delegates recommended establishment of a statewide PAC and state rent control, urged the mayors of the state's principal cities to stop talking about the housing situation and do something about it, and condemned all efforts "to divide us on religion or political beliefs."

AFL FAILS TO DISRUPT UFWA

DESPITE the rantings and name-calling of a small gang of expelled disrupters who have tied in with the AFL Upholsterers' Union, the CIO Furniture Workers are sticking to their main task of organizing and improving working conditions in the shops.

In recent weeks the Furniture Workers have won NLRB elections in Paris, Tex.; Benton, Ark.; Memphis, Tenn.; Siler City, N. C.; Evansville, Ind.; Chicago, New York and San Francisco.

Contracts have been signed raising wages and improving working conditions for thousands of furniture workers in Los Angeles, N. Y. City, Mooresfield, W. Va.; Bay City, Mich.; Newark, N. J.; Hagerstown, Md., and other furniture centers.

In Thomasville, N. C., the Furniture Workers are condueting a strike of 1,200 workers for wage increases and other improvements against one of the most vicious anti-labor employers in the South.

Leaders of the Furniture Workers in N. Y. this week labeled the charge of "communist control" leveled at the union by the AFL Upholsterers as false.

They pointed out that the union's policies are determined by its membership and that the preamble to their constitution adopted in 1939 reads: "This organization will endeavor to unite all workers in our industry regardless of craft, age, nationality, race, creed or political belief. We will at all times observe a policy of rank and file control."

Aided and abetted by the anti-labor press, the AFL union claimed that thousands of members from the CIO union were fleeing to the AFL. Furniture Workers' leaders discounted these claims as greatly exaggerated and pointed out that they were made for the sole purpose of creating confusion. In Grand Rapids, where the AFL boasted of huge successes, a meeting of shop stewards repudiated the sell-outs of the disrupters.

N. Y. BARBERS VOTE STRIKE

Four thousand barbers and 500 Manicurists in N. Y. City have unanimously voted to strike September 16, after the Broadway Master Barbers Assn. has repeatedly rebuffed efforts to negotiate a new agreement.

The employers notified the CIO Barber & Beauty Culturists this week that there would be "not $1 more and not one hour less" in any new agreement. The employers refused to make any changes in the present contract which expires September 15 and which had run for the past five years.

The union seeks a 40-hour week; 30% base pay increase adjustment in commission arrangement whereby the take-home pay increase will approximate 15%; and a health and welfare fund to be obtained by a 3% levy on wages.

HAWAII STRIKERS MORALE HIGH

All Hawaii's sugar plantations are shut down 100% as the strike of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, to which the territory's sugar workers belong, entered its third week.

The strike against Hawaii's largest industry was called Sept. 1 when it became apparent to the union negotiations committee that the industry did not intend to make any real efforts to deal realistically or in good faith.

"The strikers' morale is high and they are prepared to stay out until the strike is won," declared ILWU Regional Director Hall.

CIO WINS 19 MORE DIXIE ELECTIONS

Victories in 19 more NLRB elections were reported by state directors of the CIO Organizing Committee this week.

"We have won 116 NLRB elections since our organizing drive in the South began late in May," Director Van A. Bittner of the Organizing Committee said.

"We now have pending with the NLRB a total of 198 petitions for certification. The campaign is beginning to pick up speed. Membership drives we started at industrial plants all over the South in June and July are now coming to a conclusion with the holding of NLRB elections. We recently have been winning about 10 elections for every one lost."

GUILD SEEKS $100 A WEEK

By WILBUR E. BADE

MORE than 100 representatives of locals of the CIO Newspaper Guild, meeting in St Louis this week, hammered out a wage program for 1947 calling for a minimum weekly wage of $100 for experienced reporters and similar key classifications, and a $50 minimum wage for adult employes in any newspaper department.

For wire service employes, because of the higher skill required and more exacting duties, the wage program seeks a top minimum of $110.

The Guild's bargaining program, originally drafted at the annual convention last June, calls for longer vacation periods, job security, and union security.

A strategy committee of top-ranking Guild negotiators and strategists was named to act in an advisory capacity during forthcoming contract parleys throughout the nation.

Delegates recommended that the Executive Board, meeting in connection with the wage parley, levy weekly assessments, if necessary, to assist Guildsmen on the picket line at the Herald Express in Los Angeles in a dispute involving also the current wage program.

FTA TO PROTEST CANNERY VOTE

The CIO Food & Tobacco Workers will file a formal protest against the NLRB election held Aug. 29-30 in which northern California cannery workers gave a plurality to the AFL Teamsters.

FTA Pres. Donald Henderson said the NLRB would be asked to withhold action on the basis of the election until the FTA protest has been received and acted on. "In only one of the 76 northern California canneries did management actually keep its hands off the election and not give illegal aid to the AFL," he said.

"In that plant, the Pacific Grape Co., in Modesto, the vote was 496 for FTA against 76 for AFL and 39 for no union. FTA would have had similar victories elsewhere, but for the management-Teamster collusion and terror."

These gobs appeared convinced of the justice of the demands of the CIO Office and Professional Workers, as two attractive union members hand them leaflets outside a N. Y. movie theater. Three thousand members of the union are in process of taking a vote to strike against Loew's-MGM, Columbia, Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Republic, Natl. Screen Service, Warner Bros., and Universal.

MORE PAY LIKELY FOR CIO SEAMEN

AS the CIO NEWS went to press there was every indication that alert and militant action by the CIO Natl. Maritime Union had won its members the same increases the government had granted AFL seamen this week.

The Maritime Commission's Labor Relations Director Godfrey Butler had gone to the commission with a recommendation that the CIO seamen be granted monthly increases of $10 on the East Coast and $5 on the West Coast, confident that his proposal would be approved.

Continuing the militant policy of his union, NMU Pres. Joseph Curran announced in New York that the union was "going to work on the picket lines" at least until "we get that (Godfrey's proposals) down in black and white with signatures."

NMU members were already on strike called out following meetings of the union's national council. They joined members of the independent Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers, which belong to the CIO Committee for Maritime Unity.

It was NMU's militant action that had won the original increases of $17.50 a month in June. The government and the ship owners knew that CIO seamen were well prepared for a strike and would win it.

The increase was granted without a picket line test of strength, such as the AFL seamen had to show this week until the government granted the $5-$10 increases which they had won through collective bargaining with the carriers.

The militant action of the CMU in observing the AFL seamen's picket line was doubtless a determining factor in causing the White House to rescind the Wage Board's decision not to grant the AFL unions the additional increases.

The CMU's support of unity paid off. CMU, meeting in N. Y. City, showed that it would continue that unity policy by supporting the likely walkout Sept. 30 of the Longshoremen's Union and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., both CIO.

POTOFSKY SCORES DRIVE FOR WAR

NATIVE fascists and former isolationists are seeking to destroy the heritage of President Roosevelt and drive the U. S. into war, Jacob Potofsky, president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, charged this week.

The warning accompanied his presentation of a medal posthumously to the late Chief Executive on behalf of the N. Y. State CIO Council, in convention at Lake Placid.

Potofsky said these forces have rejected the Roosevelt policy of Big Three unity and are stirring up a campaign of hatred and prejudice against the Soviet Union.

Unless we return to the Roosevelt policy, international rivalry and conflict will lead inevitably to war, Potofsky declared.

The Amalgamated leader said FDR had looked forward to "a peace built from a community of nations and resting on the solid bedrock of close friendship, collaboration and understanding among the three great wartime allies, the U. S., Great Britain and the Soviet Union."

"He visioned it as a peace based upon the abolition of imperialism and the exploitation of weaker peoples, a peace based upon the right of all men everywhere to determine their own way of life," Potofsky said.

"Franklin Roosevelt sought to use the great power of America on behalf of the common people of the world. Today his enemies and ours are attempting to use that power to win world domination for themselves.

"They are our native fascists and former isolationists and appeasers. They never really supported our war effort. They never wanted the complete and final liquidation of fascism.

"They would have our nation give support to the forces of reaction in Europe and Asia in an effort to put down the rising people's movement which the victory over fascism unloosed throughout the world.

"Abandoning the Roosevelt policy of Big Three unity, they are stirring up a campaign of hatred and prejudice against the Soviet Union.

"Let there be no mistake. Unless the enemies of the people are defeated and we return to the Roosevelt policy, there can be no stable or lasting peace, but only international rivalry and conflict which will end inevitably in war."

$48 MILLION FOR MINE-MILL

NEARLY 600 delegates from all parts of the U. S. and Canada will meet Sept. 16 in Cleveland to open the 42nd convention of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

Among the delegates will be members from the far reaches of northwest Canada and the Yukon, and from the deep South.

Since V-J Day, MMSW officials pointed out, the union has won wage increases totaling $48 million for its membership. The increases have been wrested from the giant corporations controlling the nation's supply of copper and from all sections of the metal mining, refining and fabricating industry.

A 10-point program formulated by Pres. Reid Robinson and the union's executive board and widely distributed throughout the union for pre-convention discussion is expected to be the focal point of the convention's decisions on important issues to be tackled by the delegates.

ASKS U. S. RUN MEAT INDUSTRY

By NORMAN DOLNICK

OPERATION of the packing plants as a public utility was demanded by the CIO Packinghouse Workers so that the people can be protected against the greed of the big packers and that packinghouse workers can be assured full employment at the packing plants.

In a statement which reiterated the union's position that price control must be retained on meats, Pres. Ralph Helstein of the UPWA asserted that the operation of the plants as a public utility would check the abuse of economic power by the packers against the best interests of the people.

Helstein noted that in the packers' renewed drive against price control thousands of packinghouse workers from all sections of the country have been laid off.

The UPWA is now negotiating with the packers for a guaranteed annual wage, $1 an hour minimum wage and a cost of living bonus.

"Had a guaranteed wage plan been in effect in the past year the packers would not have gone on their sit-down strike against OPA and we would not now be faced with a meat shortage and unemployment at the packing plants," Helstein declared.

As a further measure to draw the reins on the packers, the union demanded that Congress set up a committee of responsible citizens to investigate the causes of the current meat shortage and determine to what extent the packers are responsible for the present crisis.

WOODWORKERS LOOK SOUTH

STEPPING up of the CIO Woodworkers' participation in the Southern organizing drive was urged at the union's tenth convention in Portland, Oreg., this week when the 300 delegates called on the international officers to visit Dixie locals.

Other resolutions supported the candidacy of Rep. Charles Savage D. Wash.), an IWA member, for re-election; urged the U. S. to break with the Franco regime in Spain; and backed the WFTU in its efforts to obtain participation in UNO.

Savage told the delegates that the Republican party is completely dominated by reactionary interests and that Republican liberals in Congress are being purged as rapidly as possible.

Asst. Sec. of Labor John W. Gibson urged the union to carry on the safety program initiated by its late president, Worth Lowery, to curb the accidents in the lumber industry which he said caused an average of 24 days' disablement in every six months' employment of every worker. He placed the chief responsibility for safety on employers.

CIO GREETS BREWERY UNION

DELEGATES to the 29th convention of the Brewery Workers at Galveston, Tex., this week heard CIO Intl. Rep. Adolph Germer welcome them into the CIO and pledge them full aid, "no matter from what direction the attacks might come."

The convention cheered and applauded Germer's biting attack on the AFL from which the brewery union withdrew after a long-standing jurisdictional dispute. The union joined the CIO in July. Appearing as the personal representative of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Germer said:

"There is life in the CIO. We are happy to welcome the brewery workers union, which pioneered the industrial type of union which is the basis for the CIO."

Resolutions permitting locals to include health, accident and life insurance features in their new contracts and establishing seniority rights for older workers were approved. Delegates voted down a resolution to amend the constitution whereby a simple majority vote instead of a two-thirds vote of a local's membership could authorize a strike.

LABOR MEDICAL CARE PROJECT

Formation of a committee to be known as the Labor Project for Medical Care was announced this week by Harry Becker, president of Group Health Assn. in Washington, D. C. Function of the committee will be to serve both labor and management in promoting, establishing and maintaining pre-paymet medical care plans throughout the country.

The committee itself is part of the Cooperative Health Federation which Becker heads. Members of the Federation's Board of Directors include CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Nelson A. Cruickshank, AFL Social Security Director.

KROLL ON THIRD PARTY

WHILE warning against premature dumping of the two-party system, Director Jack Kroll of CIO-PAC this week told the eighth annual Ohio CIO convention in Columbus that "when the time is right, independent political action by labor will be on the agenda of the national CIO and PAC."

Demand for immediate formation of "labor's own party" was raised by two delegates and ruled out of order by Kroll. "An independent party is a fine and outstanding theory and is in the minds of the CIO leaders," he observed. But to avoid "premature action and failure which would set us back many years politically," he said, "we have been attempting to get practical experience in the political field and educate our members in politics first."

Kroll, who is also president of the Ohio CIO Council, was re-elected to his post along with Sec.-Treas. William Lavelle. Nine new members were elected to the state executive board.

SAFETY FOR YOUR CHILDREN

As they start off for school, it's well to be sure your children know their father's full name, their home address and telephone number. Teach them how to cross streets carefully, looking both ways. Telling them isn't enough. Practice crossing with them, letting them conduct you across until you're sure they will not run from behind parked vehicles or dart across in haste for fear of being tardy. If you've used the policeman as a threat, don't be afraid to eat your words. Let them know the policeman is a friend ever willing to help.

I C-A-N-T E-A-T M-E-A-T

Say it slowly: "I c-a-n-'-t e-a-t m-e-a-t." Get used to it, because due to action by the Dept. of Agriculture, OPA is forced to raise retail meat prices again.

The breakdown of price increases—Pork: Average raise for all cuts 4c a pound. Beef: Average raise 3c a pound. Raise in top cuts will average 8c. Lamb and mutton: Lamb cuts jump 10c and mutton cuts 4c on pound. Veal: To remain unchanged.

Say it once more: "I c-a-n-'-t e-a-t m-e-a-t" and add to it, "because Congress kicked hell out of OPA."

'BREAK HOUSING JINX'—THOMAS

R. J. THOMAS, chairman of the CIO Committee on Housing and Community Development, this week called on Wilson Wyatt, housing expediter, to use his powers to assist builders to "take housing out of the ox-cart stage into the airplane age."

Speaking to 6,000 veterans and their families at a rally in Philadelphia called to "break the jinx on housing", Thomas urged immediate passage of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing Bill. He also asked for effective government action to assure mass production of low-cost housing and the development of modern housing technology.

"The housing jinx", said Thomas, "is the baby of the phoney friends of free enterprise —the mortgage bankers, real estate agents, black market builders, and property holders who have a big stake in keeping housing old-fashioned, scarce and expensive."

The "CIO housing program," Thomas said, "would replace America's slums with decent housing inside of ten years, whereas at its present pace slums clearance will not be complete inside 100 years.

"The time has arrived for a showdown on housing," the CIO leader declared. The demand for homes for veterans is now so desperate that the nation no longer dares shilly-shally or temporize with methods that have proved their incompetence. Bold steps to produce industrial housing are the only way for providing veterans with decent homes."

Stating that the CIO plan of 1,500,000 housing units a year, also scheduled in the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill, was a conservative program, Thomas also charged that the enemies of the bill were placing serfish personal profit about the nation's responsibility to assure decent homes for veterans.

In keeping with the belief that organized labor has a definite responsibility to become an integral force in community betterment," the CIO Transport Service Employes gave a number of under-privileged city kids an enjoyable two weeks at a summer camp in Indiana. YOUR CONGRESSMAN—WHAT MAKES HIM TICK?

By IRVING RICHTER

Reprinted From Reader's Scope Magazine

CARTOONISTS have amused us for years with caricatures of the "Typical Congressman," in his string tie, broad black hat, and William Jennings Bryan haircut. But they have created a little man who isn't there. For there is no more a "Typical Congressman" than there is a "Typical American."

Their very names testify to the accuracy with which Congress reflects our melting pot of peoples.

While there are five Smiths and five Thomases in the 79th Congress, your congressman may be Kelly, Sadowsky, Bloom, Domengeaux, Fernandez, Andersen, Marcantonio, Welch or any other in the proud catalogue of American patronyms.

Ten are Polish Americans. Two are Negroes. There are Catholics and Protestants and nonbelievers.

ALTHOUGH our "Typical Congressman" is a fiction, there are some observations which can be made of most—but not all—of them. In the House he will be from 40 to 45 years old. When he reaches the Senate he will be hovering at 60.

Your congressman is likely to be a little above average intelligence, with a little more experience in politics than the people who vote for him.

He's been an active party worker in ward and precinct, and a frequent delegate to caucus and convention.

If he sits in the House, he looks forward to a seat in the Senate. If he already wears the toga he might aspire to the presidency, or the Supreme Court bench. But, as like as not, he wants nothing more than to remain where he is for several terms and accumulate prestige and power with his years.

He is a joiner and he goes to church. He'll take a drink, and sit in an occasional game of two-bit-limit poker. He likes to sit in a box at the Army-Navy game, the World Series and championship fights. And he goes to a lot of funerals.

Quite justly, your servant in Washington will complain that his $10,000 salary provides far too little take-home pay. He must, perforce, maintain two residences.

The nature of his job demands certain unavoidable entertaining, which in Washington is expensive. He makes frequent use of the long-distance telephone and cable, which he pays for.

If he comes from a nearby district — Virginia, Maryland, New York, Philadelphia — he lives in a hotel and goes home week ends. Otherwise he keeps a small house or apartment and has his family with him. He owns a medium-priced car which he drives himself.

WHETHER his district is just across the Potomac or in the Pacific Northwest, your congressman makes it a point to get home whenever he can.

Every veteran on the Hill is a man who keeps his ear to the ground, and moves quickly to protect his political interests back home when they are threatened.

An example is to be found in Clare Hoffman, who for ten years has voted steadily against the interests of every major group in his district.

By holding court at least once a year on the Main Streets and Courthouse Squares in his district, getting the "home-town touch," and doing little favors, he seems able to overcome a record distinguished by its open association with fascist bodies and their leaders.

Key figure in a congressman's tiny circle of co-workers is his chief secretary. This virtuoso of the political strings is selected not for his speed at shorthand, but for his "know-how" with the voters. Usually a man, he has a "feel" for the district. He understands its anatomy and its nervous system.

THERE's plenty of work, hard work, done on the Hill. It falls into four parts. First, but not the most telling, is participation in the daily drudging routine, only occasionally brightened by fireworks on the floor of House and Senate.

Second is the handling of callers and interviews in the office, and the highly important work on committee problms, involving patient study and hearings to penetrate a smoke-screen of fact and special interest.

Third, is the unavoidable round of dealings with administrative agencies. For your congressman is not only your representative in the making of laws, but your ambassador as well in the Capital.

Finally, there are the ceaseless tasks of election. No sooner are the votes counted one November than the work of building another victory two years later must begin.

Homework is heavy. To keep abreast of pending measures, many of them fiercely complex, and to keep in touch with developments at home and abroad, these legislators of ours put in long days.

Those men with businesses at home will keep them up, at least for the first few years, as a form of insurance against defeat.

Very few members consciously use their political positions to advance their personal fortunes. But most members, because of their backgrounds and experience are instinctively more sensitive to the wishes of the dominant business men back home than to any other group in the district he represents.

Unfortunately, some gentlemen on the Hill are taken in by the artificialities of Washington life. Washington is a long way from home in many ways, even though home is just over the District lines.

It becomes easier to play cards and sip juleps with the Southern bourbons, or simply to pretend they don't exist than to oppose them on the floor, in the cloakroom or in the all-important committee sessions.

There are a few who come to glory in palace intrigues, and in the favor of the smooth and well-heeled lobbyists. Their time and the energies of their staffs are devoted to problems of patronage and the social swim.

This is commonest among men elected under poll-tax laws, for a handful of votes will send them back year after year. Neglect spells suicide to representatives from states where suffrage is universal.

These members cover their negligence by various devices. Canned speeches on communism, bureaucracy, Americanism are always safe topics. Washington seethes with business-financed lobbyists who have such speeches ready-made or can produce them tailor-made for any district.

No oratory is necessary to get these speeches into the Congressional Record. The congressman simply has it inserted under "Extension of Remarks" and, at little cost, has reprints made. He then blankets his district with franked (postage free) copies.

Some members turn their franked envelopes over to the lobbyists and let them do the mailing. "Blackmail", Henry Hoke's sensational book, is a detailed account of the use Nazi agents made of such congressmen and their franks.

Heavy reliance on free Government publications is another lazy way of keeping in touch with constituents.

A country newspaper publisher a few years back editorially called his congressman "The Old Seed Sender" because he habitually circulated rural box holders in his district with offers of free literature.

Find a man who wishes to make a real career on the Hill as an active representative of his people and you'll find a man who not only welcomes visits and counsel from the voters but who actually encourages their help.

He likes to get mail. He may, like Senator Kilgore of West Virginia and Representative Koppleman of Connecticut, use the recording equipment in the Capitol and mail weekly talks home for local broadcast, concluding each with an appeal to let him know what the voters are thinking on the subject.

MOST letters from congressmen are not actually dictated by them. On most questions the secretary, familiar with The Boss's views, writes a suitable reply for his signature.

His office is alert for birth announcements and sends the new parents Labor Department pamphlets on child care.

Vigorously he fights to have Federal funds allotted in his district for post offices, veterans' hospitals, public roads. He will be open and fair, but politically careful, in making his appointments to West Point and Annapolis.

In the last analysis, there is one thing common to everybody on the Hill: he wants votes. An unregistered voter packs as much weight in a congressman's office as an unarmed soldier on the field of battle. Ballots are the bullets of politics.

IT'S A LIE!

By MARTY SOLOW

CARROLL REECE, Chairman of the Republican Natl. Committee, in a radio address over CBS on Sept. 10, referred to the "Political Action Committee with its boasted $6 million slush fund."

MR. REECE IS A LIAR! PAC has NOT "boasted" of a $6 million slush fund, nor does it have anywhere near such a fund at its disposal. Several weeks ago, PAC's Director Jack Kroll did announce a drive to raise a $1 million "war chest."

(Inflation comes naturally with Republicans who helped actively to sabotage strong price control, thus releasing inflationary forces.)

GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN, Hearst calumnist, wrote recently of the CIO's Southern Organizing Drive that, "The CIO has boldly proclaimed its purpose to take over political control south of the Potomac and Ohio rivers."

IT'S A LIE! Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO's campaign in the South, declared on May 3. "We have one objective—just one—and that is to organize all the unorganized men and women of the South into unions of the CIO for collective bargaining for higher wages and better working conditions."

Westbrook Pegler, America's "stuck-whistle," says, ". . . . . ."

IT'S A LIE!

★ ★ ★

LAST WEEK we wrote an item on the slickly-edited, slickly-written clip sheet, Industrial Press Service, which the NAM graciously distributes to thousands of editors. We called attention to the clip-sheet's use of the outright lie and the half truth to peddle the NAM propaganda line. Here are more samples of humbug from the NAM's Industrial Press Service:

August 12: "American families making $5,000 or less per year hold 64% of the nation's total savings or other liquid assets."

HUMBUG! NAM propaganda tries hard to make it appear that American wealth is widely and equitably distributed. But a Natl. Survey of Liquid Assets published by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board shows that 50% of the people who make less than $2,000 own only 3% of the aggregate liquid assets in the country while the top 20% own "77% of all liquid assets."

★ ★ ★

August 19: NAM story headlined "GOVT. PROPAGANDA MILL COSTS PUBLIC $75 MILLION A YEAR." Story indicates that this money is being spent to "sell" government policies and programs to the people.

MORE HUMBUG! Budget Bureau figures show that part of above funds are spent for various information services, for OPA price sheets, for advice to farmers, mothers, etc.

★ ★ ★

August 5: "People in all walks of life—and a great many of them at that—own America's great corporations."—NAM.

STILL MORE HUMBUG! Corporations are controlled by tightly knit groups. Senate report on ECONOMIC CONCENTRATION AND WORLD WAR II shows that only 10,000 persons own 25% of all corporate stock and only 75,000 own 50% of all stock. Three family groups—the DuPonts, Mellons and Rockefellers—have shareholdings valued at $1.5 billion which directly or indirectly give control over 15 of largest 200 cooperations.

The report states that: "The relatively few giant corporations of the country which have come to dominate our entire economy, are themselves largely owned by a few thousand stockholders and by a mere handful of huge financial interests."

Who called that NAM swindle-sheet a clip-sheet?

KROLL WARNS OF WAR

"WHETHER we are going to send our boys again to war, depends on what we do between now and Nov. 5," warned CIO-PAC Director Jack Kroll in an address this week to 300 shop stewards and union officials in Minneapolis, Minn. The parley marked the first of PAC's "key-city" meetings to map campaign strategy for the coming elections.

Kroll declared that the people of America, exhausted by the intensity, the privations and personal losses of the war, have not fully awakened to the danger that faces them in the well-planned drive of reaction to get us into another war.

The PAC head stressed the necessity for labor to spur the people to a realization of the dangers and activize them politically in the weeks before election.

Immediate objectives emphasized by Kroll during his address were the raising of funds for PAC participation in the elections and getting out the vote.

The 300 men and women at the meeting pledged to step up political action activities.

Kroll, Fullerton Fulton, CIO regional director; John M. Jacobsen, regional PAC director, and William Mauseth, state PAC director, all pointed out that Congress had robbed the workers of their gains and will rob them still further unless its composition is drastically changed. Kroll called the 79th Congress the most reactionary in our history and "a disgrace to America."

The Minnesota PAC set a goal of $2 per member so that it can "actively participate in the campaign of the Democratic-Farmer Labor Party and at the same time use part of that $2 for Congressional campaign by local councils."

A LOOK AT THE BOOKS

FOOD NOW OR COFFINS LATER, the grim title of a 32-page, power-packed pamphlet by Charles J. Coe, puts the problem of feeding the world in its clearest form.

The pamphlet is a sharp indictment of U. S. officialdom which refused to draw up an over-all plan to insure a fair and equitable distribution of our food supply at home and abroad.

Coe exposes the role of Herbert Hoover, who on the one hand portrayed the food crisis as so gigantic that no solution was possible, and on the other minimized it by opposing food rationing and price control.

The story of Hoover's use of food as a political weapon after World War I is retold by Coe with the warning that the Republican ex-President is playing the same game today.

He tells why UNRRA is being abandoned, why LaGuardia is being so violently attacked, and of the inhuman stories used in certain newspapers to keep food shipments from going abroad.

"We must insist," he writes, "that profit-minded politics be kicked out of the food problem, that there should be an equitable distribution of food, and that nations keep their promises."

Coe also makes the charge that current food policies are in line with the drive of American imperialism for a new world war and he calls for a national and international program to stop the march of war as well as for the establishment of a "people's peace." You can get the pamphlet from Farm Research, Inc., 39 Cortlandt St., N. Y. 7, N. Y.

★ ★ ★

RECENT IMPORT from England is a short book called ANIMAL FARM by English critic and writer George Orwell.

The book purports to be a satire of the Soviet Union's collective way of life. It fails as satire, inasmuch as its portrait of the collective society achieved by the beasts of "Animal Farm" in no way approximates, the realities of Russian history.

The story has been called neither "witty" nor "amusing" by N. Y. Times critic Orville Prescott. He hit the nail on the head.

JUST OFF the presses is a new pamphlet entitled CMU LOOKS AHEAD, which outlines the work of the CIO Committee for Maritime Unity thus far and its work in the coming period.

What happened behind the scenes of the June 15 wage struggle is told in full. The pamphlet tells how the unions were able to win through to a victorious settlement despite bitter opposition from government and shipowners.

The pamphlet also touches on the record of the shipowners, and on the facts now beginning to come to light about the "disappearance" of $8 billion from the U. S. Treasury as the result of "cooperation" between the War Shipping Administration and the shipowners.

Copies of the attractive 32-page pamphlet may be obtained by writing to the CMU office at 604 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Calif.

perialism anywhere in the world."

Kroll also stressed the Roosevelt policy of "unity to win the peace," saying that "someone—in our State Dept. probably—has thrown that out of the window.

"We want peace, we're tired of war, we don't want a third world war, an atomic war," he said. "We should say to our State Dept., to the people who are handling our international affairs, that we don't want war."

Calling for increased political activity to elect progressives to Congress, Kroll warned that "everything we gain on the picket lines can be taken away in the legislative halls."

The convention adopted a strong resolution in support of the PAC and its policies, and urging all-out political action in the coming elections, and thereafter, to "lay the basis for a real people's party in 1948, in case the Democratic and Republican parties fail to respond to the will of the people."

Special resolutions were passed praising the CIO leadership of President Murray, paying tribute to Sidney Hillman, and calling for a return to the domestic and foreign policies of the late President Roosevelt.

SCORE VICTORY

A precedent-making victory has been won on the largest transit lines in the world, by the CIO Transport Workers with the publication this week of the report of Mayor O'Dwyer's Advisory Transit Committee in N. Y. City.

The report recommends a 20c-an-hour across-the-board increase for the hourly paid operating employes of the subway-trolleys, and buses of the N. Y. City Board of Transportation. The increases total almost $18 million a year. The report also recommends substantially the collective bargaining machinery sought for six long bitter years by the TWU.

The 32,060 employes of the Board are civil service workers. The TWU victory will pave the way not only for new gains for transit workers but also for civil service workers in general.

The committee decided that the Board of Transportation has the power to engage in collective bargaining, and that majority representation should exist. To determine the choice of the employes, a secret ballot election to be held by the N. Y. State Labor Relations Board was recommended.

FOUR MORE PAC WINS

CIO-PAC endorsed candidates chalked up four more victories in Colorado, Louisiana and Maine last week as nominations in all states except Connecticut came to a close.

In addition, U. S. Solicitor General J. Howard McGrath, supported by labor, won the Democratic nomination in Rhode Island to fill the vacancy created by Sen. Peter Gerry. Gerry's failure to seek re-election was credited to labor opposition.

In Colorado, PAC endorsed Lee Knous, candidate for the gubernatorial Democratic nomination, won by a total that largely exceeded that garnered by Leon Lovington, who will be Knous' Republican opponent in November.

PAC in Colorado's first district won another victory. Former District Attorney John A. Carroll defeated Thomas W. Nevin for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Representative. Carroll will have a chance to unseat Rep. Dean Gillespie, Republican, in November.

Further effects of CIO Political Action Committee activity in the South were noted in Louisiana this week as T. Hale Boggs, CIO-supported, gained the Congressional nomination over five candidates in the second district Democratic primary. Boggs, whose election in this one-party state is assured, replaces Paul H. Maloney, who has a straight anti-labor record.

Embellished by an all-progressive voting record Rep. Margaret Smith, Republican who ran with the blessings of CIO-PAC, defeated her Democratic opponent, Edward J. Beauchamp, for the Congressional seat in Maine's second district. Maine is the only state in the union which holds its general elections in September instead of the customary second Tuesday in November.

One of the most significant battles in the East will be the state Democratic convention in Connecticut this week, which will have to choose between former Office of Price Adminstration head, Chester Bowles, Lieut. Gov. Wilbert Snow and Thomas J. Dodd, U. S. prosecuting attorney in the Nuremberg war-guilt trials, for the gubernatorial nomination.

Speculators are placing their chips on Bowles, whose dogged defense of effective price controls endeared him to the small and medium wage earners.

The Connecticut convention will also select a senatorial nominee to run against Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, the Republican candidate, as well as six Congressional candidates. One of these, if elected, will occupy the chair of Rep. Clare B. Luce, who has announced her retirement from politics.

Urge Congress Go

BACK TO WORK IN WASHINGTON

President Truman this week was urged to call Congress into special session immediately, by Harold Ickes, executive chairman, Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences & Professions; Jack Kroll, director, CIO Political Action Committee; and Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman, Citizens PAC.

In an open letter addressed to Truman, they recommended a four-fold legislative program to meet the "national emergency."

The three leaders challenged Truman's recent denial that an emergency exists by citing "the skyrocketing prices of basic commodities, the threat of a meat famine, the more than a million unhoused war veterans, the unchecked spread of lynch terror and the plight of hundreds of thousands of Europe's Jews in need of asylum."

Stating that "the best political campaign congressmen can make is to return to Washington at once to enact a legislative program that their constituents need, understand and appreciate," Ickes, Kroll and Kingdon called for enactment of a price control law that will work, meat rationing, the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill, a Federal Civil Rights bill and the lifting of immigration barriers to Europe's homeless Jews.

WORLD PEACE

pire nor purchasing oil in the Near East with the lives of American soldiers."

"Under peaceful, friendly competition the Russian world and the American world will gradually become more alike," Wallace said. "The Russians will be forced to grant more and more of the personal freedoms; and we shall become more and more absorbed with the problems of social-economic justice."

THE MEETING also heard Director Jack Kroll of the CIO Political Action Committee declare that the forces of reaction, on a rampage, "are talking war even before the peace treaties have been agreed upon."

"Roosevelt is gone," Kroll said. "His constructive program of action on the international and the domestic fronts is the heritage he left us. It is our duty and our privilege to fight for the success of that program.

"We must work to elect candidates who are fully aware of all those problems. We can have peace and we can have a more abundant life. But we will get neither under the leadership of the Old Guard reactionaries of both parties."

Calling on all progressive forces to get out a big vote in November, the meeting adopted resolutions urging the election of Sen. James M. Mead and former Gov. Herbert M. Lehman respectively for Governor and U. S. Senator.

The rally also asked President Truman to call a special session of Congress to pass legislation reinforcing price control, providing housing and outlawing lynching, and for relief of refugee Jews in Europe.

DU PONTS TRY TO LAY 'BAD EGG' IN DELAWARE

TOP billing on the 1946 Republican marquee in Delaware has been handed to John Williams, a poultry farmer whom no one seems to know, but who nonetheless is running for Senator against popular Sen. James M. Tunnell, Democrat, who has solid labor backing.

Whether Williams' chickens are any better than Sen. Tunnell's—who is also in that business—is anybody's guess, but one thing is certain: "Republican" in Delaware is synonymous with "DuPont," and any man who plays GOP politics in the state does so in time to the DuPont fiddle.

The DuPonts' determination to get Sen. Tunnell out of the Senate is understandable. America's "royalty" would scarcely feel amiable toward a man who had fought for labor's right to organize unmolested, worked toward elevation of workers' living standards by sponsorship of the 65c Minimum Wage Bill, and stood firm for workable price controls to stem the inflationary tide. They would hardly approve of a man whose sole consideration was that of the little people in back of him instead of the industrial magnates.

One of the wealthiest families in the country, with holdings in twenty states—not to mention foreign alliances—the DuPonts are number one Santa Claus to the GOP and have placed members of their family or officers of their enterprises in key political posts throughout the nation.

In Delaware, seat of their activity, they have a field day so far as political office-holding goes. Recognized as boss of the state GOP committee is Francis V. (Frank) DuPont, a director of the Equitable Trust Co., one of the three DuPont banks in Wilmington.

The DuPonts usually keep the two Republican National Committeemen posts in the "family." These are at present Harold Schutt, son-in-law of Irenee DuPont, and Mrs. Frank G. Tallman, whose husband was vice-president of E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Co.

Running true to form, governor of the state, Walter W. Bacon, used to head one of the departments of E. I. DuPont de Nemours. For 12 years he has been treasurer of the Buick Co., constituent of General Motors Corp., of which the DuPonts own controlling interest.

The DuPont ties to the Republican hierarchy in Delaware extend even further to include one of the Senatorships. Senator Clayton D. Buck, not up for re-election this year, is married to Alice DuPont Wilson.

Buck's record in the Senate, of course, is right down the DuPont line—anti-labor, isolationist, opposed to price controls. In direct contrast is the five-star performance of Sen. Tunnell, who can boast of never having cast a vote against the people.

For a family which practically dominates one of America's political parties, the DuPonts have an amazing record of "un-American" activity.

At this moment three anti-trust suits are pending against them by the U. S. Justice Dept., two involving cartel agreements with German firms largely responsible for the rise of Nazism.

One case is directed against the chemicals cartel comprised of E. I. DuPont de Nemours, the German I. G. Farbenindustrie and the British Imperial Chemical Industry. Another names E. L. DuPont de Nemours and Natl. Lead for monopolistic practices in titanium, which is used in paints. The third case hits at the cartel practices of E. I. DuPont de Nemours and the German Roehm and Haas Co.

Scruples have never been a deterrent to DuPont labor-busting activity. A DuPont toy, General Motors spent one million dollars for industrial spies to halt unionization in the 1933-36 period and another $30,000 went to the Natl. Metal Trades Assn., a subsidiary of the NAM, whose business it was to act as a sort of central hiring agency for spies and strikebreakers. Tear gas expense in those years totaled close to $25,000.

Such fanatically labor-hating groups as the American Liberty League, the Crusaders, the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution (which Georgia's Gov. Eugene Talmadge saw fit to entertain some years back) all had DuPont backing.

It is hardly likely that Candidate Williams would ever run afoul of his party's largest contributor's political tenets. From the DuPonts to the Republican party in 1944 came a neat gift of $109,832.83, further enhanced by contributions totaling over $77,000 from directors and officers of the E. I. DuPont de Nemours Co.

Lamott DuPont's statement before the NAM in 1942 should serve as a guide to the ends toward which Williams would direct his energies should he gain a seat in the Senate this year:

"We will win the war by reducing taxes on corporations, high income brackets and increasing taxes on lower incomes, by removing unions from any power to tell industry how to produce . . . by destroying any and all government agencies that stand in the way of free enterprise."

Some contrast to the program of Democratic Sen. Tunnell, who has only the little people to answer to!

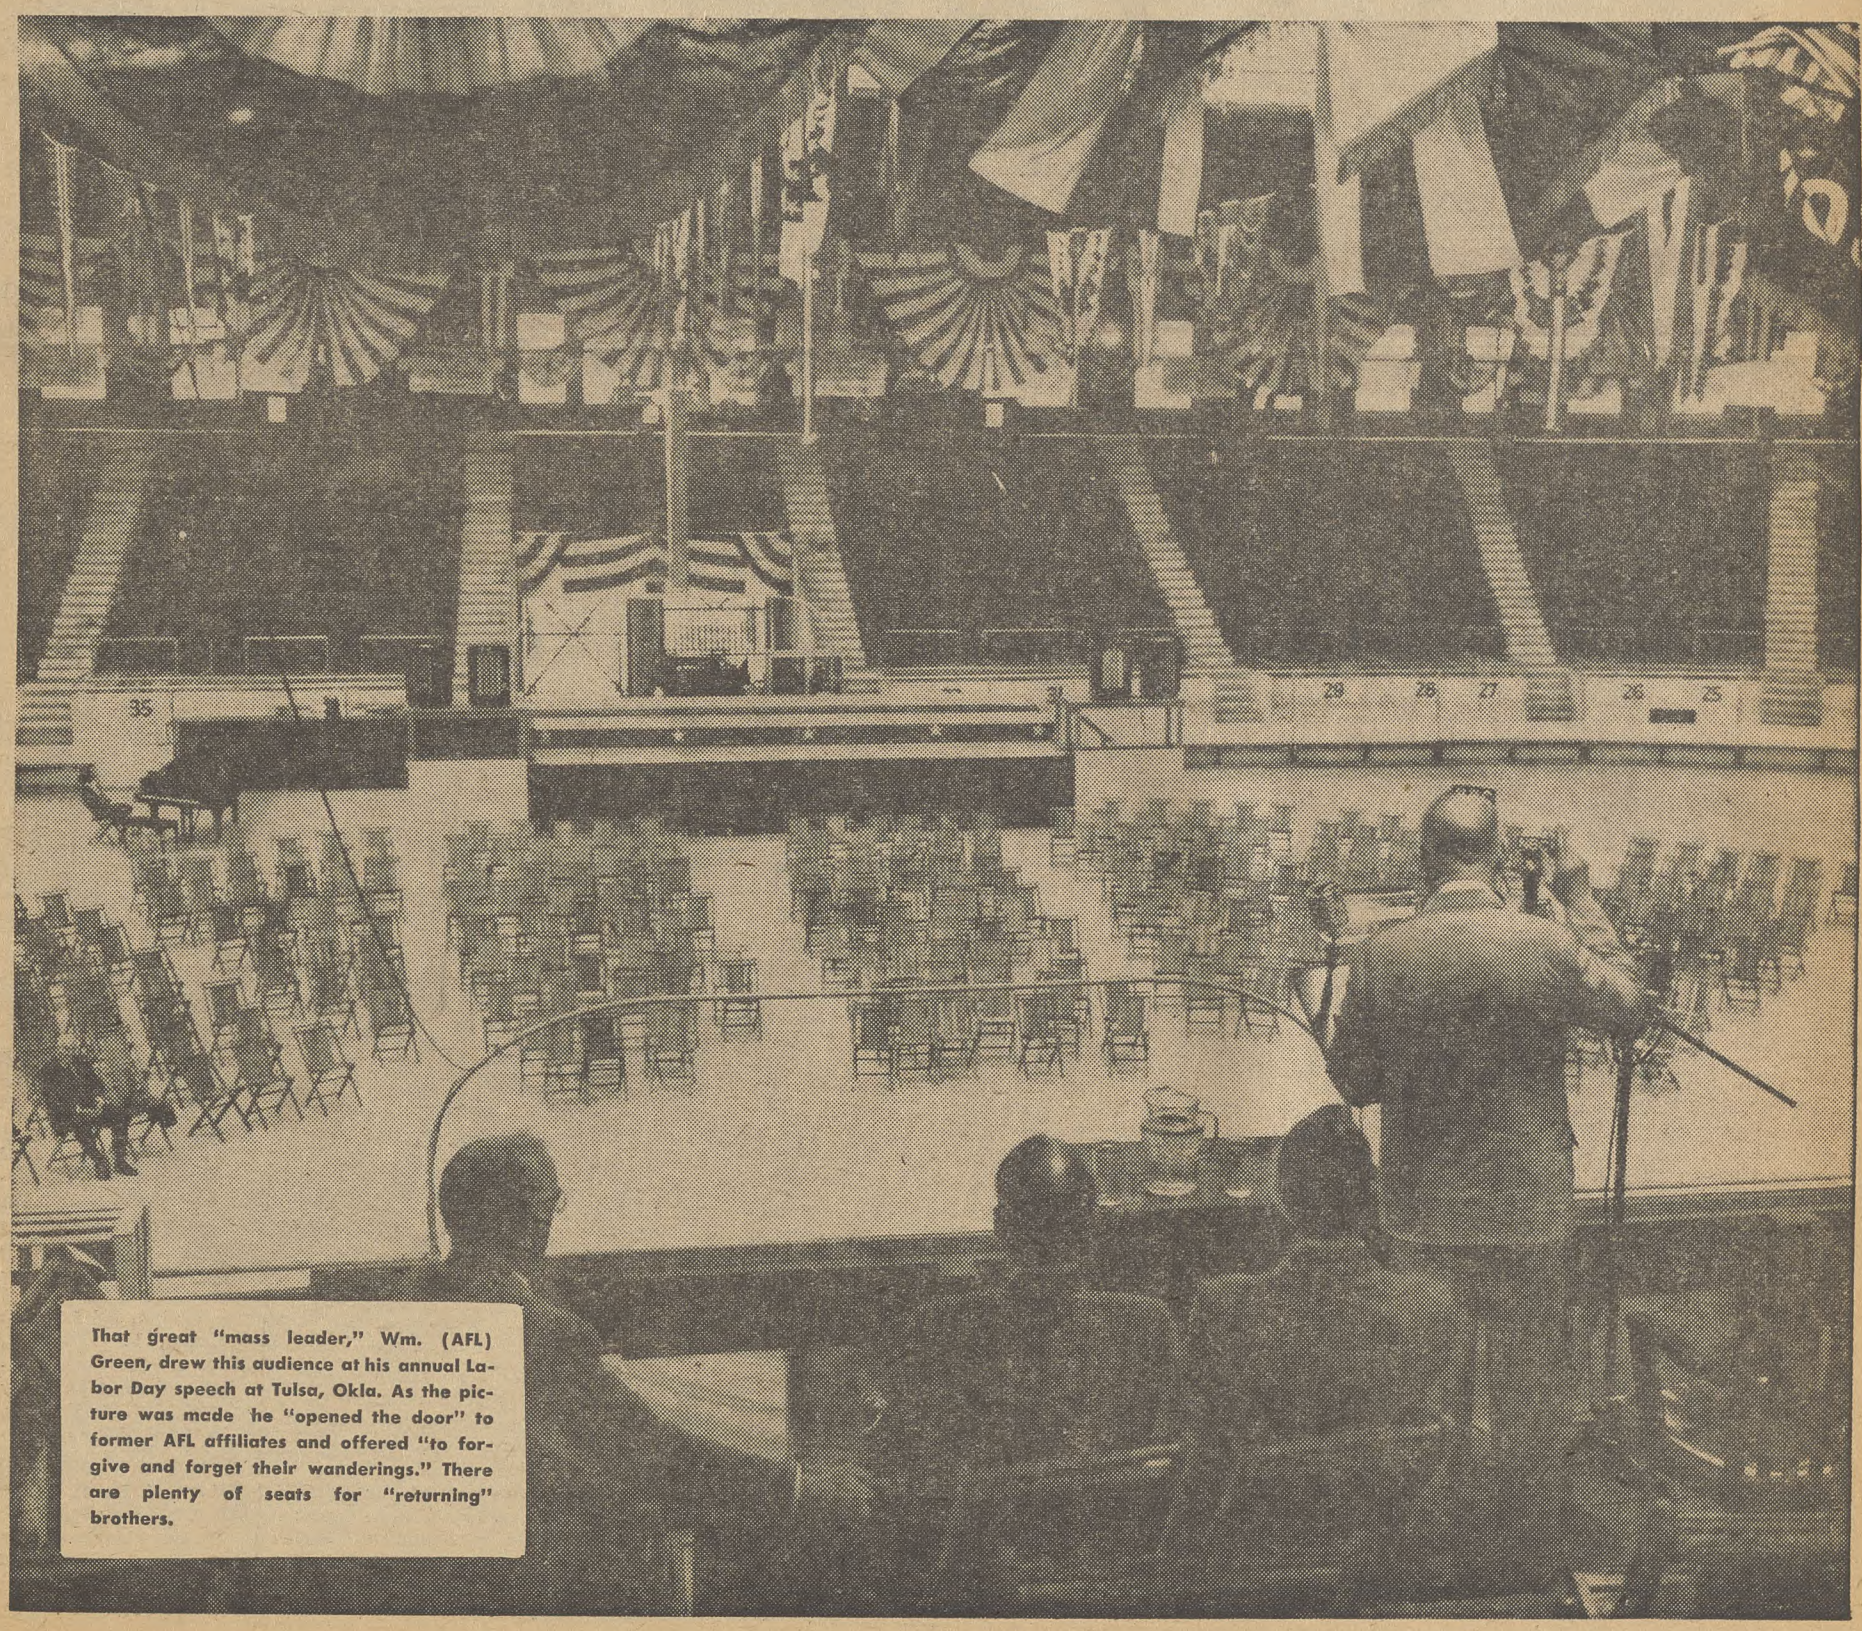
THE OPEN DOOR, THE LONELY HEART



That great "mass leader," Wm. (AFL) Green, drew this audience at his annual Labor Day speech at Tulsa, Okla. As the picture was made he "opened the door" to former AFL affiliates and offered "to forgive and forget their wanderings." There are plenty of seats for "returning" brothers.

Visitors to CIO: Members of the Soviet trade union delegation trooped into Washington last week to prepare for the forthcoming meeting of the American-Soviet labor committee. Goodwill and a pretty Russian interpreter quickly overcame all language difficulties. Here's the group in President Murray's office. Seated, left to right: M. I. Tickomirov, assistant to the chairman of the Soviet unions; President Murray; M. P. Tarasov, secretary of the Soviet labor organization; CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood. Standing: E. J. Sidorenko, Soviet trade union secretary; CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman; N. A. Gaisenok, head of the Soviet shipbuilding union; Miss G. T. Kulikova, interpreter; V. I. Berezin, head of the Soviet aircraft workers union; and Adolph Germer, newly appointed CIO representative at Paris headquarters of the World Federation of Trade Unions.

WFTU LEADERS IN WASHINGTON

BULLETIN—Arthur Deakin, secretary, British Transport Workers, was elected provisional pres. of WFTU.

CIO PLAYS host this week to the first American meeting of the nine-man executive bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions.

Top items on the bureau's agenda are:

1 Selection of an interim president of the WFTU to succeed Sir Walter Citrine, who is retiring from the WFTU and the British Trades Union Congress in order to serve on the British government's coal industry nationalization board.

2 Implementation of earlier WFTU demands for full representation on the United Nations Economic & Social Council.

The Washington meeting was scheduled originally to coincide with the convening of the United Nations General Assembly, which was subsequently postponed in order to avoid conflict with the Paris Peace Conference.

WFTU's Executive Bureau is an elected body of its 26-man Executive Committee, which in turn is selected by the considerably larger General Council.

The Bureau is composed of the following union representatives:

Chairman: Sir Walter Citrine (United Kingdom).

General Secretary: Louis Saillant (France).

Vice-Chairmen: Vassili Kuznetsov (USSR), Sidney Hillman (CIO-USA), deceased, Leon Jouhaux (France), V. Lombardo (Latin America), H. F. Chu (China), G. Di Vittorio (Italy), E. Kupers (Netherlands).

Frank Rosenblum of N. Y. C., secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and a vice-president of the CIO, will attend the Bureau meeting in place of Sidney Hillman. Substituting for Vassili Kuznetsov, chairman of the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the USSR, is M. P. Tarasov, a secretary of the organization.

The question of WFTU relations with the United Nations Economic & Social Council was discussed in some detail at meetings of the executive bureau and executive committee in Moscow in early summer.

In a statement adopted unanimously at that time, the WFTU declared:

"The workers are the most consistent defenders and the surest guarantee of the cause of peace.

"The organized workers, conscious of their responsiblity, have been insisting ever since the founding of the United Nations Organization, on effective participation in the establishment and preservation of peace. They demanded this through their most representative organization, the World Federation of Trade Unions, representing over 67 million working people, united in 64 national trade union organizations of 55 countries. . . .

"The Economic and Social Council of the United Nations Organization took a long time searching for a solution to the problem, and in the end decided to grant the WFTU the right to appoint observers at meetings of the Economic and Social Council, and to facilitate consultation through the medium of a specially appointed committee of the Council.

"The members of the Executive Committee of the WFTU are unanimous in their opinion that the decision of the Economic and Social Council is unsatisfactory. They are unanimous in their opinion that the most representative organization of the working people of the world—the only one of its kind since it is a world-wide organization—should not be prevented from participating effectively in the United Nations Organization, where problems of universal security and all forms of international cooperation are decided."

5 SOVIET VISITORS MEET WITH CIO

FIVE Soviet trade unionists landed in Washington last week after a 36-hour trip from Moscow and made immediate preparations for the forthcoming first meeting of the American-Soviet Trade Union Committee.

Accompanying the quintet was pretty Miss G. T. Kulikova, a Russian interpreter, who joined with her countrymen in the expression of warm greeting of friendship to CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood and other CIO officials who have participated in recent international labor meetings.

Speaking for the delegation, M. P. Tarasov voiced the deep regret of all Soviet trade unionists at the untimely death of Sidney Hillman, who had served as vice-president of the World Federation of Trade Unions and worked closely with European labor groups in the immediate post-war period.

In a lighter vein, Tarasov presented Pres. Murray with a handsome Ukrainian blouse and with a heavy woolen scarf for Mrs. Murray. He expressed hope that Murray would soon find it posible to visit the Soviet Union.

While Tarasov remains in Washington for the WFTU executive meeting, other members of the Soviet delegation planned a weekend of sightseeing in Washington and Philadelphia prior to the opening of the international committee meeting on Sept. 24. Following the sessions they expect to visit cities along the Atlantic seaboard, and to inspect a number of industrial establishments in the area.

The committee itself will discuss trade union matters of mutual interest. It is the first meeting of the group, which was formed in Paris last autumn at the end of the world labor congress held there.

The five Soviet members of the committee are M. P. Tarasov, secretary of the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions; E. J. Sidorenko, secretary of the AUCCTU; N. A. Gaisenok, chairman of the Central Committee of the Shipbuilders Workers Union; V. I. Berezin, chairman of the Central Committee of the Aircraft Industry Workers; and M. I. Tickomirov, assistant to the chairman of the ACCTU.

CIO members of the committee are: President Murray; Sec.Treas. James B. Carey; Vice Presidents R. J. Thomas, Albert J. Fitzgerald and Frank Rosenblum; and General Counsel Lee Pressman.

MARITIME VICTORY!

CIO and AFL maritime unity paid off handsomely this week when an award was issued by Federal Arbitrator Fly granting wage increases averaging $10 a month to members of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union. In a few cases increases go as high as $60 a month, and the aggregate wage raises will run into the millions.

Settlement of the NMU strike was expected momentarily after NMU Pres. Joseph Curran said that he had received an exchange of telegrams between the ship owners and the Maritime Commission which indicated Fly's award had been accepted.

Meanwhile, CIO Pres. Philip Murray met in Washington with Pres. Harry Bridges of the Longshoremen and Pres. Samuel Hogan of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., both CIO, whose contracts expire Sept. 30. Employers have broken off negotiations with both unions.

Following the meeting Murray announced that both unions have the full support of the CIO in their demands which, in the case of the Longshoremen, consist of wage increases and inclusion of safety codes in contracts.

While the accident rate among longshoremen is the highest in American industry, negotiations with the employers broke down over the refusal to place safety clauses in contracts.

The MEBA is asking for a 30% increase in wages, shorter hours and hiring through union halls.

Murray declared that "it would seem that unless a mutually satisfactory agreement can be effectuated prior to Sept. 30, there is positive danger of the maritime industry closing down. The CIO is lending every possible degree of support toward the perfection of an agreement."

The CIO President declared that efforts were being made to meet with Reconversion Director Steelman and Labor Sec. Schwellenbach with the idea of arranging negotiations between the employers and the unions in Washington.

Bridges said that he would not object to meeting with the Master Mates & Pilots and the Longshoremen's Assn., both AFL, whose contracts also are up for renewal Sept. 30, in the presence of government officials.

Ever since the Sailors Union of the Pacific and the Seafarers Intl. Union, both AFL, struck, there has been unity between the CIO and the AFL maritime unions. The CIO Committee for Maritime Unity announced at the outset of the AFL strike that it would respect the AFL picket lines.

When the AFL unions got increases of $5 and $10 a month on the West and East coasts, respectively, the NMU and two West Coast unions went on strike for a similar wage boost with all CIO unions and the rank-and-file of the AFL unions respecting their picket lines.

On the West Coast the strike of the Marine Firemen, Oilers & Water Tenders, independent but affiliated with the CMU, and the CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards, also struck to demand wage increases similar to those granted the SUP and SIU.

Fly indicated that his award in the MCS case, which is due Monday, would wipe out any inequities. The MFOW would not be covered by the award.

Farther than the eye can reach this picket line was thrown around N. Y. docks this week after negotiations broke down between the CIO Natl. Martitime Union and the ship owners. Four thousand seamen were in the line—the longest in maritime history.

FBI PROBE OF TIRE SHORTAGE ASKED

By ROBERT CRUDEN

A JUSTICE DEPT. investigation of the tire shortage situation is asked in a resolution pending before the 11th annual convention of the CIO Rubber Workers' Union at San Francisco this week.

The resolution was presented after a speech by Asst. PAC Director Thomas Burns charging the big tire companies with hoarding tires for higher prices and building a backlog to defy forthcoming union wage demands. He emphasized that despite no strikes in the industry and highest production records this year, consumers cannot buy tires.

Burns also charged that there is "an unholy alliance" between Pres. William O'Neil of General Tires and Col. "Bertie" McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, to use Yankee and Mutual networks against labor.

The convention reelected the present leadership including Pres. L. S. Buckmaster and Sec.-Treas. Charles Lanning.

Wage increases are the main convention issue, with a half-dozen resolutions submitted before the proceedings started. One called for cost-of-living increases, others demanded "substantial" raises to "protect living standards in this period of rising prices." URWA contracts do not freeze wages.

"When we signed wage agreements with the Big Four—Goodyear, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber and Firestone—last March," URWA Vice Pres. Howard R. Lloyd said, "it was agreed that 'the general wage scale shall be subject to negotiations if conditions economically and in the industry warrant."

Since then, Lloyd declared, the cost of living has skyrocketed and the profits of the Big Four have broken all records.

The convention gave a great ovation to James Roosevelt, the late President Roosevelt's son, who is chairman of the California Democratic Committee.

"Labor can never achieve security until we have equitable distribution of our national wealth," Roosevelt said. "There is no justification for a rise in prices that is not compensated by a rise in the wage level."

In discussing foreign policy, the War President's son charged, "The reactionary press is stirring the people up to hatred not to peace."

Former URWA Pres. Sherman Dalrymple, who is treasurer of the CIO's Southern Organizing Committee, made an impassioned plea for aid in the Dixie drive, declaring "the South is going to be organizing and it is going to be organized by the CIO. We have had 110 elections and have lost only 11."

Pres. L. S. Buckmaster opened the convention with the warning that there would be serious unemployment in the rubber industry within a year as a result of wartime overexpansion of capacity and of decentralization of manufacturing.

UE BACKS CIO WAGE UNITY

UNITY of program and action in wage movements between CIO's three biggest unions was advocated by the convention of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in its concluding sessions last week.

The convention also called for a return to the foreign policies of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, adopted a comprehensive program on behalf of veterans, and voted to raise dues from $1 to $1.50 a month, increasing per capita to the international from 35c to 50c, subject to ratification by a majority of locals.

The union's wage policy statement declared that since its inception the UE had achieved major wage gains in cooperation with the Steelworkers and the Auto Workers, "the major metalworking CIO unions."

"Today more so than ever before," it declared, "for maximum effectiveness, a program for wage increases must likewise be based on unity of program and action of the UE, Steelworkers, Auto Workers, and other CIO unions."

Noting that "significant first steps have already been taken in this direction by CIO", through joint meetings of the major unions and a joint wage research committee, the union stated that its "entire strength will be exerted in support of this joint effort."

The foreign policy resolution, adopted by unanimous vote, praised Roosevelt's policies and declared: "Since Roosevelt's death, the administration has permitted the representatives of big business in and out of government, whose policies were repudiated in the 1944 elections, to assume direction of American policies, both foreign and domestic.

"We reaffirm our support for the policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt and call upon President Truman to replace the agents of big business by representatives who will serve the interests of all the people.

"We call upon the President to get his administration back to the policies upon which he was elected. We urge President Truman to effectuate Roosevelt's policies through the United Nations."

DOGGED BY THEIR RECORD

THE RESULTS of this year's primaries indicate that a substantial proportion of the American people are not taking the actions of the last Congress lying down.

Judging from a survey by the CIO Political Action Committee, the wrecking of price control has been one of the issues that has most aroused the voters, leading to the elimination of many anti-OPA Congressmen in the primaries.

Out of a total of 20 members of Congress defeated in the primaries, all but two opposed effective price control and shared responsibility for the present inflationary rise in living costs.

An additional 17 price-boosters and OPA-haters decided not to run again for Congress, evidently anticipating the voters' reaction to their anti-price control records.

★ ★ ★

IT is significant that the list of defeated Congressmen is not made up of new-comers or weak candidates who had previously slipped in by narrow margins.

On the contrary, it includes ten members of Congress who had held their seats for ten or more years, and five with from 20 to 28 years in Congress.

The removal of such veteran legislators, whose re-election time after time had become almost traditional, is evidence of a sharp and deep-seated revulsion on the part of the voters.

It will be additionally helpful because their long seniority had made them "a formidable power on the all-important committees in which legislation is made or broken," the PAC points out.

It is also significant that Southerners predominate among the reactionary Congressmen defeated. This testifies to the liberal awakening south of the Mason-Dixon line.

★ ★ ★

WHILE statistics are not yet available on the proportion of women voters in this year's primaries, it would seen probable that the housewives' vote was a decisive factor in retiring Congressmen who voted against price control.

In past elections, American women, whose voting potential is 48 million (five million more than the male potential), have not pulled their weight. They have tended to be more apathetic politically than men and have stayed away from the polls in far larger proportion.

But this year women, as the chief family purchasers, have have a sharp lesson on the direct impact of politics on their own and their families' welfare.

There has been no question of the mass indignation of American housewives at the soaring prices which have resulted from the wrecking of price control.

It may be anticipated they will go to the polls this year in greater numbers than ever before, to vote against those who are responsible for the shrinkage of their purchasing power.

The PAC describes the women's vote as "the nation's greatest untapped force for progressivism." It will devote every effort to getting women to the polls, confident that their votes will be cast against the OPA-wreckers and for progressives who will support adequate housing, health, education, full employment and other social legislation essential to the welfare of American families.

If the people know the record, are informed on the issues and turn out to the polls in sufficient numbers, there is every reason for confidence in the election of a progressive Congress this fall.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

A FAVORITE feature in many labor papers some years ago was "The Poor Fish."

It was an Art Young drawing of a fish with its mouth open, accompanied each week by a different poor-fish saying.

The "Poor Fish" was always swallowing the propaganda-bait of his and labor's enemies.

His sayings parroted each catch-cry of the bosses against higher wages, shorter hours and unions.

The "Poor Fish" was the complete sucker, who fell for every trick designed to cheat and rob himself and his fellows.

★ ★ ★

WHAT BRINGS this up is a recent picture of AFL Pres. Wm. Green orating before a vast expanse of empty seats in Tulsa.

The advance publicity of the AFL proclaimed that he was to speak "before the largest Labor Day gathering ever assembled in the Southwest."

One moral of this picture, of course, is to take most of the AFL's inflated claims with plenty of salt.

But there's a more important moral in what Bill Green had to say on this noteworthy occasion—a moral which recalls to mind the "Poor Fish."

★ ★ ★

TO THE patient benches and chairs, Green delivered a speech of international ill-will and fist-shaking, just like an editorial in the Hearst or McCormick press.

To international division he added domestic and labor division, by a red-baiting attack on the CIO, which also might have been lifted from the reactionary big-business press.

He invited the unions he attacked to "come knocking at our door," adding rather illogically that "the door is open."

Green then parroted big-business propaganda urging workers to speed up production as the only solution for inflation.

But in the same speech he also related the anti-labor record of the Congress and warned of "the organized drive against labor by some of the most reactionary individuals and groups in the nation."

★ ★ ★

BEFORE AND since that occasion, Green has made many more speeches.

Each one has been full of similar ranting, faithfully following the propaganda of the anti-labor press to create division among the progressive forces in America.

His attacks on the CIO have been in an increasingly hysterical crescendo, even reaching the point where he called on AFL central bodies not to cooperate with CIO unionists in any way, shape or form for any purpose.

In fact, if any progressive editor should want to revive a "Poor Fish" series, he could cull enough appropriate sayings from Green's recent speeches to keep the series running indefinitely.

★ ★ ★

LIKE THE "Poor Fish," Green does not seem to realize he is swallowing the propaganda-bait of the very reactionary forces of which he complains—propaganda designed to strengthen the drive against labor and to perpetuate a reactionary Congress.

In this as in past election years, the reactionaries hope to remain in the saddle by dividing the numerically superior progressives.

So the reactionary press is going to extraordinary lengths to play up every bit of labor and progressive dissension it can manufacture.

Green's attack on the CIO, and the rest of his propaganda to divide progressives, are therefore played up all over the press, while any pro-labor remarks he may chance to make are buried or ignored.

★ ★ ★

THERE IS encouraging evidence that most CIO members are not falling for the divisive propaganda with which the anti-labor forces hope to steal the elections.

In state after state, and city after city, internal differences are being subordinated or resolved, so there may be the greatest unity for the election campaign.

But CIO unity is not enough. AFL and the other labor unionists have just as much reason to support or oppose the same kinds of candidates as the CIO. They and millions of other progressives have just as much at stake as the CIO in electing a progressive Congress.

The CIO is dedicating its efforts to progressive political unity to win the elections. An essential part of this campaign is to expose the divisive propaganda of reaction, which only a "poor fish" would swallow.

Mine-Mill Union

TO CONCENTRATE ON SOUTH

By MORRIS WRIGHT

THE 42nd convention of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers at Cleveland this week launched an ambitious organizing program with the South as one of the principal points of concentration.

This was one of the planks of the ten-point program submitted by MMSW Pres. Reid Robinson to the union, which is celebrating its 53rd year.

Robinson pointed out that even prior to the CIO's southern organizing campaign the union had won elections at several small plants at Hatties, Miss., and Macon, Ga., which served as a base for expanded work when the drive was announced.

He said that in addition to the $25,000 pledged to the campaign, MMSW alloted $2,250 a month to intensify the union's activity in the South, and that in South Carolina and Georgia the union has been "winning elections at a rate reminiscent of the early CIO days. Continued concentration on the South will mean substantial gains for our union."

Four other sections of the program approved by the convention were wage policy, contract policy, coordination of bargaining and strike strategy and the health and accident sections of the program. The wage, contract and strategy section planned a higher degree of coordination than ever before achieved bebetween all farflung sections of the union.

Robinson warned that "the offensive against the people," which marked the record of the 79th Congress, is rapidly nullifying union gains. He declared that only a militant program for protecting the purchasing power of the nation's workers can stave off complete obliteration of gains made during the first postwar strike movement.

Support of such a program, for which CIO Pres. Murray is "leading the fight," was urged on the convention by its president.

Canadian workers, who form an important sector of the MMSW, are facing a similar offensive against their living standards and security, Robinson declared.

"The similarities of developments in Canada and the U. S. —and their timing—bespeak a co-ordinated Tory offensive on both sides of the border," he pointed out.

Principal convention speakers were Sen. Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), Vice-Pres. Leon Krzycki, of the CIO Clothing Workers; Co-Chairman Paul Robeson of the Win-the-Peace Committee and Tilford Dudley, assistant PAC director.

Pres. Jacob Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers (l.) and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. look at the gold medal presented posthumously to President Roosevelt on the closing day of the N. Y. State CIO Council's convention last week. At the right is Mrs. Sidney Hillman, widow of the late president of the Clothing Workers, and at the far right, former N. Y. Gov. Herbert L. Lehman, Democratic-American Labor candidate for U. S. Senator. The award honored the late President for the "tireless service he gave the toilers of this nation and the world."

SPUR MERGER OF WOOD, FURNITURE UNIONS

PLANS for a merger with the CIO Furnitiure Workers were laid by the Woodworkers in the concluding sessions of their four-day annual convention last week at Portland, Oreg.

At the same time the delegates, from 22 states, Canada and Alaska, hammered out a strong political program calling for a return to Roosevelt's foreign and domestic policies.

The amalgamation with the UFW is scheduled for the fall of 1947 when both unions will hold separate sessions in St. Louis. The new union would be known as the Intl. Wood & Furniture Workers and would blanket the 37,500 furniture and 70,000 lumber men under single leadership, making it one of the powerful affiliates on the CIO roster.

Committee reports showed a large membership gain in the past year, with the addition of 10,000 in British Columbia alone. For the future the union, plans organizing drives in the south and in eastern Canada, particularly Quebec province, which has a potential membership of 30,000.

Former Pres. Harold J. Pritchett, backing a resolution condemning red-baiting, which the union overwhelmingly indorsed, pointed out that in his district of western Canada, "where there has been the least amount of witch hunting, there have been the most gains."

Delegates also called for "immediate negotiations with Britain and Russia to agree on atomic energy controls and extension of the agreement thereafter to the United Nations."

GAS, COKE PARLEY REPORTS 20,000 NEW MEMBERS

THE ATOMIC-ENERGIZED CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers opened their third constitutional convention late this week in N. Y. City.

With the recent victory at one of the three atomic energy plants in Oak Ridge, Tenn., under their belts, the CIO chemical workers registered 20,000 new members in two years, since the last convention.

The gain brought the total union membership to 41,880, Pres. Martin Wagner reported, pointing out that "it is possible in the next two years to double our present membership."

"Through the CIO chemical workers the wage scales in the entire chemical industry have been increased. Working conditions in plants under contract with out union have been greatly improved for our members," he said.

'BIG 3' UNITY URGED IN N.Y.

POLITICAL action took the spotlight at the convention of the N. Y. State CIO Council Convention at Lake Placid last week, when 1100 delegates representing more than a million CIO members gave their unanimous and enthusiastic endorsement to Senator James M. Mead for Governor and Gov. Herbert Lehman for Senator and to other candidates on the American Labor Party and Democratic tickets. The parley mapped plans for an all-out election campaign.

Support of the policies of the late President Roosevelt, both in domestic and foreign affairs, was emphasized throughout the convention. In a special ceremony, a medal in his honor was presented to Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

Mead and Lehman were described as "close co-workers of President Roosevelt, who are in the Roosevelt tradition," in the convention resolution. The resolution said: "Their election and the defeat of Dewey and his reactionary Republican associates is our number one political task for November."

The unity of the CIO in the state was reflected in the unanimous re-election of Pres. Louis Hollander, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and of Sec.-Treas. Harold Garno, of the UAW-CIO, both of whom were unopposed.

The only issue on which there was any evident diversion was foreign policy. One or two delegates objected to vesting regulation of atomic power in the United Nations and asked for the inclusion of an anti-Yugoslav statement. But after some debate, they were outvoted by more than three to one.

The foreign policy resolution adopted called for "Big Three" Unity and repudiated "all efforts calculated to weaken or destroy friendship and close collaboration between the 'Big three'." It denounced "reactionary forces who . . . seek to use the great power of America to win world domination for themselves."

Elected by Acclamation: Harold J. Garno of the CIO Auto Workers (l.) and Louis Hollander of the Clothing Workers were renamed secretary-treasurer and president respectively of the N. Y. CIO Council at its convention at Lake Placid last week.

Hollander denounced Governor Dewey for having "completely failed the people on the vital issues of racial discrimination, social security, labor legislation and education."

He charged that Dewey had tried to "starve out strikers," by opposing CIO efforts to eliminate the seven-week waiting period before strikers can receive unemployment insurance, while at the same time he had given an $80 million handout to the most anti-labor corporations, in rebates from the unemployment insurance fund.

Featured speakers at the convention, besides F. D. Roosevelt, Jr., included Mead, Lehman, Sec-Treas. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers and John Brophy, director of CIO Councils.

Mead asked that labor "be given the right to deal with management as an equal, not to be treated as a chattel of capital and management."

Lehmn called for a higher minimum wage, abolition of job discriminations because of race, creed or color, and for adequate housing and health legislation.

Brophy stressed the reactionary record of Congress and called for the election of candidates who will serve "the common good rather than the forces of greed." He warned that atomic warfare "can destroy our whole civilization" and that "any future war must end without victor or vanquished—all may be destroyed," urging "international economic collaboration for the benefit of the common man in all countries."

The convention called for a special session of the state legislature to act on the housing crisis and the other relief for veterans, as well as to provide for higher wages for state and municipal employes and teachers.

Nationalization of the meat packing industry was urged to achieve full production and operation "in the interest of all the people rather than for the benefit of the meat trust."

A Federal bonus for veterans, along the lines of the Lesinski bill, was one part of a long program of aid for veterans to which the convention devoted much attention.

LESSON IN D

Story by Fred Ross ● Photos by A ciat

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., a town of 30,000 where they used to put you away as crazy if you belonged to a union, is now a lesson in democracy.

Time was when either the town police or the police employed by the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., the borough's big industry, spied on the workers and had those who belonged to or believed in unions fired.

All that is changed now. No longer do the company police prowl around, looking for union members; they tend strictly to company business on the company's property. No longer do the borough coppers consider it their duty to help the company police spot union sympathizers.

The first time that labor had a majority on the borough council, the borough's second most important street, long neglected by the company-dominated Republicans — who were largely concerned with keeping the taxes down for Jones & Laughlin—was paved.

When the union-backed Democrats obtained a majority on the borough council in 1940, they also filled a long felt need in West Aliquippa by building a swimming pool. That section of the town lies along the banks of the Ohio river, where every year three or four children of workers drowned because there was no other place to swim.

In '42, the Democrats failed to obtain a majority on council, but they came back strong in '44, electing additional councilmen and a burgess, and although hampered by a debt inherited from the Republican administration, they have continued the work of civic improvement.

During the campaign, Jones & Laughlin donated a large tract to the borough for an additional playground, thinking that in that way they could induce the citizens to vote for the GOP.

"Summing it up, the workers realized they HAD to go into politics."

"Do you meet with much indifference?" he was asked.

"Only a small minority of the workers are unwilling to go along," Keller replied. "Most of them know what I have told you about the history of police terrorism."

THE workers of Aliquippa and the rest of Beaver county are now engaged in another political campaign—to re-elect Sen. Joseph F. Guffey and the rest of the Democratic ticket including Samuel G. Neff, candidate for Congressman. The incumbent, Louis E. Graham (R.), voted wrong on the Hobbs and the Case anti-union bills, and on the continuance of U. S. Employment Service under Federal control, on the Patman Housing Bill, the Elliott rider to cripple the NLRB and on the Atomic Energy Bill.

PAC is doing a very thorough job in Beaver county, which has been divided into four sub-districts with two Steelworkers organizers assigned to each. In every town and township a PAC chairman has been named and he selects the other members of his committee.

Under this system as many as 11,000 voters were registered in one day. The members of the committee go from door to door, and carry on their work in the Jones & Laughlin plant when they are not actually at work.

They pass out handbills at the plant gates, use their cars to take fellow citizens to registration places and to the polls on election day, and act as watchers during the polling.

They also collect dollars for PAC.

They do all these tasks cheerfully and without pay.

For the history of their town has taught them that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Councilman John T. Atkinson, Jr., whose father, Tax Collector John T. Atkinson is a former president of Local 1211, discusses Aliquippa's road improvement program with a grader operator. The council inherited a borough filled with run-down streets from the Republicans.

Beaver County PAC where Aliquippa is located is devoting its efforts to electing Samuel G. Neff, Democratic candidate for Representative from the 25th District, who is running against reactionary Republican Louis E. Graham, incumbent, who supported anti-union legislation.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

LUCKY CHILDREN

Lucky children! Their parents have given them confidence in their world and in themselves. As they leave the house, their mother rejoices in their independence. Like all parents, she had to make a choice—should her children be kept dependent on her, or should they be helped to independence? Lots of parents feel real satisfaction when their children show them they are needed for every decision and action. These sturdy, happy-faced youngsters are obviously on their own. Mother too finds life freerer and easier because she can rely on them.

NATION'S CHILDREN NEGLECTED

The vital need for improvements in the Social Security Act covering child welfare, such as called for by the CIO, stands out in appalling clearness in a government report giving facts and figures which show the nation's neglect of its children.

The special concern of the child welfare worker today, states the report, are the 4,000,000 orphans and half orphans, 60,000 of whom are children of servicemen who died in World War II.

Some are among the 80,000 babies born out of wedlock each year, many of whose mothers are themselves children. Still others who need special attention are among the quarter of a million children brought into juvenile courts each year and several times that number who come to police attention.

One of the largest groups of these unfortunates are those whose mothers are working away from home. Close to 3,000,000 women with young children are wage earners, and facilities for the care of their children are non-existent or sadly inadequate.

U. S. ANTI-LYNCHING BILL DEMANDED OF TRUMAN

PRESIDENT Truman has been presented this week with one demand for a Federal anti-lynching bill and was scheduled to hear another demand Sept. 23. Both come from broadly representative groups alarmed by increased mob violence and convinced that federal action is necessary if lynchings are to be outlawed.

The group that saw Truman this week was the recently formed Natl. Emergency Committee Against Mob Violence, organized by the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey was among a delegation that visited the White House and asked Truman:

1. To insist that federal enforcement agencies concentrate upon securing evidence against and prosecution of lynchers.

2. To rouse the American people to oppose every form of mob violence.

3. To ask Congress to pass legislation to enable the federal government, in cooperation with the states, to stop lynching and punish lynchers.

On Sept. 23, Truman will hear from the American Crusade to End Lynchings, headed by Paul Robeson. A large delegation from N. Y. City is scheduled to visit the White House.

The Emergency Committee told Truman:

"While representatives of the U. S. today labor at the Paris Peace Conference and in the United Nations to create a world peace based on human freedom and justice, their words and actions are made a mockery by an unprecedented wave of mob violence in the U. S.

"American citizens, and in particular Negro veterans of the late war for human freedom, have been done to death or mutilated with a savagery equalled only at Buchenwald.

"We come to you today, Mr. President, however, not to plead the cause of any one segment of the American people. We represent various parts of the people of America—church, labor, management, minorities—and we are confident we voice the sentiment of all decent Americans when we emphasize the obvious fact that unchecked mob violence can do more to injure our country at home and abroad than any other single evil."

UAW HITS MEDICAL PLAN PROFITEERING

(By Federated Press)

WHAT happened to the $75,000,000 in easy money pocketed in Michigan in 1941-1944 by the private-profit group health and hospital insurance companies is exciting the indigant curiosity of Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes, United Auto Workers (CIO).

Addes and State Commissioner of Insurance David A. Forbes agree that $75,000,000 are the proceeds taken out of Michigan workers' paychecks by the insurance grabbers after a gross take of $131,000,000 by the four largest insurance companies, who repaid only $56,000,000 in medical and hospital benefits. Forbes makes some modification of the net but expresses his concern at the rakeoff.

Told by the insurance commissioner that present law could do nothing about the sky-high profits on human health, Addes is asking the candidates for governor to take a stand in support of new legislation. Since insurance companies and their hosts of agents are among the most effective undercover political machines in the country it is not expected that Kim Sigler, Republican nominee, or Murray Van Wagoner, Democrat, will take an unequivocal stand.

One insurance company, Addes charges, "paid out as little as 19c for every premium dollar paid in." Most of the "tremendous sum represents excessive operating costs, high salaries, high-pressure promotions and huge profits," he told Forbes.

PLEDGES AID TO HEALTH PLANS

The Committee for the Nation's Health, spearheading the drive for national health insurance, has pledged to fight for free development of consumer sponsored medical health service organization, according to Dr. Channing Frothingham, national chairman.

In a letter to Dr. Michael Shadid, temporary chairman of the Cooperative Health Federation of America, Dr. Frothingham said: "We pledge you our support in all your efforts directed at helping the 93,000,000 Americans who cannot afford adequate medical care to get that care without worry over the cost through a just and democratic system of national health insurance."

PAC Amateurs On Air

CIO United Auto Workers students of political action aired what they had learned in two weeks of training in the union's Workshop over radio station WHLS. Last week, a 15 minute broadcast, entitled "Now is the Time", presented the legislative record of the 79th Congress and dramatized the need for political action.

The most important elections held were the run-offs at the Atomic Bomb Plants in Oakridge, Tennessee. Mr. William Green, of course, had been proclaiming victory here. In the Carbide-Carbon plant, second largest unit, the CIO in the first election, not having had sufficient time, ran third with a vote of 1329 as against 1531 for the AFL. With a few weeks more in the run-off the CIO came out victorious with a vote of 1918 as against 1893 for the AFL.

The AFL won a small unit with a vote of 331 for them as against 136 for the CIO, but the AFL lost in the big unit to NO UNION with a vote of 3120 for no union as against 2503 for the AFL.

These election results puts the CIO in a key position to drive to win where AFL failed and will continue to fail. The AFL bigwigs were so frustrated with the outcome that they demanded four counts and are now protesting the election on flimsy, unwarranted grounds.

Mr. Green made much to-do about this plant and proclaimed to the public that they had previously won victories there. His face must now be red.

CIO is gearing up its machinery to complete its job and the workers will, undoubtedly, respond to one big union to govern their industry instead of a lot of crafts. CIO already has chartered a local union at the Atomic Bomb plant in New Mexico.

CIO WINS IN 128 DIXIE PLANTS

The CIO has completed organizational work in nearly 400 industrial plants during the Southern membership campaign that began late last May, Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee reported this week.

"CIO unions have been certified as the collective bargaining agencies in 128 of these plants," Bittner said. "A total of 236 petitions for certification, filed by the Organizing Committee, are now pending before the National Labor Relations Board."

FIGHT ALLIS-CHALMERS 5½ MONTHS

By ESTHER HANDLER

THE Allis-Chalmers strike is still going strong and appears no nearer to settlement despite an agreement reached this week between a local of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and the company at the Pittsburgh plant.

The Pittsburgh accord, which ended a 5½-month strike involving around 2500 workers, calls for a 13½c hourly wage boost, imposed vacation benefits and equal pay for women. The contract was signed upon the resignation of top members of the bargaining committee.

Giving the boss the bird: Members of the CIO Office & Professional Workers picketed the Bankers Trust Co., N. Y. City, during lunch hour this week, carrying canaries in cages, and signs telling the management that it "pays birdseed wages—we're not canaries." The bank is refusing to negotiate a new contract for messengers and guards.

The demands of unions at the company's six other plants, however, remain unchanged. They are: a 25c hourly wage increase with additional adjustments for non-incentive workers; union security; arbitration of wage disputes; and workable grievance machinery.

Local 248, CIO Auto Workers, at the key plant in West Allis last week "stiffened" its demands in presenting the company with a proposal for a union shop. Formerly this union had asked for maintenance of membership.

Union officials at the company's six strike-bound plants feel that the Pittsburgh agreement falls far short of the unions' demands and was the result of the company's policy to bargain separately with each union.

Pres. Robert Buse of Local 248 pointed out that the Pittsburgh workers were victims of the company's splitting tactics. Because of a division in the union's ranks, the company was able to force the replacement of militant members of the bargaining committee with former leaders of a company union which existed in the plant befor the workers voted to be represented by UE, he explained.

At West Allis, where nearly 12,000 workers have been on strike since April 29, the company has been unable to get a back-to-work movement started. The lines here remain solid despite repeated attempts of the company to incite violence on the picket lines which to date have resulted in 21 arrests.

Allis-Chalmers workers are represented in various plants by the three CIO unions, UAW, UE and Farm Equipment Workers.

CALIF. ELECTION PROTESTED

THE campaign of discrimination against the CIO Food and Tobacco Workers directed by the AFL Teamsters and Calif. Processors and Growers Assn. is detailed in a formal protest filed with the Natl. Labor Relations Board this week against the conduct of the recent election among the northern Calif. cannery workers.

The FTA several months ago won an NLRB election among the cannery workers, but the board set aside the results on a technicality. The board subsequently directed that no contracts be signed with any union until a new election would be held, but in the meantime the canneries signed back door agreements with the Teamsters.

The FTA charged that prior to the recent election numerous workers were fired because of their FTA sentiments, that the companies in collusion with the Teamsters required all workers to obtain clearance with the AFL union "as a condition for going to work in the plants," and that workers suspected of belonging to the FTA were denied employment.

FTA members and sympathizers, the CIO union declares, were demoted and transferred and were evicted from company houses, the AFL representatives were granted full access to the workers and the interior of the plants were plastered with "pro-Teamster signs, leaflets and slogans . . . in full sight of company officials as well as workers . . .

"Collusion between the Teamsters and the companies went to fantastic lengths. In certain plants, including Frank M. Wilson, Inc., Stockton, a CP & G member, the company's personnel manager actually doubled as the Teamsters' Union business agent, signing clearance slips, dues deduction authorizations, etc., as 'union representative'."

2500 BARBERS GO ON STRIKE

The N. Y. State Mediation Board this week tried to settle the strike of 2500 barbers and 350 manicurists but the outlook was not hopeful because of the adamant attitude of the Broadway Master Barbers Assn.

The strikers are members of Local 1, CIO Barbers and Beauty Culturists Union. Two thousand members in other locals covering the balance of Manhattan borough were standing by, ready to join the walkout at a moment's notice.

City Councilman Michael Quill called for Health Dept. investigation of scab shops and warned of health danger in one-man shops operated by boss barbers. The union seeks a 40-hour week; 30% base pay increase; adjustment in commissions whereby take-home pay will increase approximately 15%, and a health and welfare fund to be obtained by a 3% levy on wages.

UPW BLASTS D. C. PRESS

PRES. ABRAM FLAXER of the CIO United Public Workers this week wrote a letter to the Washington Star protesting against "the campaign of derogation, reaching the proportions of slander and vilification being waged against our union . . . by the Washington newspapers."

The immediate cause of the protest was an editorial in the Star which questioned the right of the 17,000 Panama Canal workers belonging to the UPW to belong to a union, but follows a long and apparently concerted campaign to discredit UPW.

The editorial claimed that certain unnamed "top government officials" were supposed to be concerned over the fact that the Panama workers had jointed UPW.

Flaxer said that who the "top government officials" referred to is not known "or if any government officials have expressed any concern in this matter. Certainly you cannot be referring to officials who are responsible for the Panama Canal because the relationships between Gov. Mahaffey, Governor of the Canal Zone, Ambassador Hines and all other officials have been cooperative, friendly and mutually agreeable."

CIO URGES SUPPORT FOR LABOR EXTENSION PLAN

MORE and better education for workers has long been one of the outstanding aims of organized labor, beginning with the fight early in the last century for free schools, waged and won by labor.

In line with this tradition is the nationwide drive launched by the Committee for the Extension of Labor Education to secure support for bills introduced in the last session of Congress to establish a Labor Extension Service in the Dept. of Labor. It would correspond to the Dept. of Agriculture's extension service for farmers. The Committee has the support of the CIO, AFL, and other labor groups.

"To extend American democracy we must have skilled, well informed union members," stated CIO Pres. Phillip Murry in announcing the CIO's strong support for the Labor Extension Program.

Murray has appointed Frank Fernbach, representative of the Steelworkers for the past ten years, as full-time liason officer of the CIO on the Committee for the Extension of Labor Education. Fernbach who was previously in Ohio and Pennsylvania, in recent years has served as research associate on the national staff of Steelworkers.

As CIO representative on the labor education committee, Fernbach will work with CIO groups in aiding the committee's drive for passage of bills introduced in the Senate by Sen. Elbert D. Thomas of Utah and in the House by Rep. Andrew J. Biemiller of Wisconsin.

Under the program posed in these bills, $10 to $15 million would be provided yearly from federal funds to establish a labor extension program through the use of the teaching facilities and resources of state universities, land-grant colleges and universities, and other educational agencies.

Union representatives will sit on a Natl. Labor Advisory Committee to help the Sec. of Labor set policies and standards for the program. State Labor Advisory Committees will develop programs in cooperation with state universities, union educational departments and other authorized agencies.

Contributions from unions and other private organizations will be added to state and federal funds.

The Committee for the Extension of Labor Education points out that the bills carry out the purposes of the Morrill Act of 1862, providing for the "diffusion of useful information" for the benefit of persons engaged in agriculture and the mechanic arts.

The Dept. of Agriculture's Extension Service now uses more than $44 million of Federal, State and local funds in servicing some six million farmers and their families. The proposed Labor extension program would be for the benefit of 45 million Wage and salary workers.

The service of the Labor Extension program under the proposed bills will not be initiated by the Federal government, but by groups interested in obtaining educational aid. International unions, industrial unioan councils and locals, will apply through available educational institutions, and programs can be set up at colleges and in union halls. Exhibits, conferences, movies, forums, etc. can be arranged.

CIO Education Director Kermit Erby, in urging all CIO groups to actively support the drive for the Labor Extension Service program, suggests ways to help the committee's work. These include contributions, appeals to Congressmen to support the program; and distribution of information explaining the program to union members and to the community.

For further information about the campaign and ways of helping, write Frank Fernbach at the office of the Committee for the Extension of Labor Education, 902-A 20th St; Washington 6, D. C.

CIO union representatives on the Committee included Clinton Golden and Emory Bacon, USA-CIO; John W. Edelman and Laurence Rogin, Textile Workers; Alan Strachan (vice-chairman of the Committee) and Victor Reuther, Auto Workers; Philip Weighman, Packinghouse Workers; and CIO Education Director Eby and Asst. Director George Guernsey.

"One day in the spring of 1920, members of the Ku Klux Klan paraded down the streets of Birmingham, Alabama, carrying signs. The signs read: "Bittner must go!"

"But I didn't go," says Van. Bittner, head of the CIO's present southern drive. "Not until the Alabama coal miners had a union."

That's the start of an exciting article, "The CIO's in Dixie," by DeWitt Gilpin, in the November issue of SALUTE, new magazine produced by former editors and writers of YANK and STARS AND STRIPES.

Quoting the colorful words of southern workers, Gilpin tells a vivid story of what the CIO's drive means to these workers and how they react to it.

He describes a union meeting in a southern mill town on the night before a strike vote was taken and tells how "the faces of the workers, who ranged in age from young girls of sixteen to aged men, revealed the tension of the people who had a hard decision to make."

Gilpin's account of the CIO in Dixie, in human terms, is one of the best pieces so far to appear on the CIO's struggle to raise the standard of living for southern workers.

Everybody talks about the Constitution of the U. S., but few really know just what's in it. Fewer still know what the small group of men who drew it up had in mind. Yet this document touches every one of us every day of our lives, says Charles W. Ervin of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in a 50-page pamphlet which gives the Story of the Constitution as told by those who fashioned it.

Digging out the pertinent facts as recorded in historical records, the pamphlet interprets the Constitution as drawn up for a Country of some four million inhabitants engaged in agriculture and primitive industry, in the light of present day problems.

For Dairy Rollback

3½c CUT PER QUART IN MILK URGED

A UNITED labor movement this week asked the U. S. Price Decontrol Board to roll back the prices of milk and all other dairy products to June 30 levels, using funds that are available to subsidize the industry. An immediate reduction of 3½c a quart in fluid milk would result.

Organizations requesting the action—which also would affect prices of butter, all types of cheese and ice cream—included CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood unions.

The CIO Cost of Living Committee also asked OPA to push forcefully an order which would roll back restaurant meat prices to June 30 levels, and would require posting of ceiling prices in prominent places.

Importance of the drive to re-control dairy products is shown by the fact that they comprise 19.6% of all foods, and account for 8% of the entire cost of living of moderate income families.

The labor organizations, acting through the OPA Labor Policy Committee, pointed out that reduction of milk consumption in July followed the suspension of price controls.

The Committee warned that low income families are the chief victims of suspension of price controls, particularly in connection with a necessity like milk.

Citing price increases in all dairy products, the Committee pointed out that these advances have been made during a period of relatively good supply.

Noting reported decreases in consumption of milk due to higher prices, the committee stated:

"We believe any increase that causes a reduction in the consumption of a commodity as important as milk to the health of the American public must be considered unreasonable if it is found to force curtailment of consumption by families of low income."

NEW PAY STUDY

A study of federal wage-price policy designed to permit allowances for the sharply increased cost of living has been ordered by President Truman, the Office of War Mobilization & Reconversion announced this week.

CONSUMERS 'WHERRIED' OUT OF $345 MILLION A YEAR

AMERICAN workers and consumers are being taken for approximately $345 million a year because the majority of Congress accepted the Wherry amendment to the OPA extension bill allowing retailers to revert to their markups of March 31, 1946.

MAP PLANS FOR NOV. 5

CIO'S top political strategists will convene in Chicago September 29 to map labor's mobilization for the final 1946 election drive as a climax to the two-day assembly of America's leading independent organizations keyed to maintaining and strengthening the coalition which elected FDR in 1944, Jack Kroll, CIO Political Action Committee director, announced this week.

Not only the PAC Executive Board will be called into session, but the over-all PAC Committee, expanded and strengthened in the re-organization which followed Sidney Hillman's death, will participate.

Members of the national PAC staff will report to the Committee on the status of the campaign and detailed discussion will be held on campaign necessities.

With the theme "preserve the Roosevelt coalition" expected to spark the meeting of independents, the PAC parley which follows others is expected to explore additional means of cooperating with Negro, foreign born and middle class groups in welding the unity which resulted with huge outpouring of votes which highlighted FDR's triumph in 1944.

The CIO-PAC, joint sponsor of the Chicago meeting of independents with Natl. Citizens PAC and the Independent Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, will take an active part in the independent meeting, too. Kroll is scheduled to address the dinner meeting along with Sen. Claude Pepper, James G. Patton, head of the National Farmers Union and Rep. Charles LaFollette (R. Ind.).

CIO President Philip Murray will deliver a major address as the first session which will be keynoted by former secretary of the Treasury Henry Morganthau, Jr.,

Ex-Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes, Walter Whitem, secretary of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People and NCPAC's Executive Vice-Chairman C. B. Baldwin, will round out the morning session with talks on the progressive's role in the 1946 campaign.

A definite program for the 1946 campaign will be arrived at and a course of action plotted for progressive independent groups, CIO and NCPAC and ICC stated.

In announcing the conference's program, the three organizations denounced the record of the 79th Congress, warned of the twin dangers of war and depression, and declared that "only through the active cooperation of independent groups and organized labor can the progressive movement survive."

1/5 GOT NO RAISES

Contrary to popular belief, U. S. workers have not uniformly enjoyed an average wage increase of 18.5c an hour since V-J day.

Official Bureau of Labor Statistics figures show that 21.3% of all workers received no general wage increase at all—that is more than one out of every five employes.

COMPLIMENTS of CONGRESS

REMEMBER In November — VOTE

20 CONGRESSMEN DEFEATED; 18 FOUGHT PRICE CONTROL

CONGRESSMEN who worked for the destruction of price controls, fared badly at the primary polls this year, a study by the CIO Political Action Committee disclosed this week.

The primaries, according to the report, demonstrate 1) that voters are in favor of rigorous price controls and 2) they are sufficiently aroused by Congressional partisanship to Big Business demands to oust those responsible for scuttling OPA.

Out of a total of 20 members of Congress who went down to defeat in the primary races, all but two had opposed OPA. An additional 17 avowed OPA-haters declined to seek renomination, evidently fearing to face their constituents' wrath.

The survey lists the following 14 Congressmen whose fight against OPA has been cut short by angry voters:

The six anti-OPO Senators defeated are: Charles A. Gossett (D.-Idaho), George L. Radcliffe (D.-Md.), Henrik Shipstead (R.-Minn.), Burton K. Wheeler (D.-Mont.), Robert LaFollette (R.-Wisc.) and E. P. Carville (D.-Nev.).

Among those fighting controls who failed of renomination, Southerners are in the preponderance— evidence of the growing political awareness of voters below the Mason-Dixon line.

Even more startling is the number of veteran legislators whose reelection year after year had become almost traditional. Neither length of service nor sentimental attachment outweighed the emphasis placed by voters on Congressmen's stand on OPA.

Ten of those unseated had occupied their seats for ten or more years, during which time they had accumulated sufficient seniority to become a formidable power on the all-important committees in which legislation is made or broken.

NEW PAC RECORDINGS

With announcement of 12 new radio spot announcements on specific issues of the Congressional campaigns, the CIO Political action Committee this week urged CIO unions and PAC field groups to begin now purchasing radio time for airing these recordings.

Concerned with inflation, housing, national health insurance and the Fair Employment Practices Bill, the transcriptions leave room for insertion by local groups of "plugs" for endorsed candidates and, therefore, as a rule, must be presented as paid announcements.

REGISTRATION RECORD

CIO Political Action Committee "get-out-the-vote" campaigns have succeeded in hanging up a record Philadelphia registration total exceeding all previous non-presidental years and topped only by registration for the Willkie-Roosevelt election in 1940.

This year's number of qualified voters—1,070,000, is expected to weigh heavily in the race in which Republican Gov. Edward Martin and CIO-PAC-endorsed Sen. Joseph Guffey, Democrat, are vying for the Senatorship.

CIO-PAC activity was recognized as the greatest force behind the unprecedented rush to qualify for the November ballot by the Philadelphia press and elections officials.

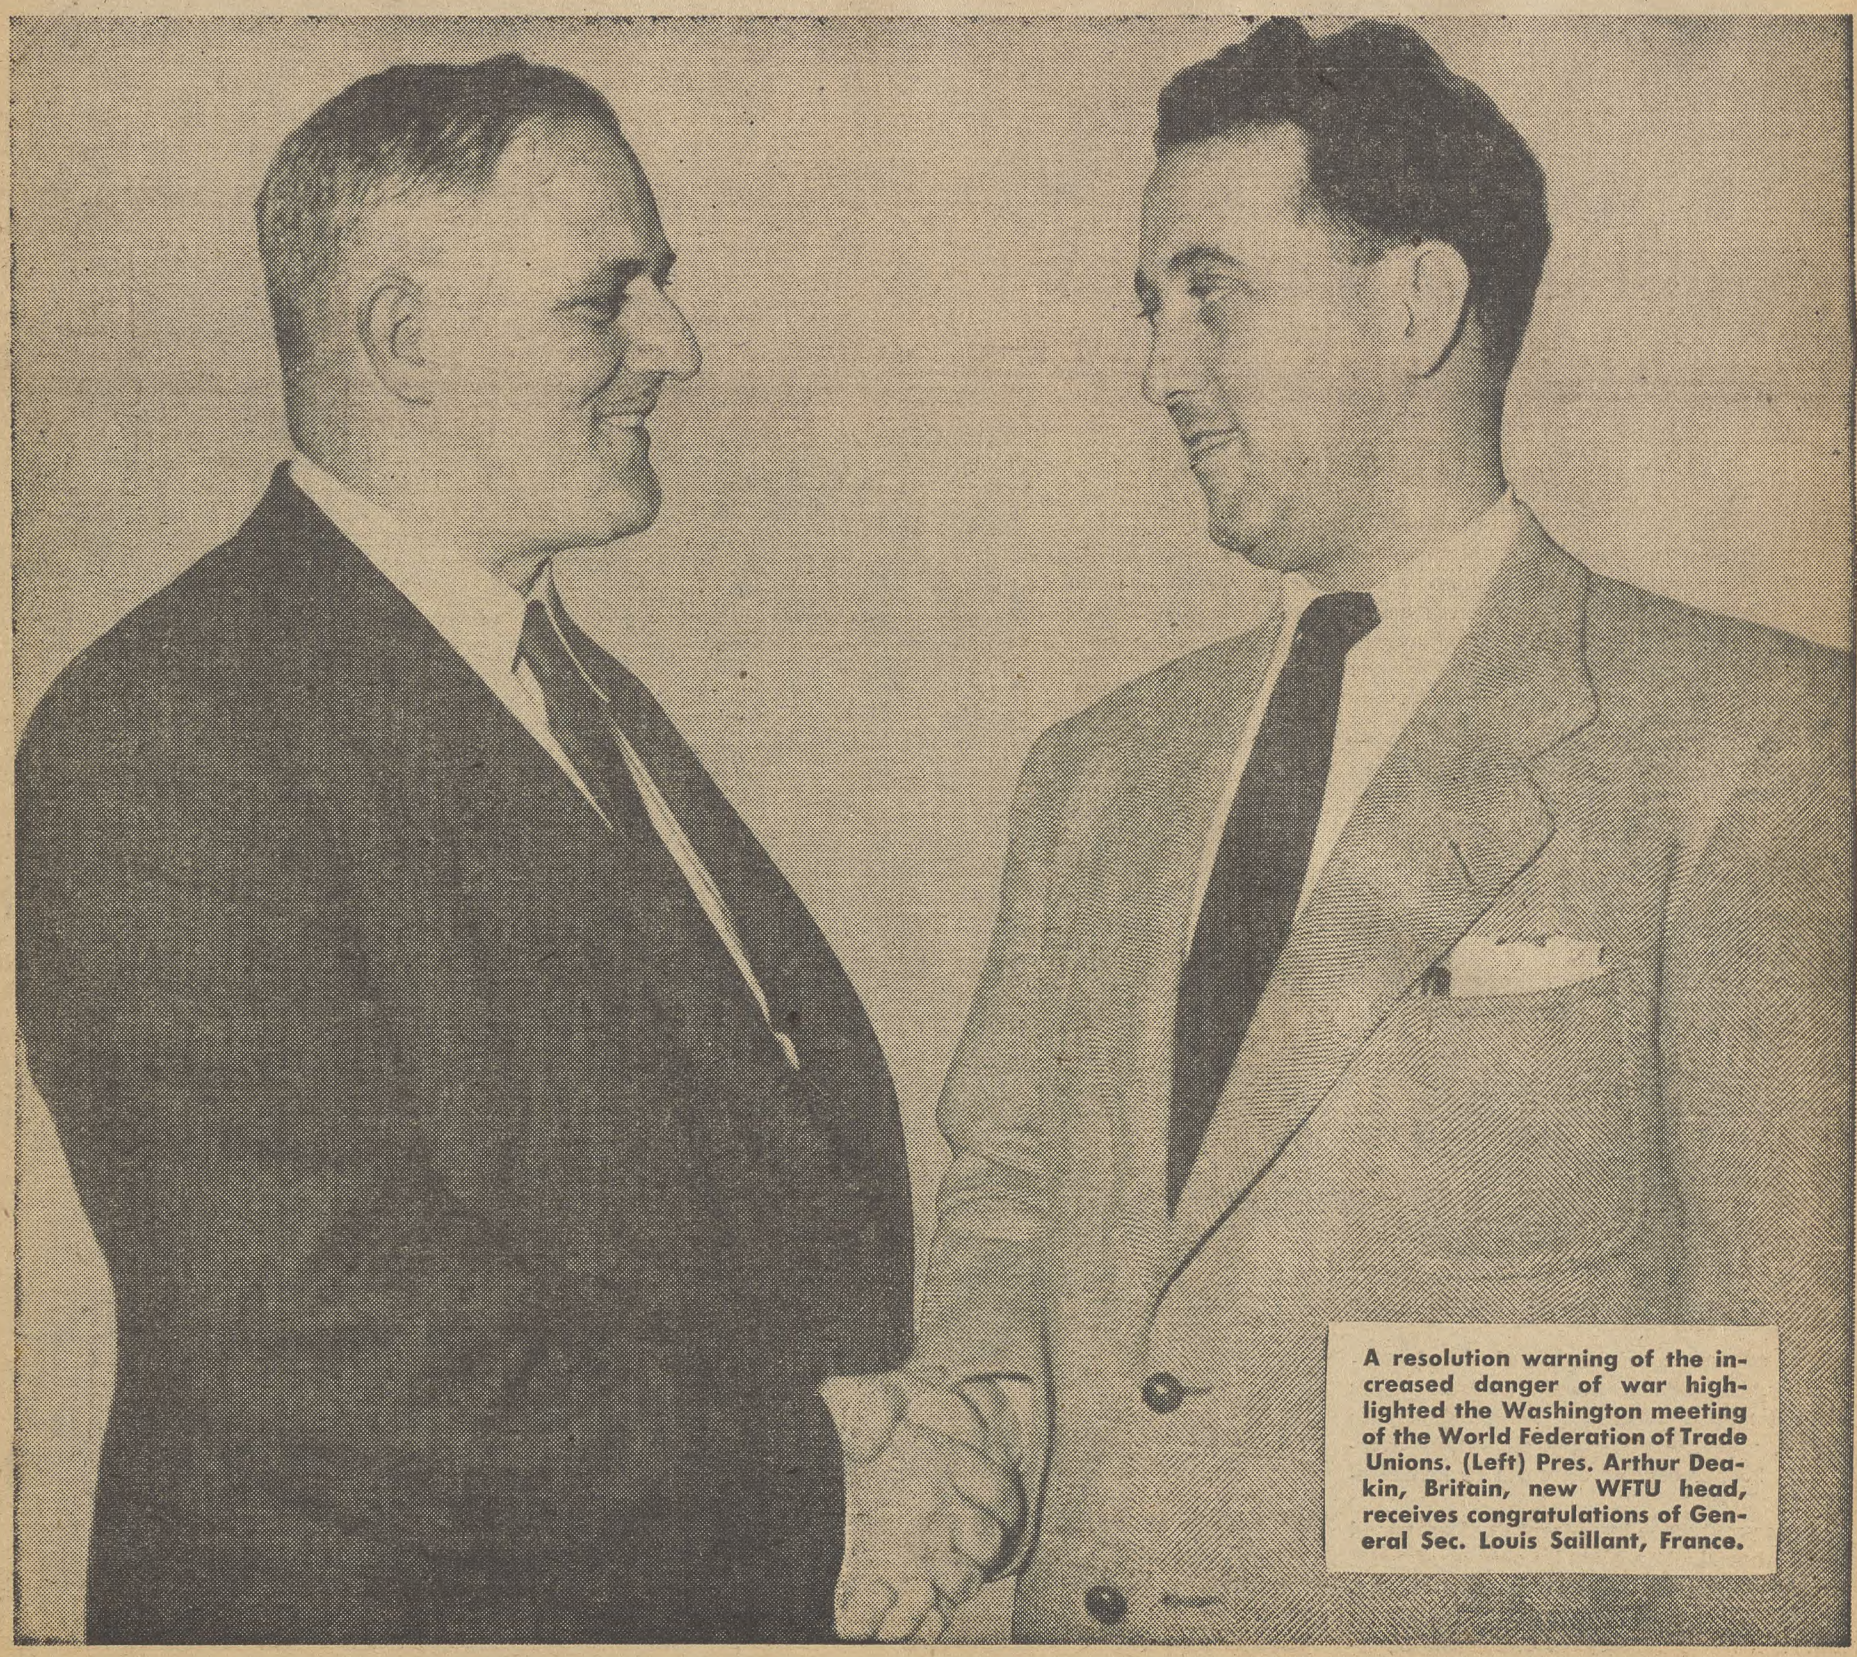
WORLD LABOR UNITED AGAINST WAR



A resolution warning of the increased danger of war highlighted the Washington meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions. (Left) Pres. Arthur Deakin, Britain, new WFTU head, receives congratulations of General Sec. Louis Saillant, France.

LIGHT THAT MUST NOT FAIL

DARK clouds are gathering on the horizon of the "brave new world" that was to follow victory over the Axis aggressors—clouds of conflict and aggression, clouds of propaganda very like that which Hitler used to divide the peace-loving peoples.

It is not enough to hope and pray, as people are doing all over the world, that these clouds will blow over and that they do not portend a coming storm of war. For these clouds are not a natural and inevitable phenomenon, they are man-made clouds which man can dissipate.

The power to clear away these clouds rests with the working and common people all over the world, who have everything to lose and nothing to gain from another war in this atomic age.

That is why the World Federation of Trade Unions sheds such hopeful light amid the surrounding gloom. Representing 70 million members, it voices the determination of the workers of all lands not to remain passive but to fight for an enduring peace.

Meeting in Washington, the WFTU Executive Bureau expressed world labor's "deep concern with the growing threat to peace," and with the fact that the wartime coalition of freedom-loving nations "has not been maintained with the firmness and unity of purpose essential to the establishment of an enduring peace."

The WFTU calls upon the governments of the United Nations to return to policies of friendship and close collaboration, and to repudiate "the voices of reaction which, under pressure of the selfish interests of the monopolists and big capitalists, are spreading the idea of a possible third world war."

It notes that world peace is menaced by the forces of fascism and reaction, "which are flaunting the same ideological banners as were carried by Nazism and Fascism."

The WFTU calls upon the workers of all lands to bring pressure on their governments for peace, to counter the propaganda that is preparing peoples' minds for war, and to close their ranks in the fight for peace.

The light world labor offers—a light that must not fail—shines through this statement: "The unity and solidarity of the organized workers of the world, as represented in the WFTU, offers the firmest assurance that the catastrophe of war shall not again be visited upon the world."

A LIE EXPOSED

CONTRARY to all the current propaganda, higher prices do not necessarily have to follow higher wages.

Wages are only a minor part of manufacturing costs, the CIO Economic Outlook points out. While labor costs vary from industry to industry, government figures show they average only 25 per cent of all costs in manufacturing.

A 10 per cent wage increase, therefore, would raise total production costs by only one-fourth, and a proportionate price increase would not be 10 per cent but 2½ per cent.

But the whole history of American mass-production industry shows that higher wages can be, and have been, offset repeatedly by increased efficiency, better worker morale and similar factors, without the need for price increases.

In fact the Outlook cites examples of companies paying higher wages and yet producing at lower cost than exactly comparable concerns whose workers receive much lower wages.

The present inflation is not due to higher wages but to the greedy insistence of profiteers on unjustified and totally disproportionate price increases.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

IT HAS been open season for the dove of peace for some time. While the diplomats have been a-disagreeing, the hot-air artillery has been out in full force gunning for the unfortunate bird.

Fluttering around amid the flack, the dove has had to dodge repeated poison-gas attacks from embattled columnists, commentators and editorial writers.

But last week, when the dove found sanctuary at CIO headquarters in Washington, the wordy hunters suddenly became blind to its whereabouts and continued their pot-shots into the air.

★ ★ ★

WHILE MILLIONS of words are daily printed about the Paris peace conference and the United Nations, with every molehill built into a mountain of dissension, one of the most significant developments of world peace was played 'way down by the press, despite its direct bearing on the front-page news.

The Executive Bureau meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions, to which the CIO was host, was small in numbers and quiet in procedure.

But the nine members of this Bureau represent 70,000,000 organized workers in 56 countries. Their decisions are of deeper significance for the peoples of the world than all the noisy sensationalism of the hot-air artists.

★ ★ ★

MOST OF the foreign labor representatives were shocked by the amount of careless war talk they found in American papers and radio broadcasts.

The more directly a country has been subjected to war's devastation, the less inclined are its people to treat lightly even gossip of such a ghastly possibility as another war.

But, regardless of where it originates, belligerent talk is usually of the "let's-you-and-him fight" variety.

The world's working people, on the other hand, are "it," when it comes to war. They bear the brunt of the suffering, fighting and dying, and they can't pass it on to anyone else.

Consequently, the WFTU is the greatest force in the world today for better international understanding and lasting peace.

DESPITE ALL the diplomatic bickering and hostility since the fighting war ended, each meeting of the WFTU has been remarkable for its fraternal atmosphere and its unanimous conclusions.

The Washington meeting was no exception. The Bureau members are elected to represent the world labor movement as a whole, but individually they come from Great Britain, France, United States, Soviet Union, Latin America, China, Italy and the Netherlands.

Despite their diverse nationalities, these union leaders were able to discuss in friendliest fashion such thorny questions as Iran, Greece, UNRRA, Germany, Japan, Franco Spain, Trieste and Venezia-Giulia, colonial questions, the United Nations and world peace—and to arrive at unanimous decisions in each instance.

★ ★ ★

OF COURSE, these questions were approached from the trade union rather than the governmental point of view.

But this does not detract from the significance of the meeting's unanimity. Rather it emphasizes the point made by Abraham Lincoln that "the strongest bond of human sympathy, outside of the family relation, should be one uniting all working people, of all nations, and tongues and kindreds."

★ ★ ★

AFTER THE WFTU meeting, there was a meeting of the American-Soviet trade union committee, made up of union leaders of both countries.

This too was a significant contribution to international understanding. For the emphasis was on the common interest of the workers of both the U. S. and the USSR in higher living standards and other union objectives and in the prevention of war.

Both CIO's Philip Murray and M. P. Tarasov, head of the Soviet delegation, emphasized the importance of continued exchange of information and delegations and mutual assistance through the WFTU, to build the unity that is necessary for peace.

Amid the present international tension, the Washington labor meetings stood out like a beacon of hope and good-will. They lent strength to the prediction of Anatole France that "the union of all the workers will make the peace of the world."

WFTU on Record

UNITED AGAINST WAR

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

IN the ranks of the World Federation of Trade Unions are some 70 million workers. They live in 56 countries, speak countless languages, but they have two common ideals — peace and progress for the people.

Last week, in the board room of CIO's headquarters at Washington, their leading spokesman gathered to help carry their ideals into practice. For four days, during the course of the first American session of the WFTU Executive Bureau, eight leaders of world labor talked, argued and reached agreement on a wide variety of problems confronting workers in every nation and their global organization.

The highlights of their tasks:

1 A somber expression of world labor's "deep concern . . . with the growing threat to peace" and a call to workers in every land "to oppose the preparations for another war".

2 A condemnation of the "reactionary government of Greece" for its suppression of the "democratic liberties of the workers freely to exercise their trade union rights"; and a proposal for a restoration of the Greek labor unions to the truly elected representatives of the workers.

3 A strongly voiced demand that plans be quickly adopted by the various governments for setting up an international relief agency immediately upon the liquidation of UNRRA to meet the threat of famine and disease in large areas of the war-torn world.

4 Continuation of efforts to secure "effective representation" on the United Nations Economic & Social Council.

5 The election of Arthur Deakin of the British Trades Union Congress as interim president of WFTU to succeed Lord Walter Citrine, who has retired from active participation in union affairs to head the British Labor Government's agency to handle the problems of nationalization of Britain's coal mine industry.

6 A tribute by the Bureau members to the late Sidney Hillman, who as CIO's first representative on the WFTU's top agency took a leading role in the development of the great world-wide labor movement.

CIO was represented at the Bureau meeting by Frank Rosenblum, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and a CIO vice-president. He had been named as CIO's spokesman by Pres. Philip Murray, who in an oppening address to the group, welcomed them to the U. S. and expressed the hope of CIO members everywhere that the deliberations would be successful.

THE resolution on world peace, perhaps the most important policy statement of the meeting, was adopted after considerable discussion at the final session. Like other resolutions and actions of the meeting, it represented the "common denominator" of agreement to which the various national labor movements — with their varying attitudes and political complexions — could subscribe.

It pointed out that the "unity and solidarity of the organized workers of the world", as represented in the WFTU, offers the firmest assurance that the catastrophe of war shall not again be visited upon the world. It said:

"The WFTU cannot remain passive in the face of the dangers which menace peace. We call upon the workers of all lands to close their ranks in the fight for an enduring peace, a fight which must be joined by all people of good will."

The resolution "noted with alarm" that the wartime coalition of freedom-loving nations which brought victory over the Axis has "not been maintained" with sufficient firmness and unity of purpose to guarantee the establishment of an enduring peace.

Workers everywhere, the WFTU bureau declared, "hate war. . . . They want to devote themselves to the reconstruction of the war-devastated lands, to raising their living standards, and to the full realization of the democratic rights and liberties for which they fought."

Many of the men who wrote the resolution knew from first hand of the horrors of war and fascist oppression. Quick, animated Louis Saillant, secretary-general of WFTU, had headed the French resistance movement to the Nazis; stately Leon Jouhaux, representing the French Confederation of Labor, had spent years in a Nazi internment camp; and Guiseppi Di Vittorio, the big-framed spokesman for Italian trade unionists, had been arrested by the Nazis when they took over Italy after the fall of Mussolini.

When these men talked of the horrors of war, of the danger to peace from atomic mass murder, they talked with conviction.

THE development of democratic trade unions in the former strongholds of fascist oppression—Germany and Japan—also received WFTU study.

The Bureau voted to send a commission headed by Pres. Deakin to Germany to follow up an earlier study of the German union situation made by WFTU early this year. At the same time it requested the international trade federations of the various European unions to hold up admission of the various German unions pending the outcome of the study.

Two groups will be sent to look into Japan's growing labor movement. One, a small preliminary committee, will travel to the Far East late this year. A formal WFTU commission will visit Japan and the Far East in the spring of 1947, after receiving the preliminary report.

TWO new federations of labor unionists were welcomed into the organization. The Central Committee of Iranian Trade Unions was granted admission, on the basis of a report by Sec.General Saillant, who had visited the Middle Eastern country a short time ago. Philippine trade unions were accepted "in principle", and will be formally accredited after study of their application by WFTU headquarters.

In Greece, however, the Bureau found that "trade union liberties have been seriously infringed and the Greek Federation of Labor is prevented from functioning democratically". The blame for this situation was place squarely on activities of "the reactionary government of Greece", and WFTU called on all affiliated national trade centers to rally to the support of the Greek workers.

The leadership of the Greek unions elected last March is "the only representative body of that nation's trade unions", the WFTU said, and it called upon the Greek government to restore full freedom of action to that body. It also recommended the calling of a new trade union convention in Greece to restore the functioning of the labor movement and to give it the widest possible representation.

THE CIO received a position of major importance in the structure of the world labor agency when the Bureau appointed Adolph Germer, veteran American union official, as assistant secretary general. The action, confirming a recent nomination by President Murray, places Germer at the head of the important WFTU Department of Colonies and Mandated Territories.

Germer, who has served in a variety of key CIO assignments—most recent of which has been as advisor to the Intl. Woodworkers —will leave for Paris early in October. He is expected to call a conference of African trade unions at an early date. African workers have been faced with serious problems of exploitation, curtailment of their basic rights, and the jailing of many of their strike leaders.

Next meeting of the 9-man Bureau will be held in Paris on December 13-15. It was also decided to convene the General Council of WFTU at Prague in June 1947. The Council, composed of approximately 75 representatives, governs the labor organization between the biennial meetings of the big World Trade Union Congresses.

Attending the Washington meeting were: President Deakin; Secretary Saillant; M. P. Tarasov, Soviet Union; Frank Rosenblum, CIO; E. Kupers, Netherlands; Lombardo Toledano, Latin America; Leon Jouhaux, France, and G. Di Vittorio, Italy. H. F. Chu of China was unable to be present.

GREETINGS: Pres. Arthur Deakin of the WFTU (left) and M. P. Tarasov of the Soviet trade unions look pleased with the results of the Executive Bureau sessions in Washington. Next day, Tarasov participated in initial meeting of the American-Soviet Trade Union Union Committee.

Meet Mr. Deakin

ARTHUR DEAKIN, new head of the World Federation of Trade Unions, has spent a lifetime in Britain's powerful union movement. A good-humored gentleman, with the Job-like patience that's a requisite for presiding at a meeting where business is conducted in three languages, he handles his work as "something that just comes naturally."

A round-faced man who more often than not displays a friendly smile, Deakin quickly becomes completely serious when debating a point of major interest to himself and his organization, the British Trades Union Congress.

He impressed Washington newspapermen as a skillful diplomat during the course of an hour-long press conference at the conclusion of the WFTU bureau meeting. The questions came hot and heavy. And some of them were "loaded" in an effort to trip him up or cause some measure of international embarrassment.

"The world is in a poisonous condition," Deakin explained to the newsmen. "Good will and understanding are urgently needed. We've found solutions that are acceptable to all the national trade union centers.

"The spirit of understanding and cooperation is healthy. We want to maintain that spirit."

ARTHUR DEAKIN is 56, although you'd probably guess he's younger. For 41 of those years he's been a union member. Today he's secretary of the Transport & General Workers Union—Britain's largest. He received that post when Ernest Bevin, now his country's foreign minister, went into the coalition cabinet in 1940 to help beat off the threat of Nazi victory over civilization.

In addition he's a member of the Trades Union Congress General Council, and has served on its International Sub-committee. In that capacity he's attended a batch of international labor meetings in Europe. He'd been in Washington once before, as a member of a United Kingdom delegation to an ILO Textile Conference back in 1936.

Deakin lived in Warwickshire until he was six, when his father moved the family to Merthyk Tydfil in South Wales in order to get a job at a steel factory there. When he was 13, Deakin went to work in the mills. Two years later he joined the old Gas Workers Trade Union.

His belief in labor's future was heightened by early contacts with Keir Hardie, the famous old British Socialist, whose movement—a predecessor of the now potent Labor Party—was just gathering strength in South Wales.

Unionism and socialism weren't the most popular causes in the eyes of employers and government officials back in 1910. Deakin was victimized for his beliefs, and accordingly moved from South Wales to North Wales. He immediately plunged into active trade union work.

DEAKIN'S first contact with Bevin—with whom he worked closely in later years—was in 1911. In 1922 his dock and wharf union merged with the more powerful Transport & General Workers Union, of which Bevin was the general secretary. Ten years later he moved down to London from North Wales to become secretary of the General Workers section of the union.

In 1934 Deakin was elected assistant general secretary of the union. When war came and Bevin moved into the cabinet, he took over the latter's duties as top official of the union.

Bevin reached the union retirement age a year ago and ended his official connection with the organization. Deakin, running for the post in his own right, scored a clear majority over all his opponents. His early successes in helping organize the steel workers of South Wales—where unionism was very weak—have been matched in recent years by his skill in negotiating national wage agreements and in establishing more secure working conditions for British longshoremen.

It's Much the Same!

HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVES

LEADERS of the CIO and of Soviet trade unions overcame the barriers of distance, language and custom last week to talk about labor problems of common interest to workers in both nations.

Five Russians, representing the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, sat around the table with six CIO spokesmen, at the first meeting of the American-Soviet Trade Union Committee. At the end of the session, both groups said they'd learned a good deal about how the "other half" lives.

The five Soviet leaders expect to return to Moscow early in October, with the exact date dependent on airline reservations. At the conclusion of the sessions in Washington they headed for N. Y. City for sightseeing and visits with union officials in the nation's biggest city.

Before concluding the meeting, the committee released a statement by CIO President Murray and Sec. M. P. Tarasov of the Soviet unions which said the working people of the two great nations "are determined to have peace, and will combat and expose the efforts of all reactionary forces to sow seeds of unity among the peoples."

The committee listed a number of goals—development of international trade union unity; struggle for the free exercise of trade union rights in every land; full representation for world labor in the UN; further exchange of information about the two trade union movements, and the continued swapping of labor delegations.

Tarasov, speaking for the Soviet members of the committee, outlined some of the staggering tasks facing his organization as a result of the Nazi invasion. As in the U. S., workers are confronted with major housing problems—but the crisis in the USSR is further aggravated by the destruction of thousands of homes in the course of the war.

Tarasov emphasized the need for preservation of wartime friendship between Soviet and American workers and for their cooperation in winning world peace. The basic objectives of the two labor movements are the same, he said: improved living standards, higher wages, better social security.

CIO President Murray, in a lengthy reply, stressed the desire of workers everywhere for stable and permanent peace. American and Soviet labor know that the common people don't want war, he added, and they must press for action to curb all war tendencies.

For its part, the CIO is anxious to strengthen the bonds of fraternal friendship with working people everywhere, Murray declared, and it looks forward to continued close cooperation with the Soviet labor organizations and the other union groups in the WFTU.

Representing CIO on the committee were President Murray, Sec.-Treas. Carey, Vice-Presidents R. J. Thomas, Albert J. Fitzgerald and Frank Rosenblum: and Gen. Counsel Lee Pressman. Soviet members are Tarasov, E. J. Sidorenko, V. I. Berezin, M. I. Tickomirov and N. A. Gaisenok. Vassili Kuznetsov, head of the Soviet unions, was unable to make the trip to Washington.

USA—USSR

UNITY AND FRIENDSHIP

THE following statement was issued by CIO President Murray and Secretary H. P. Tarasov of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the USRR, co-chairmen of the American-Soviet Trade Union Committee:

"The bonds of friendship between the organized workers of the U. S. and the Soviet Union were forged in the recent war and resulting victory over the fascist forces. We are determined to maintain and strengthen this friendship.

"We have had a full discussion covering the structure, current developments and activities on the part of organized labor in our respective countries. Our talks have added strength to our common efforts to improve the standard of living of the working people and to assure the full enjoyment of democratic rights and liberties.

"The working people of the two great nations, the U. S. and the Soviet Union, which have defended their liberty and independence, are determined to have peace, and will combat and expose the efforts of all reactionary forces to sow seeds of disunity among the people.

"The American-Soviet Trade Union Committee which has been set up, puts forward as its tasks the further strengthening of international trade union unity and friendship between the American and the Soviet trade unions; the struggle against the persecution of labor unions and the right of the workers; the full representation of the World Federation of Trade Unions in the United Nations; for the maintenance of peace, enjoyment of democracy; and mutual assistance and exchange of information about the development and activities relating to the working people and their organizations in the USA and the USSR; and exchange of trade union delegates.

"We urge all the workers of our two nations to unite in close and working friendship. This is essential in order that progressive mankind shall enjoy a stable peace, democracy, friendship and equality among nations."

WFTU Resolution

ON WORLD PEACE

THE following resolution on peace was adopted by the Executive Bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions at Washington Sept. 20-24:

The World Federation of Trade Unions, founded in the course of the second world war and expressing the universal aspiration of all workers, stated that one of its primary purposes should be "to combat war and the causes of war and work for a stable and enduring peace."

The Executive Bureau of the WFTU, therefore, cannot conclude its September, 1946, session in Washington without giving expression to the deep concern of the workers of the world with the growing threat to peace.

The workers have noted with alarm that the coalition of freedom-loving nations which was the key to military victory has not been maintained with the firmness and unity of purpose essential to the establishment of an enduring peace. They have been further disturbed by the failure to pursue the military defeat of the fascist powers by a determinate struggle to extirpate fascism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever they may be found. Their uneasiness is augmented by the terrible threat that atomic energy, which should hold out the promise of incalculable benefits to all mankind, will be used for mankind's destruction.

The workers of the world hate war. Their deepest wish is for the preservation of the peace which they sacrificed so much to gain. They want to devote themselves to the reconstruction of the war-devastated lands, to raising their living standards and to the full realization of the democratic rights and liberties for which they fought.

THE Executive Bureau, in their behalf, calls upon the governments of the United Nations to return to the policies of friendship and close collaboration which they manifested in the war against the common enemy and which alone can guarantee a stable peace. We call upon them to repudiate the voices of reaction which today, only a short year after victory and under the pressure of the selfish interests of the monopolists and big capitalists, inimical to the public welfare, are spreading the idea of a possible third world war.

The Executive Bureau also calls upon its 70 million members to make known to each of their governments their determination to oppose the preparations for another war and to defeat the evil forces of fascism and reaction which are menacing the world peace and which are flaunting the same ideological banners which were carried by Nazism and fascism.

The unity and solidarity of the organized workers of the world as represented in the WFTU offers the firmest assurance that the catastrophe of war shall not again be visited upon the world. The WFTU cannot remain passive in the face of the dangers which menace peace. We call upon the workers of all lands to close their ranks in the fight for an enduring peace, a fight which must be joined by all people of good will.

ARGENTINE WIND

New winds are stirring in the democratic forces of Dictator Juan Peron's fascist Argentina. Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin American Federation of Labor and a WFTU executive bureau, told Washington newspapermen that Argentine unions are rousing themselves, gathering their strength, and closing their ranks.

It's still too early to tell what's going to happen, but Toledano feels that big developments may be afoot.

ON REACTIONARY GREECE

THE following resolution on the Trade Union Situation in Greece was adopted by the Executive Bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions meeting in Washington September 20-24:

The Executive Bureau of the WFTU, having heard Leon Jouhaux's (of the CGT, France) report on the Greek Trade Union situation and taking note of the memorandum on this matter sent by the WFTU General Secretary to the President of the UN Security Council, holds the opinion that trade union liberties have been seriously infringed and that the Greek Federation of Labor is prevented from functioning democratically. The Executive Bureau condemns the action of the reactionary government of Greece in suppressing the democratic liberties of the workers freely to exercise their trade union rights. The WFTU Executive Bureau has decided:

1. That the Bureau of the Greek Federation of Labor elected March 1, 1946 is the only representative body of the country's trade unions. No other bureau or committee can have the confidence of the World Trade Union Movement.
2. To demand of the Greek Government that trade union liberties be restored in Greece and in particular that a new Trade Union Congress be held, with the aim of restoring the democratic functioning of the trade unions, on the basis of proportional representation of all trade union tendencies and opinions, excluding none.
3. That the Bureau elected March 1, 1946 be authorized to convene this new Congress. One position on the Bureau, which shall act as the organizer of the Congress, shall be reserved for the National Reformist Trade Union Movement if this Movement wishes to associate itself in the calling of the Congress.
4. To take all the necessary steps to ensure that Greek workers have the right to organize freely in trade unions and trade union federations.
5. To urge all its affiliated organizations to take appropriate steps to bring the situation in Greece to the attention of its members.
6. To examine at its next meeting the results of efforts undertaken to achieve points two, three, four and five of this resolution.

The WFTU Executive Bureau recommends that all Trade Union centers support the Greek workers in their struggle to regain their trade union liberties.

Esperanto Would Help!

MEETINGS of the WFTU Executive Bureau make you wish that everyone had learned Esperanto when they were kids.

The sessions move slowly because of the overwhelming burden of conversing in three or four languages, and each speech or comment has to be followed by a pause for the translators to earn their pay.

Pert little Galena Kulikova, interpreter for Soviet delegate M. P. Tarasov, whispered a running translation for her boss from both French and English. Fortunately, both Toledano of Mexico and Di Vittorio of Italy speak French, so that they were able to share one interpreter along with Johaux of France and Secretary-General Saillant.

Di Vittorio was accompanied to the meeting by his wife, who acted as his secretary. Senora Di Vittorio is a personality in her own right; she's a leader of the Italian women's organization.

During the war she was interned by the Nazis in France, but was able to escape some time before the end of hostilities. Their son fought with the Italian partisans in the mountains of north Italy.

Lord Walter Citrine made one of the longest trips in history to give up a job. He flew to Washington, presided at the first session, presented his formal resignation as WFTU president, turned the gavel over to Arthur Deakin, and flew back to Britain the next day.

Lord Citrine, who will head the British coal nationalization board, announced his resignation at the Bureau meeting in Moscow last June but was induced to stay on as president until the session in Washington.

The meeting was the first WFTU affair attended by Sec.-Treas. Frank Rosenblum of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. A CIO vice-president, Rosenblum has been a longtime student of international labor affairs. He was named to the Bureau by CIO President Murray after the death of Sidney Hillman.

NEGRO VOTES DECISIVE IN 58 DISTRICTS

NEGRO voters hold the margin of victory in 58 non - southern congressional districts in the November elections, a report issued by the CIO Political Action Committee disclosed this week.

Many districts where the Negro vote has always been a vital and even dominant factor have been excluded from the survey because they were won by safe majorities. They include New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Detroit. The potential vote figures, based on the 1940 census, represent minimums, as population increases have added to the totals.

The PAC study, which analyzes the Negro vote potential, is based on those 58 areas where the potential Negro vote approximates or exceeds the margin by which the incumbent was elected in 1944. Of these 58 districts, 23 are represented by Congressmen who failed to sign the discharge petition to bring the Fair Employment Practices bill to the House floor, and 35 are represented by Congressmen who favored the measure.

Great importance was attached to the report at the Chicago meeting of the CIO-PAC Committee and Executive Board.

PAC Director Jack Kroll pointed out that the 58 areas are part of 100 marginal districts in which the successful candidates in 1944 could have been defeated by a shift of only 5% of the total vote, and that therefore full mobilization of vote in these places is essential to seat a progressive or oust a reactionary.

"Negro voters," Kroll declared, "in cooperation with organized labor and other progressives, have an opportunity to defeat Representatives who have joined with reactionary forces in sabotaging the program for full and fair employment. The job is to get every potential voter registered."

CIO Candidate: Anthony M. Roche, president of Steelworkers Local 3388, is running for Congress in the eighth Massachusetts district on the Democratic ticket. His platform calls for Big Three unity for world peace, and for domestic legislation to control inflation, to provide housing, low cost housing, to guarantee job security, etc.

12,000 signatures for rolling back prices to June 30 levels were gathered in 10 days by members of CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Local 475, N. Y. City. Bringing them to Washington were, l. to r.: Louis Schroeder, Frank Roberts, Armand Rivchum and (right) Clifton Cameron. Ruth Roemer and Russ Nixon (seated), of the Washington UE staff, welcomed the delegation.

Kroll Predicts

PROGRESSIVE VICTORY

"WE progressives are going to win on November 5th."

That was the optimistic message CIO Political Action Director Jack Kroll delivered before two national groups this week—the Sept. 28 "Conference of Progressives" in Chicago, and before the delegates to the convention of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Sponsored by the CIO-PAC, Natl. Citizens PAC and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences & Professions, the Chicago meeting was studded with such proponents of the New Deal as CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Sen. Claude Pepper (D. Fla.), former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

In addition, the conferees were to hear such outstanding liberals as Rep. Charles LaFollette (R.-Ind.) and Walter White, executive secretary of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. All issued a call for relentless war on reaction between now and November 5.

Kroll cited the Madison Square Garden speech of Henry Wallace as expressing the hopes of the American people for peace based on President Roosevelt's program of Big Three unity.

"Our foreign policy must be an American foreign policy representing the best interests of the common man in this country and all other countries," Kroll said. "Our foreign policy must treat the interests of all nations and of all peoples with equal consideration and without discrimination in favor or against any one nation or any one bloc of nations. That is in the tradition of American fair play."

Such a policy, the speaker declared, is the opposite of the "swaggering, bullying policy which the bi-partisan coalition of reactionaries is trying to foist up on the American people."

Progressives, he said, repudiate imperialism in any form. They "aren't interested in exclusive alliances with any one nation or any group of nations. They are interested in the United Nations."

Exhorting progressives to abandon all lethargy and to steer clear of irrelevant issues which would divide their ranks now, Kroll continued:

"The philosophy Franklin D. Roosevelt gave us is a living philosophy today. There are millions of people ready to take up his challenge.

"They want leadership, and it is up to us to provide them with the realization that the leadership is here, ready and moving into action."

He named as the most immediate tasks of all progressive groups the dissemination of the truth about their candidates and stimulation of a big vote.

BRICKER AND SOAP

No price is too dear for a seat in the U. S. Senate. Ohio's former governor, John Bricker, has just filed application with the Federal Communications Commission for a new radio station in Columbus, which will offer the labor-haters' "virtues" as soap opera competition.

In with Bricker on the $100,000 deal are John Galbreath, head of the infamous real estate lobby, insurance man and co-owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates; Austin Wood, vice president and general manager of a West Virginia chain of newspapers which already owns a radio station in Marietta and is seeking to buy two more; G. Bennett Larsen, manager of station WPEN, Philadelphia, and part owner of station WHOW, Baltimore, and S. L. Keller, director of United Press foreign features in New York.

Wages and Prices

DEBUNKING A MYTH

INDUSTRY's claim that high wages automatically mean high prices was examined in detail and found wanting in this month's CIO Economic Outlook.

In an article, "Exploding the 'High Wage-High Price' Myth," the publication of the CIO Dept. of Research & Education said:

"Industry has to sell the American people the idea that any wage increase must lead to a price increase. This idea runs contrary to all of American economic history. American industry and mass production methods have been built on the foundation of rising wages and rising living standards."

The Outlook charged that industrial spokesmen have sought to impress the public with the notion that wages and salaries are the only cost in running a business, and to propagate the theory that "if wages go up 10%, prices must naturally rise 10%."

"The truth of the matter," the Outlook said, "is that wages constitute only a minor proportion of all costs in manufacturing.

"Although the proportion of labor costs to total costs vary from industry to industry, wages and salaries average about 25% of all costs in manufacturing, according to the U. S. Federal Trade Commission reports.

"This means that even if higher wages did necessarily raise prices, every 10% wage raise would increase the total production cost only ¼ as much, or by 2½%. In other words, if a product costs $4 to manufacture, and wages are ¼, or $1 of this cost, a 10% wage raise (10% of $1) will increase the cost of production 10c or 2½% of $4 (the total cost.)"

MANAGEMENT has been spurred to increased efficiency in order to meet whatever higher costs have arisen from wage increases, the Outlook said. It cited the experiences of the Riverside & Dan River Mills, one of the largest textile units in the country, whose average hourly wage payments were lifted 38% by the imposition of minimum wages in the Natl. Recovery Act of 1933. The firm's total labor costs, however, were found to have risen only one-third of that.

The Outlook quoted one of the company's top executives, who explained that the absorption of the increased cost had been effected by "utilization of improved machinery, better management in production, better application of skilled labor and more adequate scheduling of the flow of production, and better selection of materials."

A study conducted among four gas mask producers by F. H. Harbison of the University of Chicago, was also cited by the Outlook to show the lack of direct relationship between wage rates and prices. The plant with the highest take-home pay—$1.17 an hour—had had a direct labor cost of only 52c per mask. In the other plants the cost varied from 61c to 87c, while their take-home wage payments ranged from 72c an hour to only $1 an hour.

"To top it off," the Outlook noted, "the total cost of gas masks in the most efficient plant was less than that of any of the other manufacturers.

"In other words, the plant paying the highest wages was producing at the lowest unit cost. The explanation can probably be found in more efficient management, better worker morale and similar factors. In any event, the moral is clear; higher wages do not necessarily mean higher prices, and frequently they mean quite the reverse."

CIO Registers

BUT CALLS LOBBY LAW INADEQUATE

CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan said this week he will register as a "lobbyist" under provisions of the LaFollette-Monroney Act, and will advise Washington legislative representatives of CIO affiliates to do likewise.

In a statement accompanying the announcement, he said that he doubted that the law is adequate to bring to light the real story of how big business influences legislation. On the other hand, he declared:

"The influence of CIO, which is the chosen representative of some 6,000,000 American citizens, arises not from the activities of a few people in Washington, but from the needs and aspirations of American workingmen and women.

"The CIO 'lobby' is in reality its millions of members who communicate with their congressmen by mail, telegraph, union resolution or personal visit. The function of our union representatives in Washington is essentially directed to keeping our members in every state adequately informed of the progress of legislation in which we are interested, and in helping communicate the workers' views to the Congressmen.

"IN complying with the provisions of the registration act we challenge the representatives of the thousand and one corporations, trade associations, big business front organizations and other outfits which constitute the special-interest lobby in Washington to bare their own record of activity and expenditures.

"We doubt that the present law is adequate to bring to the surface the real story of money and outlets for propaganda through which big business and its organizational associates wheedle special concessions and protection from the government of the United States.

"Against this array of personnel, talent and cash, the efforts of the CIO and other public service organizations to represent adequately the vast majority of the American people in the halls of government have been relatively unsuccessful in recent months. The failure of Congress to provide the nation with adequate price control, housing or health legislation testifies to the power of the behind-the-scenes pressure of the big business lobbyists.

"In the coming elections, the CIO, through its Political Action Committee, and together with other progressive organizations, will attempt to change the complexion of a Congress which failed completely to heed the needs of the general public."

JOB RULING ON VETS

Superseniority—which was declared illegal by the Supreme Court—this week got another rebuff, from Arbitrator Dudley Whiting, who found that the American Radiator & Specialty Co., Buffalo, N. Y., should not have laid off and deprived eight workers of their seniority to make room for veterans.

The company had originally agreed to pay these men for time lost, but reneged when it looked as though the 79th Congress would pass the Andrews bill—which would have barred workers fired under Selective Service superseniority from collecting lost pay.

The CIO Steelworkers, who hold a contract with the firm, took the case to the arbitrator, who ordered the lost wages paid and seniority of the workers reinstated.

DEMAND LEGION BE PROGRESSIVE

The Natl. Conference of Union Labor Legionnaires has called on the American Legion convention meeting during the week of Sept. 29 at San Francisco to support a progressive program.

In its September news letter the conference asked the Legion to back the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill; Federal, state and municipal FEPC measures; the Murray-Wagner-Dingell health bill; immigration of some of the displaced persons of Central Europe; abolition of the polltax and of the Rankin-Wood Un-American Activities Committee.

TO STUDY GERMANY

CIO Reconversion Officer Ted Silvey will leave the U. S. Oct. 16 for a four-month study of German developments in scientific personnel management and industrial training under the auspices of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce.

The project will include all German developments in the American, British and French occupation zones covering research, practice or plans to increase the well-being or efficiency of the individual worker, the industrial working group or the nation as a whole.

Silvey is one of two labor representatives invited to participate, the AFL being invited to name one of its economic experts also.

All those selected were cleared on their general knowledge of the subject and had to meet requirements for having a national reputation in their particular field. The entire group will include about 15 persons, with representatives of business and industry as well as government and labor.

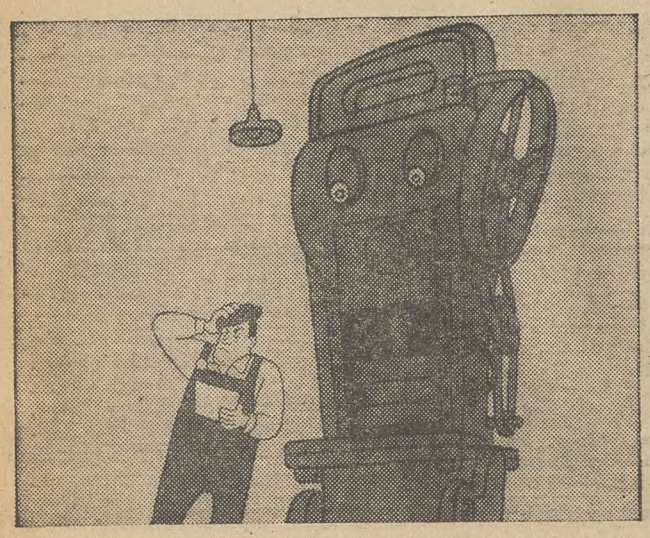
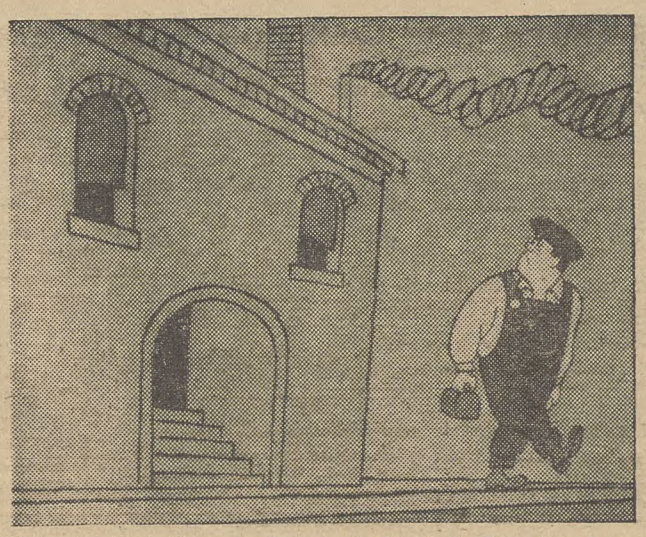
GUARANTEED WAGES THE YEAR AROUND

CIO's new sound film strip, done in four colors, is being released Oct. 1 by the CIO Dept. of Research & Education. It was produced by United Productions of America, Hollywood, in cartoon style, with music and dialogue. The strip has been praised by producers in the field. "Guaranteed Wages the Year Round" requires a sound film machine which will play a 16-inch record at 33⅓ r.p.m. For information on film rental and purchase rates, write CIO Dept. of Research & Education, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

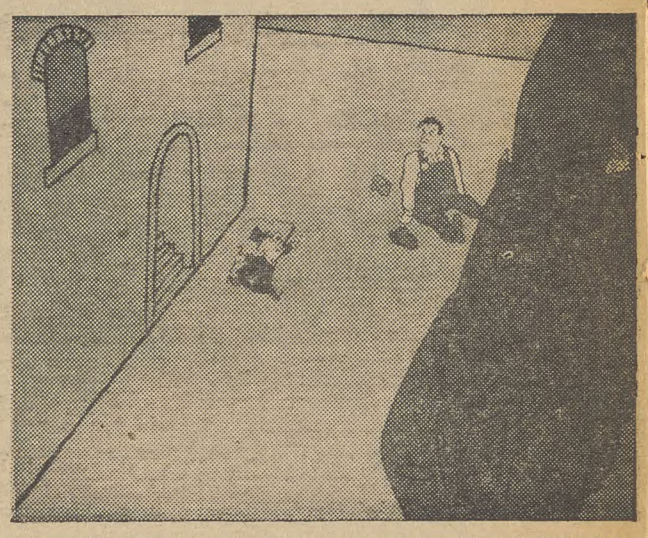
1 Meet Jonathan Smith of the CIO. Now Jonathan's been able to weather a few depressions, and he knows what it's like to be out of work.



5 It didn't last long. "Too bad," said his machine. "What," asked Jonathan, "do you know about layoffs? Used or not, you're repaired and maintained."



6 "Have a nice layoff," called the building to Jonathan, "and don't complain. After all, they have to care for me all year 'round."

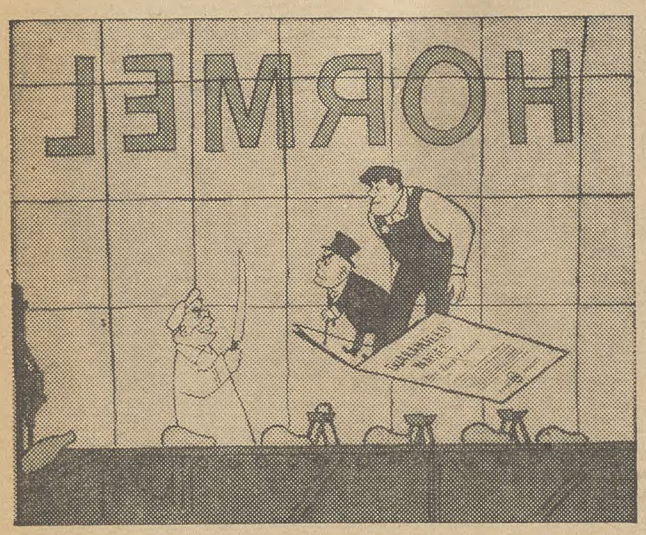


7 Just then the boss' car pulled up, almost knocking Jonathan down. Out rushed the boss. Sighting Jonathan, he yelled, "Why aren't you at work?"

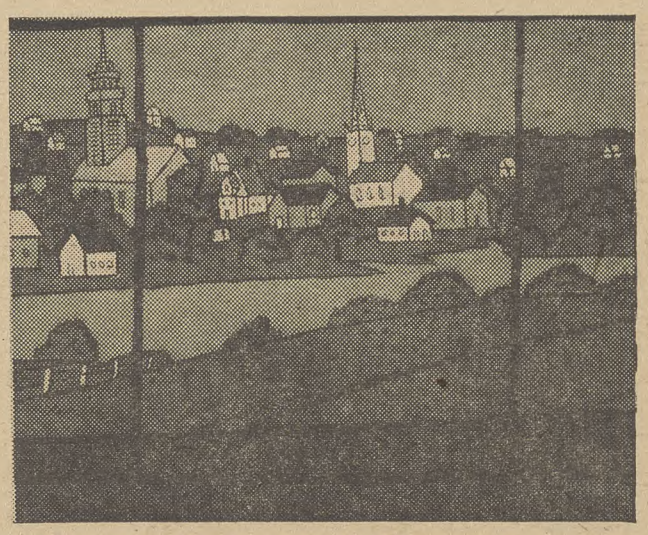
11 "Preposterous! Against all sound economics," spluttered the boss. "You just let me worry about when you work," said the boss.

12 "Not this time," said Jonathan, whipping out the pamphlet. "If you don't know the answer, here it is." "Propaganda!" sneered the boss.

13 "It also shows how it profits the boss, too," purred Jonathan. "Profits! Profits! I wanna see about the profits," pleaded the boss.

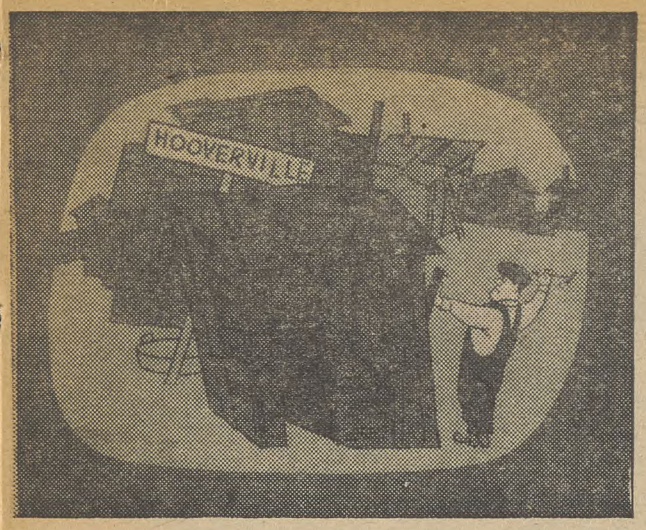


17 "I get it. Everyone profits but management," said the boss. "I won't speak for management," said the worker, "but our income is steadier."

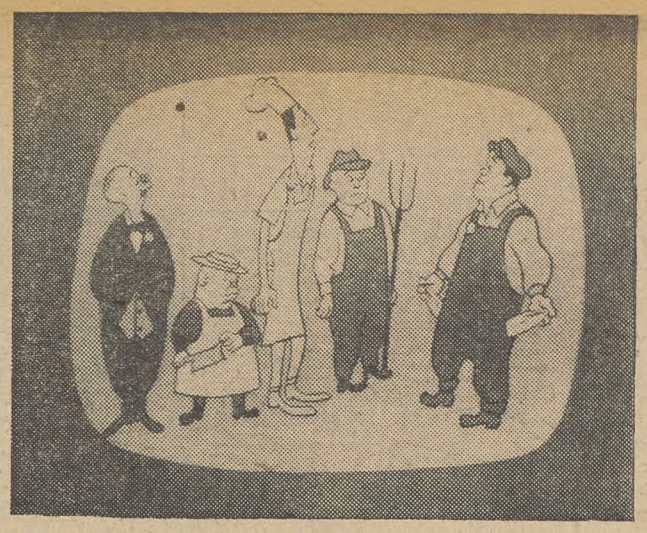


18 "And you can see the difference in the community. We own our homes, have better parks, schools, hospitals and libraries."

19 "How can they pay annual wages in a seasonal industry?" said the boss. "We've a permanent labor force shifted to meet seasonal needs."

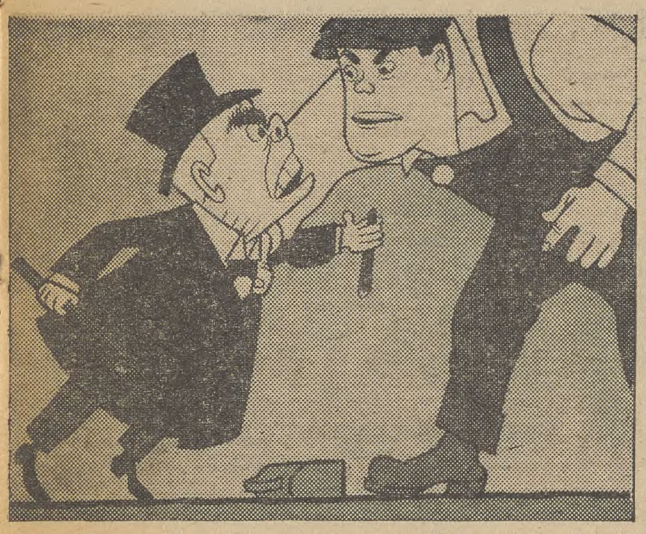


2 Ordinarily, he's just about getting back on his feet, when along comes another shutdown, or what the papers call a recession.

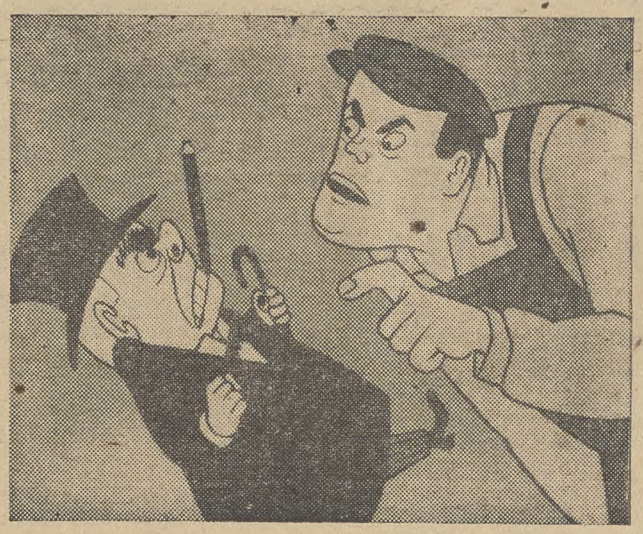


3 This spells trouble for Jonathan's family, and for the furniture man, the butcher, the baker, and the farmer who make a living by selling to Jonathan.

4 Jonathan is thinking about that CIO pamphlet, stuffed in his pocket, on the guaranteed annual wage. He's working now, but doesn't know how long.

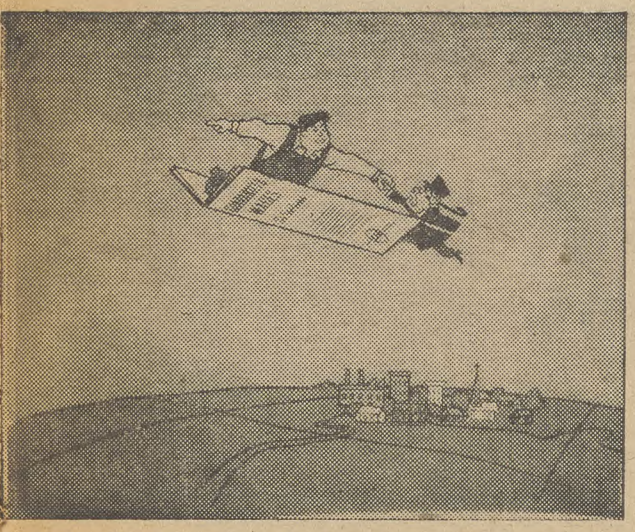


8 "You ought to know. You just fired me," snapped Jonathan. "Too bad—another one of those seasonal layoffs," sighed the boss.

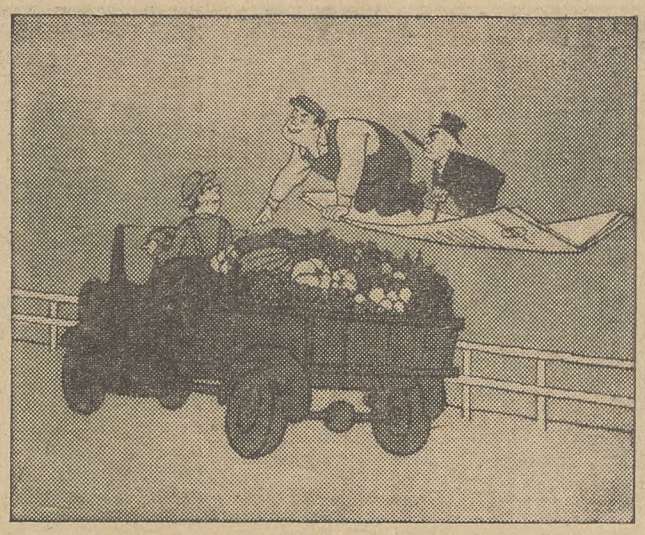


9 "How about you, are you laid off along with me?" asked Jonathan. "Don't talk nonsense. My services are contracted for on a yearly basis," replied the boss.

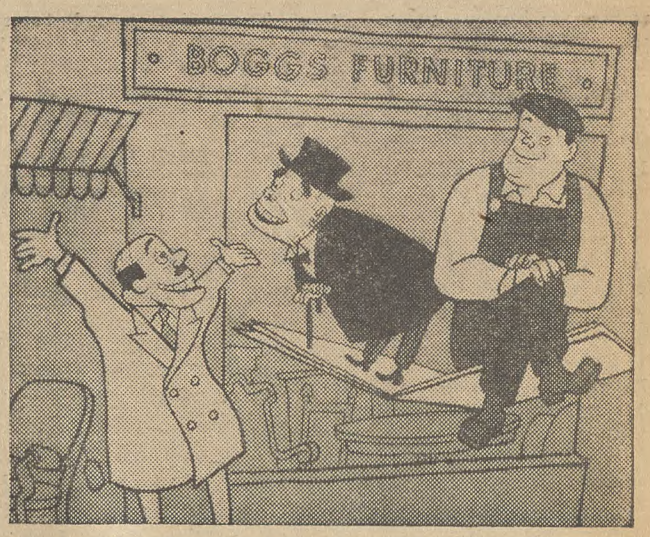
10 "Oh! You're on a yearly basis, and you pay dividends and rent on the building yearly. I have to eat all year 'round."



14 "Hang on," said Jonathan, "we'll ride this pamphlet out to the CIO Packinghouse workers at Hormel Meat Co., Austin, Minn."



15 "Here's Austin," said Jonathan. "Have any trouble selling those vegetables, farmer?" "Not since they put in the annual wage," he replied.



16 "Bah," growled the boss, "let's try this businessman. Business is awful, eh, Boggs?" "Business is great," answered Boggs.

20 "Most confusing," said the boss. "Is this the only plan in effect?" Jonathan told him, "Almost 100 CIO locals have annual wage contracts."

21 If this were a movie, it might end with Jonathan marrying the boss' daughter, and the boss might insist on a guaranteed annual wage.

22 But a CIO member knows better than that. The happy ending will be written by getting the annual wage into a contract through your union.

Shipbuilding Union

TO DEMAND MORE PAY

By SAMUEL J. KRAMER

WORKERS in the industry worst hit by cutbacks after the war assembled at the 12th convention of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers this week at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., proved themselves a potent force for an American labor movement, determined to organize the unorganized and fight reaction on all fronts.

Backed by a thumping majority, incumbent national officers—Pres. John Green, Vice Pres. John G. Grogan and Sec.-Treas. Ross D. Blood—appeared certain of re-election in the voting scheduled for late this week.

Greetings from Pres. Truman hailed the union's war effort, declaring, "Your part in building bridge of ships that carried us to victory will never be forgotten.

Resolutions adopted by the convention in the first three days of the sessions were in keeping with traditional progressivism of both IUMSWA and CIO. These:

Called on Congress to enact real price control legislation, and on CIO to initiate a "all-labor" conference to present solid front against inflation.

Instructed incoming officers to frame new wage demands to reflect increased living costs, when annual wage review for industry is held in January.

Urged that colleges denying admittance to veterans otherwise qualified, for reasons of race or religion, be denied all Federal aid, State grants or tax exemptions.

Endorsed a bill introduced by Sen. Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) that would grant income tax credits to those whose incomes fall below minimum levels, on the same basis that corparations benefit under the carry-back carry-forward provision of the excess profits taxes.

Proposed an educational campaign on terms and benefits due under workmen's compensations laws, so that members won't be victimized by ignorance of statutes.

Assailed the Ku Klux Klan and all similar organizations, committing the union and its members to fight all racial and religious bigotry, and demanding that Congress enact a FEPC law.

Hailed the leadership of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, urging both to remain in office, and instructing Shipbuilding delegates to the forthcoming CIO convention "to work and vote for" their re-election. IUMSWA conferred lifetime honorory membership on Murray.

Assailed compulsory features of the civil service retirement fund, demanding that it be placed on a voluntary basis, after noting that IUMSWA members in Navy yards who are being laid off are the victims of discrimination since refunds are difficult to obtain, while the workers are ineligible for state employment insurance or for social security.

Favored creation of National system of medical and dental care.

Voiced the union's sorrow over the death of Sidney Hillman, with the delegates standing in silent tribute.

Endorsed the candidacies of Sen. James Mead and Herbert Lehman for N. Y. governor and U. S. senator respectively. When Mead made a surprise appearance at the convention, he received an enthusiastic welcome from the delegates.

Demanded that state insurance laws be amended to permit union representation on boards of employer-sponsored retirement funds to which workers contribute.

Speakers at the convention included CIO Sec.-Treas. Carey, whose condemnation of the Communist party for attempting to influence American labor to a Russian orientation was warmly received by the delegates; Undersecretary of War Kenneth S. Royall, Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the CIO Clothing Workers, and E. A. McMillan of the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee.

Officers reported that despite cutbacks, 34,025 new members were recruited last year, that IUMSWA won 27 out of 34 NLRB elections, losing only three to the AFL, that 14 new shops were brought under contract, among them the huge Higgins, Inc., yards, New Orleans, where the AFL was ousted, and Camden Forge reconverting plant.

The union moved to extend jurisdictions to "allied industries," in which members may be employed after shipyard lay-offs.

Georgia CIO

FIGHTS WHITE PRIMARY

STRONG opposition to the attempt of reactionary forces to reimpose the white primary on Georgia's statute books was expressed at the annual convention of the Georgia CIO Industrial Union Council at Macon last weekend.

The more than 300 delegates declared in a resolution that the attempt is undemocratic and violates the interests of all CIO members by threatening to disfranchise Negro CIO membership and weaken democracy in the south.

Other resolutions demanded punishment of lynchers, endorsed the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill and called for more funds for the NLRB.

Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO southern organizing drive, said the CIO now has seven million members in the nation and the real reason for the drive in the south is to win parity for southern workers. He said workers in Ohio have three times the purchasing power of Dixie workers.

Charles H. Gillman was re-elected council president, and all other officers were renamed except Garland Brooks, Greensboro, who was defeated for second vice-president by C. N. King, Rome.

WALLACE FIRING HIT

President Truman's dismissal of Henry Wallace was sharply condemned and the former Secretary of Commerce's position on world peace was strongly supported this week by several CIO international unions, industrial union councils and other affiliates.

Pres. Grant Oakes and Sec.-Treas. Gerald Fields of the Farm Equipment Workers declared:

"The doubts and opposition of the people to the war and reaction-breeding policies of Truman and the Republicans will swell a thousand-fold.

"Wallace has shown us that we can have peace. Wallace has shown us that we can build democracy and progress throughout the world. Truman repudiates this prospect."

The General Executive Board of the CIO Office & Professional Workers urged Wallace to continue to speak out against the danger of our present foreign policy.

Councils issuing statements of support included: Greater N. Y. City, Duluth, Indiana and San Francisco.

Among other organizations criticizing the dismissal of the last New Dealer from the Cabinet were: the Massachusetts CIO-PAC, District Council 6 of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at Pittsburgh, the N. Y. Transport Workers and various CIO locals.

WARNS OF STRIKE

IMMEDIATE federal intervention "to prevent an interruption in vital communications services" was urged in a wire to Labor Secretary Schwellenbach this week, by Pres. Joseph Selly of the CIO American Communications Assn.

Selly's hint of a possible walkout by the 7,000 ACA members employed by Western Union in N. Y. City made the strike picture against the giant monopoly complete. A walkout by 50,000 AFL members employed by Western Union in the rest of the country is also in the offing.

END J. CROW JOB LINES

The fight of the Washington, D. C., CIO Council to end segregation of white and Negro job applicants at D. C. U. S. Employment Service offices ended victoriously this week when Labor Secretary Schwellenbach issued orders discontinuing the practice, effective Sept. 30.

No longer will there be separate lines for white and Negro job applicants, separate sets of interviewers and two sets of files.

Schwellenbach pointed out that the result would not only be equitable treatment for all applicants but improved efficiency.

Missouri CIO Hears

MVA FOES BLASTED

JOHN BROPHY, CIO IUC director, speaking at the convention of the Missouri CIO Council last weekend blamed Congress, the Army Engineers Corps, the U. S. Reclamation Bureau and the electric power companies for the failure to establish a Missouri Valley Authority.

He said that "if perhaps we can turn our attention somewhat away from questions of military security and look at the creative job which can be done in the international fields," the nations might do something to prevent famine and to relieve the world-wide housing situation.

A resolution condemning Pres. Truman for firing Commerce Sec. Wallace was ruled out of order.

Missouri Council officers were relected as follows: Pres. Harold Edwards; Vice. Pres. Ray Mertens; Sec. Treas. James A. Davis and Sergeant at Arms Ralph Jobe, Jr.

Resolutions called for a state bonus for veterans to be financed by an income tax on corporations; for payment of unemployment compensation to strikers; homes for veterans, better pay for teachers and expansion of union organization, especially in the South.

Stone Union

SPURS DIXIE DRIVE

THE CIO Stone and Allied Products Workers at their fifth convention this week at York, Pa., voted funds for organization, with special emphasis on the South.

The delegates acted after hearing a report on the southern organizing campaign from CIO Regional Director George Craig, Philadelphia, assigned to the drive, and a recommendation of their international officers that the union open an office at Winston-Salem, N. C., to assist the drive.

The convention in a resolution upheld former Commerce Sec. Wallace as "having clearly stated the issues and courageously set forth a noble and constructive program for the improvement of relations between the great powers and a method to solve the problems of peace of all men."

The delegates called on every American to read carefully and calmly Wallace's foreign policy speech and his letter to Pres. Truman.

Presiding officer was Samuel H. Scott, Winston-Salem, N. C., president, succeeding H. C. Ledyard, who held the post for three terms. At a testimonial banquet Sec-Treas. John C. Lawson in behalf of the union presented Ledyard with a gift in tribute to Ledyard's quarter-century of service in the labor movement.

The convention petitioned the OPA and the Dept. of Justice to force the meat packing industry to "stop sabotaging the American people."

Other resolutions called for 100% support for the CIO Political Action Program, condemned the jailing without jury trial of George L. Mueller, president of the independent union of Duquesne Light Co., Pittsburgh.

The delegates also voted to assist in the passage of the labor extension service bill after hearing a speech by Frank Fernbach, CIO liaison officer on the Committee for the Extension of Labor Education.

ANSWER ATTACKS

ANSWERING increasing attacks by the Printing Pressmen's Union and the Photo-Engravers' Union, both AFL, the CIO Amalgamated Lithographers this week advised all locals in the U. S. and Canada not to permit members of these unions to do any part of offset work.

The order was issued by the Lithographer's Intl. Council, meeting this week in Atlantic City, and is the latest development in the jurisdictional fight between certain AFL printing unions and the Amalgamated, which has jurisdiction over all workers in the offset lithography industry.

The Lithographers joined the CIO in May 1946 after belonging to the AFL 40 years.

Rubber Workers Decide

MORE PAY NEEDED TO LIVE

A DRIVE for wage increases and endorsement of Henry Wallace in his fight for peace were voted by the United Rubber Workers convention in its closing sessions in San Francisco last week.

The convention voted to demand "substantial wage increases to protect living standards in this period of rising prices."

To push the wage drive, the convention ordered the calling of a national wage policy conference on Oct. 21 to formulate exact demands and to determine procedure. Site of the meeting was left to the union's officers.

Under the union's agreement with the Big Four rubber companies, it is free to demand increases "when conditions in the industry warrant."

Voicing approval of Wallace's policies, the convention declared:

"This convention deplores the removal of Mr. Wallace from the cabinet and we pledge to him our continued support in his battle for the rights of the common man and for a lasting peace throughout the world."

The 320 delegates also backed veterans' demands for jobs, especially jobs for disabled veterans; endorsed state and federal bonuses for veterans; urged spreading of the six-hour day throughout American industry; condemned the Ku Klux Klan and other hate groups, and asked for a permanent FEPC.

The convention also asked for a Dept. of Justice investigation of the current tire shortage despite production which has broken all records, and voted an intensified drive for uniform contracts in the rubber industry and appointment of special PAC representatives to speed up the union's nationwide PAC work.

Pres. L. S. Buckmaster, Vice. Pres. H. R. Lloyd, and Secy.-Treas. Charles Lanning were reelected.

Elected to the executive board were W. I. Vaught, Francis Hannley, and Joseph L. Childs, all of Akron, O.; Joseph Luciano, Erie, Pa.; J. P. Taylor, Gadsden, Ala.; Elton Gladney, Buffalo, N. Y.; Don Sargent, Mishawaka, Ind.; Edward L. Barnes, Los Angeles, Calif.; Leo George, Detroit, Mich.; John Baldante, Newark, N. J.; Joseph Mackenzie, New Toronto, Ont., and Magne Repaal, Eau Claire, Wis.

TRANSPORT WORKERS GAIN STEADILY THROUGHOUT U. S.

STEADY organizational gains have been made in all parts of the country, the executive board of the CIO Transport Workers reported this week at the opening session of the four-day fifth biennial convention of the union in N. Y. City.

The report, by Sec.-Treas. Douglas L. MacMahon, cited victories in New York City, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Akron, O.; Columbus, O.; Chicago, Ill.; New Orleans, La.; Omaha, Neb., and other cities. It followed a welcoming speech by New York City Councilman Michael J. Quill, union president.

In New York City, the report noted, a special transit committee appointed by Mayor William O'Dwyer after the TWU's strike threat, had recommended a 20-cent-an-hour across-the-board increase for 33,000 employes of the N. Y. City Transit System, as well as genuine collective bargaining, which includes recommendations for a State Labor Board election and voluntary check-off.

Reporting on the organization of airline maintenance employes, MacMahon said that the TWU was sole bargaining representative in the largest international airline, Pan-American Airways, and in the largest domestic carrier, American Airlines.

Analyzing national and foreign affairs, the report declared that "the coalition of reactionary Republicans and poll-tax Democrats that fought President Roosevelt and the people, now controls the Congress of the United States."

It declared that an era had passed with the death of President Roosevelt, and said, "Contrast the friendly relations established by President Roosevelt with the other democratic nations of the world with the policy of the present Administration based on atom bomb diplomacy."

MINE, MILL RANK AND FILE MAP POLICY

By MORRIS WRIGHT

RANK and file participation in policy making reached a new high level at the convention of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers last week.

Committee work and floor action centered around a 10-point program proposed by Pres. Reid Robinson, endorsed by the executive board some six weeks before the convention, and circulated among the entire membership in printed form.

The convention approved the program which embraces wage policy, political action, organization, education, veterans affairs and foreign policy.

The convention adopted a strong statement condemning the removal of Henry A. Wallace from the cabinet of President Truman, upholding Wallace's plea for a return to the foreign policy of Franklin Roosevelt. The IUMM&SW also asked the President to fire Sec. of State Byrnes and blasted the "get tough" attitude of the Byrnes - Vandenberg - Connally coalition as a betrayal of American interests and a threat to world peace.

Resolutions called for immediate removal of U. S. troops from China, breaking diplomatic relations with Franco Spain and support of the Spanish Republican government.

The World Federation of Trade Unions was declared to be the hope of world peace. A communication to the United Nations asked that the WFTU be given a voice in its councils.

Robinson, after receiving a strong vote of confidence, was nominated for a sixth two-year term as president. His opponent is the union's present Sec.-Treas., James J. Leary. Both are from Local 1, Butte, Mont. Election will be by membership referendum Nov. 4.

On the Robinson slate, Maurice Travis of San Francisco was nominated to oppose incumbent Vice-Pres. Ralph Rasmussen, Salt Lake City. Charles Moyer, Pottstown, is unopposed for secretary-treasurer. Of the six-board members in support of Robinson, two are unopposed for reelection. The three anti-Robinson candidates face contests.

The convention voted down a proposed change in the constitution which would have barred "known or proven communists" from holding union office. After rejecting this as a red-baiting move, the delegates approved a majority committee report quoting from the record of the Steelworkers convention of this year —the much-quoted statement of CIO Pres. Philip Murray against purges and witch hunts, in defense of full union citizenship for all members regardless of race, color, sex, creed, nationality or political belief.

WOUNDED VET-ORGANIZER BEATEN AT ALABAMA PLANT

SEVENTEEN CIO organizers and union members have been assaulted since the CIO's membership campaign began late in May, Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee reported this week. Bittner said:

"Our general counsel, Jerome Cooper of Birmingham, has begun an investigation with the view of prosecuting certain employers on charges of conspiracy to violate the U. S. laws. 'We do not intend to stand idly by and allow anybody to harm our representatives.

"One of the worst things about this situation is that law enforcement officers in some towns are working in close collusion with employers or have become suddenly blind to the beating of organizers and union members.

"Back in July Bennie Bibb, president of a CIO union at Montgomery, Ala., was beaten by a deputy sheriff.

"CIO Field Representative Thomas Prosser was attacked and beaten at the Mignon Plant of the Avondale Mills at Sylacauga, Ala., in July. Prosser is a veteran of World War II who was wounded in action, and is unable to defend himself because of a crippled arm.

"On August 20 two CIO organizers, K. G. Ingle and W. J. Andrews, were attacked by four assailants at a cafe near Evergreen, Ala. On the following day a union meeting was called off to avoid trouble from a group of 'viligantes,' which included two foremen of a company whose employes the CIO is organizing.

"Ingle left the meeting place with representative James H. Martin of the CIO Woodworkers. The 'viligantes' followed and fired on Martin's car. The car caught on fire, and about 15 of the 'viligantes' gathered around and 'threatened to shoot hell' out of Ingle if he refused to submit to a 'horsewhipping.

"A farmer, at whose home Ingle sought refuge immediately after Martin's car caught on fire, held off the crowd until Ingle, a World War I veteran, was able to slip off into the woods, where he spent the night. The cases cited here are typical of the assault cases."

CHEMICAL UNION EYES INDUSTRY'S GIANTS

By MEL FISKE

STREAMLINED in name and organizing structure, the CIO United Chemical Workers closed its third convention last week with its eyes on the giants of the chemical industry.

Meeting in N. Y. City when President Truman fired Henry Wallace from his cabinet position, the 365 delegates at the convention unanimously urged the president to reinstate the former Secretary of Commerce.

"Your action is a complete break with the foreign and domestic policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt," the delegates told the President in a telegram. "We recognize your action as a complete surrender to the reactionary forces of the world who are seeking to lead our country into a third and devastating world war."

With two organizational vice-presidents added to its staff of officers, the CIO Chemical Workers proposed to double its present membership of over 55,000 within the next two years. The union's old name was the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers of America.

Unanimous rising votes reelected the union's officers, Pres. Martin Wagner, Vice-Pres. William Ross and Sec.-Treas. Cecil Martin.

A constitutional change provided for the election of two organizational vice-presidents and C. W. Danenburg of Greensboro, N. C., and Charles Doyle of Niagara Falls, N. Y., were unanimously chosen to fill the posts.

CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood congratulated the union on its victory at one of the three atomic energy plants in Oak Ridge, Tenn.

"This is a good sign that the union is well on its way toward becoming one of the biggest unions in the CIO," Haywood declared.

"Our union can grow to be the largest and greatest union in the CIO," Wagner said. "By expanding our organizational activities and by placing our best organizational brains behind the huge job, we are taking the first step toward that goal.

"Our convention has been a unified convention, typifying the unity prevailing throughout our union. This unity has resulted in constructive programs that will mean our union's continued growth."

The CIO was called upon in a resolution "to maintain and extend its interest" in the World Federation of Trade Unions to insure against involvement "of the little people of the world in future wars."

The delegates voted for creating a department of research and education, increasing the dues to $1.50 a month and per capita tax payments to the international from 60 to 75 cents a month.

Two new executive board members, Gavin Mitchell, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Joseph Joy, Charleston, W. Va., were elected, and eight other board members were re-elected. They are:

Charles Moeller, Stamford, Conn.; Fred Hamilton, N. Y. City; David Elliot, Newark, N. J.; Wendell Ringholz, Cleveland, Ohio; Chester Adamczyk, Detroit, Mich.; Chester Walczak, Chicago; Thoma Chester Walczak, Chicago; Thomas Morley, St. Louis, and C. W. Danenburg.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

AN INDUSTRY - WIDE campaign to improve wages and working conditions for more than 100,000 foundry workers will be launched at a CIO Auto Workers' Natl. Foundry Conference to be held Dec. 7 and 8 in Milwaukee, Wis., by UAW-CIO Vice-Pres. and Competitive Shop Director R. J. Thomas.

Thomas said: "The Competitive Shop Dept. is determined to wipe out the intolerable working conditions in foundries throughout the automotive industry. Foundry workers for too long have been handling the dirtiest and most dangerous work in the auto industry at the lowest wage scales."

ASSURANCE of full moral, political and economic support from organized Cuban sugar workers was relayed to 25,000 sugar workers in Hawaii this week by the CIO Longshoremen & Warehousemen. The Hawaiian sugar workers, members of the ILWU, have been on strike since Sept. 1 for a minimum of 65c an hour and other demands. Their strike has been 100 per cent effective and has stopped all sugar production in the islands.

SEA STRIKE LIKELY IF PARLEYS FAIL

THE Longshoremen and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., both CIO affiliates and members of the Committee for Maritime Unity were joined in unified action in negotiations and were prepared to walk the bricks together come midnight, Sept. 30, should the parleys bog down. Members of both unions have authorized strikes.

On the West Coast the Longshoremen under the leadership of Harry Bridges were meeting with the Waterfront Employers Assn. of San Francisco and U. S. Conciliator Feinsinger.

They were fighting hard for a safety code with violations to be handled as grievances. Union officials said that the membership is eager for this clause to cut the accident rate—reported by the U. S. Labor Dept. as the highest in U. S. industry, being 10 to 11 times higher than in the steel industry and even one and a half times higher than in logging.

The Longshoremen also were asking $1.70 an hour—a 33c increase—a contract covering "walking bosses" — foremen — and a minimum of four hours pay when called to a job, an effort to eliminate the casualness of employment. The ILWV did not previously announce its pay demands because of the uncertainty caused by Congressional tinkering with OPA.

MEBA negotiations were held up late this week in Washington by the failure of J. B. Bryan, president of the Pacific American Shipowners Assn., to make up his mind whether he would attend the meeting with the union, U. S. conciliators and the Atlantic and Gulf ship owners and agents. These ship owners took the position that since a union agreement was being negotiated they would not proceed in the absence of Pacific Coast management, MEBA Pres. Samuel Hogan reported.

MEBA was demanding a 35% pay increase, 30-day vacations, $2 an hour overtime—the rate is now less than straight time—and a uniform union security clause in all contracts.

While the status of the negotiations was uncertain, there was no doubt about the unity of the CIO unions, the Longshoremen's negotiating committee having voted unanimously that it would not settle its demands until a satisfactory agreement was reached by MEBA.

Employes of the Bankers Trust Co., Wall St., N. Y., demonstrate during lunch hour against management refusal to renegotiate contract held by CIO Office & Professional Workers. A few days before the union's executive board voted funds and assigned personnel for intensive organization of Wall St. Seventeen major banks are organized.

Power Injunction Illegal—CIO

THE CIO charged this week that an injunction issued by the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court, Pittsburgh, Pa., violates the 13th Amendment of the U. S. Constitution and the Pa. Anti-Injunction Act.

Under the injunction George L. Mueller, president of the striking independent union of the Duquesne Light Co., was sentenced to jail for a year, but was released into the custody of his lawyer after serving a day.

When some CIO and AFL unions staged sympathy strikes, the court dissolved the injunction at the request of the city which requested it in the first place.

The legal staff of the CIO, which is not a party to the dispute, filed a brief as a friend of the court "because as a labor organization with millions of members it is vitally concerned with the resort to injunctions as strike-breaking instrumentalities in situations such as herein involved." The brief pointed out:

"The 13th Amendment prohibits 'involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crimes whereof the party shall have been duly convicted.' A strike is an exercise by workers of the right to refrain from working. The suppression of free labor means forced labor. It means involuntary servitude. As Abraham Lincoln pointed out, the right to strike is the hallmark of a democratic society. . . .

The order issued in this case may stand only if the court ignores a thrice reiterated mandate of the legislature that the right to strike is guaranteed to the workers of the Commonwealth.

"The order issued in this case may stand only if the court disregards the Pennsylvania statutes depriving the court of the power to issue it.

"The order in the case may stand only in defiance of the express protections of the Federal Constitution. We respectfully submit both by the Constitution and statute the order is invalid."

77 VET-STRIKERS APPEAL TO TRUMAN

Seventy-seven exservice men and women, members of the CIO Textile Workers on strike against Gaffney Mfg. Co., Gaffney, S. C., this week petitioned President Truman to intervene in the year-old strike.

During the war the Army was forced to seize the mill—which was making surgical dressings—to obtain compliance with War Labor Board directives. When the Army left the plant after VJ Day, the company reduced minimum wages from 57½c an hour to 40c.

Strike Shows:

W. R. HEARST FRIENDLESS

Complete CIO and AFL unity on the picket line backed by wide public support including a committee of prominent citizens is paying off with results in the three-week lockout against the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild, CIO, by the Herald Express, Los Angeles' largest newspaper and Hearst's biggest money maker.

The Guild threw up picketlines when the management locked out 525 Guildsmen after negotiations over union demands for a 40 per cent pay increase collapsed Sept. 4. AFL printers, mailers, stereotypers, photoengravers and pressmen, electrical workers and the stationary engineers, and machinists (independent) are observing the lines.

For the past two weeks Pres. Milton Murray and Vice Pres. Joseph Collis of the national Guild have been aiding the local's officers in parleys with the top Hearst management.

MOVIE CLERKS PAY HIKED

Salary increases ranging from $6 to $15 a week were secured for 3,000 home office movie employes in N. Y. City and a strike averted, the CIO Office & Professional Workers announced this week in reporting the conclusion of new agreements with Paramount, Loew's-MGM, Columbia, 20th Century-Fox, RKO Pictures, RKO Radio Service, United Artists and Republic. New contracts also cover Warner Bros. and Universal publicists.

The agreements provide for a 15% increase in the minimum of all job classifications. Additional increases in take-home pay were guaranteed through the cutting of the work week from 40 to 37½ hours, with time one-half for overtime after 37½ hours.

RED CROSS RECOMMENDS DEMOCRATIC CHANGES

SWEEPING changes in the organizational structure of the American Red Cross were adopted by the present governing body, the Central Committee, at its September meeting in Washington, announces Natl. ARC Chairman Basil O'Connor.

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey represented CIO Pres. Philip Murray on the Advisory Committee which recommended the changes, termed by O'Connor "the most important and far-reaching changes in 40 years."

When they become effective, O'Connor said, they should "insure that the organization will be an appropriate and efficient instrument, reflecting the needs of all the people, to direct and guide the Red Cross in its field of service in the coming years." The recommended changes have been transmitted to the various chapters, O'Connor announced.

The revisions of the organization's charter, unchanged since 1905, provide at the national level for greatly increased representation from the chapters and from the public at large on the national governing body, and on the chapter level for participation by the membership in all chapter operations, O'Connor stated.

WOMEN'S WORKING CONDITIONS

CONTINUOUS progress has been made in the U. S. both in the number of state labor laws and in the standards they present for regulating women's hours and working conditions, according to a bulletin released recently by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor.

Discussing the basic laws with the wartime modifications, the report states: "The period of reconversion from a wartime to a peacetime economy offers a real opportunity and challenge to all states to review the content of existing legislation with a view toward early initiation of an active program for its improvement."

Types of law analyzed cover hours, regulations for sanitary and other plant facilities in establishments employing women, occupations that are prohibited to women, employment before and after childbirth, and industrial home work.

Only six states have any laws concerning the employment of women immediately before and after childbirth, and the standards set by these are inadequate, since they do not conform to the medical recommendation that women should not be employed for six weeks before and two months after childbirth, and they do not provide the right of subsequent re-employment.

POSTHUMOUS AWARD HONORS SIDNEY HILLMAN

In recognition of his "outstanding services in the war effort," the late Sidney Hillman, PAC-CIO chairman and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, this week was posthumously awarded the Presidential Medal for Merit.

Secretary of War Robert Patterson presented the award to Mrs. Bessie Hillman for her late husband at a ceremony in Patterson's office in the Pentagon building.

The citation read at the presentation of the medal praised Hillman "for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services to the U. S." as director of the Labor Division of the War Production Board.

"His sound advice concerning labor policy and his administration of the program of the labor divisions of various governmental war production groups, brought about the realization of the hopes of the nation in attuning labor to its grave responsibilities in connection with the winning of the war," declared the citation.

"His forceful methods of conciliation and persuasion in making both sides of conflicting interests compromise their dfferences resulted in the consummation of the all-out application of labor to war production. He worked assiduously and rendered invaluable service to his country without which the needed war production would not have been possible."

Unfair to Women

Prejudice and discrimination in industry against women is both unfair and a social waste, says Frances Perkins in a weekly column she writes for the labor press. Miss Perkins was recently appointed a Civil Service Commissioner by President Truman.

"Women are having a hard time to find jobs they want," she writes, "and many women who are serious hard workers, who never miss a day and work steadily and have dependents, are told when they apply for employment a long tale about a few women who worked out badly in the war industries."

Although it may be true that a small minority of the women who worked temporarily during the war may have been irresponsible, Miss Perkins says that "it is very unfair and unjust to the millions of women who need to make their own living and have long ago accepted the discipline of work to be faced with this."

Housing for Vets

More than 300,000 veterans, servicemen and their families are now living in public housing according to the Federal Housing Authority.

Included in the total are some 200,000 in war housing, 52,000 in public low-rent housing and nearly 42,000 in temporary emergency housing provided under the Veterans Emergency Housing program.

UAW Health Classes

The Health Institute of the CIO Auto Workers, operated in cooperation with Wayne and Michigan Universities, has announced the opening of new classes on Health and Safety Sept. 30, at the Health Institute, 7930 E. Jefferson, Detroit, Mich.

CIO WOMEN ASK MEAT PROBE

A Federal investigation of the current meat famine was demanded by the executive board of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries at a meeting last week in Cleveland.

A resolution passed by the board accused the meat packers of conducting a sitdown strike which has brought about an extensive black market and deprived wage earners and their families of meat.

President Truman was urged "to immediately appoint a committee including labor representatives to investigate and prosecute this deliberate campaign on the part of the meat packing industry to undermine the health and morale of the American people."

NEW PAMPHLETS

People's Program

The CIO Political Action Committee this week called for liberalizing present veterans' benefits, immediate British withdrawal from Palestine and increased educational facilities for all Americans with an end to discrimination.

The measures were proposed in The People's Program for 1946, released as No. 11 in PAC's pamphlet-of-the-month series, which will serve as the official guide by which Congressional candidates will be judged for office in the November elections.

Attacking the 79th Congress for slashing the purchasing power of the people, it urged "all voters to keep in mind what their Congressmen did to the OPA when they go to the polls in November."

Within two weeks after price controls were wiped out, the rise in living costs negated the gains made by wage increases during this year, the pamphlet points out.

America's Logjam

An instance of the vital interest taken by CIO unions in the problems of the industry in which their members work is a pamphlet published by the Intl. Woodworkers, "America's Logjam and How to Break It."

Written by the union's director of Research and Education, Ellery Foster, and David E. Jack, the pamphlet tells how the CIO Woodworkers union has helped to shed new light on the chronic problem of forest conservation, and suggests a plan for supplying lumber for today's urgent housing needs.

Reviewing the many forestry bills introduced before Congress, the pamphlet recommends support for the Hook bill as "a sensible, common-sense approach to our forestry problem" which would give aid to the small lumber operators similar to that given by the government to "dirt farmers."

"America's Logjam" has been issued by the CIO Dept. of Research & Education as one of its series of Facts for Action pamphlets, and may be ordered from CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., N. W., Washington 6, D. C. Price 15c a copy; 10 for $1; 100 for $8.50; 500 for $40.

Radio Handbook

Publication of PAC's 1946 Radio Handbook to be used in getting out a large vote in the November election was announced this week by the CIO Political Action Committee.

PAC Director Jack Kroll, in explaining PAC's intention to make broad use of radio said:

"We seek no favoritism—merely that labor be recognized as the contributing force it is in every community and that it be treated with equality as guaranteed under the regulations of the Federal Communications Commission.

The Handbook points out that the air belongs to the people and that broadcasters who lease the right to its use are obliged by the FCC to operate fairly and in the best interests of the community.

The booklet urges PAC and union groups to seek free time to counterbalance views broadcast by big business over millions of dollars of free time each year; to buy radio time in addition; to concentrate on "spot announcements"; to use straight speeches sparingly, and to protest labor-baiting and other objectionable programs.

Also discussed are procedures to be followed in obtaining broadcasting time and FM radio, which the pamphlet charges is being monopolized by the "big commercial radio groups, the NAM boys and the industrial cartels."

Copies of the Radio Handbook, now available for use by local PAC and union groups, may be obtained from Natl. PAC, 205 E. 42nd St., N. Y. 17.

Labor Digest

A bright new monthly digest of world labor events called LABOR REVIEW made its first appearance in Detroit right on the heels of Labor Day.

Published by Ben Yomen, well-known labor artist, the publication presents a cross-section of labor throughout the world in the form of reprinted articles and original material.

In an editorial statement marking its birthday issue, Labor Review declared its dedication to Abraham Lincoln's statement: "The strongest bond of human sympathy outside of the family relation should be one uniting all working people of all nations, tongues and kindreds."

END RULE OF ROPE AND FAGGOT, URGES ANTI-LYNCHING CRUSADE

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

FIRM in their determination to put a stop to mob violence against the Negro race, a delegation of 1,500 men and women led by the American Crusade to End Lynching launched a dramatic 100-day campaign this week in Washington. Various CIO union groups were included among the delegations.

In an interview with President Truman, a group of seven delegates headed by the chairman of the Crusade, Paul Robeson, noted Negro singer and actor, urged the President to take positive action to aid the drive to abolish lynching.

The statement presented to President Truman asked him to:

1. Issue a formal public statement informing the American people of his views and recommending a definite legislative and educational program to end this national shame.

2. Recommend in his next message to Congress the passage of Federal anti-lynching legislation.

3. Issue a directive to various government departments to set in motion a vigorous educational anti-race hatred program.

Climax of the Crusade's activities was the reading Monday evening of "A Proclamation to the Nation" by Paul Robeson, on the 84th anniversary of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation ordering the abolition of slavery to take effect in 100 days.

In spite of a pouring rain, 4,000 people attended the ceremony, standing on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial to listen to Robeson and others on the program.

Dramatic highlights of the evening's performance were the appearance of a company of 20 members of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps carrying a coffin in commemoration of the death of Mario Snipe, Negro killed in Georgia, and the introduction of Mrs. Minnie Ferguson, mother of two Negroes killed in Freeport, N. Y., and Mrs. Gladys Stevenson, mother of a veteran killed in Columbia, Tenn.

Ted Ward, Broadway playwright, read a script on the use of violence against Negroes.

The Proclamation read by Robeson called upon "all Americans of whatever race or creed or political persuasion to mobilize their maximum resources and influence to the end of impressing the President and Congress with the urgent necessity of enacting effective legislation to stop lynching promptly upon the convening of the 80th Congress in January 100 days hence."

Other activities earlier in the day included a meeting in the morning attended by 2,000 persons. A three-point program was discussed calling for the apprehension and punishment of every lyncher; passage of a Federal antilynching bill and the ousting of Senator Bilbo of Mississippi. In the afternoon a program was broadcast over a national hook-up. Speakers included Robeson, Mrs. Harper Sibley, president, United Council of Church Women; Aubrey Williams, former National Youth Administrator; and Dr. Joseph Johnson, dean of Howard University medical school.

Robeson urged an intensive drive against lynching throughout the country to force Congress to "end the rule of the rope and the faggot."

List of members of the American Crusade to End Lynching includes many well known churchmen, writers, actors, educators, CIO leaders and other prominent citizens, both Negro and white.

Among them are Albert Einstein, John Garfield, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Jack Kroll, Quentin Reynolds, Rabbi F. M. Isserman, Bishop J. A. Gregg; Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, Gregory Peck, Artie Shaw, and Lena Horne.

EDUCATION

Toward World Peace

CIO Education Director Kermit Eby who attended the first meeting of the U. S. Nat. Commission on Educational, Scientific & Cultural Cooperation held this week in Washington, said it was "a magnificent experiment aimed to serve the people in the direction of world peace." Eby is one of the 100 members serving on the National Commission.

Milton Eisenhower, brother of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, and president of Kansas State College was nominated for permanent chairman of the Commission.

The Commission is the first American group to be set up to serve as a direct and permanent link between U. S. citizens and the American delegation to UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific & Cultural Organization.)

See Labor Film

Members of the executive bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions meeting at CIO headquarters expressed much interest in the new political action film, "Deadline for Action" presented this week at a special showing for their benefit.

Arthur Deakin from England, new provisional WFTU chairman, said that the 40-minute documentary film was "an execllent job." V. Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, said he was interested in getting a Spanish language version for showing among Mexico and other Latin-American countries.

The film, which was featured in the Sept. 9 issue of The CIO NEWS, was produced for the CIO Electrical Radio & Machine Workers by Union Films, a new cooperative group.

$356 MILLION WAR PROFITS

By FRED d'AVILA

NINETEEN wartime shipbuilders, operating government-built yards and using only $22,979,275 of their own money as capital investment, realized $356,000,612 in profits before taxes and renegotiation of contracts. The renegotiation is expected to yield little reduction.

That was what the General Accounting Office told the House Merchant Marine Committee this week, with GAO Representative Ralph E. Casey commenting:

"I dare say at no time in the history of American business, whether in wartime or in peacetime, that so few men made so much money with so little risk—and all at the expense of the taxpayers, not only of this generation, but of generations to come."

The shipbuilders, including famed Henry J. Kaiser, said government figures on profit percentages were far too high, and that government listing of capital investment failed to take into account loans and other items which would have made the profit percentage lower.

Whatever the case, it is a safe bet that someone made plenty of profit, for identical Liberty Ships ranged in price from $1,508,906 to $7,161,234, according to the U. S. Maritime Commission.

Of 5,600 ships of all types built during the war, 2,580 were Libertys. The average cost of each ship was $1,800,000 and the average profit was $66,631.

The shipbuilders figured their profit percentages on the cost of the finished product, while the government took into consideration capital invested by the builders.

On the government's basis, the St. Johns River Shipbuilding Co., of Jacksonville, Fla., led all the rest in percentage.

Four officers of the firm, who owned only $400 worth of an original $600 worth of stock, will receive two thirds of the company's entire net profits of about $300,000! The firm's gross profits were estimated as $2,080,000.

Albert H. Ainslow, treasurer of the concern, said the government failed to take into consideration loans and other support totalling $3,100,000 in arriving at a gross profit of 346,666%. He conceded, however, that the profit percentage might be about 5,000%—"but only arithemtically, and if you exclude from consideration the years of shipbuilding know-how involved."

While Republicans were making political capital out of the figures, both parties took a lambasting from GAO's Casey, who said that responsibility for allowing exorbitant profits could be laid directly at the door of Congress, which passed laws that made GAO virtually powerless to step over the head of the Maritime Commission and audit contracts.

Casey listed gross profits of Henry Kaiser's sprawling shipyard empire at an estimated $192,237,284, and pointed out that only $2,510,000 had been invested in capital.

The Kaiser companies, Casey said, realized more than one half of profits made by the 19 yards while investing only one ninth of the private capital.

Kaiser, however, declared that risk capital obtained from private sources totalled $32,000,000, and that actually he suffered a net loss on his wartime operations of $13,000,000 due to operation of steel and magnesium plants.

But excluding these losses, and disregarding his interests in other enterprises, his wartime shipbuilding operations brought his family $16,362,000 profits after taxes—about eight times the capital investment in them.

A company thug's bullet ended the life of war veteran and CIO member Mario Russo this week at Newark, N. J. Surviving are, his wife, and their children, l. to r.: Allen, 4; Anthony, 3 months; Marlene, 2; Patricia, 3. The CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers has pledged to take care of the family and to "fight unceasingly to identify and bring to justice the thugs employed by the Phelps Dodge Corp. who are responsible for Russo's murder." (Story below).

Picket Line Martyr

MARIO Russo is dead. The 27-year-old veteran, who came back safely from three years in the army, died this week at Newark, N. J., from the bullet of a Phelps Dodge Corp. thug.

Russo, a member of CIO Electrical Radio & Machine Workers, was employed at the Natl. Union Co. On July 30 he volunteered to represent his local union on a UE picket line at the then struck Elizabeth plant of Phelps Dodge.

The company, which for eight months had sharply repulsed union offers to negotiate, had instead hired itself some underworld characters, provided them with weapons and installed them in its plant.

As the waterborne picket-line passed before the company wharves, the gunmen turned loose with their rifles, shot Russo in the neck and Bert Eckstein, a member of the union's strike committee, in the thigh. Despite two emergency operations, surgeons were unable to remove the bullet lodged in the back of Russo's neck near the spine. On Sept. 20 he died.

MEAT FAMINE LAID TO PACKERS' GREED

THE CIO Cost of Living Committee this week declared that the nation-wide meat famine "can be attributed solely to the drive of the meat packers in creating an artificial shortage in order to eliminate price controls."

"Great quantities of the meat, killed during the 50 days when Congress refused to give the country the protection of an OPA, is being hoarded," said a statement by Committee Chairman Jack Thornton.

"If the President had authority last Spring to seize the railroads because of the national emergency, then surely he now has the authority to compel the packers to get into full production and distribution of meat at prices that the people can afford to pay."

The meat famine was described by Rep. Sabath (D., Ill.) as a "strike of organized greed against the American people." He asked Attorney General Clark to investigate "an apparent conspiracy" to violate the anti-trust laws.

"The inordinate spread between livestock and wholesale prices proves that the principal objective is to make more and more profit for owners who already have made tremendous gains from human misery during the war," Sabath declared.

President Truman this week urged retention of price controls on meat, but Rep. John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), House majority leader, urged their suspension for 60 days, to enable the Price Decontrol Board to study the situation.

Truman said the meat shortage could not be blamed on price control. He ascribed it as due to high consumption of meat during the summer, and to refusal of producers to send cattle to market following "restoration of price controls after a period of uncertainty and confusion."

The uncertainty and confusion were due to Congressional action removing price controls during July and August. During these months there was a large slaughter to take advantage or sharply rising prices.

WAGE TALKS

CIO Pres. Philip Murray had "no comment" on this week's talks about a proposed "new wage formula."

Discussions on relationship between rapidly rising prices and frozen wages were held in Washington by the Advisory Board of the Office of War Mobilization & Reconversion.

On the Board are President Murray and AFL President Green, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, Albert E. Goss, and Eric Johnston and Nathaniel Dyek, Dyke Jr., representing respectively the public, agriculture and industry.

RADIO GRAB

The Federal Communications Commission this week was asked to investigate a firm that controls seven standard radio stations, is seeking approval for purchase of another, and has been given grants for three FM stations. FCC regulations allegedly limit ownership by one firm to six stations.

Named as the offender by Pres. August Scholle of the Michigan CIO Council was the Fort Industry Co.

The firm currently is seeking approval of the purchase of Station WJBK, Detroit, for a reported half million dollars.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

IN ONE WAREHOUSE!

SIX MILLION POUNDS of meat found by State officials in one Boston warehouse. Thirteen million pounds uncovered in N. Y. City in a 24-hour search—plus 16 million pounds of poultry. Forty-five million pounds of meat discovered in a two-day search in Chicago. Twelve million pounds hoarded by Kansas City packers and wholesalers, according to an OPA official. And the nation's tables practically bare of meat!

The crisis, which the Labor Dept. reports is nation-wide, has also thrown 30,000 members of the CIO Packinghouse Workers out of jobs. This week, Pres. Ralph Helstein of the union declared that the packing industry, dominated by four big firms, should be declared a public utility to prevent the meat packers' "ruthless philosophy of the 'public be damned' having full sway. Such regulation," Helstein said, "would insure reasonable profits to the packers, reasonable prices to the consumer and producer, and jobs to the workers."

HELSTEIN, who charged that some hotels and restaurants have hoarded as much as 69 weeks' supplies, declared that the meat famine is not a result of price control. "It is rather the result of action engaged in by the Meat Trust earlier this year. Congress was a willing tool for the packers' greed by failing to extend the former OPA bill, permitting a two-month price holiday, and by enacting the present zombie price control act. The Meat Trust sowed the wind in the Spring and the American people today are reaping the whirlwind.

"The tactic of the Meat Trust, in order to make its lobbying more effective, was the sit-down strike during which it refused to purchase livestock. The Meat Trust, in its intense greed for unrestrained profits, had determined to rid itself of price controls. By so doing it destroyed the market balance — the result, unprecedented supplies of livestock coming to market during the July and August price control holiday. Livestock which should have been reserved for breeding or further fattening was rushed into the market as a result of the impression intentionally created in the minds of the farmers by the packers that substantially higher prices could be received during the price control holiday.

"The facts are that during this period, in spite of the headline prominence given to higher prices, the farmers actually received, for the vast majority of cattle coming into the market, prices at or below previous OPA compliance ceilings. The result of this flood of livestock will be extreme meat shortages in the immediate future. The removal of price control at this time cannot change this situation."

Meanwhile, in Chicago, the Conference of Progressives (see page 3) declared in a resolution that the large packers are using the meat shortage as a political issue "to goad the people into anti-progressive voting" and called on the Federal government to use its powers to assure an adequate supply.

"The government," said the resolution "should take immediate action to expose the activities of the packers who created the current crisis, making it clear that the responsibility for the situation rests with those lobbyists and reactionary Congressmen who were responsible for the defeat of real price control and the price holiday of July and August."

The resoluton said the crisis "has been used by the forces of reaction through their allies, the large pack-democracy and despise social reforms.

Take the Pews, who tossed $95,995.76 into the GOP kitty in 1944 to try to beat Roosevelt and in 1942 "loaned" Edward Martin $80,000 to help his gubernatorial campaign along. The Pews' Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. is currently under indictment by the U. S. Government for alleged monopolistic practices.

Democracy holds no allure for the Pews and they don't mind saying so. Witness the sentiments of Joseph Newton Pew, boss of the state's Republican politics:

"When democracy goes on the march, it marches on a road that leads through chaos and revolution to dictatorship and to totalitarianism. If we follow that road to its bitter end, we will find ourselves defeated. . ."

To workers who bitterly recall "Bloody Friday" in December of 1936, when Pew's goon squads charged into shipbuilding workers on strike with billies and tear gas, killing one and injuring scores, this statement didn't come as a revelation.

COMBINED with the Pew resources derived principally from their Sun Oil Company, the $120,000,000 Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., and seven reaction-spewing publications, are those of the Mellons, second wealthiest family in the nation, the country's number one bankers. Their gift of $59,500 to the GOP in 1944 failed to quell the FDR tide.

The list of moneyed backers of Martin reads like the Social Register and includes such top labor-baiting stalwarts as the Pitcarns of Pittsburgh Plate Glass, who pitched $23,000 into the GOP coffers in '44; the Heinzes ("57 varieties") who managed to spare $17,500, the Prentices of Armstrong Cork Co., who insist that "America is not a democracy" but "a republic."

Martin himself is no pauper as president and director of the Dunn-Mar Oil & Gas Co., director of the Chartiers Discount Co. and of the Citizens Natl. Bank.

The Governor's stooge in the state House of Representatives, Speaker Ira T. Fiss, displayed the Martin-Pew-Mellon group's true colors when he attacked a Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor as being a "full-blooded Italian." In explanation, he said; "Little things like that slip out."

To Republicans, $25,750

By GLORIA CAPLAN

"EVERY nation has a group without initiative, who do not desire permanent employment. To coddle this group is deterimental to that great class of Americans . . . who have given the U. S. its pre-eminence among nations."

There, in his own words, is Pennsylvania Gov. Edward Martin's "concern" for the workers who produce the goods that are really responsible for America's "pre-eminence among nations." And Gov. Martin is asking the people of his state to send him to the U. S. Senate this November so that he can continue his crusade against them.

In Martin's dictionary "coddle" means: social security, a full employment act, raising the minimum wage to a living wage, or government protection of minority groups against discrimination.

"That great class of Americans", in his vocabulary, equals the fabulous Pew and Mellon families and their industrial cohorts, who finance not only Martin in his political exploits, but the national Republican Party, the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and such insidious hate-disseminators as Frank Gannett's Natl. Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, the American Liberty League, the Crusaders, Sentinels of the Republic . . . ad infinitum.

To Martin and men behind him, Franklin D. Roosevelt constituted a nightmare, a bulwark against unlimited profits and a friend to organized labor. Pennsylvania's Sen. Joseph Guffey, whom they are hoping to unseat this time, is one of the sturdiest remaining pillars of New Dealism in the Senate, and they are sparing no expense and no effort to uproot him.

IF you scratch the surface of the Martin campaign, below the thin layer of veneer you find a group of industrial magnates, who ridicule "foreign-sounding" names, loath labor, are contemptuous of

NO FRIEND OF LABOR. Governor Martin mobilized the Pennsylvania State Guard for possible use against CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers picketing the Westinghouse plant this spring at E. Pittsburgh. Pickets (above) registered their protests as the Governor entered a Pittsburgh hotel to attend a luncheon commemorating the birth of George Westinghouse, founder of the firm against which the UE struck for higher wages.

TO CARRY ON FOR FDR

Chicago Parley Maps Progressive Unity

A COMMON program and plan of political action were unanimously adopted at a widely representative Conference of Progressives in Chicago last week. The more than 300 delegates came from 35 states and represented a wide range of labor, farmers, racial, women's and other progressive groups.

The conference was officially sponsored by the CIO and Natl. Citizens Political Action Committees and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences & Professions. Among organizations represented were the Natl. Farmers Union, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Unity of political action among all American progressives was the theme of the conference, to defeat reactionaries and elect progressive candidates in the November elections and to carry on into 1947 the fight for fulfillment of the Roosevelt domestic and foreign policy.

Formation of a Continuations Committee was authorized, to consist of some 50 representatives of labor, independent, farm, racial, women's, professional, youth and religious groups.

This committee will meet immediately after the elections to assess their outcome and to plan future action. It will also plan a second "Conference of Progressives" to meet in Washington in mid-January, shortly after the new 80th Congress convenes.

OUTSTANDING labor, farm and political leaders addressed the conference, including CIO Pres. Philip Murray, former cabinet members Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and Harold L. Ickes, Senator Claude Pepper, Chairman Walter White of the NAACP, Pres. James Patton of the Natl. Farmers Union, and Director Jack Kroll of the CIO-PAC. J. Raymond Walsh, radio commentator, representing the N. Y. Citizens PAC, was chairman of most of the sessions.

Henry A. Wallace was not able to attend the conference, but a special resolution was adopted commending his fight for peace and for the program of F. D. Roosevelt, urging him "to visit us at every crossroads in America," and pledging a "corps of volunteer citizens who will help carry the fight for peace to every doorstep in the nation."

The plan of action adopted by the conference calls for half a million active workers in the nation's 125,000 precincts to get 50 million voters to the polls. It urges united action by the independent voters against "the reactionary coalition in the 79th Congress that has betrayed the people by sabotaging every measure that would have brought security and freedom.

"Through basic organization," it declared, "through grassroots activity, through the building of ward and precinct clubs and councils and action committees, we will carry the issues to where the voter lives and works."

THE foreign policy platform, which was unanimously adopted, calls for "a swift return to the progressive global thinking of Franklin Roosevelt" and the "world good-neighborliness which was his legacy to us." Its main planks are:

(1) Restoration of mutual trust among the great powers and "recapture of that international unity achieved during the war, and to a peculiar degree the unity among the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and the United States."

(2) Complete destruction of fascism. "As agreed at Potsdam, we must demolish the economic royalists, who through German

Among progressives at Chicago strengthening their unity for political action were, l. to r.: former Sec. of the Interior Harold L. Ickes; Walter White, secretary of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People; former Sec. of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

MURRAY CITES 'CRUCIAL NEED' OF PEOPLE'S MOVEMENT

UNITED action by all progressives to defeat reaction at the polls in November, and to bring a return to Roosevelt's domestic and foreign policies, was the theme of keynote speeches delivered at the Chicago Conference of Progressives by outstanding labor, farm and other progressive leaders.

Strongly endorsing the policies adopted at the conference, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said he had long felt "the crucial need for a broad people's movement to lay the foundations for political democracy through political action." He described this as "the most important conference of its kind ever held."

Murray outlined the "evolution of a well-organized, well-financed conspiracy to undermine if not destroy the labor movement and to degrade wages." He cited employers' efforts "to alter the relationship between wages and profits by depressing wages and diluting the workers' real earnings through increased prices," and the many efforts to pass anti-labor legislation.

The CIO leader lashed out at the Pittsburgh injunction against the Duquesne Power & Light Co. workers, saying: "Even the most disgraceful restraints fixed by anti-labor judges in the days of the Norris-LaGuardia act did not offer to a strike leader the alternative of accepting a company offer or going to jail."

He described this injunction as "part of a dangerous surge of anti-labor terror," referring also to "a sickening growth of lynchings and police assaults upon the Negro people" and to mob violence to "intimidate free American citizens not to vote."

Despite increased hourly wage rates, workers' losses in actual earnings since the end of the war have been from 5% to 10%, Murray said. When these are related to increased living costs, "workers have suffered a decline in real earnings of between 20% and 25% in manufacturing industries," he declared.

MURRAY referred to the unanimity of the recent World Federation of Trade Unions meeting in Washington, and to the overwhelming desire of the world's workers for lasting peace, as exemplified there and at the recent session of the American-Soviet Trade Union Committee.

"There was no division in its decisions," he said. "The aspirations of the common people are the same everywhere—for better housing, higher wages, more social security, medicine, greater cultural advantages."

Murray called for unity "in opposition to war-mongering by any country whatever that thwarts a true democratic peace," but added that "the American people are not prepared to go through another Munich to obtain peace, and find themselves enslaved."

He said that he had found the Soviet trade union representatives "in perfect agreement with us that labor everywhere must stand as a bulwark against any government that threatens the peace."

He declared he had told them, "we've got no more use for any Communists coming over here meddling with our affairs than they would have with an American going there and meddling in their affairs. American trade unions and our country should be allowed to run our own affairs without any interference from outside."

Murray concluded with a rousing call for a return to the policies of Roosevelt and "his visions of a unified world as the basis for peace."

DIRECTOR Jack Kroll of CIO-PAC also called for united action of labor with all other progressive groups in the coming elections, stressing the importance of ringing doorbells, distributing literature, "talking neighbor to neighbor over backyard fences," and working day and night to get voters to register and go to the polls.

"We demonstrated in 1944 that we knew how to do it," he said. "We must mobilize to do it again in 1946."

Like most of the other speakers, Kroll vigorously denounced all policies that threaten the

PROGRESSIVES, UNITE!

THE tactic of "divide and conquer" is one of the oldest and most effective.

It is the chief tactic of all the forces of reaction today.

The reactionary politicians who let down the people in the 79th Congress are afraid of the people's vengeance at the polls.

They know they will not be re-elected if the voters know their records, understand the issues and turn out to vote.

So they are working overtime to divide and confuse progressive voters.

★ ★ ★

BEHIND the reactionary politicians, and doing most of their dirty work, are the big-business interests, the "economic royalists," and their press and radio propagandists.

The propaganda of division can be seen or heard every day on all sides.

It seeks to divide labor from farmers, professionals from industrial workers, middle class from working class, Negro from white, women from men, and so on, wherever it can drive a wedge.

It seeks particularly to divide labor within itself, and to separate it from its natural allies, the rest of the common people, knowing that labor is the hard core of any progressive people's movement.

The aim of all this propaganda is to prevent the united action of all progressives from defeating reaction at the polls in November.

★ ★ ★

THE CHICAGO Conference of Progressives, sponsored by the CIO and Natl. Citizens Political Action Committees and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences & Professions, gave the answer of sincere progressives and laid the basis for victory on election day.

The conference was attended by CIO and other union representatives, by farmers, professionals, and by Negro, women's, youth, religious, fraternal and other progressive leaders of all kinds.

Despite the diversity of organizations represented, the delegates were able to hammer out a united plan of progressive political action, and to agree unanimously upon a common program of domestic and foreign policy.

★ ★ ★

THIS CONFERENCE was hailed by CIO President Murray as one of the most important ever held, because it lays the base for "a broad people's movement for political democracy through political action."

To carry forward the progressive unity achieved at Chicago, it was decided that the regional, state and local units of the national organizations represented at the conference should hold a series of meetings, between now and November 5, "to mobilize the voters to register and vote for the candidates pledged to carry out our program."

In urging all CIO affiliates to cooperate in this common plan of action, Murray has this to say:

"I feel that cooperation between the CIO bodies and the various other organizations at this grass-roots level is the only effective way to secure a victory for labor at the polls."

★ ★ ★

LABOR must unite its ranks as never before for political acton in this year's crucial elections.

But it must also unite with all other progressives that are going its way, and with all other groups that represent the interests of the common people.

If we do not want to be "divided and conquered," our slogan must be: "Unity of all progressives for victory in November."

N

BY LEN DE CAUX

MOST-MENTIONED name at the Chicago Conference of Progressives was that of the late President Roosevelt.

This was natural for many reasons.

F. D. R., in death as in life, is a rallying-point, a unifying factor, for all American progressives.

Amid all the present international disunity, there is a deep nostalgia for the clear-sighted leadership of that President who built the wartime unity of the United Nations and planned its continuation for lasting peace.

Roosevelt also outlined a domestic program for the people's welfare and security, whose neglect or repudiation since his death is responsible for most of the ills of which progressives complain today.

But there was, too, a less apparent reason for the constant references to Roosevelt, which brings out the long-range significance of this most significant conference.

★ ★ ★

THE CONFERENCE of Progressives was a milestone, and possibly a turning point, in the long history of American efforts to develop a lasting political coalition of labor, farmers, middle-class and other popular elements.

Jim Patton of the Natl. Farmers' Union in his speech traced the history of the many western farmers' movements for a progressive political alignment.

"These agrarian movements could not stand alone," he said. "They had no alliance with the labor organizations in industrial areas."

On labor's side, ever since the first unions were formed, there have been repeated efforts to build a progressive political movement.

Following the First World War, these two streams joined in a number of attempts to unite labor, farmers and middle class for political action, culminating in the presidential campaign of the late Senator LaFollette.

★ ★ ★

THE BROAD people's movement worked for by these pioneers reached its fullest expression with the advent of Roosevelt's new Deal.

Roosevelt rallied behind him the workers, the small farmers and the common people generally to an extent never achieved before.

In his efforts to liberalize the Democratic Party, he envisaged a new political alignment, based on this coalition and directed against the "economic royalists," the Wall Street monopolists and their reactionary cohorts.

Roosevelt did not succeed in thus transforming the Democratic Party. The resistance of old-line machine bosses and polltax reactionaries was too strong for that.

But, in his domestic and foreign policies, he provided a platform for continuing progressive unity, and he lent new assurance to all those working for a permanent people's political coalition.

★ ★ ★

THE WEAK links in the Roosevelt coalition were realized by CIO and other progressives.

They recognized the divided character of his party, the dangers of the break-up after his death of a movement cemented by his personal leadership, and the lack of independent political organization by labor and other popular elements.

First through Labor's Non-Partisan League and then through the CIO Political Action Committee the CIO took steps to remedy these weaknesses, by organizing the workers for independent political activity.

Labor must be the core of any progressive people's movement. But it can succeed in its political purposes only if it rallies around it all other popular groupings.

That is why the CIO gave encouragement to the development of a National Citizens PAC and has pledged its close cooperation with all other progressives.

★ ★ ★

THE LONG-RANGE significance of the Chicago conference is that it carried a long step forward the organized political unity of many of the elements that made up the Roosevelt coalition—labor, outside as well as within the CIO, small farmers, small business, Negroes, professionals, women's, youth, religious and independent voters' organizations.

Without the living leadership of Roosevelt, but still inspired by his name and policies, all these diverse elements were able to agree on a common platform and plan of action and to lay the basis for a continuing progressive people's political movement.

DEMOCRACY ON TRIAL

LITTLE has appeared about it in the daily press, but down in Tennessee, American democracy is on trial at the small courthouse in Lawrenceburg. At stake is the question of whether Negro citizens are covered by the Constitution of the U. S. or are forever to be treated as Hitler treated the Jews in Europe.

On trial charged with "attempted murder" are 25 Negroes arrested during the reign of terror against the Negro inhabitants of Columbia, Tenn., during the week of Feb. 25, 1946.

Four police officers were wounded in cross-fire when a white mob shot into the homes of Negroes and the terrified Negroes attempted to defend themselves, but the only persons actually killed were two Negroes who were shot to death in jail by officers of the law. The police used the Hitler - concentration - camp stock excuse that the prisoners were "attempting to escape."

The open, arrogant and defiant violation of the constitutional rights of the 25 Negro defendants at the trial which has been going on the past week at the Lawrenceburg courthouse adds this important case to the long, terrible list of previous cases of legal discrimination against Negroes in the South.

THE attitude of the prosecution during the trial is typified in the testimony of State Commissioner of Safety Lynn Bomar, as reported by Vincent Sheean, famous war correspondent covering the trial for the New York Herald-Tribune.

Bomar, says Sheean, "appeared to resent being in the court at all. One had the impression that he regarded it as a lot of nonsense to discuss these matters."

"The truth is, of course," Sheean continues, "that in his heart of hearts, Mr. Bomar does not consider Negroes to be American citizens."

Commenting on why the trial has received so little attention, Sheean says: "All it involves is the Constitution of the U. S., the law of the State of Tennessee, and the right of our people to live in peace in our land. These are not sufficiently exciting subjects to enlist the interest of a population, which, at the end of a great war, wants chiefly to eat, drink and be merry if possible."

AS THE trial progressed it became clear that there was no direct evidence to connect any of the 25 defendants with the shootings and charges of attempted murder, or any reason given why these particular 25 men were picked out for the prosecution.

"They would appear to be, quite simply, hostages for the whole Negro community," says Sheean, "on the well-known Nazi principle, happily not yet admitted in American criminal practice as a whole, of collective responsibility."

The incident which started the case, almost forgotten in the tremendous issues involved in the whole question of the unjust treatment of Negroes caught in the network of the law, in itself illustrates the growing tension in race relations in the South since the end of the war.

It started with an argument over a radio repair bill between a Negro customer, Mrs. Gladys Stephenson, and a white repairman, Will Fleming. Mrs. Stephenson claimed she had been cheated, and Fleming, furious that a Negro should have the nerve to do this, struck and kicked her.

Mrs. Stephenson's 19-year-old son, James, just returned from overseas in the Navy, came to his mother's defense, striking the repairman, who fell and broke a plate glass window.

A crowd, which gathered quickly, jumped on the young veteran and his mother and beat them up. One man stamped on Mrs. Stephenson's face after she was knocked down. The police arrived on the scene and arrested, not the men who did the kicking, nor the repairman, but the Negro mother and son.

A mob gathered and stormed the jail, threatening a lynching, but fortunately the two Negroes had been released on bond and had fled to safety. Angered, the mob turned toward the Negro community.

KNOWING that they could not expect protection from the police, the Negroes retired to their homes, got out their hunting guns, turned out their lights and prepared to repel the mob. White hoodlums drove through the Negro community firing into Negro homes.

The local police phoned the Governor for reinforcements and 100 highway patrolmen and 400 state guard troops arrived, threw a cordon around the Negro business section known as Mink Slide and arrested the Negroes trapped in the area.

These Negroes, many of them veterans, were disarmed, lined up, and kicked, cursed and beaten. Two of them, William Gordon and James Johnson, were killed. Altogether some 100 Negroes were arrested and held without being permitted to make bond, while a board "investigated."

This in brief is the background of violence and terror which stands behind the unfair trial of the 25 Negroes now in its closing stage at Lawrenceburg.

These frightened Negroes, arrested during the reign of terror last February in Columbia, Tenn., are being searched and registered by state highway patrolmen. Two Negroes were later killed in jail by officers of the law who claimed they were "trying to escape."

Here one of the Negroes, wounded during the attack on the Negro section of town, lies in the street while a patrolman searches him.

Congress of Labor Wages

SAME FIGHT IN CANADA

By NORMAN S. DOWD

WITH 50,000 members of affiliated CIO unions on strike, the Canadian Congress of Labor at its Toronto convention last week condemned the efforts of government to hold wage increases down to 10c an hour and called for maintenance of price control.

The convention also went on record against the recent grant of authority to the Labor Minister to take a government supervised vote prior to a strike at the request of the employer or the union.

CCL Sec.-Treas. Pat Conroy predicted a depression within the next two years unless an equitable relationship between wage, prices and profits was obtained.

A resolution reaffirming endorsement of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation as labor's political arm was adopted following an eight-hour debate. C. S. Jackson of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, and H. J. Pritchett of the CIO Woodworkers, moved to redraft the resolution to call for independent non-partisan political action.

Resolution supporters pointed out that the Congress had recommended at its 1943 convention that its affiliated and chartered unions affiliate with CCF which had adopted the political action program approved by the Congress in 1944.

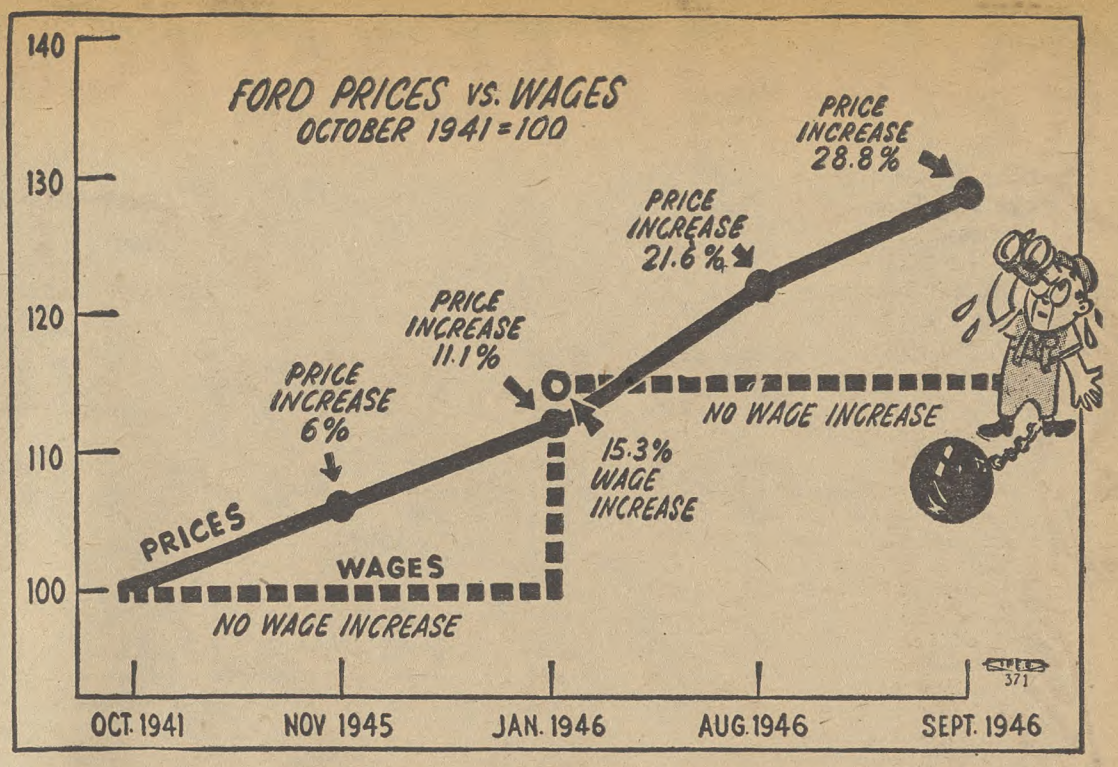
This program called for full employment, social security, better housing, national food and fuel policies and a shorter work week.

Conroy declared that the real issue was whether CCL would remain in the hands of its membership or be dominated by the Labor Progressive Party. The amendment was defeated and the resolution was adopted by a four to one majority.

Other resolutions called for a national labor code, the 40-hour week with the same take-home pay, two weeks' vacation, representation of labor on government bodies, cooperation with the veterans national low-cost housing program and lifting of restrictions on Jewish immigration to Palestine.

The CCL constitution was amended to bar discrimination on the grounds of race, color, creed or language.

President A. R. Mosher was re-elected president, defeating Jackson by 454 to 198, and Sec.-Treas. Conroy was renamed over Pritchett by 492 to 179. George Burt of the Auto Workers and C. H. Millard of the Steelworkers were re-elected executive board members.



Ford Local 600 of the CIO Auto Workers printed this cartoon in its paper after Henry Ford II, Ford Co. president, said workers were stirred into making wage demands by union leaders. The local's paper, Ford Facts, says, "Mr. Ford forgot quite easily that the wage demands came as a result of the reduction of earnings and gouging prices forced ever upward by his colleagues."

BLAST SHIP BUILDING CUT

THE 12th convention of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers at Saratoga Spring, N. Y., last week declared that shipbuilding "must be regarded as a quasi-public industry and its operations made the object of long-range planning by government, management and labor."

The delegates protested President Truman's "false economy" program for a 50 per cent cut in the American merchant marine and called for expansion of the commercial fleet.

Pres. John Green was returned to office for his 12th term, Vice-Pres. John J. Grogan for his fourth term and Sec.-Treas. Ross D. Blood for his second full term. A 10-man executive board with three new faces on it was elected.

IUMSW demanded a 35-hour week, and in a wage policy statement urged a general increase to compensate for reduced take-home pay suffered by the workers in the industry, worst hit by cutbacks after the war.

The statement also proposed that wage reviews be held more frequently than once a year and urged the introduction of wage escape clauses in all agreements "to prevent workers from being stuck with greatly devalued dollars."

Reduction of the number of ratings from eight and 10 to the present three on an industry-wide basis was also urged.

Delegates recommended that the union's national officers and general executive board study the operations of health, welfare and pension funds of other industries and formulate a policy for establishing an employer-financed, union-administered fund in the shipbuilding industry.

A foreign policy resolution called for adherence to the principles of the Atlantic Charter and the four freedoms and urged the U. S. to oppose "spheres of influence and all vicious schemes of imperialist zones and security belts which are only cesspools of intrigues and hotbeds for germs of new wars." It indorsed the Baruch plan for international control of all atomic energy materials and urged that such control "be unfettered and unobstructed by the veto power of any nation."

LABOR FIGHTS FOR ITS LIFE, KILGORE TELLS WEST VIRGINIA

SEN. KILGORE (D., W. Va.) warned the West Virginia CIO Council at its ninth annual convention last week-end at Charleston, W. Va., that organized labor cannot survive under a Congress dominated by big business interests.

"Months ago the big business pressure groups mobilized their forces and launched a vile campaign against every progressive piece of legislation with the purpose of beating down organized labor, and of wiping out every liberal gain of the past 13 years," declared Sen. Kilgore, who is the new chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee.

"We had a 'boom and bust' after World War I because people failed to study the true issues and maintain a constant interest in governmental affairs. We cannot afford another 'boom or bust' that would concentrate our national wealth in the hands of a few people.

"There will be a recurrence of this tragic period," Kilgore admonished, "if you or your fellow workers adopt the attitude of 'let George do the job' in connection with political activity."

Adolph Germer, assistant secretary of the World Federation of Trade Unions and CIO international representative, spoke on the history of the labor movement in the State and nation, and outlined the CIO program.

WASHINGTON BACKS LIBERALS

By FAIR TAYLOR

A CONCRETE program to strengthen the Washington State CIO on the organizational, economic and political fronts was adopted at its eighth annual convention held in Seattle last week-end.

The organizational plan adopted calls for the creation of a Council Organizational Committee comprised of the Council and Regional officers and International representatives to co-ordinate organizing throughout the State.

The program calls for development of auxiliaries and youth groups in each local area, and cooperation with all other labor and progressive groups for economic gains and political achievement.

In addition to urging more activity by Political Action Committees in local unions and endorsement of Natl. CIO for its legislative program and political leadership, the convention supported Sen. Mitchell, Reps. Coffee, Savage, DeLacy and Jackson for reelection.

The convention unanimously approved "a long-run program . . . to be in full support of the formation of a new political party comprising all sections of the labor movement, the AFL, the CIO, Railway Brotherhoods, independent unions, working farmers, professional workers, consumers, members of minority, racial and religious groups and all people advocating a progressive, liberal program."

Transport Workers Find

FDR IDEALS BEST ANTIDOTE TO WAR

By DAVID A. GORDON

DELEGATES to the fifth biennial convention of the CIO Transport Workers concluded a harmonious four-day meeting in N. Y. City last week-end by unanimously reelecting the union's officers and by calling for a return to the policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt to aid world peace.

Officers include Michael J. Quill, president; Douglas L. MacMahon, secretary-treasurer, and John Santo, national director of organization. Austin Hogan, president of Local 100, N. Y. City, was elected to a new post, executive vice-president.

The delegates came from 15 states where transit, airline and utility workers are organized in the TWU. They spoke in the drawl of the South, the twang of the Mid-West and the rapid-fire delivery of N. Y., but all were united in one aim: to build the Transport Workers Union and to achieve new victories for the membership.

The resolution on foreign policy warned that since Roosevelt's death his program has been "turned and twisted until it now faces in the opposite direction—towards the aggressive, destructive imperialist war aims of Hoover, Dewey, Vandenberg, Taft, Byrnes and other schemers against the welfare of the common people."

It pointed out that Roosevelt, "aided by such men as Wallace, Hull, Pepper, Davies and other outstanding Americans of all classes, and repeatedly backed by the American voters, created the policy of the good neighbor, of unity of the Big Three and of world cooperation which resulted in victory in the war against the fascist axis and laid the foundation for lasting peace."

Another resolution demanded that the President and the Congress take steps to set ceilings on all foodstuffs and other necessities of life "and enforce them with all the might of the U. S., the same as we enforce the law against other racketeers, hold-up men, robbers, pickpockets and public enemies."

A resolution on labor unity urged that the CIO, AFL and railroad brotherhoods exert their full strength against anti-labor forces by taking united actions. Locals were instructed to establish veterans councils and to initiate vigorous attentention to the special needs and problems of the ex-GIs.

OREGON SAYS, SUPPORT PAC

Formation of a third party on a national basis immediately after the 1946 elections was urged by the Oregon CIO Council convention here.

"This period has shown how labor and the people are being betrayed and sold out by the Republicans and Democrats," said the resolution. "Only a party of a new type, a major national party of workers, farmers, veterans, women, Negroes and other liberal sections of the population with labor playing a major and leading role can serve and protect the interests of labor and the people."

Until the complete emergence of a third party, "we will promote effective political action and elect candidates through CIO-PAC," it said.

ATTENTION VETERANS!

HOW NEW LAW SLASHES ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PAY

From Steel Labor

Q. What is this new $175 a month income limit for veterans taking on the job training under the GI Bill of Rights?

A. Under the law passed during the closing hours of the 79th Congress a former serviceman will not receive subsistence allowances if, added to wages from his employer, they will bring his income to above $175 a month. The ceiling is $200 a month for veterans with dependents.

Q. Suppose the company is paying me $150 a month while teaching me a trade. Does this mean that the Veterans Administration will allow me only $25 a month?

A. That's right. If you are married or have other dependents, you'd get an additional $25, bringing your combined income to $200 a month.

Q. What happens if I get a raise which lifts my wages up to $175 a month?

A. Then the VA cuts off your subsistence allowances.

Q. A friend of mine has been taking an on the job training course for several months. His pay is $1 an hour. The VA is sending him $65 a month in subsistence allowances. What happens to him?

A. The checks will be stopped, and he'll be asked to make refunds to the VA.

Q. How much will he have to pay back?

A. Let's see: $1 an hour, 40 hours a week makes about $175 a month. That means he is entitled to no subsistence allowances, and if he has received any since the law went into effect in September, he'll be asked to kick it back.

Q. He has a buddy taking the same training. He's married, and is now receiving $90 a month from the VA. What happens to him?

A. He qualifies for $200 a month. His employer now pays $175, so his subsistence allowances will be reduced to $25 a month.

Q. Will he have to refund the difference, too?

A. The VA will try to get back everything it paid over that amount since the President signed the bill.

Q. How about the ex-GI whose total income is now below $175, does the new law raise his subsistence allowances?

A. Oh, no. There is no floor; only a ceiling.

Q. What else do the amendments provide for?

A. They set up a series of standards to which on the job apprenticeship programs must conform. The purpose of this part of the act is to eliminate phony courses and wage subsidies. Some of the new requirements are: There must be a reasonable certainty that the job will be available at the end of the training period; the job really requires training and is not inherited simply by length of service or turnover; the wages are not less than customary for each successive period of training; the job requires at least three months and not more than two years training (except apprenticeship, which may go the full period); the length of the training period is no longer than that customarily required; and provision is made for related instruction. The employer must have the facilities to carry on a training program, must keep records, give credit for military service experience and provide copies of the training program to the VA and the veteran.

Q. Any other changes?

A. Yes. On the job training, excepting regular apprenticeable trades, such as machinist, electrician, pattern maker, etc., is limited to two years. That is, subsistence allowance will not be paid for a longer period of time for such training. Apprenticeship may be taken for the full four years.

Q. Suppose I still want to take advantage of on the job training under the GI Bill of Rights. How do I go about getting it?

A. First, you must persuade your employer to set up a program such as you desire, or find another employer who already has or is willing to start one. Naturally, the course is subject to the conditions of the new law.

Q. All right, my company is willing to train me as a tool and die maker. What next?

A. The company plans a training schedule for the trade. It sends a full description of the program to the appropriate state agency—it varies from state to state, in some cases it is the Dept. of Labor, public instruction, veterans' affairs, etc., and requests approval.

Q. What do I do?

A. Go to the local office of the Veterans Administration and ask for a certificate of eligibility. For this you will need a photostat of the obverse side of your discharge, the side showing your military record.

Q. What does my military record have to do with it?

A. Only to prove that you have the right kind of a discharge (a dishonorable discharge disqualifies an ex-GI); and to establish the maximum length of time you can take training. You are entitled to subsistence allowances for one year plus your length of service, provided you put at least 90 days in uniform. Maximum training is 4 years.

Q. How much do I get in these subsistence allowances?

A. That's a complicated question. First you are entitled to a maximum of $65 a month if you have no dependent and $90 a month if you have dependents. You receive, however, only the difference between the standard learning rate and the going journeyman or experienced worker rate on the job for which you are training.

Q. Then may I not get the full $65 or $90 a month?

A. That's right, depending on the spread between the learning and skilled rates. For example, suppose the starting rate is 60 cents an hour, and the finishing rate $1 an hour. Now $65 a month makes about 35 cents an hour on a 40-hour week. If you are single you would be entitled to this full amount. That is, you'd get 60 cents an hour from the company and 35 cents an hour from the VA.

Q. But I'm married.

A. All right, you'd be entitled to a maximum of $90 a month, or 55 cents an hour. But you won't get it all. Remember you cannot receive in combined income from the company and VA an amount greater than the skilled rate on the job. In your case this is $1 an hour. If you received 55 cents in subsistence allowances, this would bring you to a total of $1.15 an hour (60 and 55 equal $1.15). But you are limited to $1. So you will receive only 40 cents an hour from the VA.

Q. Suppose the program calls for a 5-cent-an-hour raise each 6 months. Does this have any effect on my subsistence allowance?

A. Yes. The total from the company and VA must not exceed the skilled rate. So when you reach that point, as the company increases your wages the VA will cut subsistence allowances to the same extent.

Q. In other words, subsistence allowances may disappear altogether?

A. Right.

Q. Any other limitation?

A. Yes, the combined income may not exceed $175 a month in the case of veterans without dependents, and $200 for veterans with dependents. I've already explained what that means.

Q. What happens if my on the job training program turns out to be a "phoney?"

A. If you are not actually being taught a skilled trade, but are doing nothing more than production work instead, the Veterans Administration will first try to get the program set right, and, failing that, will discontinue paying subsistence allowances to you.

Q. What can I do then?

A. If you stay with your present employer you are out as far as the GI Bill is concerned. My suggestion is that you look for another on the job training program with a legitimate employer. Of course, I would take the matter up first with the local union, and have it attempt to persuade the company to correct the flaws in its program.

Q. Does the Veterans Administration punish the company in any way for having set up a bad program?

A. No. The only penalty the VA can apply is to cut off subsistence allowances to the ex-GI.

Q. That's a funny way of doing business. The employer alone is to blame. Why hurt me, and not him?

A. Only the Congress can answer that one. They wrote the bill. The VA has to administer the law as it stands on the statute books.

Q. Is there anything I can do about it?

A. Yes. Buttonhole your Congressmen and ask them to vote for amending the law to eliminate wage ceilings and the other defects.

LEGION FIGHTS ON-JOB PAY CEILING, FEUDS WITH BRADLEY

THE American Legion at its convention in San Francisco this week called for a special session of Congress to eliminate the $200 ceiling on incomes of veterans taking on-the-job training.

The action was taken to support the Legion's commander John Steele in his clash with Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Veterans Administrator.

Bradley declared that the veteran "is first a citizen of the U. S.; he is, thereafter a veteran." The general stressed the danger of jeopardizing the rights of all veterans "if we dare countenance the abuse of any portion" of the GI Bill, under which on-the-job training is offered. He assumed responsibility for the salary limitation.

He declared that Steel has obstructed the VA's efforts during the past year.

Replying to Bradley, Steele accused the general of breaking faith "with the returning veterans and others when he admits imposing a ceiling on the on-the-job training program and limitations in training . . . the Legion feels that we must consider the veteran in his adjustment to citizenship first, then think of him as a citizen."

While the CIO through its veterans committee has opposed the ceiling on on-the-job training wages, it came to the defense of General Bradley when Steele criticized him about a year ago.

This criticism came a short time after Bradley reluctantly accepted the post of Veterans Administrator, succeeding Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hines, who was friendly with the Legion and generally met its requests. On the other hand, Bradley made the VA operate like a government agency, appointing military officers or administrators outside of the Legion's ranks.

Chairman Charles G. Bolte of the American Veterans Committee, this week stepped into the dispute by issuing an open letter to Bradley which stated that "you effectively called the hand of the Legion hierarchy which is attempting to dictate the nation's veterans' affairs policy in the interest of a clique of World War I king-makers."

As the CIO News went to press Col. Paul H. Griffith, generally credited with being the author of Selective Service's superseniority, was regarded as certain of election as legion commander. The CIO and the Shipbuilding Workers fought the regulation through the courts until the Supreme Court threw it out.

The Legion asked Congress to pay enlisted personnel in cash instead of bonds for terminal leave compensation, urged a ban on exports of critical material for housing and a set-aside of all critical materials specifically for veterans, and endorsed "the positive foreign policy" of the U. S. "as expressed by Secretary Byrnes, Sens. Vandenberg and Connally."

Steel Union Wins

$45 MILLION FOR WORKERS

AN agreement between the CIO Steelworkers and the U. S. Steel Corp. to establish standard hourly wage scales and eliminate any intra-plant rate inequities is estimated to put from 40 to 45 million dollars in the pockets of the corporation's employes.

Almost a quarter million employes in the five U. S. Steel subsidiaries—Carnegie-Illinois, Natl. Tube, American Steel & Wire, Columbia Steel and Tenn. Coal, Iron & Railroad are affected by the agreement which reduces the multitudinous jobs to 30 general classifications.

Negotiations are now under way with the American Bridge, Virginia Bridge and the Universal Atlas Cement, and for U. S. Steel subsidiary office workers.

The agreement is based on the first study in the history of the industry of the intricate rate structures. In addition to reducing the general classification, the agreement also describes each job in the plant and establishes the proper hourly wage for every job in every basic steel plant.

The pact sets three five-eighth cents an hour per employe for each hour worked since Jan. 4, 1944, and thus provides a huge fund for paying retroactive pay on under-the-line rates. The three and five-eights cents applied to about 54.2% of the jobs in each of the corporations raises the average hourly rate about 6.7 cents.

Pay for hourly rated jobs will increase from ½ to 30c an hour, but these increases apply only to rates that are now below the computed normal rate for the job.

Workers are expected to be paid about Jan. 1, 1947, the difference between the present hourly rate and the new standard rate for every hour worked since Jan. 4, 1944.

The agreement grows out of the directive used Nov. 25, 1944, by the Natl. War Labor Board ordering the union and the steel companies to negotiate elimination of inequities. Incentive rates will also be affected by the agreement.

Roma Ketch, Miss Copy Girl of 1945, and now a featured screen player, cools her feet on a Los Angeles curb after marching on the picket line at the Los Angeles Herald-Express, where the CIO Newspaper Guild strike is entering its fifth week. The Hearst management is prolonging the strike by refusing to yield to the wage demands for a $50 a week minimum in many classifications and a $100 a week minimum for key personnel. The Guild subsequently scaled down its original demands by one-third, but the management failed to increase its offer of a 10% raise, except in three classifications.

New Record:

CIO SCORES 24 WINS IN SOUTH IN A WEEK

TWENTY-FOUR victories in NLRB elections were reported last week by state directors of the CIO Organizing Committee.

"These victories brought to 150 the total won by the organizing committee since our membership campaign in the South started," Director Van A. Bittner said.

"Last week was the best we have had—from the standpoint of elections won. The campaign is picking up speed. We are now seeing the results—in terms of elections won—of organizing work done during mid-summer.

"We hired a large number of inexperienced organizers when our membership drive began. They had to be trained and this took up much of our time during the early phases of the campaign. We now have an experienced staff in the field and all of our work is now being devoted to signing up new members."

The committee now has 236 petitions for certification pending with the National Labor Relations Board, Bittner said.

Paul Harding, publicity director for the CIO in Georgia for the past two years, is now assistant director of public relations for the committee, it was announced today by Allan L. Swim, director. Replacing Harding on the Georgia staff is Tom Nowell, who came to the CIO from The Atlanta Constitution.

LONGSHOREMEN UNCOVER PLOT TO STARVE HAWAII

THE Matson Steamship Co. is evidently trying to play both ends against the middle in the current maritime strike situation, and is running into opposition from the CIO Longshoremen.

ILWU Pres. Harry Bridges wired Interior Sec. J. A. Krug that the Matson line had asked San Francisco longshoremen to unload food cargoes already loaded for shipment to the Hawaiian Islands.

"This is a deliberate attempt to create a food shortage in order to turn public sentiment against the ILWU sugar strike," Bridges said.

Bridges said Matson's claim that shipping the badly needed food to the islands would not pay because of the general longshoremen's strike had been answered by the union statement that they would load and unload essential foodstuffs.

ILWU spokesmen here pointed out that Matson's motive is a double one, since it deals with the ILWU on the waterfront and also in the Hawaiian sugar fields, being one of the Hawaiian Big Five in the sugar growing industry.

EVEN RED CROSS SHOULD TRY IT

J. W. Hooper, chairman of the Brooklyn Chapter of the Red Cross, this week declared that the American Red Cross is in effect an agency of the U. S. Government and therefore should not be subject to normal collective bargaining processes. The Red Cross' position was stated in reply to a letter from the CIO Office and Professional Workers.

The UOPWA specifically challenged Hooper's statement in several particulars pointing out that while the Red Cross is chartered by Congress, it is not a Government agency, is privately managed and controlled just as are our many other social service organizations. The union also pointed out that "even agencies of the Federal Government engage in collective bargaining with unions of their employes, while the Red Cross has refused any form of meeting with representatives of their employes."

STREET CAR MEN WIN 16c HIKE

An agreement providing for wage increases of 16c an hour for the 3,600 employes of the Third Avenue Railway System and its subsidiaries, N. Y. City, was reached this week between the company and the CIO Transport Workers.

The increases bring the top rate for drivers to $1.20 an hour, already established by the Transport Workers on other private transit lines in N.Y. City.

With the latest increase, the Union has won raises for Third Avenue employes of 25 cents an hour since V-J Day.

STATES FREE TO SAY WHO GETS WORK

EVIDENCE that labor concern over turning the U. S. Employment Service back to state control was well grounded appeared this week in release by Labor Secretary Schwellenbach of regulations and policies under which state administration will be carried on.

Local USES administration goes to the states on Nov. 16 under provisions of a rider attached to the Labor Dept. appropriation bill in the closing days of the 79th Congress. The federal government will finance their operation, however.

Since the 79th Congress failed to pass full employment practices legislation, handing over USES to the states will mean a backward step in localities where state officials can get away with discriminatory practices. The only power which the Labor Dept. has to prevent discrimination is that of withholding funds from states failing to stick to the regulations—a step regarded unlikely except under unusual circumstances.

The policy statement on minority groups clearly calls for "equitable employment opportunities for all applicants on the basis of their skills, abilities and job qualifications" and seeing that "hiring specifications are based exclusively on job performance factors." Power to enforce the policy, however, is lacking.

The regulations, while providing for veteran preference in job referrals, do not contain effective safeguards for either veteran or non-veteran from referral to jobs paying a lower wage than that to which their training entitles them.

In a period of mass unemployment, state employment offices under reactionary administrations can work jointly with state unemployment compensation boards to force workers to take low-pay jobs under threat of being thrown off the UC rolls. The decision rests with the UC board, however, which is governed by no federal law or code.

The provision that suitable employment should be defined in legislation as a guide to state boards was killed in Congress last spring.

UTAH, COLORADO CIO TOLD OF PAC'S IMPORTANCE

THE records of Sen. Murdock and Reps. Robinson and Granger were praised by John Brophy, CIO IUC director, at the 10th annual convention of the Utah CIO Council at Salt Lake City last week.

He said that their performance in Congress shows that PAC pays dividends for labor, the state and the nation. The three men are running again for re-election with PAC backing.

Council Pres. Clarence Palmer announced that an enabling act on housing and a public employe over-all retirement fund will be sought at the next session of the Legislature.

Brophy, who also spoke at the convention of the Colorado CIO Council at Leadville, again stressed the importance of political action.

He told of the dismal failure of the 79th Congress on PEPC, the Wagner-Ellender Taft housing and the 65c minimum wage bills and improvements in the Social Security Act, and warned that an even worse performance could be expected at the next session unless its complexion is changed.

TEXTILE CONVERTING PLANTS STRUCK

Local 65, CIO Wholesale and Warehouse Workers, was closing plants in the N. Y. City textile converting industry one by one as the CIO News went to press to force arbitration of its demands for a closed shop covering all salesmen and office help in 120 concerns belonging to the Asso. of Uptown Converters. Mayor O'Dwyer had recommended arbitration.

The union is also seeking a $48 weekly minimum and a $16 weekly increase, of which $10 would be retroactive to June 1.

PACIFIC OPERATORS HOLD OUT AGAIN

The adamant refusal of the Pacific American Shipowners Assoc. to bargain on union security and the repudiation by the Maritime Commission of peace formula resulted in a breakdown of the negotiations for licensed ship personnel at Washington this week. The CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Assoc. and the AFL Master Mates and Pilots represent these workers.

The Waterfront Employers Assn. of the Pacific Coast also broke off negotiations with the CIO Longshoremen, who were insisting that a safety code be included in contracts to cut the toll of accidents, the highest in U. S. industry.

These negotiations were broken off the day after PASA Counsel Marion Plant stepped from the Labor Dept. conference room to tell the press that "the union security issue could be cleared up the shipowners way if the government would step out."

The Maritime Commission had agreed early this week that it would agree to maintenance of membership and preferential hiring on its ships on the West Coast after the East Coast operators had agreed to these provisions. The East Coast operators were willing to go along on this.

After PASA told the commission that it would turn back government ships, the Maritime Commission reneged on its agreement, MEBA officials reported.

Until the negotiations were suspended MEBA cut its wage demands three times from a 35% to 17% increase. The shipowners were offering 12 %

The union was willing to call off the strike if an agreement were reached on union security, wages and overtime. In that event, negotiations would continue on other issues.

Meanwhile, approximately a half million members of the CIO and AFL sea unions were idle and the nation's shipping was at standstill, because of the attitude of the PASA which succeeded only a few weeks in delaying the strike of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union.

After the adamant stand taken by the West Coast shippers, operators did not even bother to negotiate with the MEBA and MMP Oct. 3 and the morning of Oct. 4, although the Labor Dept. had summoned the union committees with the idea of holding further talks with the operators.

"Unity will win" is the motto of these members of the CIO Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn. on picket duty in N. Y. City. The union went on strike Oct. 1 after efforts to reach an agreement with shipowners failed in Washington.

TIME OFF TO VOTE

EMPLOYERS in 24 states are required by law to grant workers time off for voting, Jack Kroll, director of the CIO Political Action Committee, reminded voters this week, as he issued a call for a "record expression of democracy at the polls on Nov. 5."

States which make legal provision for time off in which to vote are:

Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, Utah and West Virginia.

Nevada is the only state in which election day has been declared a full legal holiday. Texas, on the other hand, is the only one in the above list which does not specify the length of time to be taken off, although failure on the part of employers to permit time off is punishable by a fine of not more than $500.

Two to four hours are specified by the laws of the other 22 states. In each instance failure by employers to allow sufficient time for voting with pay is considered a misdemeanor, punishable in most cases by a fine of from $5 to $1,000.

Kroll urged registered voters in the 24 states which do not have laws providing time off for voting not to let the absence of such provisions constitute an excuse for staying away from the polls.

"No excuse except illness should be sufficient to prevent us from staying away from the polls," the PAC head said. "The outcome of these elections will determine the course of our lives for the next two years and perhaps for the next generation or more. What can conceivably be more urgent?"

CARE REDUCES PRICE OF FOOD PACKAGES

As a means of speeding delivery of food packages to the undernourished people of Europe, a one-third reduction in the cost of former Army 10-in-1 rations has been announced by Lt. Gen. William N. Haskell, executive director of CARE, Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe, Inc.

Effective Oct. 1, the price will drop from $15 to $10 for the purchase of a food parcel containing 40,000 calories, or enough food to supplement for two weeks the present rations of a European family of four.

CARE, located at 50 Broad St., N. Y. 4, N. Y., takes orders from anyone in America for food packages to be delivered to friends, relatives or others in Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Finland, Greece, Italy Norway, Poland, the Netherlands, and the American, British and French occupied zones of Germany, plus all of Berlin.

SCHWELLENBACH LAUDED

Enthusiastic commendation of the action of Labor Secretary Schwellenbach in eliminating Jim Crow in the Washington, D. C. U. S. Employment Office was expressed this week by Pres. Abram Flaxer of the CIO Public Workers. Flaxer said:

"Abolition of segregated interviewing and referral procedure and segregated files in the local USES office comes as the climax to a five-year campaign waged by the United Public Workers and its predecessor, the CIO Federal Workers.

"Our union hopes that this courageous action by the Secretary of Labor will serve as a pattern for the elimination of segregation and discrimination throughout the entire USES when it is returned to state control at the end of this year."

TO CARRY ON FOR FDR

cartels established a basis for fascist triumph." Eradication of "the social and economic basis of Japanese militarism and imperialism," and a strict quarantine of Spain and Argentina.

(3) The Four Freedoms and the Atlantic Charter. "The substance and reality of freedom must be brought to all independent, colonial peoples everywhere . . . Imperialism, political, military or economic, by any nation anywhere, denies our American faith."

(4) Support for a free, united and independent China. "We call upon all foreign governments, as well as our own, to cease intervention in Chinese affairs and for an end to military aid to any faction." Economic aid to China only after establishment of "a democratic coalition of all elements in Chinese political life."

(5) American aid to Europe's Jews "to find in Palestine a new life." A United Nations mandate must replace the present British sovereignty.

(6) Continuation of international relief, after the end of UNRRA, through "an international agency, generously aided by ourselves" and without "political prejudices" being allowed "to dilute our humanity."

(7) Renunciation of militarism. America's $13 billion military budget was criticized. "We urge that America lead the world in the joint, simultaneous reduction of armaments, and that it do it now." American attempts to secure military bases around the world must be scrapped. "Such a unilateral network of bases arouses the inevitable distrust of our words of peace."

"We oppose all plans to invigorate the military establishments of our Latin American neighbors. We reject the evolving pattern of close military alliance with Great Britain.

"We renounce militarism, our own or any other . . . We call upon the United Nations to take prompt action looking toward universal disarmament."

(8) Atomic energy. "We reject the use of atomic energy for war anywhere at any time. We believe that America should cease at once the manufacture of the bomb and should destroy at once its present stock-piles of the bomb, securing simultaneously agreement by all other nations to outlaw atomic weapons."

Criticism of the Baruch Plan. "It requires that other nations accept binding agreements not to conduct research into the military uses of atomic energy and to disclose their uranium and thorium resources, while the U. S. retains its technical knowledge and engineering freedom until the international system is working to our satisfaction.

"It is not enough to ask other nations to be good, with a promise that at some time, undefined, we may be good too. This delays all prospect of agreement. It encourages an actual atomic armaments race now."

(9) World trade. "America must assume a great initiative for world trade and its industrial advance."

IN its domestic program, the conference points out that "today, a year after war's end, we face inflation, a sharp decline in living standards, attacks on organized labor and violence openly incited against racial minorities.

"Congress has let the people down," the program declares. "It has completely failed to bring about the fulfillment of Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights. Despite the efforts of a minority of progressives, a coalition of Republicans and reactionary Democrats in the 79th Congress has let down the farmers, has let down labor, has let down the veterans, has let down the minorities.

"By wrecking price control, the 79th Congress wiped out all the wage increases of the past year, plummeted the value of real wages to below the 1943 level, sliced the value of all salaries, pensions, social security benefits, war bonds and bank deposits."

The domestic program calls for the following action:

(1) Price and Rent Control. Enactment of a workable price and rent control law. Immediate roll-back of current inflationary prices. Re-establishment of controls over all food items now exempted.

(2) Housing. Amend the Patman Emergency Housing Law to increase subsidies. Pass the Wagner-Ellender-Taft long-range housing bill.

(3) Civil Rights. Pass a Federal Civil Rights bill. Abolish the poll tax. Punish lynchers. A permanent FEPC. Abolish the Wood-Rankin committee.

(4) Social Security and Health. Increased social security benefits and extended coverage. Pass the Wagner-Murray-Dingell health bill.

(5) Labor. Defeat efforts to weaken the Wagner and Norris-LaGuardia acts. A 65-75c minimum wage amendment, with extension of benefits to seamen, food and retail employes.

(6) Veterans. Easier terms for loans, increased educational allotments and liberalized benefits. Minimum unemployment insurance benefits of $25 a week for entire period of unemployment. Extension of GI Bill of Rights to merchant marine. No funds under GI bill for institutions practicing discrimination.

(7) Education and Science. Federal minimum educational standards and minimum wages. Federal grants for large-scale program, entitling every child to free and equal education without any kind of discrimination. A National Science Foundation, with fellowships and research subsidies in natural and social sciences.

(8) Farmers. Retain and strengthen all progressive farm legislation for benefit of small farmers. Expand Ever-Normal Granary program to all crops and to insure high minimum farm income, control surpluses and insure food supplies. Farm programs should be based on full employment and mutuality of interest between farmers and workers.

(9) The Arts. A Federal Fine Arts Bill to enrich the people's cultural life by establishing regional areas for the government-financed development of arts.

(10) Natural Resources. Create a Missouri Valley Authority. Undertake similar projects for the Arkansas, Columbia, Colorado and St. Lawrence rivers.

(11) Small Business. Action against monopolies and international cartels "to prevent small business from being destroyed by monopolies." Government credits at low rates to small businessmen, and to make available a Dept. of Commerce program of expert research, engineering and market services.

REMEMBER In November—VOTE

Mr. Wheeler, Meet Mr. Smith!

Sensational evidence of close and friendly relations between lame-duck Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D. Mont.) and Gerald L. K. Smith, the most vocal of America's admitted fascists, came to light last week on the heels of Wheeler's defeat at the hands of a militant people's political movement spearheaded by the CIO-PAC of Montana.

In the September issue of "The Cross and the Flag," ultra-reactionary sheet, Smith tried to explain the defeat of the violent Montana isolationist, and in the process washed a bit of dirty linen.

Smith, who has made a profession of stirring up prejudice against labor, Jews, Negroes, foreign-born, the late President Roosevelt and other progressive figures, complained in his editorial comment that Wheeler tried to hide his close connections with American fascists during the primary campaign.

"This is where he made his mistake," Smith complained. "The repudiation of old friends, who may have been smeared, is bad politics . . . It is not only bad politics, but it is not first-class character behavior.

"Mr. Wheeler has visited with me frequently. He has congratulated me frequently on my activities. He has told my friends how he appreciated the work that I was doing in the U. S.

"But when faced with the accusation that he was cooperating with Gerald L. K. Smith, he made a public repudiation."

Smith lamented that Wheeler's action cooled the ardor of "valuable people" among his fascist-minded associates who might have otherwise contributed more finances and energy to the Wheeler campaign. The rabble rousing politician went on to demand a federal investigation of the people who helped defeat that "courageous statesman," Mr. Wheeler.

'CRUCIAL NEED' OF PEOPLE'S MOVEMENT

peace. "Under the so-called bi-partisan foreign policy," he said, "the American people are being led away from their traditional hostility against joining blocs of nations against other nations.

"They are being asked to support billion-dollar American imperialism, to join an unholy alliance abroad which can only lead to the most disastrous war mankind has ever known."

Endorsing sentiments expressed by Henry Wallace in his Madison Square Garden speech, Kroll said: "Our foreign policy must be an American foreign policy presenting the best interests of the common man in this country and all other countries," treating the interests of all nations and peoples with equal consideration and without discrimination.

"That is the tradition of American fair play," he declared. "That is the opposite of the swaggering, bullying policy which the bi-partisan coalition of reactionaries is trying to foist upon the American people.

"We repudate imperialism in any form, including the form exemplified by the Byrnes, Vandenbergs, Tafts, Deweys and the McCormicks."

HENRY MORGENTHAU, JR., Roosevelt's Secretary of the Treasury, opened the conference with a stirring call for a progressive coalition.

"Everything that Franklin D. Roosevelt fought for and accomplished at home and abroad stands in danger of being scrapped," he warned.

"On the domestic side, I think Roosevelt would counsel us first of all to regain control of our economic destiny without delay," he said, stating that we need "not de-control but re-control" of prices and citing the failure of Congress to implement Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights.

Morgenthau warned that Republican proposals for tax reduction would accelerate the inflation spiral, jeopardizing the savings and insurance of millions and sharply reducing the value of the War Bonds bought by 90 million Americans.

Taxes can be reduced, he said, by cutting the $13 billion budget for war expenditures, out of a total budget of $41 billion.

"To have lower taxes, we must stop pouring billions of peacetime dollars into the bottomless pit of war preparations," Morgenthau declared. "We have got to stop all the war talk and war thinking and war planning that is going on in Washington today in high places."

Insisting that the atom bomb be outlawed, he predicted that once this was done "our major difficulties with Russia will rapidly disappear." Up to now, he said, no real progress has been made in this direction while atom bomb manufacture continues, "and our diplomats are not helping Groucho Marx plays solitaire in a harem with Ruth Jones while Harpo and Chico seek other diversions. This latest zany Marx Brothers' picture, "Night in Casablance," will keep their fans happy.

GLAMORIZED HISTORY AND MURDER

By George Weissman

IN two noteworthy ventures —Henry V and Caesar and Cleopatra—England has entered the race for the "super-colossal and spectacular" movie market. Both pictures represent the supreme achievement thus far in English attempts to produce "glamour" entertainment. They should make deep impressions on American audiences and box office receipts, despite the themes which are unusual in terms of Hollywood's penchant for murders and musicals.

The technicolor and overall direction in Henry and Ceasar are uniformly good. Their treatment of the audience with the respect due an adult-movie-goer marks them superior in many respects to the average American product.

Henry V is cleverly introduced with a presentation of the original Shakespearean play on the small stage of London's Globe Theatre in 1600. Henry (Laurence Olivier) inquires about the legality of his claim to French soil. Upon learning of its validity, he calls a council of war to plan an invasion of France.

The audience (1600 and modern) is then implored to use its imagination for the rest of the picture. The camera follows Henry and his medieval army on their conquest of France, ending in the great battle and victory at Agincourt around 1415. To make peace between the British and French courts, Henry courts and wins the hands of lovely Princess Katherine (Renee Asherson).

Claude Rains turns in a top-notch performance as the wise Caesar who undertakes to tutor a stripling of a girl in the art of being Queen. Undergoing an inner conflict as to whether he should deal with Cleo as a father or a lover. Ceasar nurtures the flower of Egypt into full bloom and then turns her over to Marc Antony.

SWITCHING back to the domestic scene, the wife and I had a long-range view of "The Big Sleep," when on a Saturday night, we managed to locate two seats in the last row of the balcony of a huge Broadway theatre.

Of course, we are still asking ourselves "what happened to Shawn Reagan?" Shawn is a mysterious guy whose name wanders in and out of the dialogue. But his body seems to be nowhere in Mexico or Southern California, the locale of this latest Bogart-Bacall thriller. Blood flows like Pilsner on the screen and from the high recesss of the Strand we managed to see at least six actors feel the cold chill of lead while one is stiffened by a dunking in the bay.

It's a rough and tumble, knock down and drag out series of scraps and murders. Sourpuss Bogart and the "Look" make passes at each other while playing hide-and-seek with the thugs. Should be very good, especially if you are within shooting distance of the screen.

"THE Killers," Mark Hellinger's latest, suffers in comparison to the number of murders in "The Big Sleep." However, the rest is well taken care of in this taut, absorbing adaptation of Ernest Hemingway's short story classic.

Two gun-handlers move in on a small town to kill a gas-station attendant. Warned of the plot on his life, the attendant (Burt Lancaster) fatalistically awaits his doom. That's where the short story ended. As an insurance company investigator unravels the death of Lancaster, the movie cleverly carries the plot further and shows through a series of flashbacks, why the attendant doesn't care.

Newcomer Lancaster is excellent in his role of a nice but definitely unbright fall-guy who gets wooed by the wrong gal, Ava Gardner. For a change, Miss Gardner portrays dramatic as well as pulchritudinous charm in the part of the siren who gives him the double cross.

Hellinger has done justice to "The Killers." With plenty of harsh, sometimes cruel action, the picture will go down in history as an example of where the producer profitably used more than the title of an original story.

Which is a lot more than can be said for Paramount's treatment of Booth Tarkington's romantic novel, "Monsieur Beaucaire." What was once the tale of dashing duelists is now the skeleton for buffooning Bob Hope's bantering. And, it should be added, he garnishes the bones with plenty of meat, particularly his irresistible brand of ham.

Hope is funny whether he's wearing an Eskimo parka, a desert burnoose, or the ruffles and panties of a court dandy. In "M. Beaucaire," Hope plays the timid barber in Louis XV's court, who is shipped off to Spain masquerading as a noble pretty-boy. Supposedly the rage of Europe's boudoirs, he makes with the women like he just came back after four years in the South Pacific. His wolf-like passion for pert, pretty Joan Caulfield imparts to her role a dexterity and elusiveness that is born of necessity.

WALKING along Broadway these days is like invading the backyard of Ben Hecht. He has two plays going full blast, two pictures on the major screens and his two hands in about six other activities. Right now he is eligible to join at least several unions.

The most noteworthy of his activities, however, is "Notorious," the new psychological thriller starring Ingrid Bergman and Cary Grant. In contrast to the "Big Sleep" and "The Killers," there's no back-alley roughstuff. Yet the picture sizzles with hair raising episodes and tense situations.

Ingrid, the patriotic daughter of a German-born traitor, is sent to Brazil by FBI agent Cary Grant to trap a Nazi spy ring. Using the feminine techniques, of which she possesses plenty, she inveigles the slick but sinister Gauleiter into matrimony. From then on the picture is the equal of any of the other traditional Hitchcock thrillers. Claude Rains supplies another bit of terrific acting to make this picture tops in all aspects.

"Notorious" has more than a melodrama's share of torrid love scenes with the Bergman-Grant combination coming within a hairbreadth of singing the censor's eyebrows. Heat the Hitchcock horror scenes with romance and you have a warm atmosphere that will probably have the fans crying for more of this team.

Hecht's other pictorial contribution is an unusual picture which completely throws off the shackles of a movie lot and mixes ballet with mayhem. Briefly, it is the tale of a half-mad dancer who has killed his wife and may kill his partner, a young girl who is in love with him and his "art."

Hecht, who wrote, directed and produced "Specter of the Rose," brings together a fresh, new cast that performs with ease and grace, whether acting or dancing.

PLAYING AROUND

HOME, SWEET, HOMICIDE—One of the better harvests of the present crop of murder pictures. A gag with every killing, as three kids of a widowed detective story writer set out to provide mother with material for a new book... and incidentally, acquire a step-father.

HOLIDAY IN MEXICO—If you can't afford a winter vacation in Mexico this year, try this latest M-G-M flicker. Ignore the story and concentrate on the excellent musical production. Stars Walter Pidgeon and Ilona Massey.

I'VE ALWAYS LOVED YOU—Backed by a few million dollars made via the cowboys-and-indian route, Republic has splurged on "Art." The results are discouraging except for the sparkling piano playing by Arthur Rubenstein.

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DOG—A lady and her dog involved in a series of complicated crimes, leads a disgruntled cop and a depressed reporter away from their favorite brass rail. Allyn Joslyn brings the flicker up a few notches in the crime parade.

CRACK-UP—Provides an entertaining mixture of art lectures, crime and psychiatry. An art expert in the employ of a museum, Pat O'Brien attempts to discover who is responsible for shipping some copies instead of valuable originals to the museum. Exciting, especially when Claire Trevor lends him a lovely, helping hand.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID—Muggy all the way. This warmed-over sequel to the original is as far from down-to-earth family life as a noonday soap opera—and just as boring.

WOMEN AT WORK

Standards for Employment of Women is the title of a new leaflet just issued by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor. The need for good working standards, what they are and how they are obtained is discussed briefly in the leaflet, and a list of other Women's Bureau pamphlets on the subject is given. The leaflet may be obtained from the Women's Bureau, Washington, D. C.

The number of women in the nation's civilian labor force has dropped by more than two million between end of the war and August, 1946. This is a percentage decrease in the number of women workers from 36 per cent in August, 1945, to 29 per cent in August, 1946, reports the Women's Bureau.

A Census Bureau report reveals that families with a woman head increased 53.4 per cent from April, 1940, to V-E Day (May, 1945). They constituted in May, 1945, 21.9 per cent of all families, compared with 15.3 per cent in April, 1940.

These children can scarcely wait for the newly arrived cow to be milked. The picture was taken on a farm near Gdansk, Poland, and is typical of other scenes over war-torn Europe. The Heifer Project of the Brethren Service Committee is calling upon Americans to contribute both money and heifers to send abroad for children who have no milk.

HEIFERS FOR RELIEF

AN opportunity to help the starving millions abroad in a quick and direct way is being offered to Americans by the Heifer Project Committee.

"Because milk is one of the best sources of protein the Heifer Project can offer hope and future security to thousands of hungry, discouraged people," states the committee in an appeal for direct donations of young cows or for funds to buy them.

Heifers for shipment are obtained directly from farmers who set aside and raise calves to contribute, and also from funds raised by individuals and organizations and used to purchase animals.

Up to last August, some 2,500 heifers had been shipped by the committee to Puerto Rico, Greece, France, Poland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Italy and other countries. Thousands more are needed.

The Heifer Project Committee, sponsored by the Church of the Brethren, has in its membership representatives from the Evangelical and Reformed Church, Northern Baptists, Mennonites, Rural Life Assn., Fellowship of Reconciliation and Catholic Rural Life Assn.

Those interested in contributing to the Heifer Project should write to the committee's headquarters at New Windsor, Md.

FIGHTING INFLATION WITH EVERY WEAPON?

Acting on instruction of Sec. of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, OPA has announced removal of price control from fresh and frozen salmon, oat cereals, canned corn and all domestic canned fruits and juices.

The decontrol was made necessary by Anderson's removal of these items from the short supply list which he is required to produce monthly.

The same day OPA said Anderson had also ordered retail price increases averaging 2.5c a pound on olemargarine, cooking and salad oils, mayonnaise, salad dressing and shortening.

The boosts, OPA said, would add $60,000,000 annually to the national food bill.

A LOOK AT THE BOOKS

Arsenal Of Democracy

LABOR and various CIO leaders are among those who come in for some high praise for their war production activities in Donald Nelson's new book, "Arsenal of Democracy."

The book is of particular value as a complete and detailed record of the mammoth job done on the production front to win the war, an amazing achievement, the memory of which unfortunately is already growing dim in America.

Although Nelson, an earnest and well-intentioned man, was subject to constant attack as head of the War Production Board, he tells his story with detachment and good humor. Only in the account of his fight with the Army Service of Supply which finally resulted in his resignation in August, 1944, does he show any heat.

Not thinking it wise at the time to answer the "indirect heckling of the Army," Nelson now gets a few things off his chest by recounting some of the muddling mistakes made by the Army such as failure to order in time, failure to make up their minds as to just what they needed, over-ordering, then cutting back, then over-ordering again.

But for labor's contribution to the war production drive, Nelson has only the finest things to say. "The war provided an acid test for every institution and every group in American life," he writes, in the chapter on Labor and Management.

"No test was more exacting, however, than the one which was met by labor. I was in a position to see it applied and to witness the results; and it is my considered opinion that labor passed with flying colors . . . The American worker came through, both as an individual and as a member of an organization."

Speaking of the two labor men whom he appointed as vice-chairmen of WPB—Clinton S. Golden of the CIO Steelworkers and Joseph Keenan of the AFL—Nelson declared he has "always been happy" about choosing them.

"Clint Golden and his men were of direct and invaluable service in the big drive to increase steel production during the critical summer of 1943," writes Nelson.

Phil Clowes, CIO Steelworkers, and Walter Reuther, Auto Workers, whose plan for converting the auto industry to war production became "more or less a symbol of labor's know-how," are among the CIO'ers Nelson mentions.

Some 1,300 suggestions made by workers on the job, which were adopted between the fall of 1944 and early summer of 1945, were shown to have saved upward of 15,000,000 man-hours annually. These and other figures are cited by Nelson to "indicate the solid achievements which grew out of calling on the ingenuity and thoughtfulness of the men in the shops."

Altogether "Arsenal of Democracy" is a book well worth labor's attention, not only as a fair and honest record of American workers' contributions to the war, but also as a future reminder of what they can do when their brains and ability are given a chance.

For Better Broadcasts

Housewives and others who have the chance to listen to the afternoon radio programs and are sick and tired of the endless chain of "real life" soap dramas and jingles can do something about it if they use their power, says a new 10c pamphlet, "Radio Is Yours," published by the Public Affairs Committee, 22 East 38th St., N. Y. 16.

The booklet is written by Jerome H. Spingarn, formerly an attorney with the Federal Communications Commission. Pointing out that the rights of the listener to good programs "must be defended actively if they are to be preserved, Spingarn describes the activities of listeners groups formed in many communities by civic, parent-teacher and other organizations to bring about more effective use of the radio.

The pamphlet also tells how broadcasting profit has grown, shows how newspapers have been busy buying into radio, outlines regulations of the FCC aimed at protecting the public interest, and explains how to appeal to the FCC in an effort to obtain better programs.

PAC RADIO PROGRAMS

Radio will play an important part in the CIO Political Action Committee's campaign to elect candidates pledged to stamp out racial discrimination, in the forthcoming Congressional elections.

The popular inter-racial quartet, "The Mariners," featured on the Fred Allen and Eddie Cantor radio shows, will be heard on spot musical announcements devoted to such important issues as racial discrimination, inflation, housing and national health insurance.

Negro members of the quartet are James O. Lewis and Homer Smith. The white singers are Thomas B. Lockard and Martin H. Boughan. The four, all former professionals, met when they were in the Coast Guard. They formed a group called the "Coast Guard Quartet" and provided entertainment at numerous hospital shows and bond rallies in the States.

During their service in the Pacific, they entertained the troops. After their discharge last December they decided to continue their careers as civilians in the same fashion.

Plans are now under way to have special recorded appeals from Negro and foreign-born leaders over stations having large minority group listening audiences.

WOMEN'S JOBS

An increase in the demand for women in the medical and other health services can be expected during the coming years, states another Women's Bureau report released this week. The report, "Trends and Their Effect Upon the Demand for Women Workers," is the last in a series of 12, all concerned with the job outlook in the health field.

LABOR'S CONCERN IN HOSPITAL PROGRAM VITAL, SAYS GOLDEN

WITHIN the next five years this nation is going to build over a billion dollars worth of hospitals.

How are they going to be run? Are they going to be true community organizations, serving all the people in the area? What will their labor policies be? Will they serve the greatest good to the greatest number?

These were questions put before the annual convention of the American Hospital Assn. in Philadelphia last week by Clinton Golden, former vice-president of the CIO United Steelworkers. His queries were coupled with strong advice to hospital administrators to remember that trade union members are an active and leading section of each community, who will desire to be represented on the planning board of any organization which professes to serve all the people.

Golden was appointed recently to the national advisory council on hospital construction, which will work closely with the Surgeon General and the Public Health Service in building new medical centers throughout the country under legislation passed earlier this year.

"Labor and farm organizations among others will quite naturally and properly, I think, seek representation on hospital boards and participation in the formulation of policies," Golden said.

"That they are capable of making a constructive contribution is evidenced by the experience of the Natl. War Fund, the Red Cross and Community Chest and other community fund-raising organizations during the war.

"Through union participation, a broader base of financial support was provided that brought millions of dollars to support these activities."

IF union people furnish a large share of the financial support for hospital facilities — either through voluntary plans or a public health insurance program —labor will become increasingly interested in hospital wages and working conditions, Golden predicted.

American hospitals had troubles during the war in keeping their staffs together — a fact which can be traced directly to low wages and lack of coverage under the Social Security Act.

During 1944, Golden noted, the average pay for the 700,000 persons working in hospitals averaged "not much more than $1,000, including salaries of superintendents, radiologists, pathologists and other highly trained medical men, down to orderlies, housekeepers, maids and laundry women—this in a year when the industrial worker earned on average of $45 to $50 a week . . ."

What's sound for industry should also be sound for hospitals, the steel union official declared. In business, larger volume means lower unit costs. If the same principle is applied to the operation of hospitals, there should be room for much improvement in wage and salary standards.

"To expect that operating deficits can be met in whole or in part by the payment of substandard wages and salaries is to shift, in effect, a part of the operating costs to underpaid, though willing but helpless, employes least able to meet them," Golden charged.

THE increased volume of hospital activity is certain to come from the expenditure of $1,125,000,000 for new hospitals by state and federal governments during the next few years. Under terms of the Hospital Survey & Construction Act, passed by the last session of Congress, the federal government will contribute one-third of that amount to the various states for building new hospitals.

How urgently those new hospitals are needed is clear in current statistics on the American hospital "population." The statistics show that:

Three thousand counties, with a population of about 15 million people, have no registered hospitals at all.

Close to 170,000 beds must be provided in general hospitals to bring up the ratio to 4½ beds per 1,000 population, the figure judged necessary by competent hospital authorities.

Some 65,000 beds are needed in tuberculosis hospitals.

Mental hospitals will require an additional 208,963 beds.

Chronic disease hospitals will require 270,173 beds to bring the ratio to the desired normal.

THE hospital bill—which had full CIO support in Congress —is aimed to see that the new medical centers don't grow "just like Topsy." Today the best hospitals—and the largest number of them—are located in the wealthier states and in the big metropolitan areas.

Sickness and disease, however, have little respect for state borders. The law therefore provides for thorough planning on the part of the states before they can receive federal funds. It requires a state agency to handle the project, and makes necessary a complete state-wide inventory of existing hospitals and hospital needs to demonstrate that the newly constructed hospitals will be of most effective service.

To insure community participation in the program, advisory planning groups on both a federal and state scale have been provided in the bill. The national committee will work closely with the Surgeon General of the U. S., who will direct the entire hospital-building plan. Four members of the eight-man council must be health and hospital experts, while the remainder will be chosen to represent consumers of hospital services.

The entire program is a big step forward, although it falls short of providing the country with a well-rounded health program such as that envisaged by the Wagner-Murray-Dingell national health insurance bill.

FULL TEXT OF FOREIGN POLICY RESOLUTION

THE wartime victory of the United Nations remains inescapably the most important fact of our time. The wartime unity of the United Nations was the essential element to that victory, and is the crowning achievement of its creator, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Faced today with the imperative question of building a lasting peace, we call for a swift return to the progressive global thinking of Franklin Roosevelt. We must base our foreign policies once more on that world good-neighborliness which was his legacy to us. With his confidence, daring and imagination, we must evoke security and prosperity for the world.

This constitutes today the American people's minimum demand.

Overwhelmingly, Americans want peace and believe in peace The people's will must win expression. Their will found expression in the establishment of the United Nations. The United Nations needs and must have the wholehearted support of all peoples so that it may gain strength and vigor in the battle for peace.

A democratic foreign policy for our nation must have as its starting point a swift return to the course charted by President Roosevelt and, we submit, must be based on the following points.

1 The basic principle of our foreign policy should be that of the Good Neighbor. Not only to the countries of the Western hemisphere, but to all the countries of the world. The test of this policy lies in the recapture of that international unity, achieved during the war, and to a peculiar degree the unity among the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and the United States. It will be fruitless to seek solutions for the specific problems of the peace, without first recovering mutual trust among the great powers.

Difficult as this may be to realize, we are confident that it can be done. America must exert every effort to achieve it. On that sound basis alone can we construct a peace that will endure.

2 The war was fought for our national survival. It was fought as well to defeat fascism from which the war was born. It has been repeatedly stated by our government, alone and in concert with our allies, that fascism must be destroyed. This requires action that has not been taken, or taken timidly and without unswerving determination.

As agreed at Potsdam, we must demolish the economic royalists, who through German cartels established a basis for fascist triumph. We must carry forward an eradication of the social and economic basis of Japanese militarism and imperialism.

We must require payment of reparations by the defeated countries to those of our allies whose losses are massive, and whose needs are so urgent. We must strictly quarantine Spain and Argentina, notorious centers of tyranny.

3 The Four Freedoms are America's heritage. They are designed for all the world. If freedom is good for one people, it is good for all. The substance and reality of freedom must therefore be brought to all dependent, colonial peoples everywhere. We recognize that this is a difficult and tremendous undertaking. It will take time, patience and goodwill. It will also exact persistence and determination. We must not lose that vision, nor falter in this purpose.

Imperialism, political, military or economic, by any nation anywhere denies our American faith. It corrupts the letter and spirit of the Atlantic Charter. Imperialism must end everywhere in the world.

4 We unalterably support a free, united and independent China. The Presidential directive of December fifteenth is an admirable statement of this position. We call upon all foreign governments as well as our own, to cease intervention in Chinese affairs and for an end to military aid to any faction. We insist upon a return to the policy stated by the President. We ask cooperation by the Big Three for the realization of their objective.

We must oblige the present Nationalist government to build a democratic coalition of all elements in China political life. We should repeat our promise that then, and only then, we shall extend generous economic aid to the Chinese people.

Foreign policy platform adopted by the Conference of Progressives, meeting at the City of Chicago, September 28 and 29 under the auspices of Natl. Citizens' Political Action Committee, Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences & Professions and the CIO Political Action Committee.

5 Millions of men, women and children are the hunted and oppressed of the earth. They are refugees on the conscience of mankind. America has a noble history, as haven to the oppressed, friend to the world's needy. America must open its doors more generously than it has to those who have no home, above all, its influence must be exerted, in act as well as word, to aid the pitiful remnants of Europe's Jews to find in Palestine a new life.

We support the President's insistance that 100,000 Jews be admitted to Palestine. A United Nations mandate must replace the present British sovereignty. An ample program for Palestine's economic development, as proposed in the able Lowdermilk Plan, must be a claim upon our resources. We must no longer keep the word of promise to the ear, but break it to mens' hope.

6 Millions of people, who are not refugees, live in homes they love, but perilously poised on the edge of starvation. Here again, we must be faithful to America's past. We must be Good Neighbors in deed. But we are not now doing all we can. We are not giving all men need. Safe ourselves from the ravages of the war, which laid waste so much of the world, we have the means.

We must give freely of our substance. The fullest production of food at home must be our constant concern. The freest gifts of food abroad must be our steady practice.

UNRRA will soon end. It must be succeeded by an international agency, generously aided by ourselves to feed the hungry, clothe the cold, and shelter the homeless until men's most urgent needs are met. Above all political prejudice must not be allowed to dilute our humanity.

7 Armaments are a measure of national fears. In themselves they are a menace to peace. And they are a heavy burden on the people. America plans to spend 13 billion dollars in this fiscal year on its War and Navy departments.

This araments burden is, we believe, impossible to justify, if our policies are those of peace. They provoke similar araments in other countries, fearful of our intent.

We urge that America lead the world in the joint, simultaneous reduction of armaments, and that it do so now.

Related to this question is our attempt to secure military bases around the world. Such a unilateral network of bases arouses the inevitable distrust of our words of peace. It destroys confidence in us as a Good Neighbor. This military plan must be scrapped. The world's military bases must belong to the world. Nothing can prove so overwhelmingly America's peaceful purposes than this act of renunciation.

We oppose all plans to invigorate the military establishments of our Latin American neighbors. We reject the evolving pattern of close military alliance with Britain. These plans inflame world fears. They undermine efforts to build a world community.

Spheres of special influence of the great powers exist. It is useless to deny it. We urge that they be respected. But we urge above all that they not be used as military pawns in a game of world power. We insist that they be used as the means of natural regional cooperation on projects of peace, and be incorporated steadily into a functioning One World.

Militarism in short grows on what it feeds upon. We renounce militarism, our own, or any other. Our government can and must lead all nations to renounce it. We can thus lift a heavy burdan of cost from men's backs, and a burden of fear from their minds.

We call upon the United Nations to take prompt action looking toward universal disarmament to implement the declaration of the Atlantic Charter that the World "for realistic as well as spiritual reasons must abandon the use of force."

8 The release of the atom's energy has changed the world. It can be for our ill. It must be for our good. We reject the use of atomic energy for war anywhere at any time.

We believe that America should cease at once the manufacture of the bomb and should destroy at once its present stockpiles of the bomb, securing simultaneously, agreement by all other nations to outlaw atomic weapons.

Such action by our nation would strikingly demonstrate that when we say peace, we mean peace. We commend our government for its stated conviction that international control of atomic energy, with full power of inspection, is imperative and feasible.

We insist that the Baruch Plan, however, is defective in one respect. It proposes international agreement by "easy stages." It requires that other nations accept binding agreements not to conduct research into the military uses of atomic energy and to disclose their uranium and thorium resources, while the United States retains its technical knowledge and engineering freedom, until the international system is working to our satisfaction.

It is not enough to ask other nations to be good, with a promise that at some time, undefined, we may be good too. This delays all prospect of agreement. It encourages an actual atomic armaments race now.

Let America move generously as a Good Neighbor. Let it provide a living example of good will to the world. The world will, we believe, respond in the same constructive spirit of peace.

9 Finally, America must assume a great initiative in world trade and its industrial advance. The British loan was a constructive act. The Bretton Woods agreement is excellent.

Throughout the world there are vast undeveloped regions, rich in resources, but starved for capital.

It should be our purpose to launch under suitable international safeguards, an investment program, advantageous to ourselves and to the rest of the world. We can provide in this way a profound impetus to economic growth. We can help free the world from economic fear.

MURRAY CITES 'CRUCIAL NEED' OF PEOPLE'S MOVEMENT

matters any by conducting their negotiations with the atom bomb bulging from their hip pockets."

HAROLD L. ICKES, former Secretary of Commerce and now head of the Independent Citizens' Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, criticized American policies in regard to the Kings of Italy and Greece, the Emperor of Japan, Franco and Argentina, and for "putting a collaborationist in power in the Philippines."

But he warned American liberals against "too often defending other countries and carrying water on both shoulders," saying that he did "not condone Russian imperialism any more than any other" and that he wanted to see "free elections in the polltax South, Greece, Poland, Rumania and Bulgaria."

Ickes joined with Morgenthau in calling for an early meeting of the Big Three—Truman, Stalin and Attlee—and in deploring the vast sums spent on military establishments. "If we squander money by billions for war purposes," he said, "other nations are thereby compelled to spend proportionately."

Ickes said we had sent Byrnes and his associates to Paris "to bring us peace, not war. Peace is one thing they should get tough about."

WALTER WHITE of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People received one of the conference's greatest ovations when he called for equal rights for the Negro people and for close co-operation of Negroes and whites in political action.

He declared he had been "shocked and disheartened" by the firing of Wallace from the Cabinet and that "that feeling is shared by Negro Americans generally, because Mr. Wallace has been the one member of the President's Cabinet who has spoken out without fear against discrimination and bigotry."

THE farmer's stake in progressive political unity was stressed by James Patton, president of the Natl. Farmers' Union. Emphasizing that the American dirt farmer is basically progressive and not reactionary, he traced the growth of people's political movements that have sprung from the agrarian West, directed against the monopoly capitalists of the East.

"The West now faces this old struggle anew," he said. "The West today is, in effect, a colonial possession of an empire with its capital in the financial and industrial centers of the East."

Patton said that the two million farm boys and girls who went to war from the Middle West are now, on their return, offered farm land at values inflated as much as 100% and farm equipment at outrageous prices, or else jobs in the cities at 40 to 70c an hour "and prices that make these wages bitterly ridiculous."

The farm leader vigorously endorsed Wallace's letter to Truman on foreign policy. "A 'get-tough' foreign policy and a 'get-tough' domestic policy are the twin planks of the big business-political-military alliance that is now so effectively working both sides of the political street," he said.

Warning that American monopolists are pushing "new imperialist adventures backed to the hilt by American diplomacy and American arms," Patton declared:

"The truth seems to be that behind a smoke-screen of eloquent denunciations of other ideologies by our State Dept. spokesmen, is the real, bitter struggle of American cartels for the exorbitant profits found in foreign investment and exploitation of resources in countries with living standards lower than our own."

SEN. CLAUDE PEPPER was the last featured speaker at the conference. He devoted most of his speech to Roosevelt's policies as a guide for progressives today, and to a plea for liberals to work within the Democratic party.

He praised Henry Wallace for his "gallant sacrifice of office for principle," adding: "Yet liberals everywhere must remember that every single one of those lieutenants of Roosevelt and knights of democracy have left office only more resolutely resolved to keep alive the memory and spirit of Roosevelt in the Democratic party as well as in the nation."

Pepper denounced the Republicans' attitude on foreign policy, saying: "Those who talk about appeasement have overlooked the most costly appeasement price we have had to pay, that is the appeasement of the Republican party in order to carry on any kind of foreign policy."

Noting the purging of liberals by the Republican party, Pepper declared that "the Republicans are allergic to liberalism. They just can't stand it—they break into a violent rash and see red when it appears whether inside their ranks or out."

Ominous Warning

CRASH IS SEEN IN PROFIT GRAB

OMINOUS rumblings deep in the machinery of the American economic system were noted with alarm last week as John Steelman, chief of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, warned that skyrocketing prices and profits may be leading the nation to the junkshop of serious depression.

With profit rates at an all-time high, Steelman said, "the first and most salutary action to arrest a decline could be taken by business itself in reducing prices—wherever possible—without reducing wages.

"There can be no doubt that in some industries the profit position is such that prices could be reduced and profits still be maintained at a satisfactory level. This will be even more true in the coming year as volume increases and unit costs come down."

THE report buttressed claims of unions throughout the nation that the purchasing power of each worker's wage has fallen greatly, both through decline in take-home pay and the soaring cost of living.

Take-home pay dropped from a high of $47.12 a week in April, 1945, to $43.07 in July, 1946, the report declared. At the same time the consumers price index rose to an all-time high of 140, a sharp increase directly due to the weakening of OPA.

Net effect of this double trend was to drive "real wages" back to the "lowest point since early war years," the report said.

A married man with three dependents who had a top wartime "real" income of over $35 a week during the war years, gets on the average just over $30 at the present time. That figure is the lowest since the early part of 1942.

Although the OWMR report predicted confidently that this decline in real wages "will be reversed," it offered as an "only cure" the production of more finished goods and services, and sought to create the impression that a "general round of large wage increases now can benefit only special groups. . . ."

Nevertheless, the production index showed industrial output running well ahead of 1941 figures. The Federal Reserve production index, which stood at 162 in 1941, hovered at 160 during the first quarter of this year and then climbed to 170 in June and to an estimated 176 in August.

Electric irons are coming out of the factories in more than 30% higher quantities; vacuum cleaners at a rate of 25% higher than pre-war, and washing machines at almost the same increased rates. Passenger tires, electric ranges, radios, trucks and buses and truck and bus tires are all well ahead of 1941 production rates.

Refrigerators, passenger cars, gas ranges and sewing machines are still lagging behind pre-war schedules, however.

THE government report lashed out at the suggestion that the best way to balance supply with demand is "to let prices go."

"An uncontrolled advance in the general level of prices," it declared, "is the worst possible way to bring demand into balance with supply.

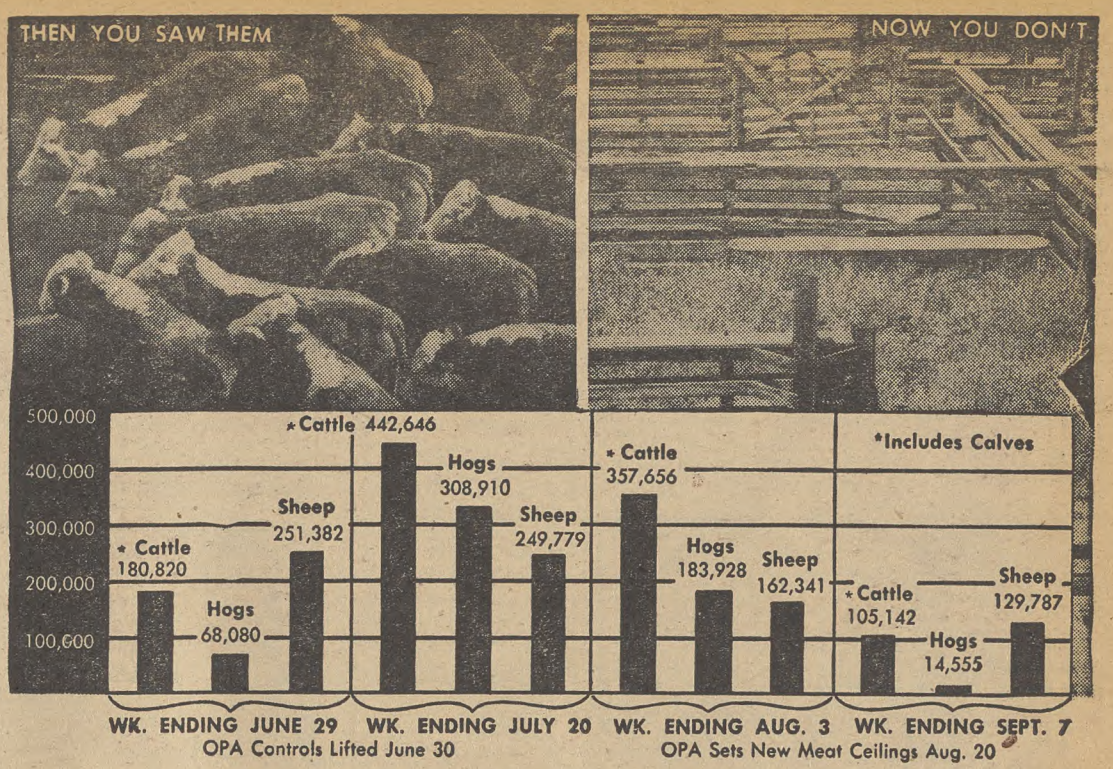
"To permit this advance robs people of the value of their money and inflicts misery and hardship on millions of individuals with fixed incomes. It dissipates the market for businessmen and farmers, and can lead only to price collapse.

"It leads to speculative purchasing and withholding of goods and disrupts the flow of materials into production and the flow of finished goods into markets.

"Unless we can stabilize prices, it will be immeasurably more difficult to stabilize production and employment at high levels," the OWMR warned. It added this somber prophecy:

"If prices keep on rising and precipitate a wage-price spiral, business and agriculture will find they have priced themselves out of the market and into a depression."

With the facts of rising prices staring the nation in the face, the top government economic administration indicated that "we must continue to fight inflation with every weapon at our command." But what those weapons are, now that OPA has been hobbled, was not clearly specified.



STRIKE OF MEAT PACKERS: An examination of this chart reveals that the meat shortage is being engineered by the packers to squeeze out higher prices from the nation's housewives. It will be noted that plenty of meat went to market when prices were skyrocketing without OPA controls. Rep. Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.) charges that "the present meat shortage is a huge conspiracy on the part of the big packers." (Federated Pictures) ers, to subvert the principles of price control and to goad the people into anti-progressive voting."

"At the same time," the resolution continued, "it has become an instrument in the hands of the packers to weaken the Packinghouse Workers Union in the middle of negotiations.

"While at the moment there is a real shortage of hogs, there are many cattle on the Western ranges ready for slaughter, or that will be ready within a short period, if not diverted into feeder lots."

CIO BACK ON AIR EVERY SUNDAY

THE CIO came back to the radio waves last Sunday in the first of a series of 13 America United broadcasts on the NBC network. The program was devoted to a discussion of political action by Jack Kroll, CIO-PAC director; Frank Kingdon, Natl. Citizens PAC official; Lewis Warbington of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and a spokesman for the industry viewpoint on politics.

The broadcast is aired Sunday afternoons for half an hour, starting at 1:00 P. M. Eastern Standard Time, and is carried on the entire coast-to-coast hookup of the Natl. Broadcasting Co. It offers informal, unprepared discussion of key issues facing the American people by leading representatives of major social and economic groups.

Future programs now being planned include round-table talks on meat price control, housing, wage stabilization, veterans' problems and other issues of importance to every American radio listener. The broadcasts are attempting to get away from the "argue-and-harangue" type offered on many discussion programs.

Instead they will offer sound and spirited discussions, aimed at "making points," rather than at presenting all sides of each question.

The America United program is an NBC public service feature, and its sponsoring revolves among several major organizations whose viewpoints are of interest to all the people.

Your suggestions and comments about the program should be sent either to America United, NBC, Radio City, New York, or to the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

FINE A&P $175,000 AS TRUST

A $175,000 fine—but no jail sentences—was the penalty assessed this week by a Federal Court at Danville, Ill., against the A&P grocery chain, convicted of conspiring to control a substantial part of the nation's food business.

Two other big food chains, Kroger and Safeway, are expected to follow the nation's largest grocer into the courts, with the Dept. of Justice busy preparing Serman Anti-trust Law charges against them.

A&P was found guilty of setting up 12 separate corporations to gain a preferential position over other grocers, to undercut retail competitors, and to boost prices in A&P stores where a monopoly of the grocery business had been established.

A&P officials said they would appeal the decision.

ASKS U. S. PROBE CARTELS

Charging that an internatinal cartel network had been reconstituted, UAW-CIO Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas this week urged the Senate Committee to Investigate the National Defense to probe cartel operations "in creating international conflict and seeking to light the fuse for a third world war."

"These powerful groups, which a few years ago placed profitable relations with Nazi monopolists above the peace and security of their own country, are again hard at work," Thomas charged.

Pointing to John Foster Dulles, foreign policy adviser to Republican presidential candidate Thomas Dewey, Thomas asserted: "Mr. Dulles and his spokesmen at Paris have been fighting, it seems to me, not for peaceful understanding but for the maximum economic concessions which can be won through the threat of this country's superior military power. That is why their special hatred has been directed against those spokesmen of a democratic and peaceful foreign Policy—Franklin Roosevelt and Henry Wallace."

PROFIT GRAB TOPS WAR TAKE BY 50%!

By STANLEY RUTTENBERG

THE CIO predicted nine months ago that corporation profits of 1946 would be exorbitant and that necessary wage increases could be paid and absorbed without increasing prices. Positive proof of this thesis is now becoming available.

Profits are at fantastic levels. Business interests, greedy for profits, insisted that wage increases could not be paid without increasing prices. Instead of absorbing increased wage costs out of profits, they pushed profits higher and higher.

CORPORATE profits by the fourth quarter of 1946 will be running at an annual rate of 25 to 50% above the war years. Total corporate profits for the years 1942-45, after taxes, averaged $9.5 billion. The best estimates available indicate that corporate profits, after taxes, will be at the fantastic level of almost $14 billion by the fourth quarter of 1946.

Profits in the war years 1942-45 and estimated profits for 1946 make profits for the pre-war years, 1936-39, of $3.9 billion look mighty small. In other words, by the fourth quarter of 1946, corporate profits, after taxes, will be 250% above 1936-39 profits and almost 50% above the war years 1942-45. These figures on profits are for all corporations in America.

The Federal Reserve Board, however, reports profits, after taxes, for some 629 industrial corporations. Second quarter 1946 profits for these corporations were 18% above second quarter profits of 1945 and 37% above the second quarter for the war years 1942-45.

Profits during the second quarter of 1946 were running at an annual rate of 26% above the annual rate for 1945 and 30% above the rate for the war years 1942-45. This 1946 annual rate, based upon profits for the second quarter, sets an all time high for these corporations.

Prediction For '46

- Corporate profits by the fourth quarter of 1946 will be running at an annual rate of 25 to 50% above the war years.
- Best estimates indicate that profits, after taxes, will be at the fantastic level of almost $14 billion.
- By the fourth quarter of 1946, corporate profits, after taxes, will be 250% above the average for 1936-39.

Any question of using the second quarter rate of profits to establish the annual rate can be allayed by looking at what happened in previous years.

The second quarter rate for 1942, 1943 and 1944 was lower than the annual rate for any of those years, and the second quarter of profits for 1945 (that being the quarter immediately preceding the war's end) was only slightly higher than the annual rate for that year.

IN industry after industry profits for the second quarter of 1946 are fantastic. They are running equal to or higher than the rates during the war years. If the estimates of the Department of Commerce for profits for the second half of 1946 are accurate, then the annual rates established by second quarter 1946 profits are a great understatement.

In Iron and Steel 47 companies report profits of $66 million in the second quarter of 1946. (This includes the transfer of funds from contingency reserve accounts built up out of war years profits. Corporations, after transferring reserves to net income, use it to pay dividends. If the corporations did not anticipate an annual rate of profit equal to amounts they have transferred from reserves, they never would have made the transfer.)

Their profits for the second quarter of 1946 are 33% higher than the second quarter rate for the war years 1942-45. On an annual basis, 1946 profits based on second quarter rates are 30% higher than the annual rates of 1942-45.

IN non-durable goods industries, profits are far higher because they have had no problems relating to reconversion. Eighty non-durable goods corporations report profits for the first half of 1946 to be $135 million or 75% above the $77 million established during the first half of 1945. Profits for the first half of 1945 for non-durable goods industries were the highest of any years these corporations have been reporting to the Federal Reserve Board.

The annual rate of profits established by the first half of 1946, $270 million, is 85% higher than the annual rates for the war years 1942-45.

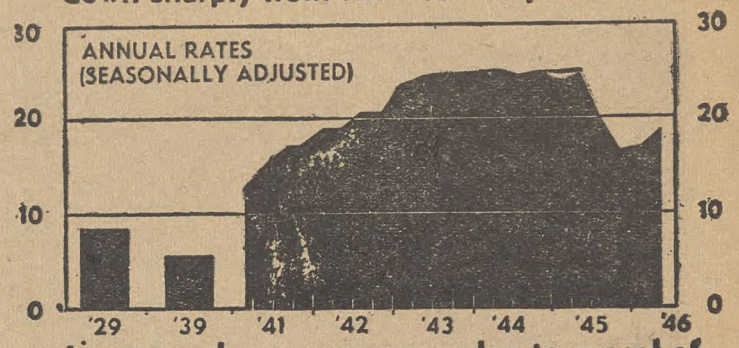
In the food and beverage industries first half profits for 1946 were 52% higher than for the same period of 1945 and the annual rate established by the first half profits is 61% higher than the war years 1942-45.

It is clear that the CIO's position, that wage increases could be paid out of increased profits, was valid. These figures prove beyond any reasonable doubt that corporations could have absorbed increased wage costs without increasing prices.

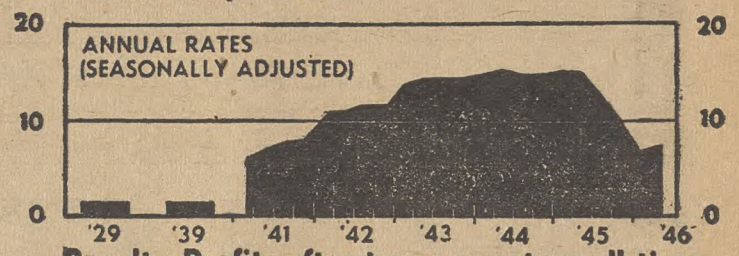
PEAK IN CORPORATE PROFITS

[BILLIONS OF DOLLARS]

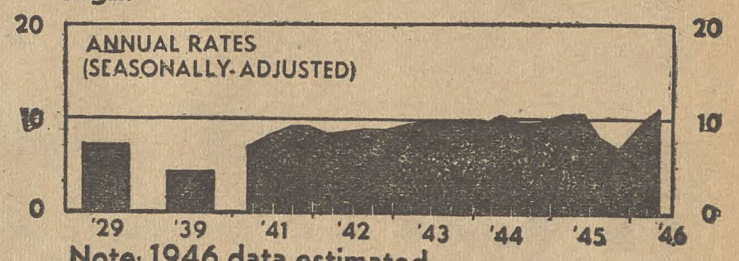
Though corporate profits before taxes are down sharply from the wartime peak . . .



taxes are down even more, due to repeal of the excess profits tax.



Result : Profits after taxes are at an all-time high.



Note: 1946 data estimated.

Business profits—after all taxes have been deducted—now are at an all-time record annual rate of nearly $11 billion, these charts above, based upon figures supplied by Reconversion Director Steelman's report shows. (Below) charts prove something you already know. Namely: price increases plus taxes have cut "real" wages to their lowest point in years.

'MOST GRATIFYING'

THE Botany Worsted Mills reports that its net profits, after deducting all charges and taxes, were $1,453,000 in the first six months of 1946, compared with $403,000 during the first half of 1945.

In view of the escalator price increases for the textile and clothing industries provided by the price extension act, the chances are the company will do even better during the second half of 1946.

The increase in Botany's take-home profits was nearly 300%, but apparently the company still is not satisfied.

According to Botany's president, "The statement is naturally most gratifying, particularly in view of the difficulties faced due to the retarding regulations of the government. It is to be hoped that there will be some relief as time passes and better understanding by these bureaus of our problems."

There is plenty of beef but it's all on the hoof. If you ask the packers why these steers are not becoming steaks, they will tell you that the animals are waiting for higher prices before they will permit themselves to be slaughtered. Sounds pretty snobbish, but after all they are proud of their sleek prime condition. Some 600,000 to 800,000 steers like these were found by the CIO Packinghouse Workers on feed lots throughout Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Indiana. Another thing that the packers won't tell you is that the steers will probably stay on the feed lots until after the November elections.

INSIDE STORY ON MEAT

By NORMAN DOLNICK

HAD any good beefsteaks lately? As a matter of fact have you had any kind of beef in the past few weeks?

The chances are that you have been getting along with vegetarian dinners or else you have been eating so much fish that you are ready to grow fins. Here's why:

"The shortage of meat at this time is a brazen hold-up of the American people by the packers and meat speculators," said Pres. Ralph Helstein of the CIO Packinghouse Workers, "because out in the feed lots of the middle west there are some 600,000 to 800,000 head of cattle most of which are ready for slaughter."

Helstein this week told a press conference in Washington that the Dept. of Justice and other government agencies were asked by the UPWA to investigate the ownership of the cattle which are not going to the packing plants but are roaming in feed lots.

"Somebody must own these cattle," he said, "and we know that the small farmer has sold his livestock sometime ago."

UPWA Sec-Treas. Lewis J. Clark told the news conference that most of these cattle are kept in feed lots away from main highways.

"The flow of cattle does not follow the normal path going to the slaughtering houses, but are shipped from the stockyards back to feed lots," Clark said.

A UPWA survey of livestock feeding areas headed by Clark revealed that in a typical packing center such as Omaha, 46,095 head of cattle were returned from the stockyards to the feed lots during August. In the first 25 days of September, Clark noted that 55,868 cattle were shipped from the yards to the feed lots.

"This does not apply to Omaha alone," Clark said, "the same situation exists in every packing center of the country."

"The maneuvers of the meat speculators," the UPWA report said, "are directed toward strengthening the reactionary Republican - Democratic coalition which repeatedly has acted in opposition to the wishes and needs of the people.

"By creating an artificial scarcity at this time, it is hoped that the reactionary bloc will be sufficiently strong to launch wholesale raids on the rights of labor and all progressive legislation enacted under the leadership of the late President Roosevelt."

THE political implication of the meat packing strike by the packers was also brought out by CIO-PAC Director Jack Kroll, who said that the "financial powers of America are engaged in a giant conspiracy aimed at crushing the living standards of the American people."

Kroll demanded an "investigation by the government into the current meat shortage to uncover the monopolistic practice of the meat packers, which is an obvious election conspiracy."

THE large packers are engaged in a three-pronged attack, Helstein told the Washington newsmen:

1. They hope to take advantage of the meat scarcity which they created to exert political pressure on the American people for the coming November elections.

2. They seek an immediate elimination of price control which would mean unlimited profiteering and exploitation of the vast lower and moderate income families in the country.

3. Because some 50,000 packinghouse workers have been laid off from their jobs in the past month, the packers enjoy a distinct advantage over the UPWA which is now engaged in negotiations with the packers for a new contract for the coming year.

Pres. Ralph Helstein (left) and Sec.-Treas. Lewis J. Clark of the CIO Packinghouse Workers tell Washington newsmen that the meat packers are keeping cattle from slaughter until they can black-jack higher prices out of the consumers. "This is one of the biggest pressure moves by Big Business," they said.

Oh, What a Beautiful Nation, Oh, What a Wonderful Steak!

Two-inch-thick, tender, juicy steaks and almost every other v ariety of meat are attracting visitors from the U. S. to Windsor, Ontario, the Associated Press reported from Canada this week. The AP said:

"Downtown restaurants are crowded, and discharge buttons and American money betrayed a heavy trade from 'across the river.' Prices range from $1.25 (for a T-bone steak) to 60 cents (Canadian bacon).

"Asked why he thought Canada had meat and why it was so cheap, one proprietor said: 'Controls were clamped on meat at the source and on restaurant meals four years ago. They never were taken off and they never have been raised'."

MEAT AND THE ELECTIONS

THE MEAT shortage has been made a prime political issue in the current elections.

With consummate arrogance, many of the politicians who caused all the trouble are now using this trouble as an argument for giving them free rein to create still greater damage.

They insult the intelligence of the voters when they claim the shortage is caused by price control and that the solution is to vote for unfettered inflation.

* * *

CERTAINLY the meat shortage is a political issue. It illustrates very aptly the crimes of the wreckers of price control, and why they should not be re-elected.

It was the reactionary Republican-Democratic coalition that caused the shortage by destroying effective controls and bringing about a period of uncontrolled prices.

During this period, the packers enjoyed an orgy of unrestrained profiteering by flooding the market with meat at outrageous prices.

The consumers were doubly robbed, both through excessive prices and through the inevitable later shortages caused by this orgy.

The farmers did not benefit, because most of the cattle were bought from them at or below previous OPA ceilings, despite the sky-high prices at which the meat was sold.

More than this, the weakening of price controls, their temporary lifting, and the whole anti-OPA campaign have made the farmers insecure and uncertain as to what kind of prices they can continue to expect.

So, when emasculated price controls were finally reinstated, it was like trying to lock the stable door after the cattle were stolen.

* * *

MOST significant commentary on the meat shortage is a little Associated Press story from Windsor, Ont., telling how "two-inch, juicy steaks and a wide variety of other meat dishes," with prices ranging from $1.25 (for a T-bone steak) to 60c (Canadian bacon), were attracting many American visitors.

Why Canada has meat and has it cheap was explained by one proprietor: "Controls were clamped on meat at the source and on restaurant meals four years ago. They never were taken off and they never have been raised."

* * *

SURVEYS by the CIO United Packinghouse Workers show that the present shortage is being artificially continued by the big beef interests as a squeeze play.

In Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Indiana, between 600,000 and 800,000 head of cattle are now grazing on feed lots, kept there by packers and chain store operators.

In this and other ways, the beef barons are keeping meat from the market, to use the shortage for reactionary political purposes; to promote the destruction of price control; and to weaken the packinghouse union in its wage negotiations through huge layoffs.

* * *

THE SOLUTION for the meat shortage is not to remove price controls. This would simply shove prices sky-high, without materially affecting the shortage.

The Packinghouse Workers urge the government to investigate monopolistic tactics by the packers in withholding livestock supplies, and the tremendous stockpiles of storaged meat; and to take active steps to bring livestock to the market and to put storaged meat into distribution.

The CIO union also calls for a special session of Congress to replace the present almost worthless Price Control Act with a really effective price control law.

* * *

FOR EVERY consumer and voter, the chief lesson of the meat shortage is to vote against the reactionary Congressmen who wrecked price control, and to elect progressives who will legislate to check inflation and insure a regular flow of essential foods at reasonable prices hereafter.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

WONDER WHOM Phil Murray can have meant when he recently referred to "Me, too" and "Wait for baby" labor leaders.

At the time daily diatribes with Chicago datelines were appearing in the papers, which at first sight looked like syndicated editorials from the Chicago Tribune.

They denounced wage increases as the cause of inflation, demanded the lifting of price controls, called for production speed-up, declared verbal war on the Soviet Union and interlarded every subject with hysterical red-baiting.

On closer inspection, these diatribes proved to be statements and speeches by AFL leaders in convention assembled.

★ ★ ★

IT SOUNDED as if the boys were reading the Chicago Tribune and local Hearst sheet each day and just had to take the floor to say, "Me, too."

But actually, most of them have been tugging at the apron-strings of big business for some time and piping, "Wait for baby."

It takes a little time for Wall Street propaganda to seep through the brains of second-childhood, so there is always a certain lag in AFL official statements.

But, judging from the Chicago outpourings, they catch on and catch up eventually.

★ ★ ★

TAGGING ALONG behind the dozen odd vice presidents of the AFL, we find the name of Thirteenth Vice President John L. Lewis.

The Executive Council notes that the vice presidents are "moved forward in numerical order" as vacancies occur.

So, even though the repentant prodigal has been placed at the foot of the class, who knows but what in the course of time he may yet approach the eminence of Pres. Wm. Green, First Vice Pres. Wm. L. Hutcheson and Second Vice Pres. Matthew Woll—the same three of whom he once said he had "explored their minds" only to "find nothing there."

★ ★ ★

IN ONE respect, however, the AFL leaders said "Me, too" to a much better mentor.

After years of denouncing CIO political action, they finally decided to follow CIO's example by calling for labor political action themselves.

HOWEVER, the CIO can't claim all the credit for this conversion. It is quite possible the AFL leaders, in their tottering fashion, may be trying to catch up with their own rank-and-file.

If so, it calls to mind a cartoon we once saw, showing a determined group of workers striding rapidly ahead, while trotting along some way behind them is a be-spatted, diamond-studded and corpulent gent looking very flustered and out of place.

A spectator calls out to him, "Why, Mr. Jones, what are you doing following those rough-looking working people?"

"Don't you know, I'm their leader," he replies.

★ ★ ★

IN REGARD to political action, as in most other respects, the rank-and-file of the AFL have long been 'way ahead of their leaders for a long time.

It was American working people of all union affiliations who elected and kept re-electing President Roosevelt, regardless of their leaders' attitudes.

Similarly, in the coming elections, the great majority of AFL members will be found working and voting for the same progressive candidates that the CIO-PAC is supporting.

The AFL leaders drove a wedge into labor when they expelled the CIO unions ten years ago. But they have never succeeded in driving this wedge so deep as to divide the workers themselves, when they want to unite for such purposes as the election of a progressive Congress.

★ ★ ★

MEMO TO those AFL leaders who profess to believe that CIO-won wage increases forced higher prices:

Reliable estimates indicate that total corporate profits after taxes, will reach almost $14 billion this year, as compared with an annual average of $9½ billion for the years 1942-45.

Which should prove to anyone that CIO wage increases could easily have been paid out of increased profits (still leaving them plenty high) without any increase in prices.

There ought to be some room in those minds which Lewis found so vacant for this one little truth: It was not wage increases, but extortionate and unjustified price increases and the Congressional wrecking of price control, that caused the present inflation.

WORLD LABOR

BILL GREEN'S constant attacks on the World Federation of Trade Unions boomeranged at the annual convention of the Canadian Trades & Labor Congress, which comprises AFL affiliates in the Dominion.

Flatly rejecting the AFL's "down-with-the-WFTU" policy, the Congress voted to "provide the necessary financial and other arrangements to consummate affiliation with the WFTU." Only two delegates spoke against the proposition.

Arguing in support of joining the world labor body, to which CIO is affiliated, William Rigby of the fishermen's union declared:

"We have the choice of lining up with the world labor movement by affiliating to the WFTU or remaining in isolation with the AFL."

The AFL bigwigs received another jolt when the Canadian affiliates refused to exclude the Intl. Assn. of Machinists from the convention, as the AFL had done in the U. S.

★ ★ ★

FIVE LEADERS of the WFTU were greeted by Mayor William O'Dwyer of N. Y. last week, and then honored at a banquet under the auspices of the N. Y. City CIO Council. They included Pres. Arthur Deakin of Great Britain; Louis Saillant, WFTU secretary-general; M. P. Tarasov of the USSR; G. DiVittorio, Italy; and Frank Rosenblum of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

★ ★ ★

INCREASED VIOLENCE against workers in South Africa has been reported by Allied Labor News. The government, which last month broke a strike of starving native miners, followed it up with raids on union offices, the homes of union leaders, workers' bookshops and the offices of the Guardian, an independent pro-labor newspaper.

The raids were on a nation-wide scale, with 30 being conducted in Capetown alone. The police seized every document in the offices, from private correspondence to U. S. Information Bureau news releases.

★ ★ ★

HOSPITALS, recreation centers and relief warehouses in Shanghai, financed by relief gifts of CIO and AFL workers in the U. S., have been returned to the Chinese Assn. of Labor.

The properties were seized a month ago by Kuomintang police officials. Their return to the unions followed CIO and AFL protests resulting from cables received from Chu Hsueh-fan, head of the Chinese labor group and a member of the World Federation of Trade Unions executive bureau.

GREEK TRADE UNIONS have called upon the Intl. Labor Organization not to seat representatives chosen for them by the reactionary Greek government.

SEN. ROBERT ALPHONSO TAFT (R. O.) AND "FRIENDS". Hjalmar Schacht (center) and Hans Fritzsche (right), with Franz von Papen were acquitted at the Nuremberg trials of top-ranking Nazis accused of being responsible for the starvation and murder of more than 10 million men, women and children. Taft this week said that he believed that the Nuremberg verdict which condemned 11 other Nazi officials to hanging was a miscarriage of justice. The three acquitted Nazis are scheduled to be tried by a German De-Nazification court which has power to impose a maximum penalty of 10 years imprisonment, confiscation of property, and debarment from political office or administrative positions in industry.

For Jail, Not Hanging

THE NAZI DEFENDER

By FRED d'AVILA

A 57-year-old son of a late President of the U. S. with a manner as mild as milk and a brain as sharp as a rat trap my become the Republican candidate for the Presidency. His name is Robert Alphonso Taft, native of Cincinnati, Republican Senator from Ohio, and co-holder of the Republican leadership, which he shares with Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan.

This week Sen. Taft gave the nation a view of his policies that bared them to the roots. Long known as a conservative who prefers to give the people a little rather than have them take a lot, Taft made one of the most amazing statements ever to come from the lips of a man who professes a belief in democracy, to a nation that has just won a bloody war against a group of Nazi gangsters seeking to dominate the earth.

In a sharp criticism of the Nuremberg trials of leading Nazis, Taft bewailed sentences of hanging meted out to 11 Nazi officials. He contended that life imprisonment would be sufficient punishment for men responsible for the murder of 10 million people, and said the trials will be "a blot on the American record that we shall long regret."

Taft's attack on the trials as a miscarriage of justice was based on his contention that it was unfair to try the Nazis under laws drawn up after their offenses had been committed. The lawyer son of the late U. S. President and Chief Justice questioned "whether the hanging of those who, however despicable, will ever discourage the making of aggressive war, for no one makes aggressive war unless he expects to win."

TAFT'S legalisms were sharply challenged by leading lawyers, including Pres. Willis Smith of the American Bar Assn. and Robert W. Kenney and Martin Popper, respectively president and executive secretary of the Natl. Lawyers Guild. All three observed the trials.

Smith said he had "no fault to find with the trials" and described them as "a monument to jurisprudence," and declared the Nazis had an opportunity to defend themselves "far beyond any chance offered a person in America."

Kenney and Popper declared:

"In his attack upon the Nuremberg trials, Senator Taft used legal arguments as camouflage to hide his immorality. But they will not serve his purpose. The representatives of the organized legal profession of the U. S., both the Natl. Lawyers Guild and the American Bar Assn., in their capacity as official observers at Nuremberg, have attested to the legality of the trial and to the fact that the Nazi defendants were prosecuted for crimes firmly established in international law as well as the laws of all civilized nations."

They accused Taft of "speaking for the cartelists who are exerting every conceivable form of pressure to prevent the prosecution and punishment as war criminals of the German industrialists and financiers who participated in the Nazi plans for world conquest and mass murder."

TAFT'S defense of the Nazis was cited by Director Jack Kroll of the CIO Political Action Committee as evidence that "the isolationist thinking which shaped Taft's defense of Hitler and his gang before the war still prevails."

Others criticizing Taft's position were Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, Sen. James M. Mead of N. Y., and former N. Y. Gov. Herbert Lehman.

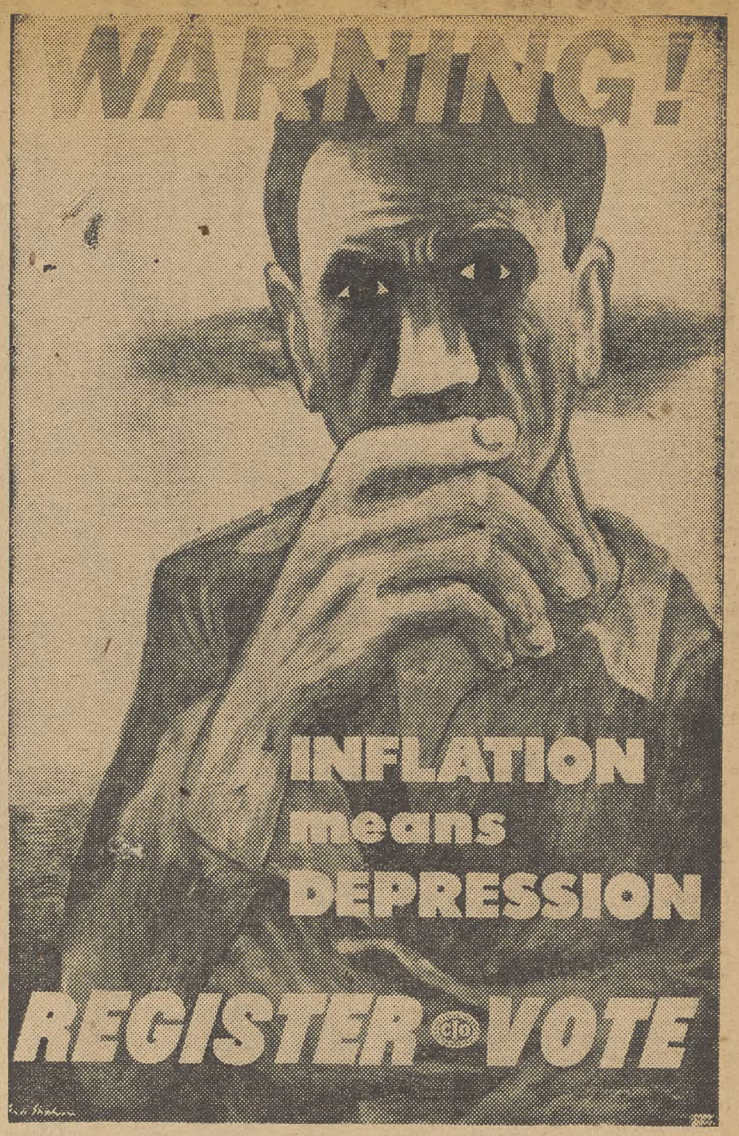
"The convicted men," said Lehman, "were in varying degree responsible for the murder of more than 10 million men, women and children of many faiths and nationalities, in concentration camps, in slave labor battalions and in occupied countries. The verdict of the Intl. Tribunal at Nuremberg finds full sanction in our own legal code and will be generally approved as having ample support in justice and in morals."

THIS is the judgment on Taft. It simply serves to strengthen one already made by CIO, which remembers his attempts to weaken the Wage and Hour and Natl. Labor Relations Acts, and his leadership in the fight against price control.

One of the best descriptions of the way Taft maneuvers is contained in an article by Joseph and Stewart Alsop, in a recent issue of Life magazine. They wrote:

"He (Taft) fought for a price control law which, while providing an absolute minimum of 'governmental interference,' would still leave the Administration with a pair of very loose reins on which to drive a rambunctious national economy. Bowles roared and writhed. President Truman squirmed. But they, and the U. S., finally got the kind of law Taft wanted, which has now added up to just about no price control at all."

To the people of the U. S., who are paying fantastically inflated prices for the necessities of life, Republican Senator Taft, as a presidential possibility, adds up to just a little "less than zero."



REMINDERS

These posters by Ben Shahn are now being shown in union halls and other public places throughout the country. Some 50,000 of them have already been distributed through CIO channels. The "We Want Peace" poster, owned by the U. S. State Department, is being shown at Foreign Embassies throughout Latin America and Europe to indicate what American artists are thinking. The State Dept. granted permission to use it as a campaign poster. Copies of these posters may be obtained by writing to the CIO-PAC, 205 East 42nd Street, N. Y. 17, N. Y.

LITTLE MAN ON THE WEDDING CAKE

NEITHER the immense coffers of Republican gold nor the glamour of the nation's blueblood has been able to turn New York's "little man on the wedding cake" into a political star. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who's seeking reelection, just doesn't glitter.

Progressives in the state have recognized his "do nothing" record in four years as chief executive as part of his overall strategy of committing himself to nothing, thus making no enemies. They are exposing him for what he is, "a fake liberal," and a second-rate governor.

Dewey's remarkable effrontery in taking credit for any and all benefits they have accrued to the state from the administrations of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Herbert Lehman has astounded even the most seasoned politicos.

The first big pat on the back he gave himself after taking office was the report of a $136 million surplus in the state treasury, for which he assumed full credit. His "failing" memory had omitted mention of the fact that half the surplus had been left by Gov. Lehman, his predecessor, and had been made to appear Dewey's prize by moving the 1943-44 fiscal year up from July to April. If not always impeccably honest, the Governor isn't so dumb.

Four years of "say nothing-do-nothing"—by all means, never offend any segment of the national vote—has left the state wide open to the ravages of political patronage, a dire housing shortage and progressive weakening of the administration of social security and labor legislation.

Uttering cries of sympathy for the veterans, but fearing their support of FDR, Dewey had fought a simple federal ballot for the overseas GIs, and had succeeded in pushing through one of the most prohibitive voting laws in the country.

He cries "bureaucracy" with the facility of an infant crying "mama"; but when it came to administering the sum of $2,825,000 appropriated for a Division of Veterans Affairs, it was learned that 200 members of his private political machine were the recipients of the benefits, not the veterans. Hired at salaries ranging from $3,500 to $14,000, these "counsellors" were not to be found in any office, were listed in no 'phone book . . .

Self-appointed protector-in-chief of civil rights, the Governor whitewashed the Freeport murders of two Negroes, and the policeman killer remains free and at his post.

Although the state of New York adopted a permanent FEPC after a long stall, Dewey, as head of his party, did not once come forward to help passage of such a bill through Congress.

IN the Dewey corner are to be found the nation's top industrialists, all with unsavory labor records.

Foremost are the Rockefellers and their Standard Oil Companies, whose officers and directors are high on both the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers' roles and those of the GOP. Rockefeller contributions to the Republicans when Dewey was running for president totaled $52,500.

The Mellons, who are fast merging with the Rockefellers, padded the Party's cushion with $59,500; while the Guggenheims, whose American Smelting and Refining Co. is the only copper company that plays an active role in the NAM, gave $28,050.

THE less "respectable," the professional disseminators of race and labor hatred, have found Dewey equally as delightful. There's Gerald L. K. Smith, former head of the America First Committee, who would like to see the Governor become president some day. Smith said of the anti-semitic outbreaks in Boston two years ago: "What has been taking place in Boston is just a pimple on the skin of our body politic. Similar outbreaks can be expected in every great center."

No less in love with Dewey is Gen. Robert E. Wood, head of the labor-baiting American Action Committee, and formerly head of the American First Committee.

Closest to Dewey, however, is Frank Gannett, leader of the vicious Committee for Constitutional Government, owner of the third largest newspaper chain in the country. Gannett is said to have been the Governor's steadiest visitor at the state capitol.

Three of a Kind: Governor Dewey of N. Y., ex-Governor Bricker of Ohio, and Governor Warren of California. All three are potential candidates for the Presidential nomination in 1948.

GOP WOOS IN AUGUST, MAKES MAD IN OCTOBER

THE two-faced campaign of the Republican party was bared to the public eye recently when the Ohio CIO revealed that the National GOP had been attempting to woo the labor vote on the one hand while backhandedly referring to the CIO Political Action Committee as "our greatest adversary" on the other.

The Ohio CIO has disclosed the receipt of a letter from the National Republican Committee as late as August requesting permission to furnish a speaker for the annual state CIO convention in September.

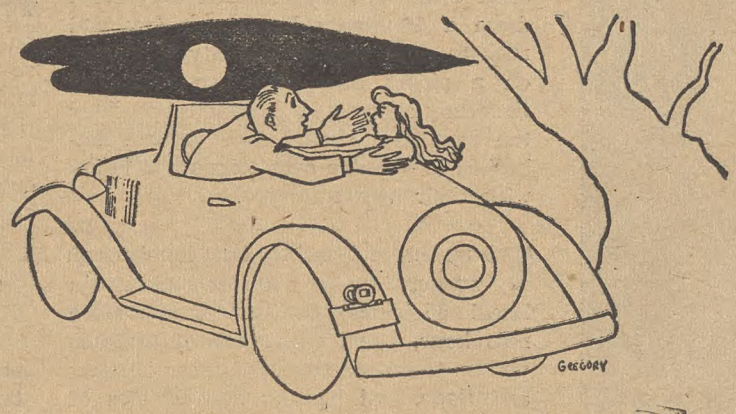
When these efforts to woo labor votes into the GOP column failed, the Brickerites sounded off on the old "sour grapes" theme, bitterly denouncing Sen. James Hoffman, Democratic nominee, for having received CIO-PAC support.

The red smear brush has been used indiscriminately by Gov. Bricker as well as by Republicans who failed to receive PAC support throughout the rest of the country.

Hitting at Bricker's labor-baiting campaign, Sen. Huffman declared recently, "I resent the irresponsible charges of my opponent and the Republican Party that evereone who speaks progressive ideals is subversive and disloyal to America."

DELIBERATE misrepresentations of facts have poured from the National Republican headquarters and are being echoed by local GOP groups. A letter dated September 20 from Republican Chairman Brazilla Carroll Reece to fellow Republicans warns that the organization is "up against . . . the PAC with its $6,000,000 slush fund." This despite PAC director Jack Kroll's repeated expressions of hope that the PAC one dollar contribution drive would hit $1,000,000.

Third largest contributing state to the Republican party in 1944, the Ohio Republican Finance Committee turned over to the national GOP $178,900 after setting aside a tidy sum (the residue after the state campaigns had been financed)—an amount almost equal to the entire expenditure of the national CIO-PAC throughout the country.



"Just a minute—have you registered?"

30 BIG PAC RALLIES TO GET OUT VOTE

ASSERTING that the 1946 election will be decided in America's major industrial cities, CIO Political Action Director Jack Kroll announced this week that the PAC, in conjunction with other progressive organizations, will sponsor a series of pre-election rallies throughout the country in the next three weeks.

These rallies, Kroll said, "are a direct result of the Chicago Conference of Progressives which adopted a plan of action to arouse the people and bring millions of voters to the polls."

Thirty cities in 21 states have already scheduled mass meetings, intended to deliver a final boost to the nationwide drive for an unprecedented turnout of voters and for the election of progressive candidates.

"These meetings will sound a significant warning to the reactionary coalition that progressives are united from the grass roots up," Mr. Kroll said. "Those who thought the Plan of Action adopted by the progressives at Chicago was just so many words have another think coming."

THE final list of speakers has not yet been drawn up, but the names of Sen Claude Pepper (D. Fla), Sen. Brian McMahon (D. Conn.), Kroll, Palmer Weber, CIO-PAC research director, and Allen Haywood, national CIO organizing director and vice-president, have been mentioned as probabilities. Appearing on the programs will be noted stars of stage and screen in addition to national political leaders.

The rapidity with which these meetings were scheduled—within two weeks after the Chicago conference—was cited by the PAC director as indication of the desire of local progressive groups to weld together as a strong coalition of forces for the purpose of carrying forward the Roosevelt program.

"Get-out-the-vote" and the call for a return to the FDR policies will be central themes of each of the rallies. In many instances local progressive candidates will appear, and in all cases the issues of the campaigns will be presented in terms of the local community and local candidates.

Campaign rallies have been scheduled in the following cities:

Allentown, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, Pa.; Cincinnati and Cleveland, Ohio; Milwaukee, Wisc.; Kansas City, Kans.; Indianapolis, Ind.; St. Louis, Mo.; Rock Island-Moline-East Moline, Chicago, Ill.; Rochester, Buffalo and New York, N. Y.; San Francisco, Los Angeles, Calif.; Boston, Fall River, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; New Haven, Bridgeport, Conn.; Newark, N. J.; Wilmington, Dela.; Baltimore, Md.; Detroit, Mich.; Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn.; Denver, Colo., and Seattle, Wash.

ALL FOR ONE

A unique use of picket lines to prevent s ments from employers reluctant to gr workers at other shops, is the technique by CIO Local 65, in N. Y. City. Demons with police peacefully co-operating—a taking its case to the public. Local 65 demonstrations, which are legal in N. apply the old-time slogan, "All for one

1 This militant demonstration of support for workers at the Peerless Sample Card Co., N. Y. City, on the eve of an NLRB election helped to overcome the fear instilled in the employes by the boss. Thousands of workers marching in front of the shop offered tangible evidence of the strength of the union. In an election shortly afterwards, CIO Local 65 won by an overwhelming vote.

2 Santa Claus joined a noon-hour demonstration of Local 65 a little early last August when Schranz & Bieber Co., toy manufacturers, had locked out warehouse employes in an attempt to run away from union standards. Santa marched alongside several thousand 65ers. The dispute was settled shortly, when the company reopened its N. Y. City warehouse with a union contract.

By IRVING BALDINGER

NEW YORK CITY, home of the tallest buildings, longest subway lines, most gigantic department stores, stateliest showgirls and most devastating hangovers, is also the home of what are probably the biggest and most colorful picket lines in the world.

Credit for the union distinction goes to a happy, scrappy, powerful unit of 15,000 wholesale and warehouse workers, members of CIO Local 65. Throughout the 13 years of its phenomenal growth from a group of 40 underpaid, overworked employes of a single wholesale dry goods house, the mass demonstrations have become the trade mark of the organization.

Today, within a few hours' notice, Local 65 can place a noon-hour group of 5,000 members on practically any street in New York. That's because the members of this union have learned the value of the slogan that fired the exploits of the three musketeers—"All for One and One for All."

Though there's no compulsion to participate, most members of Local 65 sooner or later recognize that, if they cram down a 10-minute lunch one day and rush to some part of the city to appear on a picket line, they can count on the ready support of thousands of others the next day, should they become embroiled in a tussle over wages and hours with their own employer.

TO understand exactly how handy such support can be requires a visit to a Local 65 demonstration. Just before zero hour, you'd see a line of taxicabs pull up to unload stacks of green banners and flags, and bundles and bundles of multicolored picket signs. These are carefully piled at the curbstone, under the watchful eyes of a group of men and women who have one distinctive characteristic in common—a bright, emerald green union button prominently pinned on coat lapel, dress or hat.

It's just about noon-time. Now appearing from all directions, come small knots of men and women, all of them wearing that same green button—swaggering young men in shirt sleeves and overalls, bobby-soxed girls in sweaters and skirts, and their more elderly brothers and sisters. Up go the banners and signs, and the line begins to march. And it grows by sudden spurts. Scores of cars, trucks, busses and cabs pull up in rapid succession, each discharging an amazing load of smiling, chattering unionists.

Demonstration captains have taken their posts along the street on which the thickly populated line is stepping. Now they begin to "talk it up." A slogan crackles out from the lips of a captain, and in a moment it's echoed back in a thunderous roar. It may start with something ordinary and routine, like, "We Want A Contract! Make Wilson's A Union Shop!" But it's not long before that one leads to a variation with a little more swing: "2-4-6-8. Make Wilson Negotiate!" And that brings back the equally lusty chant: "3-5-7-9. Make Him Sign On the Dotted Line!" But perhaps the most distinctive slogan at a Local 65 picket line is the mournful reminder that's sure to be taken up at every such demonstration: "O-o-h Wilson-you-can't-take-it-with you!"

MEANWHILE, a sizable retinue of New York's "finest" has turned up, on the alert for possible difficulties. But so well do the captains guide the lines, and so disciplined are the demonstrators, that almost without exception the boys in blue have little to do. In fact, as one police sergeant wryly remarked one evening, "A Local 65 demonstration is probably a good deal safer than an ordinary, everyday picket line of striking 65ers."

It seems that the sergeant was seated regally in the sidecar of a motorcycle that evening watching at the doorway of a struck warehouse as scabs were being herded out after their day's work. One of the strikers, in a sudden fit of determination, dipped into her lunchbasket, brought forth a juicy, ripe tomato and winged it at the scabs. The scabs, acutely sensitive to such occupational hazards, ducked. Behind them, the sergeant neglected to take the same precaution.

Less hot-headed union members had to restore the sergeant's good humor and sternly remind the offender that, in these days of food shortages, tomatoes are for nutrition, not for ammunition.

WHAT has the demonstration accomplished? Many things, union leaders say.

Not the least of its effects is the terrific boost in morale that comes to a small, embattled group of union members when they see thousands of their buddies coming to their aid. Conversely, the enthusiasm of scabs is understandably cooled.

Similarly, the defiance of a stony-hearted employer is quite often shaken by the appearance of thousands of shouting, singing marchers who have suddenly risen to torment him.

In one case, the end of a lockout of union members followed swiftly on the heels of a protest march, staged as only Local 65 can stage one. Pictures of the vast outpouring appeared in the N. Y. City press, much to the discomfort of the employer, who had a reputation in his social circle as a man of liberal ideals. That reputation proved the key to ending the lockout.

One of the employer's friends clipped a picture of the line from his paper, adding the simply query, "Why aren't you in this picture, Ed?" With a sheepish grin, the employer showed the note to union leaders at a hurriedly called conference, and right then agreed to a satisfactory settlement of the dispute.

This incident, by the way, illustrates another important effect of Local 65 demonstrations — their publicity-getting value. A labor dispute affecting 40 or 50 people, or even 200 or 300, ordinarily does not command much attention, either from the press or from the busily preoccupied public. But thousands of people marching cannot easily be ignored. Local 65's experience indicates that although such demonstrations may bring out irate comments in stuffed shirt circles, they definitely boost the union's prestige in work shirt circles.

3 When the management of Belikoff Bros., world-wide distributors of used clothing, refused to recognize Local 65, as representative of 250 employes, they went out on strike. And 2,000 members of the union showed the company that Belikoff workers were not alone, with this "squared off" line last September.

Finally, perhaps the most important aspect of this tactic in the eyes of union leaders is its evidence of genuine union democracy. From their Pres. Arthur Osman on down, Local 65's leaders have always stressed that union democracy lives and thrives when the entire membership is in motion.

LOCAL 65's technique was developed, not out of a desire to make noise and attract attention, but out of life-and-death necessity. The nature of the industry in which this union operates—wholesaling and warehousing—would ordinarily pit small units of workers against powerful and wealthy employers. Wholesale shipments are of such magnitude that a business volume of millions of dollars can readily be handled by small units of workers. The average wholesale shop or warehouse organized by Local 65 employs from 15 to 20 workers. Yet, the volume of business of many such firms runs into the seven-cipher columns.

With such resources, an employer bent on crushing the union in his establishment could easily be tempted to replace his men with a crew of plug-ugly strike-breakers, or to use some other violent strategy to achieve his ends. A picket line of 15 to 20 men could hardly discourage such moves. But demonstrations of thousands can—and do.

STRANGELY enough, the demonstration's greatest value has been, not as a device to win strikes, but as a much more effective means of preventing them. Local 65's records bear this out quite emphatically. Although its mass picket lines are very frequently deployed in many areas of the city, the number of strikes it conducts is surprisingly small.

Broadway star Paula Bain gave a valuable assist to Local 65, CIO Wholesale & Warehouse Workers, when she helped picket A. J. Siris Products Co., a N. Y. City powder puff manufacturer. Learning that the firm had opened a plant at Newport News, Va., where it was paying lower wages than for similar work in N. Y. City, the union went on strike and won an agreement to continue operation of the N. Y. plant and guaranteed year 'round work for 75 workers.

To Name New President

SHOE UNION PLANS ELECTION

CASTIGATING the "disrupting antics" of their former president, close to three hundred delegates to the biennial convention of the United Shoe Workers this week voiced strong support for CIO policies, the leadership of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and continued campaigns to better the standards of workers in their industry.

In a pre-convention session the unions' executive board declared the USWA presidency "vacant" by unanimous vote and set in motion constitutional provisions for the election at a later date of a successor to Frank McGrath whose resignation was first made known to the board through the columns of a New York paper.

McGrath's assertion that his resignation was a protest against "Communist domination" was described by the USWA board "as a cover-up for his desertion of his post."

The statement noted that those members of the board who sided with McGrath in internal union disputes "are still in office and they constitute the overwhelming majority of the leadership of our union." McGrath, the statement added, "struck a serious blow to the organization" aimed deliberately as "an attempt to ruin our organization."

"His action compares with the disruptive tactics of all anti-union elements to whom the wild cry of Communism is always a good alibi to cover up their union wrecking activities," the USWA executive group said. The board's declaration was solidly endorsed by the delegates.

Sec-Treas. James J. Mitchell charged the former union president with being a "quitter" and with neglecting all aspects of his presidential duties. Mitchell was joined in his charges by Isadore Rosenberg of New York, and Julius Crane of Chicago, who accused McGrath of failing to show interest in union organizing activities during the convention.

The delegates—representing some fifty-two thousand workers—heard addresses by CIO Sec-Treas. James B. Carey and Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization.

Haywood voiced full CIO support to the union; reviewed recent CIO activities in industry, politics and international affairs; and predicted that the forthcoming CIO convention would present "a solid front" in behalf of labors' rights.

Referring to the question of CIO's foreign policy, Haywood emphasized that whatever position is adopted by the convention will be that of the unions rather than of any outside force be it Socialist, Communist or Republican.

Carey also called upon the shoe union delegates to resist outside interference in their organizational affairs.

The convention voted 572 to 444 to increase the size of the USWA executive board from 12 to 15, with the membership determined on a geographical basis and to place the matter before a membership referendum for approval.

A unanimously adopted resolution took note of published rumors that CIO Pres. Murray intends to resign from office. It expressed the "determined opinion that it is important that he continue as CIO President in order that the program associated with his name—the organization of unorganized labor, international trade union unity as symbolized in the World Federation of Trade Unions, independent political action through the vehicle of PAC and the guarantee of freedom from persecution because of race, color, creed or political opinion—shall be continued in the dangerous period ahead."

Other resolutions paid tribute to the late President Roosevelt and to the late Sidney Hillman; expressed gratitude for the counsel and moral support of Vice-Pres. Haywood; gave full backing to the WFTU; and voiced full support for CIO efforts to obtain contracts providing a guaranteed annual wage.

MORE PAY A 'MUST'— CLOTHING WORKERS

THE CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union is negotiating for a wage increase with employers in the men's and boys' clothing and the shirt and cotton garment industries and allied trades, joining the increasing number of CIO affiliates which have been or will shortly be demanding pay raises.

Various manufacturers' groups were notified of the decision to seek higher pay after the union's wage policy committee of nine made a study at the direction of the general executive board and found that rising living costs made a demand for increased wages imperative.

Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky and Sec.-Treas. Frank Rosenblum and other national leaders of the union at the first conference with the Clothing Mfgs. Assn. of the U. S. stated that the ACWA wanted to speed up the negotiations to conclude an early settlement in the interest of the whole industry.

The top leadership of the union has also held conferences with representatives of the N. Y. Shirt Institute and the largest independent shirt manufacturers.

ACWA is asking the employers in the heavy outwear, sheeplined and leather apparel industry to establish a retirement fund based on a 3% payroll contribution by the manufacturers, in addition to a wage increase and 65c an hour minimum wage.

Potofsky has notified the cotton garment manufacturers and firms in allied industries working under ACWA contracts that the union is requesting a wage increase, a minimum hourly wage and other improvements, these companies having been notified in June that ACWA reserved the right to reopen the question of wages and other changes in working conditions.

URBAN LEAGUE BACKS DRIVE

FULL support of union organizational campaigns in the South was voiced at the annual conference of the National Urban League in St. Louis last week.

In a resolution the League, which has done considerable work in developing improved interracial relations, noted that it "always has seen in democratic trade unions a major hope for the advancement of Negro workers in industry and the community, and has worked unceasingly to integrate Negro workers into the trade union movement."

It warned that "there are forces that oppose and terrorize any close fraternity of white and Negro people and at the moment are threatening to disrupt the organizing campaigns."

In other actions, the League urged passage of federal and state anti-discrimination statutes, called for adoption of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill, and voiced the need for "strengthening of our own democracy as a prerequisite to real international cooperation and harmony."

In Georgia:

THREATS FAIL

IGNORING threates, recurrent violence, beatings by management's Gestapo bands and mill-made city ordinances, organizers of the CIO's Operation Dixie drive have started the distribution of union literature at the gates of the huge textile mills in Columbus, Ga.

The CIO has moved into Columbus and is seeking to bring the benefits of unionism to this textile town's mass of 14,000 workers whose average weekly wage the Government has placed at $29.08. And despite the open opposition of mill owners and the open fear of the workers, Emil Luter, subregional director of the CIO organizing committee, says, "We're here and this time we're here to stay."

There have been several attempts to organize the thousands of underpaid textile workers of Columbus dating back to 1934 and the national textile strike when labor-hating Eugene Talmade, Governor of Georgia, called out the Natl. Guard to throw workers into barbed-wire concentration camps.

It is these unsuccessful efforts and the threat of a mill blacklist that have brought fear to the hearts of Columbus mill workers. Harangued by foremen with the power to hire and fire, warned against the "furrin' reds" and threatened with blacklisting, workers are afraid even to be seen talking to union representatives.

In Dixie:

VOTING CIO IS STYLE

CIO unions have been chosen the collective bargaining agencies of the employes of 170 Southern industrial plants since late in May, Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee reported this week.

"Twenty CIO victories and two defeats in NLRB elections were reported to the committee during the week of October 1-7 by state directors," Bittner said.

"The Woodworkers and the Food & Tobacco Workers—with 27 victories each—are now leading in number of elections won.

"United Steelworkers of America has won 23 elections in the CIO's Southern organizing drive, and Textile Workers Union of America has won 16. The Auto Workers and Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers are tied for fifth place, with 10 victories each.

FTA SCORE IN SOUTH 100%

ONE hundred per cent success in the drive to organize Southern tobacco workers has been scored to date by the CIO Organizing Committee, of which Van A. Bittner is chairman, Pres. Donald Henderson of the CIO announced this week.

The CIO has been devoting much attention to tobacco leaf houses in North Carolina and Virginia, where 12 NLRB elections have been held up to the beginning of October. CIO has won all of the 12 elections, covering 4,811 eligible voters in five North Carolina communities.

Elections are scheduled for early October in nine more leaf houses covering 4,175 workers. The committee has petitioned the NLRB for elections in 10 more leaf houses involving 2,775 workers.

More than 86% of the workers voting so far in these elections have voted for CIO. Only nine per cent of the voters have chosen the AFL, and only five per cent have voted "no union." Of a total vote of 3,799 the CIO has won 3,351; AFL 326; and "no union" 132.

7 OF TOWN'S 10 TEXTILE PLANTS CIO

Rock Hill, S. C., is rapidly becoming one of the best organized textile centers in the South.

Workers in seven of the ten textile mills there have selected the CIO Textile Workers as their bargaining representative in recent Labor Board elections. TWUA holds contracts with four of these plants.

Elections at the other three have been won so recently that agreement on collective bargaining contracts has not yet been reached.

TWUA is now the bargaining agency in the following mills: Rock Hill Printing and Finishing Co., Samarkand Rug Mill, Rock Hill Yarn Co., Industrial Cotton Mill, Jac Feinberg Hosiery Co., Cutter Mfg. Co. and Highland Park Mfg. Co.

Organizational campaigns are in progress at the other three plants.

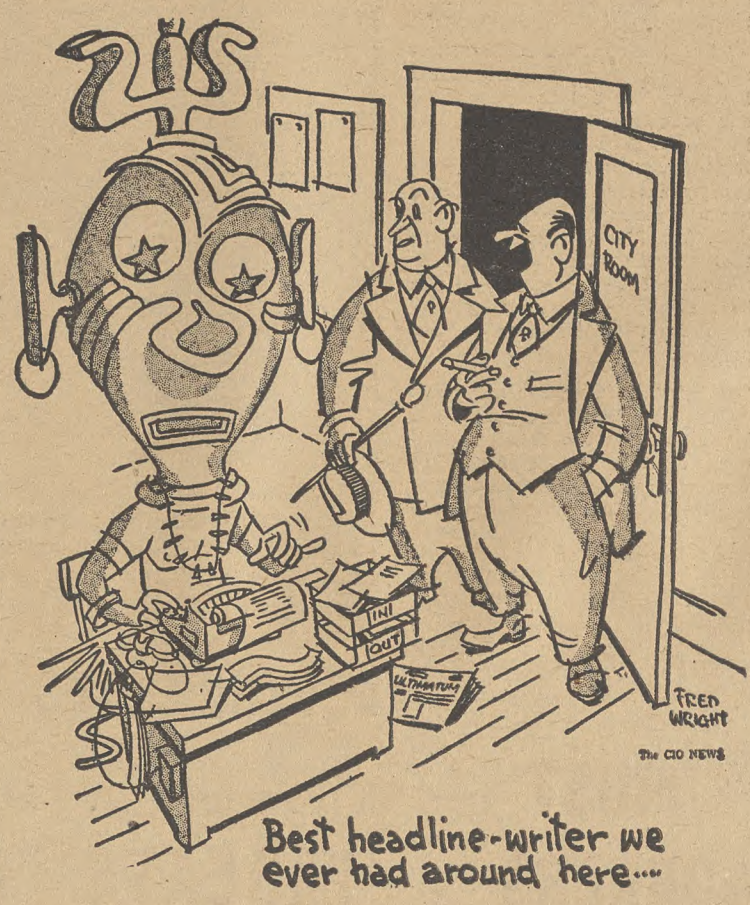
CMU To Truman:

MARITIME BOARD RENEGED

THE picketlines of the Longshoreman, and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., both CIO, and the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots held fast as their strike entered its third week.

Thousands of ships were tied up in U. S. ports as the other CIO sea unions banded together in the Committee for Maritime Unity and the AFL mairtime unions respected the picket lines.

As the CIO News went to press, the MEBA and the MMP were weighing a reiterated formula for ending the strike proposed by the Labor Dept., in whose office there have been almost constant negotiations since before the strike began.



Best headline-writer we ever had around here...

It was proposed that any agreement reached between the unions and the Atlantic and Gulf ship owners be applied to ships belonging to the Maritime Commission in West Coast service.

MEBA officials said that the Atlantic and Gulf Coast operators had agreed to preferential hiring and union security and that the negotiators were not far apart on wages, the union demanding a 17% increase and the ship owners offering 12%.

Meanwhile, the Waterfront Employers Assn. of the Pacific Coast were maintaining an adamant position, having broken off negotiations with the Longshoremen last week over negotiating a new agreement covering coastwise vessels.

In a letter to President Truman, the West Coast Section of the CMU blamed the Pacific American Shipowners Assn., which walked out of the Washington negotiations, and the Waterfront Employers Assn. for the continued tie-up.

The letter said:

"Both remaining issues holding up settlement have been compromised to the irreduciable minimum by the unions involved. The U. S. Maritime Commission, in conjunction with the Dept. of Labor, made a proposal to the union and the operators which it believed would be an acceptable solution.

"Because the West Coast operators defied this proposal the commission backed down and reversed itself. We now ask that you order it reinstated to the end that the Maritime Commission will direct its agents to put the terms of the proposal into effect on all ships operated for it, without regard to acceptance by East, Gulf or West Coast operators as to privately owned ships."

An effort of Hanson W. Baldwin, New York Times military expert, to turn public opinion against the maritime unions by charging that they were destroying the American merchant marine resulted in CMU throwing a picketline of 5,000 around the Times building this week.

Edwin James, Times managing editor, repudiated Baldwin's statement before a delegation of 12 CIO and AFL maritime union officials, and said that the Times' position was one of admiration for the wartime work of the merchant marine.

Textile Workers

WANT MORE ON PAY DAY

TO meet soaring living costs, the CIO Textile Workers Union will ask immediate reopening of existing union contracts in all branches of the textile industry, Pres. Emil Rieve announced last week.

Rieve, attending a quarterly meeting of the TWUA's national executive council at Atlanta, Ga., said a series of regional conferences will be called at which representatives of the workers in each area will meet and decide the demands they will make. Existing contracts have clauses providing for reopening the wage issue on 30 days' notice and also providing arbitration, which should preclude strikes, Rieve pointed out.

The regional conference for workers in the cotton and rayon industries will be held in Boston Oct. 27, wool workers will meet Nov. 3 in the same city and southern textile workers will meet at Charlotte, N. C., on Nov. 10.

Discussing the CIO southern organizing drive, which he is inspecting, Rieve said the union has not yet too many friends but it has laid the groundwork for a concentrated drive.

N. H. COUNCIL HAS NEW SEC'Y.

FRANK Phelan, Textile Workers district representtive, was elected secretary-treasurer of the New Hampshire Industrial Union Council at Manchester Sept. 28-29, succeeding Frank Dichard, who withdrew as a candidate. Harold J. Daoust was re-elected president.

Speakers included Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers; Albert Clifton, assigned by the TWUA to PAC; Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee and Anthony Wayne Smith, assistant director of CIO IUCs.

Smith declared that only through national economic planning such as proposed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in his industrial council plan could we avoid another depression. Smith said that planning means democratic participation in deciding production and investment levels in basic industries and also calls for decisions on union recognition, wage levels, size and location of industrial plants, etc.

RCA WORKERS WIN PAY HIKES

A strike by 7,000 RCA Victor workers was narrowly averted at Camden, N. Y., this week when a union mass meeting voted to accept a company offer of a 5½c hourly increase.

Settlement came 10 hours before the deadline for a walkout set by Local 103, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. It was preceded by three days of negotiations between the local and RCA management.

Aside from the wage increase, there were some 30 other changes in the new contract. One clause provides for reopening of negotiations not later than April 7, 1947, on cost-of-living increases. Local 103 also won recognition of the union shop and dues checkoff.

ALLIS-CHALMERS EXPLAINS

Allis-Chalmers strikers, who may have been wondering why the company has held out against their wage demands for more than seven months and deprived thousands of farmers of necessary equipment, now have the answer.

It comes from W. A. Roberts, company vice-president and general manager of its farm equipment division. Roberts calmly told a Farm Equipment Institute annual meeting at French Lick, Ind.:

"We had to think in terms of minutes during the war. Now the dollar is more important."

IT'S 2 TO 1 FOR CIO

FIGURES on collective bargaining elections for August issued by the NLRB shows that the CIO is preferred almost two to one over the AFL.

In 72 elections in which the AFL was its only opponent the CIO won 35, the AFL 21, no union 11 and the results were indeterminate in 5 cases. In these elections the workers preferred the CIO almost two to one over the AFL, the CIO receiving 9,064 votes, the AFL 5,392 and no union 1,640.

The CIO led by more than 6,000 votes in a computation of all elections. The CIO was the choice of 23,915 workers, the AFL of 17,711.

AMERICANS

7 Million of Them!

Complete text of a pamphlet issued by the CIO Organizing Committee, headed by Van A. Bittner.

THE charge that the CIO is a communistic organization "is manufactured out of the whole cloth and is used soley for the purpose of confusing real Americans." Those are the words of Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO Organizing Committee.

The organized labor movement is the nation's major bulwark against communism and he and CIO Pres. Philip Murray have devoted much of their lives to fighting the spread of the communist doctrine.

"This smear campaign of the anti-union financial and industrial interests of the South is joined in by the AFL," Bittner says.

"This campaign is used solely for the purpose of confusing real Americans regarding the purpose of the CIO in organizing the unorganized workers of the South and other sections of our country.

"The CIO is a labor organization composed of seven million men and women workers who are real American folks just like any other group of people in the U. S.

"WE do not deny that there may be some communists in the CIO, because we organize all the workers who are in a plant or industry. We take into membership only those men and women who are working in industry, and if the employers have hired a few communists they naturally are apt to become members of the CIO.

"We must always remember that if there are any communists in the CIO, it is because they were first hired by employers—generally when their industries were operating non-union.

"Everybody who wants to treat this question fairly knows full well that the CIO is an American institution made up, as we said, of millions of common people who are just folks like the rest of Americans.

"Two and one-half million members of the CIO were in the armed forces of our country. They fought against Mussolini, Hitler and Hirohito for all the things we love in America. Surely this is the test of the Americanism of the CIO and its members.

"The overwhelming majority of CIO members belong to the Methodist, Baptist, Catholic, Lutheran, Jewish and other faiths, yet none of our enemies would say that the CIO is a Methodist, Baptist, Catholic, Lutheran or Jewish organization.

"THE AFL joined with the non-union employers who are enemies of organized labor in the charge of communism in the CIO. In our organizing campaign we have refrained from attacking the AFL and have devoted our energies and what intelligence God has given us to organizing the unorganized.

"In the penitentiaries of the U. S. today are several men who formerly were high officers of unions affiliated with the AFL. However, nobody would charge that the AFL is a racketeering organization made up of criminals because a few officers of the union are in the penitentiary.

"In the Federal Prison at Atlanta there are more former bankers and bussinessmen than former representatives of all of the labor organizations of the U. S. Yet no one who is a real American would charge, because of that fact, that business and banking are made of criminals.

"God knows that Philip Murray, president of the CIO and I have devoted a large portion of our lives to fighting communism in the U. S. That is one of the fundamental reasons we are so greatly interested in organizing the unorganized workers into the CIO. We know from experience that oragnized labor and genuine collective bargaining provide the best means of keeping communism from taking over in our country.

"THE AFL has made much ado about a letter being sent out by Morris Muster, former president of the United Furniture Workers, saying that communists control that organization of the CIO. You can take just about as much stock in Muster's statement as you can in the charge that the AFL union of which Willie Bioff formerly was president is made up of criminals because Bioff was sent to the penitentiary for taking money from employers.

"In some quarters we hear that John L. Lewis, formerly with the AFL, then president of the CIO, now back in the AFL, has said the CIO is a communistic organization. When Lewis was president of the CIO, the large steel, auto and other non-union employers, along with the AFL, charged the CIO with being communistic. Lewis firmly denied this charge and proved it was untrue. And if there are any communists in the CIO today there are certainly none that were not members when Lewis was CIO president.

"We agree entirely with the statement of Dr. Louie D. Newton, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, that the only way Americans can meet communism is for Americans to work as hard at democracy as Russians are working at communism.

"WE CERTAINLY do not believe that the U. S. will become communistic, but we do say very earnestly that if such a thing should ever befall our fair land, it will be brought about by employers and financial interests who are willing to continue the swamps of degradation that breed the germs of communism and other isms that seek to destroy democracy, freedom, liberty peace and happiness.

"We cannot keep non-union employers, the AFL and others from attacking us. But, as God is our Judge, we know what the CIO stands for—and it does not stand for those things our enemies charge. We know what we are doing in our Southern campaign and that is to attempt to bring a real American standard of living to all of the people.

"With the help of God, we will give our life to this task, not only for Southern workers but for all Americans.

"Our campaign to organize the South is a campaign for a better America. We are bound to succeed because the overwhelming majority of our people want a better America in which men, women and children can live."

Twenty-three defendants were acquitted. Conviction of these two will be appealed.

23 WIN JUSTICE

THE acquital of 23 of the 25 Columbia "riot" defendants last week at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., brings new hope that the case has made a crucial breech in the vicious system of the anti-democratic and unconstitutional treatment of Negroes in southern courts.

Disregarding the violent ranting of the prosecution, the all-white jury freed all but two of 25 Negroes who were tried for "attempted murder" on charges arising out of the racial clash last February in Columbia, Tenn., during which four police were wounded and two Negro prisoners were killed in jail by police officers.

The defense will appeal the case of the two convicted men, Robert Gentry, 24, and John McKivens, 26. On Oct. 18. the petition for appeal will be heard.

Walter White, speaking for the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, hailed the verdict as a triumph and praised the three defense lawyers, declaring that "no tribute could possibly be too great for them."

The attorneys, Dr. Leon Ranson, Washington, and A. Alexander Lobby, Nashville, both Negroes, and Maurice Weaver, white, Nashville, worked together in handling the case with skill and dignity, in spite of hostile and biased treatment.

Jack Kroll, director of CIO-PAC, hailed the acquittals as "a triumphant note for all progressive forces who have fought injustice and bigotry in America."

REUTHER ASKS U. S. PARLEY

Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers proposed this week that leaders of the automible industry join with the union in urging President Truman to convene a national labor-management conference that would "study and find solutions to production and related problems which are throwing the nation's economy out of gear."

"The need for such a conference, which the national CIO has twice requested of President Truman, is pointed up sharply by the announcement that the Briggs and Chrysler corporations are curtailing production by 35 to 40% as a result of a shortage of steel," Reuther said in a statement setting forth his proposal.

"This announcement means another setback in delivering the new cars the country needs so badly. It means an indefinite period of unemployment for thousands of Briggs and Chrysler workers and for many employed in other plants.

"It also demonstrates clearly that the lag in production is not something that can be solved at the individual company level or even at the individual industry level. Today's production problem is an overall one that can be solved only at the national industrial level.

"The steel shortage which caused the Briggs and Chrysler curtailment is the most serious and most perplexing of all our raw materials problems. It is the one which carries the greatest threat to our long range program of full employment, full production and full consumption.

"In addition to steel, there are critical shortages in other basic materials such as copper and lead. There is a serious bottleneck in transportation because of a shortage of approximately 75,000 freight cars."

ADDES HITS PAY FREEZE

SEC.-TREAS. GEORGE F. ADDES of the CIO Auto Workers charged this week that the decision of President Truman and Reconversion Director John Steelman, to refuse to permit wage increases to match increases in the cost of living, "amounts to nothing less than a calculated and deliberate decision to force the workers of this country to bear the full brunt of inflated prices and unconscionable profits."

"Steelman says that wage increases now would 'benefit only special groups, and at the expense of fellow workers throughout the nation'," Addes said. "On the contrary, it is the refusal to grant wage increases now that will benefit special groups—the profiteers of Big Industry and Wall Street—at the expense of the whole American people."

Addes said that "Steelman's conclusions are fantastic in the light of the facts that were available to him and which he used in his own report. He admits that prices have reached inflationary levels. He admits that profits have reached exorbitant heights."

CIO To Bosses:

HELP INJURED—HELP YOU

By FRED ROSS

THE CIO this week joined the U. S. Government in calling for greater employment of handicapped workers.

The appeal was made now because President Truman proclaimed the first week of October in each year the Natl. Employ the Physically Handicapped Week.

The CIO, through its Veterans' Committee, which is headed by Clinton S. Golden, and its affiliated unions, has been seeking for many months to have wounded veterans fill jobs where they could maintain their self-respect and look to the future with confidence. But even before the wounded ex-servicemen came home looking for work, the CIO had championed the cause of the handicapped workers. As CIO Pres. Philip Murray and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey said in a letter to all affiliated unions:

"For many years the CIO has insisted that willing handicapped workers have a distinctive contribution to make to the welfare of the American people. This contribution can be made only if they are gainfully employed at tasks within the range of their abilities.

"Industries recognized the importance of these contributions during the war years by fitting the physically handicapped into jobs where the persons concerned made astonishing records. It is the CIO position that industry can fit these persons into the productive process in times of peace."

THE magnitude of the problem of jobs for handicapped workers was stressed this week by Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach, who pointed out that there are 300,000 physically handicapped persons on the unemployed rolls of the U. S. Employment Service and that another 250,000 are expected when they complete various courses.

THERE would be little need for a National Employ the Handicapped Week if employers were as co-operative as many of those under contract with Local 76, CIO Furniture Workers. Jack Hochstadt, business manager of the local, said that there are approximately 200 veterans taking on-the-job training in plants under contract with the local.

He said that about half of the plants—50 out of 100—which agreed to train veterans under the on-the-job program were willing to employ disabled veterans.

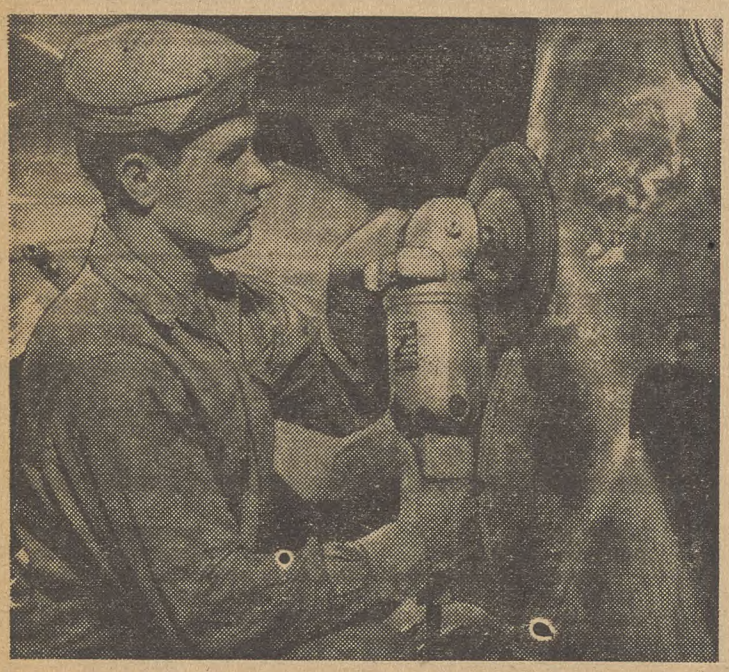
Hochstadt singled out several companies for praise, including the Nemerow Co., Brooklyn, where a dozen wounded veterans are learning trades, and the Capital Upholstery Co., Manhattan, where a half dozen wounded ex-servicemen are working.

Hochstadt declared that special commendation should be given the Artex Pascoe Co., Long Island, where all of the score or so of employes except four or five are veterans, half of them Purple Heart wearers.

This firm even paid the veterans 25c an hour more than the starting rate—at that time the rate under the contract was 75c, but since then it has been raised to 85c. The firms under contract with Local 76 increased the pay of the veterans taking on-the-job training $3 a week every three months, and the ex-servicemen receive any increases negotiated by the union.

At the end of two years, the ex-GI's pay is $1.75 an hour. This is over and above what the Government pays in subsistence, which under the new law stops for any worker without dependents receiving $175 a month, or $200 a month with dependents.

One of the veterans profiting by on-the-job training is Leroy Clark, Brooklyn, who was wounded during the Normandy invasion, but is now in Hochstadt's words "well on the road to being a mechanic."



Lawrence Dickens, Washington, D. C., is a deaf mute, but these handicaps do not interfere with his top-notch performance as an auto body repairman.

SQUARE DEAL IN HIRING

"QUALIFICATION for job and performance on the job should be the key standards for the selection and the retention of workers," the Retraining and Re-employment Administration, announced this week.

"Sex, race, color, or physical impairment should not be factors in the selection or retention of workers or in the amount of compensation paid," the statement continued.

Maj. Gen. G. B. Erskine is administrator of the agency, which operates under the Labor Dept. to co-ordinate all rehabilitation work. The agency's statement was prepared in consulation with representatives of veterans and labor organizations which included Meyer Bernstein of the CIO veterans committee.

The statement on employment principles is divided into two parts, one applicable to all workers and the other applicable only to veterans.

The section for all workers not only calls for a policy of nondiscrimination, but also urges that wartime training of workers and World War II veterans be considered in filling jobs, that a sufficient number of trainees be employed within five years or less to fill the needs of industry for skilled workers, and that the handicapped worker be fully utilized.

"Appropriate mechanical devices should be installed and special training should be conducted to assist handicapped workers in adjusting and advancing in their jobs," the statement declares.

Assumption by employer and labor groups for the proper placement of workers who were injured or were stricken by diseases while on the job is also urged.

The section for veterans only calls for the establishment of in-plant training programs for re-employed veterans so that they "may assume their places at the competitive level of employes having the same seniority who received promotions while the veterans were serving in the Armed Forces."

Employers are also urged to give to veterans "seniority credit and participation in related benefits" equal to their previous employment plus additional time spent in the armed forces and in recuperating from injuries.

Following a period of probation, newly employed veterans should be credited with time spent in the armed services and in recovering from wounds, the statement also declares.

Copies of the complete statement may be obtained by writing Meyer Bernstein, CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

YOUNG VETS' VOICE IN LEGION SMALL

ALTHOUGH World War II veterans make up 68% of the American Legion's membership of 3,300,000, only 20% of the 6,000 delegates to the Legion's San Francisco convention last week—or about 1,200—served in the nation's last conflict.

Legion officials explained that the cost of attending the convention kept the younger men away. The convention expenses are paid only for about 400 members of the national committee — the others must pay their hotel and transportation bills which for a delegate from the East might run as high as $500.

Older delegates were wondering whether there could not be some plan worked out for helping to pay the young veterans expenses, in view of the fact that by the time next year's convention rolls around World War II veterans are expected to constitute 90 per cent of the Legion's membership.

In deference to the growing number of the new crop of veterans, three of the Legion's vice-commanderships went to the younger men, whose temper on the whole seemed as conservative as the organization's.

This conservatism was reflected by the two extra-convention meetings for World War II delegates—arranged with the consent of outgoing Commander John Steele.

The young veterans called for more representation in the national leadership, a fighting committee on housing, abolition of the $200 a month limitation on the on-the-job training program and a $500 earned income tax exemption. The Legion's leadership was already committed to these proposals.

The World War II delegates labeled the Wagner-Ellender-Taft long-range housing bill as "socialistic," the American Veterans Committee as radical and castigated Henry Wallace. This, of course, did not cause the older members to lift their eyebrows in disagreement.

VA ACCREDITS AVC, AMVETS

Both the American Veterans Committee and the American Veterans of World War II are preparing to offer the same kind of service in settling veterans' claims as are offered by older veterans' organizations.

The way to offer this service was paved when Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Veterans Administrator, declared that he will recognize the representatives of both organizations in the presentation of all claims under the statutes administered by the Veterans Administration.
